New Pay Voucher System Will Get Extended Test

Vol. 5, No. 1 — PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA — Friday 1 June, 1956

Pass in Review is the order and Commander Duck, two-duckling staff and four abreast squads file past 505th MP Battalion barracks on their way to morning dousing by lawn sprinklers in front of MP billets. Mother duck, independent, disowns claims by 505th line companies and Headquarters Company, Station Complement, that her "separate battalion" falls under their jurisdiction.

Hassle Over Young Mother!

She Would Remain Independent

Despite claims by two Presidio units that her organization is subordinate to theirs, a mother "wild" duck is vigorously pressing her case as a "separate battalion" to "higher authority" today.

Commander Duck is caught in a high-level administrative hassle between Headquarters Company, Station Complement, and Companies A and B, 505th Military Police Battalion.

Both units say her "battalion," according to the latest TO&E, falls under their particular jurisdiction.

But C.O. Duck claims she and her brood owe loyalty to neither. Independent, she is.

Though the word is her "battalion" is billeted in the Station Complement barracks, she marches her two-squad, 12-duck battalion through the MP lawn sprinklers each morning.

Work almost stops completely when Commander Duck brings her battalion out for review. In precise military formation, she takes the lead, followed by a "two-duck staff" and four-abreast ducklings.

Their marching won't match the Honor Guard's (the lines are often ragged), and right guides and guidon bearers are missing. But, strictly disciplined, the "battalion" swings across the lawns straight into the "fire" of the sprinklers.

Once the duckling dousing has been accomplished to her satisfaction, Commander Duck quacks a "to the rear, march" and the troops return to their billets.

Probably for chow.

Up Draft

Washington (AFPS — The Defense Department has asked Selective Service to induct 13,000 men for the Army in July.

The Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force will continue to rely on volunteers during the month.

The Army draft call for July is the largest since January, 1955, when 23,000 were inducted.

Starts 1 July At Six Major Installations

Washington — Some 50,000 stateside soldiers will be given an itemized accounting of across-the-table pay in expanded tests of the Army's proposed pay voucher system.

Troops of the 1st Inf. Div., Ft. Riley, Kan., III Corps, Ft. Hood, Tex., 1st Armored Div., Ft. Polk, La., Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., Ft. Meyer, Va., Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C., and Cameron Station, Va., will be paid under the system on a test-basis starting 1 July, the Army said.

The proposed method of paying enlisted men, tried successfully last year at Ft. Dix, N. J., and the Finance Center, Indianapolis, Ind., was developed by Finance Corps and Adjutant General experts to correct major faults in the present six-month cumulative pay card.

Based on two forms called Military Pay Vouchers and Request for Pay Action, a soldier will get a monthly accounting of his base pay, allowances, and the deductions determining his take-home pay.

It is designed to provide greater accuracy in making payments, and at the same time cut the number of personnel and the amount of equipment necessary to do the job.

Each man will know exactly how his pay has been calculated and any misunderstandings or differences can be adjusted immediately by his own unit personnel office.

Using the second form, a soldier may request any one of five actions. He could:

1. Ask for a lesser amount of pay than is due him, crediting the balance to his account;
2. Request check payment by mail to a specific address when he anticipates being on leave or temporary duty over pay day;
3. Request partial pay;
4. Request advance pay on permanent change of station, or
5. Request advance travel pay.

Personnel trained at the Finance School are being used in the bases testing the system. (AFPS)

Top Speakers!

Sixth Army PM Conference Will Be Held At Ft. Scott

A University of California professor of criminology and the San Francisco district attorney will be featured speakers at the third annual Sixth Army Provost Marshal's Conference scheduled for Fort Scott next week.

In an announcement by Colonel Shaffer F. Jarrell, Sixth Army Provost Marshal, it was disclosed that Austin H. MacCormick, UC criminologist and consultant to the Secretary of the Army on correction and confinement, and Thomas C. Lynch, San Francisco D.A., will address the group.

The welcoming address will be given by Brigadier General Louis J. Rumaggi, Sixth Army chief of staff. The general will represent Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young in the opening ceremony Wednesday, 6 June.

The three-day conference will include Provost Marshals from Class I installations and officers of the Sixth Army PM section as conferees.

Provost Marshals from Class II and Class III installations in the Sixth Army area will attend the conference as guests.

The PMs will discuss subjects and problems of mutual interest which have developed in the Sixth Army area during the past year, Colonel Jarrell declared.

Emphasis will be placed on prevention of offenses and incidents, traffic control, utilization of personnel and public relations, the colonel added.

The conference, which will be held in the Joint Operations Center Building at Fort Scott, will be enlivened with a social gathering for conferees and guests in the Presidio Officers' Open Mess, Thursday, 7 June.

Sixth Army Officer Will Head Engineer Group At Belgium

He is the Corps of Engineer delegate and will attend the one week annual meeting of the Permanent International Association of Navigation Congresses. Colonel Falkner will read a paper, "The Role of Inland Waterways."

Purple Heart Proposal

Another proposal to consider all combat veterans awarded the Purple Heart as being 10 per cent disabled from service-connected causes in addition to any other disabilities has been put before the House Committee on Veterans Affairs by Rep. Gordon L. McDonough (R—Calif.). Similar moves have been made in previous sessions of Congress.

Future Law?

House-Senate Members Agree On Final Draft Medicare Bill

Washington—A joint House-Senate conference committee has worked out a compromise version of the Dependent Medical Care Bill for final ratification on both congressional floors.

With the last step in the lengthy legislative process nearly completed, Defense Department officials are confident this vital career incentive measure will become law in the near future.

The joint committee was formed to iron out differences in separate bills passed by the two bodies. The Senate version, passed by a near unanimous vote, differed in several respects from the House legislation approved earlier this session.

An upper chamber provision that servicemen be required to pay the first $25 or the prevailing subsistence rate in military hospitals (currently $1.75 a day), whichever is greater, for medical care of dependents in civilian facilities, is still retained in the final draft of the bill.

The remaining costs would be paid by the government through an insurance program to be worked out by the Defense Secretary.

The Senate had also voted to eliminate parents and parents-in-law from the military medical care program.

The committee agreed, however, that these dependents should receive such hospitalization if living in the homes of servicemen.

The bill, expected to cost almost $70 million yearly, permits civilian hospitalization only when no military facilities are available.

The DOD has estimated that more than 40 per cent of all dependents now live out of the range of military hospitals.

"Sun" Shines On Reserves

(Ed's Note: The following editorial appeared in the "Baltimore Sun" recently and so impressed the Chief of Information and Education at Department of the Army that he has asked Army newspaper editors to reproduce it verbatim.)

"It is an appropriate time to review the state of our military reserves, particularly the Army Reserves actively engaged in training.

"This Active Army Reserve is composed of two groups of civilians who devote a few hours each week to military training in local armories and two weeks training a year in camp. The two groups are the National Guard and the so-called Ready Reserve Units. The Reserve backs up our regular Army. In theory it enables us to do with a relatively small Regular Army in days of peace at less expense of money and time.

"If it is to perform its function, the Reserve must be large and well trained. That has not been the case. Last year Congress passed a Reserve Act for the purpose of strengthening the Reserve. Among other things it set a goal of 1,692,000 men.

"How far have we gone in achieving that goal? On March 31, 1955, there were 350,075 individuals in the National Guard and 143,417 in active training in the Ready Reserve. On March 31, 1956, the National Guard numbered 403,634 and the Ready Reserve 188,743, for a total of 592,377. In short, we have gone one-third of the way toward the manpower goal.

"One novel feature introduced by the Reserve Act of 1955 was an offer to young men between the ages of 17 and 18½ enabling them to meet their military obligation by taking six months training in an Army camp, then returning home to serve 7½ years either . . . in the Ready Reserve. This offer removed all the uncertainty of the draft and provided for a minimum of full-time service away from home. It seemed a good proposition. Yet the Army was skeptical.

"The objective set by the Army was 90,000 men by June 30, 1956. It will not be reached. Thus far the national total of those signed up is only 20,000 and all of these are not yet in training. The plan got off to a bad start and was little publicized.

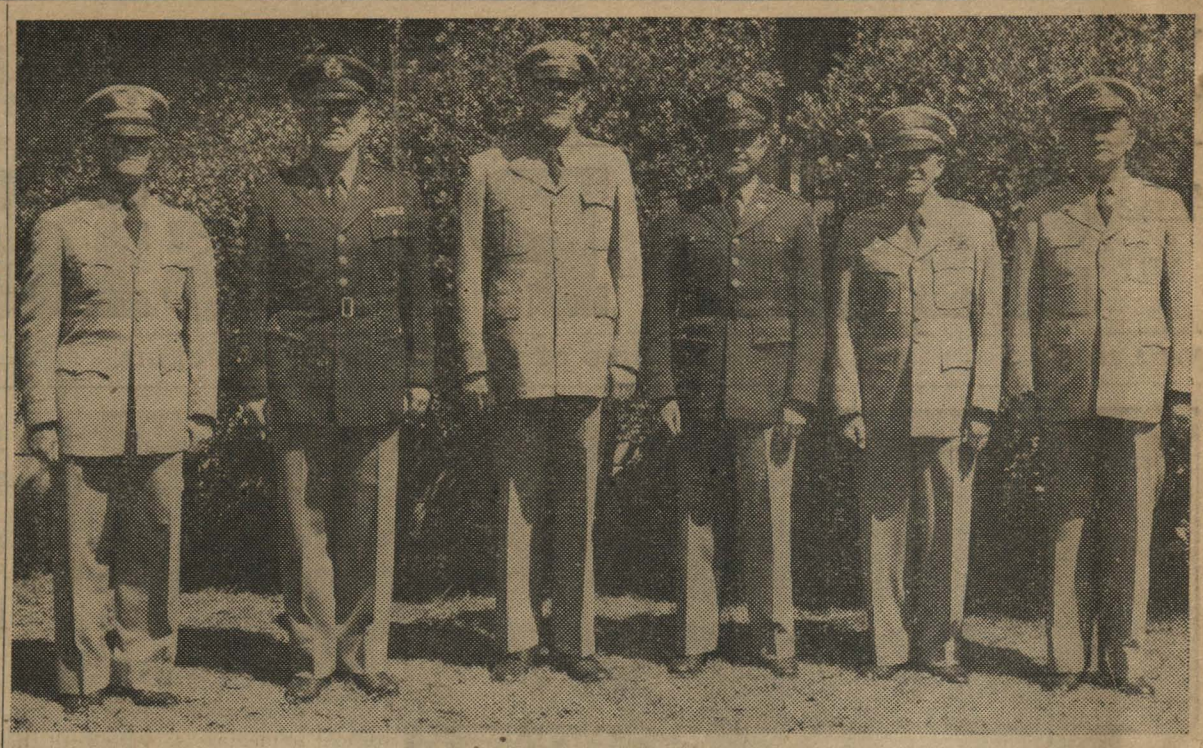
"Yet the Army has now shifted from skepticism to optimism. The reason is that, now the offer is getting to be known, volunteers are signing up at better than 1,000 a week throughout the nation.

"At that rate the Army would get 52,000 in a year.

"Encouraged by what is happening, the Army is coming to believe that maybe the time is not far distant when more young men will apply for this type of military service than can be taken.

"Parents who have sons approaching military service age would do well to look into the offer before it is too late."

Army Will Test Tilt Wing Aircraft



Washington—The Army is spending $850,000 to develop a test-model of a turbine-powered, vertical take-off and landing plane for military use.

A contract to design and build the "tilt-wing" airplane has been awarded to the Vertol Aircraft Corp., Morton, Pa.

In the revolutionary aircraft, the shift from vertical lift to forward flight is made by tilting the wing-propeller combination forward. Cruising, the adjustable wing provides lift and the rotor propellers give forward thrust, as in conventional planes.

By using a "flying test bed" in the first design, a relatively inexpensive experimental model will be produced in a matter of months, the Army said.

Through development of the new plane, the Army hopes to eliminate need for landing fields and to achieve greater flying speeds in its program to increase air mobility for troops and supplies in combat zones.

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

Unique Scouting Award

Explorer Scout Roger Ware, son of Lieutenant Colonel Willett Ware, Jr., post inspector general, received the God and Country award from Saint Mary the Virgin Episcopal Church, in ceremonies on the Presidio, this week. The 14-year old boy is an Eagle Scout and member of Explorers Post 178, Fort Scott. He was awarded the Eagle Scout honor in September, 1955.

The God and Country award is the civic and religious equivalent of the Eagle Scout medal.

The Reverend Hugh L. Weaver of Saint Mary the Virgin's Church made the award to young Ware who is the youngest of the two sons of Colonel and Mrs. Ware. He and his older brother, Willett Ware, III, are students at the Presidio Junior High School.

The latest honor conferred on young Ware requires a thorough knowledge of the Bible, Doctrine, and Church history. In addition, one hundred hours must be performed in service to the local church, which time includes duty as usher or acolyte, choir singing, or other special project within the religious field.

"Very Fine Paper" was the common agreement between Lieutenant Colonel Kazue Shizura, Japanese Self Defense Forces, and Captain Chu Chen-Hua, of the Chinese Nationalist Air Force, after looking over various editions of the "Star Presidian." Both officers have completed courses in military publicity work at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and soon they will be returning to their respective homes. Shown with the two visitors is Major Andrew H. Engel, Sixth Army TI&E, who took the officers on a tour of the Presidio.

Say it again!

Visiting Oriental Officers Like Just About Everything U.S.

"Sticki-Ni!" beamed the Japanese colonel. "Ding Hao," said the Chinese captain. In their native tongues both men meant "Very Good."

Such was the evaluation of the Star Presidian by the first two Oriental officers to graduate from the Armed Forces Public Information school at Fort Slocum, New York.

Lieutenant Colonel Kazue Shizura, Japanese Defense Forces, and Captain Chu Chen-Hua of the Nationalist Chinese Air Force examined the newspaper while touring the Presidio last week. They are returning home to put their American training into practice. Each officer plans to organize, in his respective homeland, a public information school patterned after one they attended at Fort Slocum.

Captain Chen-Hua voiced a desire to remain longer "in this enormously clean and orderly park you call the United States." During his stay in this country, he also attended Psychological Warfare school at Fort Bragg.

The captain has a broad background in public information which includes service as wartime editor of the front-line Nationalist newspaper. Presently he is program director of the Chinese Air Force Radio station and a member of the Chinese Political Staff Officers school.

Colonel Shizura, whose skills vary from dentistry to Oriental flower arranging, is presently assigned to the General Staff of the Japanese Defense Force. He studied foreign language and dentistry at Tokyo University prior to World War II where he served as a naval officer.

"I only wish that I could remain longer," he commented, "and avail myself of more of the opportunities at everyone's fingertips."

While at Fort Slocum Colonel Shizura also attended the Chaplains' school.

In the 1949 investigation of exchanges by Congress, one of the strongest complaints was that servicemen priced articles in local civilian stores but purchased the item in exchanges. The time of the civilian retailer is valuable. Do not waste it if you do not intend to buy from him. Protect your exchange privilege!

DOD Gets Green Light!

Report Favorable For Sub-Standard Housing Proposal

A House Armed Services sub-committee has favorably reported to its full committee a Defense Department proposal that would permit the service secretaries to declare certain military housing substandard and reduce rentals accordingly.

The measure would permit servicemen to receive the full quarters allowance but pay rent equivalent only to the actual worth of the house. The DOD has said passage of the bill would save servicemen about $50 million annually.

After a three-year period, however, the services would be required to get rid of the substandard housing or improve it.

Three Win Cash For Idea That Saves $1,000 Yearly

Sixth Army Headquarters will save $1,000 a year because the three-member staff of the Reports Control Branch of Sixth Army Comptroller teamed up to figure a new way of doing an old job.

For their suggestion, A. D. Kuperstein, chief of the Reports Control Branch; George Kmetz, statistical assistant, and Mrs. Esther Henderson, administrative assistant, will divide a prize of $120.

The suggestion, which was evolved after several months of detailed cost study, will change the printing technique of the Sixth Army reports register.

The U.S. Army is directly or indirectly training over 200 foreign divisions.

Engineer Company's Roster Reads Like Lineup For U.N. Session

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

Magnet and melting pot for men from such widely divergent places as Caracas, Venezuela, Dusseldorf, Berlin, and Hamburg, Germany, is the 561st Engineer Company, Port Construction, at Fort Baker.

Drawn here by their common goal, to establish themselves as citizens of the United States, knowing that once they reached here, a definite prerequisite to their arrival was that they be called for almost immediate service with the United States Army, four young foreign-born soldiers are now proudly wearing the American uniform and the Corps of Engineers insignia.

From a childhood in Trinidad, to Columbia, South America, to British Guiana, Tobago, Surinam, and Persia, came Pvt. Robert Wilson, the 23-year-old son of a Scottish-American oil driller who married a South American girl and established a home in Trinidad.

Wilson traveled with his parents until he came to California and enlisted in the Army in 1955. With a military career in view, he was sent to the Corps of Engineer Training Center at Fort Leonard Wood, thence to his present assignment at Fort Baker.

A fluent speaker of Spanish, the personable Latin-American left his mother and only sister in Trinidad—"first to see some more of the world—then to settle down and establish myself as a useful citizen," as he explains it.

From Dusseldorf, about the same time, came Pvt. Werner E. Katzenberger, 21-year-old son of a German cabinet maker. Katzenberger came to New York under sponsorship of his aunt and uncle who felt that his chances of a career were better here than in post-war Germany.

"I knew that the Draft was interested in me," he explains, "so I beat the Board's time by enlisting before I was called."

"The experience of having to first prove my merit by serving in the Army was not exactly new to me," Katzenberger declares; "for in Germany, as a pre-war child, I knew the importance of it."

Pvt. Siegfried R. Urban, third man in the foreign-born foursome, is 20 years old. Urban applied for American citizenship papers the day after he arrived in the United States.

Born in Berlin he came to America in 1954, to the home of his great-uncle in Belfast, Maine.

"A chicken farm is fine for my great-uncle," Urban tells you, "but I prefer the more modern way of life in the big cities. I like California very much, and the personal freedom I have come to know all across the Nation is one of the finest things I know about America."

"Where, but in America," he asks, "would we be shown so much consideration as in the privilege of serving together on the same military post?"

From Hamburg, a port city on the North Sea, came Pvt. Werner A. Schulz, a 24-year-old architectural student who first arrived in Canada and worked his way through the Northwest Mounted Police country of Edmonton, Alberta and the Yukon before discovering that the only gold he wanted to find, was a permanent home in the United States. He has no relatives and his future goal is to complete his formal education, probably in engineering or construction, and to become an American citizen.

The unanimous opinion of the four future Americans is that the military service with its easy way of teaching a man how to live and work with others, for a common cause, is about the most rewarding experience the Army has to offer. Their main wish is to return home just once, to let their families and friends see first-hand what America has to offer a foreigner.

To the last man, they tell you that what differs most in the American Army from that of their own countries is the democratic approach an enlisted man is permitted to use in discussing a personal matter or a military problem with his commanding officer.

Pvt. Urban sums it up briefly when he says, with a twinkle in his eyes, "its a good feeling to know that I can speak to my officer as though he were a buddy; my close friend to whom I may tell my happiness or my sorrow."

July Deadlines!

Two States Require Voters Register 4 Mos. In Advance

Washington — Mississippi and Arizona require unregistered voters to register four months before the general election—by 6 July—if they wish to vote by absentee ballot in the primary or general elections, the Office of Armed Forces Information and Education has announced.

Mississippi — All unregistered residents, except members of the armed forces and certain civilians, must register in person at the office of city or county registrar, county of residence.

Members of the armed forces civilian employes serving outside the territorial limits of the U. S. and their wives may apply for a "Registration Application" at the time absentee ballots are requested.

You should enter the statement "please mail Registration Application" in the margin of the Federal Post Card application. When the executed application form has been accepted by election officials, you will be registered.

Arizona—You are permanently registered if you have registered since 2 Jan., 1954, and have cast a ballot at either the last preceding primary or general election.

Any person may apply for registration by requesting an "Affidavit of Registration" form from the county recorder at place of legal residence. Upon receipt, execute it before an officer authorized to administer oaths and mail it to the county recorder.

Registration to vote in only the general election may be completed as late as the sixth Monday preceding the 6 November election date.

Army, AF Tell How New ROA Bill Will Work

Army and AF officials have told the House Armed Services subcommittee how their services would integrate reservists into the regular establishments if the Reserve Officer Augmentation bill is enacted.

Army Maj. Gen. Donald P. Booth said 47,000 of the 83,000 Army Reserve officers now on active duty could be considered for regular commissions under the plan. However, the number of officers integrated would be pared to 7,500 by July 1, 1958, and 39,500 in the following five years.

Maj. Gen. William S. Stone, AF director of personnel planning, said his service proposed to integrate 69,425 reservists. About 24,000 AF reservists would be integrated by Jan. 1, 1957, and 2,500 a year thereafter until 1963.

If you're not sure of the safe way to do any part of your work, ask your supervisor.

Navy Gets Fling At Army's Projectionist School Here

Navy personnel located in and around San Francisco or aboard ship won't be traveling to San Diego for projectionist training anymore, thanks to the Sixth Army.

Recently, a plan was inaugurated whereby the sailors can take advantage of this highly specialized training program now in session at the Sixth Army Pictorial Center.

Each week, two sailors are integrated with Army personnel at the school for some 40 hours of concentrated study. Their training during this period includes work with 16mm sound motion picture projectors, slide projectors, film strip projectors, opaque projectors, overhead projection and sound public address sets.

This integrated course work is not limited to military personnel alone. Civilian components and civilian employees may participate.

Those who successfully complete the course are awarded a DA Form 87, "Certificate of Training," and a 16mm Projectionist License.

An advanced projectionist course will also be taught during the 1957 fiscal year. This work is specifically designed to train instructors, and will last over a period of eighty hours (two weeks).

Study in this school will center around the principles and methods of teaching; application of laws of memory and learning in instruction technique; preparation and use of lesson plans, practical exercises, training aids and tests; detailed study of the operation and maintenance of all audio-visual equipment used in Army training.

Those wishing to apply for this training may be, as mentioned previously, members of the Regular Army, civilian component, or civilian employees of the government. However, for this school, the applicant must have actual instructional experience or an equivalent educational background. Also, he or she must be in possession of an official U. S. Army 40 hour 16mm projectionist license.

Soldiers desiring entrance to this instructors school must be in grade E-4 or above and have one year service time remaining upon completion of the course. Civilians applying must be a GS-5 or above. However, it has been pointed out that exceptions to this rule can be made in cases of outstanding personnel.

Officers Recently Assigned Here

A native of West Hartford, Connecticut, Colonel Donahue entered military service in 1941. He was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant on graduation from the University of Connecticut.

He served in Europe as commanding officer of the 71st Ordnance Battalion during World War II in Headquarters ETO-SOS and Southern Base Section, later as Ordnance Officer at the United Kingdom Base, and the Delta Base Section.

Colonel Donahue was reassigned to Germany in 1953 at which time he became Ordnance Officer for the Seventh Army. He wears the Bronze Star Medal with the customary service ribbons.

The colonel's military schools include the Infantry School, the Company Officers Course, Fort Benning, Georgia, and the New York University Safety School.

Prior to entering Federal service, Colonel Donahue was employed as a civil engineer for the City of Chicago.

Major David. I. Saunders is the new chief of the Sixth Army's Plans, Operations and Training Division at the Presidio. He came here from Eighth Army Headquarters (rear) in Camp Zama, Japan, where he was assigned as chief of Supply Division for AFFE Chemical Section.

A veteran of 14 year's Federal service, Major Saunders attended the University of Chicago. Prior to his Japan assignment he was chief of Chemical Supply Division for the 2nd Logistical Command in Korea.

Lieutenant Jack A. Abadie was recently assigned to the Sixth Army's G-2 Section. He reported to the Presidio from an assignment with Judge Advocate General Section for 25th Division in Hawaii.

Previous to his Hawaiian service, Lieutenant Abadie was in Korea with Headquarters G-2 Section for the IX Corps. During World War II, Lieutenant Abadie was an Air Force bombadier for four years in Europe. His military decorations include the Air Medal and Commendation Ribbon and the Asiatic, Pacific and European Service medals. He was graduated from Louisiana State University where he majored in civil law.

Colonel Condon is assigned as assistant chief of the Planning Division here. His foreign service includes duty in New Caledonia, Guadalcanal, with the Engineer Section, USAFISPA, and Headquarters, 13th Army Air Force.

In the Philippines, Colonel Condon served as commanding officer for the 1890 Engineer Aviation unit in Tinian Island. He also held assignments in Japan as Port Engineer for the Second Major Port in Yokohama, later as radio officer for Eighth Army's TI&E Section.

European duty took Colonel Condon to Germany in 1955 at which time he was Operations and Executive Officer to the 521st Engineer Group M&S, during which service he achieved his present rank.

Colonel Condon attended the University of Oregon and was graduated from Oregon State College with a BS in Civil Engineering.

Colonel and Mrs. Condon are the parents of two daughters, Leslie Anne, who resides in Portland, and Kathryn E. who is presently in Spokane, Washington.

Local Snake Hunters Turn Up Spooky Find

By Pfc. Walt Heil
Star Presidian Associate Editor

On a snake hunting expedition one day recently, three children — dependents of Presidio military personnel — tramped deep into a remote area of the post and stumbled across an exciting discovery.

Hidden among fir trees, brush and bush Margo Lee Stahl, 11, and Terry Lee, 13, and Dennis Ray Haines, 9, found a heavy, weather-beaten block of granite that once stood guard over the final resting places of a family named Sheldon.

The children, filled with spooky ideas as children will, raced out of the dense growth and reported their discovery to their parents—Master Sergeant and Mrs. William Stahl, and Master Sergeant and Mrs. Richard Haines.

But the Stahls and Haineses, as parents will, didn't really pay a great deal of attention to the excited shouts of their offspring. Rather, they probably looked up from their Sunday paper or dinner dishes, and said, "Really, that's nice."

And it wasn't until Margo Lee—chattering away with her girl friend on an Army bus returning children from school—that anyone paid any attention to the discovery at all.

Margo Lee's bus driver, an unknown but reliable source, overheard her excited talk and, his nose for news working overtime, telephoned the Star Presidian editorial office with the basic information.

Thinking that the children may have discovered a bit of history important to the Presidio, the Star Presidian dispatched a reporter and photographer to the scene, once the Haines and Stahl families were alerted as guides.

With Sergeants Haines and Stahl in the van, the Star Presidian reporter and photographer went on a small field trip into the underbrush, pushing aside obstinate branches, slipping on dry leaves and puffing uphill.

Deep inside this "forest," the children, who knew an easier way of reaching the tombstone, but who had been overruled, pointed out the chunk of stone and the somewhat obliterated lettering on it.

Sure enough, it was a tombstone and on its four sides told the life and death story of the family of Nicholas and Martha Sheldon, born during President John Quincy Adams' administration in the late 1820's.

Trouble was, though, the tombstone seemingly had no connection with any past military personnel from the Presidio.

Sergeant Haines suggested that perhaps it was part of a "lost" graveyard, buried under tons of sand, dirt and debris.

This was a possibility.

But it was debunked when the Sergeant further said the debris, dirt and sand came from land where the new Sears-Roebuck store stands today on Geary Boulevard.

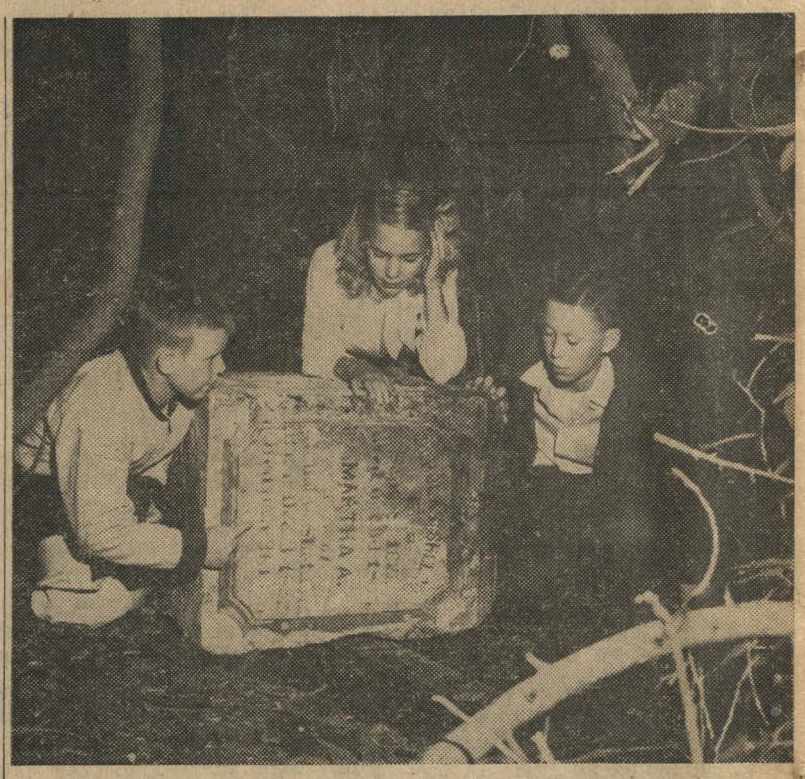
He reasoned thusly:

1—The store is less than ten years old.

2—It stands on land—as does the surrounding neighborhood — once occupied by a cemetery.



3—The cemetery was cleared for homes and stores to Colma, California, with the remains reburied there.

4—The tombstone was included in the debris dumped on Presidio grounds when no survivors of the family claimed the remains for reburial.

5—It was unnoticed until the children went snake hunting, and will probably remain unnoticed until other children in other times go snake hunting in the area.

That, at least, is the Star Presidian reporter's theory.

And until a superior sleuth comes along to quash this theory, he'll stand adjourned.

Spooky Find shakes snake hunters! Examining inscriptions on old tombstone they discovered in remote area on Presidio, Dennis R. Haines, 9, points out lettering to Margo Lee Stahl, 11, and brother Terry Lee Haines, 13. The children, dependents of Presidio military personnel, stirred up a mystery when they stumbled across tombstone while on snake hunting expedition.

Sixth Army's Top Talent To Vie In Army Contest Next Thursday

By Sp3 Hugh Dempsey

On the seventh of this month, twelve talented performers representing the Sixth Army will step into the spotlight at the All-Army Talent Show to be held at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

Here, these youthful soldiers will be vying for top spots against talent from every major Army command in the world.

The Sixth Army will be represented by Pfc. Elmer B. Moore, Jr., a tenor operatic soloist from Fort Huachuca, Arizona, and Pfc. William L. Scott, a semi-classical pianist from the Special Service section, Fort Ord.

Pvt. George K. Paoa from Fort Lewis, Washington, who won first place in the recent Sixth Army finals with his guitar and vocal rendition of "The Nearness of You," will vie for All-Army honors in the Specialty Performance Category.

The reaction at the Fort Dix show will probably be the same as that shown here at the Presidio during the Sixth Army finals, when they hear the FA Gospel Singers, a Negro quartet from Fort Lewis. Comprising this group which literally set the audience to rocking at the Presidio will be Pfc.s Luther Evans, Earthy Gaskin, William Chunn and Willie L. Buchanan.

An instrumental group calling themselves the Tom Rees Trio, with Pvt. Thomas R. Rees, Jr., on clarinet, Sp2 Lawrence Vance on bass viol and Pfc. Basil A. Frazier setting the tempo on drums, will probably repeat their musical improvisations on "I Remember April" and "Autumn Leaves" which took first place in the Sixth Army finals.

A breathtaking performance of gymnastic agility by Pfc. Anthony E. Napier and Pvt. Robert F. Bollinger, both from Fort Ord, carried them on the marquee at the Fort Dix show. Calling themselves the "Jumping Jets," their feats with flaming hoops and various other devices took first place in the Sixth Army finals.

At the All-Army show will be scouts from the Ed Sullivan "Toast of the Town" TV Variety Show. These men will choose first, second and third place winners for their June 17th show on CBS.

Irving Berlin trophy being admired by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker, will be presented to the Army Command amassing the most points at the All-Army Talent Show finals, Fort Dix, N. J. This will be the first year this award has ever been presented in an All-Army show. Shown discussing the coming presentation are, left to right, Mr. Irving Berlin, Mrs. Berlin, and Mrs. Wilber M. Brucker.

JOHNNIE CONCHO describes how a small Western town is literally taken over by Sinatra. The townspeople tolerate him and permit him to push them around because, as long as he stays there, they live in the protective shadow of his gun-slinger brother. After his brother is killed, Sinatra is on his own and finds all of the townspeople against him.

THE CATERED AFFAIR is the story of a Bronx cab driver and how he survives a series of crises, some humorous, some serious, when his daughter suddenly announces her impending marriage to a young teacher.

23 PACES TO BAKER STREET shows how a blind American playwright overhears a kidnapping plot and becomes involved in a hunt for a notorious London gang.

THE TWINKLE IN GOD'S EYE shows Rooney as a newly-ordained parson who goes to a rough and tough frontier town to rebuild a church destroyed 25 years previously by an Indian attack in which his parson-father was killed.

Latest Figures Show Local Red Cross Loans Top $10,000 In First Quarter

Almost $10,000 in loans and grants were provided soldiers of the Presidio and sub-posts during the months of January through April, the American National Red Cross' local staff announced this week.

In a report to Colonel Carl E. Lundquist deputy post commander, Raymond J. Gilbreth, Red Cross field director here, said the greater amount went to soldiers needing assistance for emergency leaves.

The Red Cross loaned and granted a total of $7,066 in this category. Total loans for family assistance came to $2,325, while personal needs amounted to $208.

During the four-month period the Red Cross staff here also handled 1,229 individual cases, including 256 for leaves and leave extensions; 29 for discharge and separation; 19 for government benefits; 658 for reporting and communication and 267 for counseling.

Volunteer services at the Presidio chapter total almost 3,000 hours for more than 1,000 volunteer workers.

Services included coverage of Forts Scott, Baker, Cronkhite, Barry and Funston, and all anti-aircraft sites in San Francisco, Marin and San Mateo counties.

In addition to financial assistance given here, the Red Cross chapters in the Bay area also made available funds for basic maintenance and other situations to many families of servicemen stationed at the Presidio. It is impossible to estimate the amount of assistance given in these cases, said Gilbreth.

Seek Travel Increase

A bill to increase mileage rates for personnel driving private vehicles outside of the U. S. has been approved by the House Armed Services Committee and is awaiting a hearing on the House floor.

The upped travel pay rate, favoring the individual in many instances, would equalize mileage allowances paid both in and out of the ZI but would eliminate per diem overseas.

Heavy Hitters

Cubs Blast Yanks 44-5 In Little League Action

The Little League Cubs unlimbered their extra-heavy bats last Saturday afternoon on the Little League diamond and slugged their way to a 44 to 5 victory over the Yanks in the first half of a double header. The second tilt went to the Giants over the Cards 10-8.

Ken Diamond went all the way on the mound for the winning Cubs, striking out 10 Yanks, to earn his first victory of the 1956 season.

The Cubs got off to an 18-run lead in the first inning, added 14 more in the second, one in the third, six in the fourth and wound up with five tallies in the fifth for a grand total of 44 runs and 40 hits.

Shortstop George Leonard paced the winners with four doubles and a home run in five official trips to the plate. Other batting stars were Dale Ruffin with a home run and two triples, Ken Diamond with three triples, Jim Holimon with three doubles, and Bob O'Connor with a double and a triple.

The second game saw the Giants' Tom Sparks win a pitching duel from Mike Hulsey of the Cards, 10-8, in a six-inning thriller.

The Cards led off the top of the first with a single run, only to have the Giants come back with two tallies in the bottom of the first and add two more last of the second to take a lead they never relinquished.

Right fielder Bill Johnson's double was the only extra base blow for the Cards.

The Minor League games in the Presidio Little League were canceled due to the holiday schedule and will resume action next week.

Post Golfers Play Mather To Deadlock

The smooth shooting Presidio golf team ran into some unexpected trouble last Tuesday when they played the Mather Air Force divot men and had to settle for a 13½ to 13½ deadlock. The match was played on the Mather home links in Sacramento.

Bill Krause and John Roberts teamed up as the Presidio's number one squad and won six and one half points to two and one half tallies. Krause was low medalist for the day with a fine three under par 69. Roberts fired a 77 over the tricky Air Force course.

Craig Wright and Milton Rosenberg made up the second Post twosome and dropped five and one half points while winning three and one half. Wright turned in a 73 and Rosenberg came home with a 78.

Major Rollin Kapp and Captain Leon Thomas made up the third Presidio squad, and both fired 74s for their afternoon's action. They won three and one half and dropped five and one half tallies to a pair of smooth swinging Airmen.

This afternoon at 1300 hours the locals play host to the McClellan Air Force Base sixsome on the Sharpe Park course. Results will appear in next week's Star Presidian.

Last Friday's scheduled match with Ford Ord was canceled as the Ord golfers failed to make an appearance.

Post Toreros Win Three Tilts On Ft. Scott Field

The red hot Presidio Torero baseball squad stayed on the winning trail this week with three victories out of three starts. The Army nine rolled over Castle Air Force Base 9-5, the San Mateo Amvets 9-4 and the Parks Air Force team 8-0.

The opening tilt against the Castle Air Force Base saw the visiting Airmen get off to a one-run lead in the top of the first which held up till the locals tied the game up in the bottom of the third.

Castle scored again in the top of the fourth, but the Presidio bounced right back with five tallies in the last of the fourth to put the game on ice.

Harry Williams with a round-tripper in the third and Bob Harbertson with two doubles and Norm Ellenberger with two singles were the leading Presidio batters.

George Hane went the route on the mound for the local nine, giving up seven hits along the way.

The Amvets jumped off to a two-run lead in the bottom of the first frame, but the Presidio came right back to tie the score on the strength of Chuck Matzen's home run with a mate aboard.

The Army men lashed out with four more in the top of the third and added a single tally in the seventh on Harry Williams' round-tripper.

The third win of the week on the Fort Scott diamond saw Honor Guard hurler Chuck Matzen strike out 15 Airmen and give up but three hits to post his second straight victory.

The Toreros shot off to a three-run lead in the fifth when catcher Jerry Lauderback caught hold of a low fast ball and drove it out of the park, with John Blackwell and Mike Rubcic on the bases.

Presidio Dumps Two Rock Ranch In Softball Tilt

John Bouthton of the Presidio Honor Guard made effective use of a good fast ball and a sharp breaking curve to hurl the Presidio Torero softball team to an eight to two win over the Two Rock Ranch station squad. The diamond clash was played last Thursday on the Two Rock station field.

The Post men opened up with two tallies in the first and followed this up with two more in the top of the third. Three more runs in the sixth and one more in the seventh rounded out the day's scoring.

Harry Matthews, with two singles in three trips to the plate, and Bob Moran, with a double, were the batting stars for the Presidio.

Ft. Ord Again Sixth Army Champions; Presidio 4th

The eight-man Presidio track squad sparked by Lowell Zellers winning the 1500-meter run wound up in fourth place last weekend in the All-Sixth Army track and field championships. The two-day meet was held at the Compton College stadium in Los Angeles with Fort MacArthur as the host team.

The powerful Fort Ord Warriors paced by speedster Alex Burl retained their title with 71 points, followed by Fort Lewis with 59½ points and Fort MacArthur with 46 tallies.

Burl, winner of the 100-meter dash on Friday with a 10.4 time came back on Saturday to take the 200 in 21.7 around a curve with Dean Smith, 1952 Olympian, second two yards back. Smith, former Texas U flash, was running for Fort MacArthur. Burl was a college star for Colorado A&M.

Zellers, of the 505th MP Bn., a former distance star for the University of Indiana, won the 1500 meters with a time of 3:55.9 and took a third in the 5000-meter grind behind Capozzoli of Fort MacArthur with a clocking of 14:59.9.

Purcell Daniels of Headquarters Company, Station Complement, was the only other Post star to place in two events. Daniels won third in the 100-meter sprint and a fourth spot in the 200-meter churn.

Surprise of the meet for the Presidio was the showing of Sammy Moreno, Headquarters Company, Station Complement, when he entered the 3000-meter steeplechase for the first time and wound up in fourth place. Moreno, primarily a boxer, is the defending featherweight champion in the Sixth Army.

LANKY Presidio speedster Lowell Zellers of the 505th Military Police Battalion captured first place in the 1500 meter run last Saturday at the Sixth Army track and field meet in the fast time of 3 minutes 55.9 seconds. US Army Lieut. Wins Modern Pentathlon Title

Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. (AFPS)—A U.S. Army first lieutenant, who last year won the pistol event at the world modern pentathlon championships in Switzerland, came from behind in the final event to win the individual championship of an international pentathlon meet between the U.S., Mexico and Brazil.

Lt. Edgar O'Hair overtook Lt. Jose Perez Mier of Mexico in total points by picking up 1,210 for winning the 4,000-meter cross-country run in 13 minutes 49.9 seconds. Lt. Perez covered the distance in 15:11.8 to earn 964 points.

O'Hair's cross-country performance gave him a five-event total of 4,674 points. Perez had 4,666. U.S. Army SP2 Robert Miller, winner of the 300-meter free style swim, placed third in the individual standings with a point total of 4,431.

Individual point summaries of U.S. athletes: Lt. O'Hair—riding, 4,110; epee fencing, 514; 25-meter time fire pistol shooting, 880; swimming, 960, and running, 1,210. Specialist Miller — riding, 925; fencing, 838; shooting, 560; swimming, 1,012, and running, 1,096.

The Mexican squad defeated the Brazilian armed forces contingent for team honors with 11,926 points to 10,929. The U.S. team was forced to drop out of team competition early in the meet when 1st Lt. Harlan Johnson was injured in a riding mishap and was unable to continue.

Also competing in the meet unofficially were the alternates of the Mexican and Brazilian teams and U.S. servicemen 1st Lt. David Miller, USA, Lt. (jg) Bill Vendl, Coast Guard, M/Sgt. William Knuppel, USMC, SP3 John Holland and SP3 Hector Proventud. All of the U.S. athletes competing in the meet are in training here for the Olympic pentathlon trials.

The international meet was designed to develop service athletes of the three countries for the forthcoming Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia. Arrangements were made at the suggestion of Maj. Gen. William C. Rose, USA (ret.), chairman of the U.S. Olympic modern pentathlon committee, and at the invitation of the Army through coordination with the State and Defense Departments.

Foil Action

Tafoya Wins Second Spot In Pacific Coast Fencing

The fencing medic from the Presidio-Letterman Army Hospital sword squad, Jose Tafoya, slashed his way to second place in the intermediate foil division of the Pacific Coast Fencing championships.

The blade title matches were held in Los Angeles last week.

Tafoya wound up the three-day tournament with a silver medal, losing the top spot to Jack Baker of the San Francisco Olympic Club.

Mrs. Shirley Canter, from the local blade squad, returned home with a silver and a bronze medal after winning third place in the Women's Pacific Coast open foil and the second spot in the Women's intermediate foil championship.

The third member of the team, George Kester, fenced in the epee bouts and just missed the finals by a few points after running into strong competition.

Tafoya, along with Herb Rhodes and Colonel Laurance Brownlee, will make up the Presidio-Letterman blade team at the United States National Championships in New York from 7 to 16 June. Mrs. Canter will be the only female entry for the local team.

Coach of the local fencing team, Bill O'Brien was officially notified recently that he had been chosen as a qualified member of the National Fencing Coaches Association.

By the close of this year Bill will have completed 25 years of fencing, with the last few years spent at Letterman coaching the local squad in his spare time.

Hamilton Wafs Hand Presidio First Defeat

The Presidio Wac softball team suffered their first loss of the 1956 season last Monday afternoon when the powerful Hamilton Air Force Base Wafs turned on the power to beat the locals 14-2.

The loss put the Presidio girls into a second place tie in the Northern California Women's Armed Forces softball league with Hamilton, with two wins and a single loss apiece. Parks Air Force Base leads the loop with two wins.

Both Presidio tallies came in the first inning when Zorah Christian tripled with two teammates on base.

Yesterday the Presidio lassies played host to the Treasure Island Waves on the PX diamond with results appearing in next week's Star-Presidian.

top batter

Buck Riddle, highly-rated young first sacker just out of the Army celebrated his Southern Association debut with a perfect night at bat, cracking out five successive hits as Atlanta drubbed Mobile, 12 to 2. Riddle, given a reported $36,000 when the Milwaukee organization signed him in 1951, slugged a 415-foot triple and four singles to drive in four runs.

Nine Presidio of San Francisco officers and enlisted men left yesterday for the U. S. Army Rifle and Pistol matches at The Infantry Center, Fort Benning, Ga.

Representing the Presidio, the nine outstanding marksmen will compete with other topnotch shooters for a berth on the All-Sixth Army team and eventually a place on the Army's team slated to compete in the Southeastern Regional and National matches.

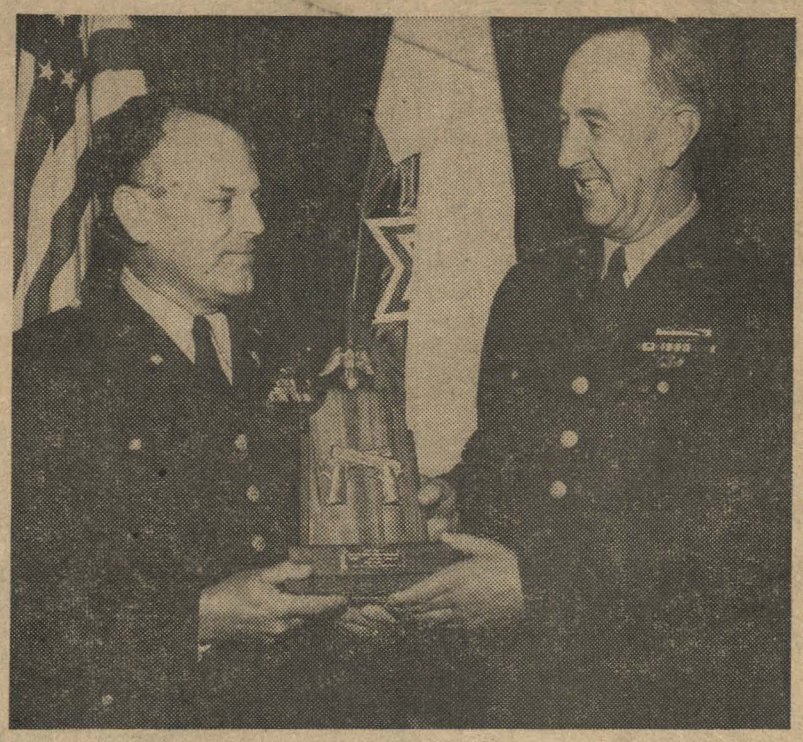
The colonel will lead a star-studded cast of Presidio marksmen to Georgia, including a National pistol record holder and the pistol aggregate winner at the recent Sixth Army matches at Camp Roberts.

The record holder is, of course, Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge of Sixth Army Headquarters, who shattered the National Individual record with a score of 293—three points better than the old U. S. standard.

Colonel Rouge's score in the meet qualified him for his second Excellence - in - Competition Badge. And he needs but one more such to be awarded the Army's top shooting award, the Distinguished Pistol Shot Badge.

Another Camp Roberts winner, Master Sergeant James L. Wade, also of Sixth Army Headquarters, will be out to land a berth on the team. The sergeant, a long time expert, won the pistol aggregate championship at Roberts with a score of 2525.



The colonel and sergeant will be backed up by Captain John F. Kallam, pistol team coach from the 505th Military Police Battalion; Captain Henry T. Croonquist, of the California Military District, and Master Sergeant David A. Dewey, Sixth Army Headquarters.

Three enlisted men will represent the Presidio in the rifle competitions.

They are Sfc. Johnnie W. Hunter, Co. A, 505th MP Battalion, M/Sgt. Peter A. Kuznar, Headquarters, Sixth Army, and Pfc. Robert L. Dalton, Co. A, Station Complement.

The nine marksmen are scheduled to report to Fort Benning no later than 7 June.

Their first big task will be to gain berths on the official Sixth Army team and U. S. Army team. Should they succeed, their TDY orders will be extended for the Southeastern matches later this month and the Nationals at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August.

Greater Glory for outstanding marksmanship went to Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge (left), as Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, presented him with the Sixth Army individual service pistol championship trophy. The Colonel, who left for Fort Benning, Ga., and the All-Army tournament, set a new national record when he fired a sizzling 293 out of a possible 300. He established a new mark by three points.

New Directive Aimed At Raising NCO Prestige

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 2 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 8 June, 1956

Army Will Discharge Reservists

Salute to Colors on arrival at San Francisco International Airport is given by President Sukarno of Indonesia, S.F. Mayor George Christopher and Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young. The Indonesian chief of state, paying northern California and San Francisco a visit on his 19-day tour of the U.S., was greeted by civic and military officials on arrival. The President inspected the Sixth Army Honor Guard.

Half Million Ready, Standby Face Discharge Or Transfer

Washington—In a move to build a truly Ready Reserve force, the Army will discharge 475,000 reservists and transfer an additional 500,000 from the Ready to Standby Reserve during the next fiscal year, Department of the Army announced today.

The Army's Ready Reserve screening program is designed to insure the minimum attrition of individuals and units on mobilization. The result will be to retain in the Ready Reserve only those who meet service standards of fitness and possess required military qualifications in appropriate grades and specialties, and who will be available when called for service during a National emergency.

The screening procedures will bring the Army reserve, including the Army National Guard, within strength of 1,692,000 authorized by Department of Defense under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

Strength of the Army Ready Reserve by the end of this month, it is estimated, will be 1,885,000 exclusive of the Army National Guard.

DA Checks NCO's Records To Prevent Specialist-MOS Conflict

Some temporary specialists still hold permanent non-commissioned officer grades which conflict with their present MOS classification, the Army said recently.

This situation has arisen through failure to change NCO to specialist grades under the July 1, 1955 conversion program. In some instances it has resulted from enlistment in a permanent grade and subsequent advancement to a higher temporary specialist status.

Specialist records are being screened to determine which individuals still hold permanent NCO grades. Authority for the change to specialist grade is DA Circular 612-14. (ANS)

Elterich, who as Commander of troops directed the colorful final review in their honor.

Says Civilians Shouldn't Boss Top Noncoms

A terse, categorical statement embodied in the text of a new Sixth Army directive aimed at increasing prestige within non-commissioned officer ranks may result in reorganization, personnel-wise, of a number of technical and administrative units throughout commands in the eight western states.

In Circular 7-170, item k, Sixth Army has ordered commanders in the field to "avoid placing NCO's under the supervision of civilians."

Since roughly only two per cent of the Army's master sergeants and eight per cent of sergeants first class have been switched to specialist status, a great number of ranking NCO's are still pulling other than line or troop duty. For the most part these non-commissioned officers in technical services and administrative slots often come under the direct or partial supervision of civilians when in pursuit of specialized duties.

Drawn from the thirteenth of some twenty recommendations forwarded from Department of the Army earlier this year, the original resolution stated "Avoid placing NCO's under supervision of civilians in TD (Table of Distribution) units to the maximum extent practical."

By going a step beyond, Sixth Army apparently hopes to eliminate any possibility of further denting the NCO's prestige by placing him under any civilian direction.

However, along with strengthening the above DA recommendations, Sixth Army has cautioned commanders to give close supervision to the "reduction or elimination of those members who fail to meet established standards of conduct or efficiency."

Although most of the 20 recommendations were probably in effect throughout the Sixth Army area, Headquarters spelled out its policies in the circular. Briefly they include:

- Prohibit use of NCO's in menial or degrading tasks; insure utilization in supervisory capacities.
- Establish and utilize NCO Councils to make appropriate recommendations to local commanders.
- Exempt NCO's from presenting round trip tickets to guarantee sufficient funds for return from leave.

Scholarship Proposal Would Aid Defense In Technical Fields

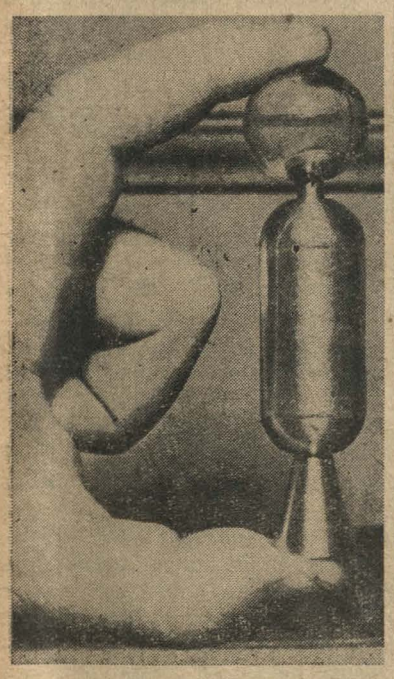
Rep. John D. Dingell (D—Mich.) has sponsored a law giving the Secretary of Defense authority to grant scholarships and graduate fellowships to students in scientific fields which have shortages of personnel.

Selections would be made entirely on the basis of ability for study and advanced work in mathematics, physics, biology, engineering and other sciences at U. S. or foreign institutions of higher learning.

The proposal would provide $10 million for the Defense Secretary to make technological scholarship appointments, beginning in the fiscal year 1958.

The bill has been referred to the House Armed Services Committee for consideration. (AFPS)

General Harrell



Management Chief Of Infantry Branch Due On Tuesday

Brigadier General Ben Harrell, chief, infantry branch, career management division, Department of the Army, will visit Headquarters Sixth Army and the Presidio on 12, 14, 15 and 16 June, it was announced yesterday.

The General will conduct an informal presentation on career management matters at 1330 hours, 12 June, in the Post theatre. This presentation will be of a general nature and approximately 30 minutes in duration.

Following the oral presentation a question and answer period will be held. Officers who have problems of a personal nature will be given opportunity to present them to him—in writing and in advance—so General Harrell can take the problems back to Washington for processing and later reply.

The General will also visit Fort Ord and Fort Lewis on his trip to the Pacific Coast.

30,000 Slated For Summer Training At Liggett

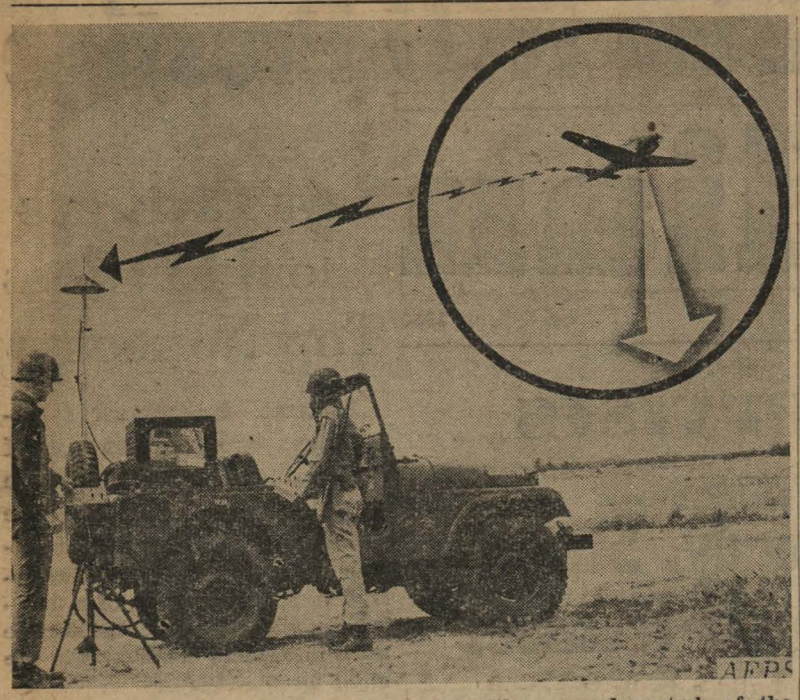
Upwards of 30,000 civilian soldiers from all corners of the Sixth Army Area will begin to converge on Camp Roberts and Hunter Liggett Military Reservation to participate in annual two-week summer encampments, starting 16 June.

The two week summer training is a regular part of the National Guard and Army Reserve Program and is to be shared between the two Posts which are known as the Camp Roberts-Hunter Liggett Military Reservation Complex, containing a combined area of 300,000 acres.

The summer program is under the jurisdictional direction of Major General Gilman C. Mudgett, Commanding General of the 5th Infantry Division and Fort Ord. Colonel Harry A. Welsch, Deputy Post Commander of HLMR, has been named as Deputy Commander of the Reserve Components Training Camp.



The first units are slated to arrive at the training site on 16 June. The last units to train will withdraw from the Complex on 1 September.

The Reserve Components Training Camp (RCTC) located at Camp Roberts, will be responsible for the opening and closing of the installations, providing technical services and facilities and for over-all co-ordination of the summer training. More than 120 officers and 800 enlisted personnel will be needed for the operation of the RCTC Headquarters and to assure administrative support for the civilian soldiers this summer. The bulk of the support group will come from Fort Ord, California, and Fort Lewis, Washington, with the remainder from other Sixth Army installations.

A maximum of 12,000 personnel will engage in reserve training at the RCTC at one time. Officers and enlisted men of the organizations attend 48 two-hour training sessions throughout the year and then engage in the two-week summer tour.

The Reserve Forces Act of 1955 was enacted last year to bolster the reserve component program.

Latest Word!

Army Tests Battlefield TV Concepts With New Drone

Washington—The newest concept in battlefield TV, an aerial drone that telecasts strategic information "live" to ground commanders, has been unveiled by the Army for the first time at Bolling, AFB.

The drone, a converted L-17 scout plane that flies by remote control, scans enemy territory with its cameras and instantly flashes a picture on the screen of a jeep-mounted TV unit.

Army signal corps scientists say the airborne hook-up has "broad potentialties." At present, the drone is being tested over a 25-mile range. However, it will be governed eventually by the range of its radar tracking system.

In initial tests, the L-17 was flown with a "safety" pilot aboard to observe remote control operations. When tests are completed it will be an entirely pilotless system.

The 250-lb. ground station unit fed by the L-17 is weather and shock resistant. It is equipped with radio links for controlling the aircraft and for communicating with the safety pilot.

Special control equipment prevents stalls, over-speeding, excessive loss of altitude and other hazardous conditions that might be encountered by the drone in flight.

Upon finishing its mission, the plane is guided to a landing by an operator at the ground unit who merely flicks a switch to bring it "home." (AFPS)

Army Will Appoint Some Reserve Officers For Finance Corps

A limited number of qualified applicants will be appointed reserve 1st and 2nd lieutenants in the Finance Corps, the Army has announced.

Selected individuals and Finance Corps Reserve Officers without prior commissioned service, who are called to active duty, must volunteer for a three year Army tour. Company grade reserve officers with prior service will be ordered to active duty for an indefinite period.

To be eligible for a commission applicants must have or be working toward a master's degree in accounting, business administration or economics at an accredited college or university.

More information on eligibility requirements for individuals desiring active duty status in the Army Finance Corps under this program may be found in Circular 601-22. (ANS)

Army "Package Battery" Is Sharp In Firing Nike At Tough Targets

Red Canyon, N. M.—A "Package Battery" just out of basic training and firing the Army's famed supersonic anti-aircraft guided missile Nike for the first time here recently, scored two definite kills on radio-controlled, 11-foot, drone target planes.

This "Nike Package" which is still taking an eight week operator training course here before moving on to a permanent site at Bridgeport, Conn., used only two missiles to knock the tiny drones out of the sky at 16,000 feet. A "Nike Package" is composed of 133 officers and men who are the technical and firing cadre of a Nike Battalion.

Approximately 115 correspondents, photographers and newsreel camera people from all over the U. S. converged on the Army's guided missile testing grounds at White Sands and Red Canyon Tuesday and Wednesday to watch the "shoot."

The Corporal and Honest John, both ground-to-ground missiles capable of carrying an atomic warhead, were fired at simulated enemy installations miles away. The Corporal and two Honest Johns fired, were credited with destroying their targets.

Newsmen were especially impressed by the awe-inspiring Corporal which thundered ponderously into the atmosphere after literally hanging in space about a mile in the air for what seemed like minutes but was perhaps only split seconds. One writer said the tremendous power displayed by the 45-foot-long missile made him feel tiny and helpless.

The Army test-fired eight Nike missiles during the two-day "shoot" and scored hits with seven. The eighth Nike exploded itself in the air after it was lost to radar due to failure of its radar beacon. Self-destruction under these circumstances is a safety factor built into the missile.

The first hand view and background on the Army's guided missile program given to the press here left indelible proof that the system is sound.

Correspondents left the testing area in this rugged country with a better realization of the capabilities of the many strategic Nike sites in defending the U. S. against enemy air attack.

Major General Robert J. Wood, Commanding General of the Anti-aircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center at nearby Fort Bliss, Tex., summed it all up here at Red Canyon when he said, "What gets through to the Nike defense area we can handle."

On hand to personally view the impressive show was Lieutenant General Stanley R. Mickelsen, Commanding General of the Anti-aircraft Command.

Senate Committee Votes To Close Loophole In Academy Regs

The Senate Armed Services Committee has voted to close a "legal loophole" through which students of West Point, Annapolis and the Air Force Academy could avoid their obligations under Selective Service.

Existing law provides that appointees to the service academies be discharged from service under the draft upon entering these institutions. There have been instances where cadets or midshipmen have resigned shortly after receiving academy appointments.

New legislation would end this exemption as well as require six to eight years' service after graduation. (AFPS)

Reservists Set

Washington — The largest group of six-month reservists to begin training—6,000 men between the ages of 17 and 18½—will report to army posts in June for a half-year tour of active duty.

Most of the reservists enlisted in the program earlier, but were deferred from reporting until they finished high school.

The most recent figures compiled by the Army show that the number of men signed up in the various Reserve Forces Act programs has swelled to 33,726. Of this number, 21,864 are six-month trainees. (AFPS)

Slate Gala Fete For Army Birthday

No Strain or muscular fatigue is encountered in packing back-type parachutes, thanks to the new invention for depressing and holding the small pilot chute, which is vital to the opening of the main chute. The other part of his inventive device is used to reduce the effort needed to close the chute flaps.

Packer Hears Girls' Plea; Puts Ingenuity To Work

Sfc. John Wyatt of the Parachute Maintenance Division located near Crissy Field has come up with an invention that makes parachute packing easy, even for women.

The device actually had its birth as a result of a group of fledgling feminine parachute packers' tears of despair and anger at not being able to manipulate a small pilot chute into place within the main chute and then getting the flaps secured.

While working with this group at the Jeffersonville, Indiana, QM Depot, Wyatt became conscious of the fact that either he figure out some way these women could pack the chutes, or see them lose their jobs as a result of their inability to cope with the parachutes.

As a result, he secured two flat three-quarter by sixteen-inch pieces of plywood, and fastening them together, made a clamp. This clamp was used to keep the taught spring housed within the pilot chute depressed during insertion.

The other part of the device was a single piece of plywod, flat on one end and pronged on the other, used to shove one side of the closing flap over the metal holding cones. Once both sides of this flap are secured, the rip cord is inserted, and the parachute is ready for use.

Explaining his invention, Wyatt said, "This little pilot chute is plenty hard to handle, and with that spring inside, it becomes as elusive as a piece of wet soap. However, if it weren't for this pilot chute literally jumping from inside these flaps once that rip cord is pulled, the big chute would never leave that pack. So, I figured these two pieces of plywood would solve the problem, and they did."

For his efforts, this paratrooper veteran of more than 201 jumps, including the famous drops at Normandy and the Rhine River in Germany, received a letter of commendation from Colonel J. E. Stewart, Chairman, Presidio Incentive Awards Committee, and a Department of the Army suggestion award certificate.

Big Parade, Exhibits Will Be Highlights

The United States Army, the Nation's oldest fighting force, celebrates its 181st birthday Thursday, 14 June, with a proud bow to the past—and an eager eye to the future.

First organized by a resolution of the Continental Congress in 1775, the Army "moves out smartly" today into an era of modern weapons, technological advances and highly-trained soldiers.

And here at the Presidio—as elsewhere throughout the world where Army units are stationed—the theme for the 1956 celebration will be, "The U.S. Army—America's Most Versatile Fighting Force."

The Presidio, itself only a year younger than the Army, will commemorate the occasion with appropriate ceremonies traditional and characteristic of its long history.

Biggest event tentatively scheduled to date is a mammoth Review and Decoration Ceremony at 1100 hours. As organized by Post S-3, the parade will include contingents from almost every unit stationed here.

Other events scheduled by Presidio sections and units include a tour of B Battery, 740th AAA Missile Battalion's Nike site at Fort Scott; a dance at the Presidio Service Club; Open House at the Non-Commissioned Officers' Club; baseball and softball games and a display of the Army's Skysweeper, electronically controlled anti-aircraft gun.

Military personnel will be given a half-day holiday after the parade and ceremony, while civilian workers will be given opportunity to take a half-day leave.

Here's Your Chance!

Local Aero Club Seeks New Members During Expansion

Opportunity to learn flying at rock-bottom cost is now available to a limited number of Presidio personnel.

The Presidio Aero Club plans to expand for the third and last time, reports Flight Officer Lt. Colonel Leland D. Esh, who organized the club less than a year and a half ago. The club started with eight people and one airplane, but after six months it doubled in size and acquired another aircraft. Now the membership will be raised to 24 and a third airplane purchased.

Both men and women who are members either of the active or reserve armed forces may join the club. A limited number of civilian personnel, working for the military, may also join. Presently the club's membership is more than half enlisted personnel.

"Basic purpose of the club," according to Colonel Esh, "is to provide interested persons the opportunity to learn to fly at the absolute minimum expense." The organization also aims at promoting interest in flying generally, enabling pilots to keep up their flying proficiency and generating interest in the Army Aviation Program.

The club is incorporated and each person joining becomes part owner in the corporation by purchasing $125 in stock. At any time he desires, a member may sell his stock back to the club at full purchase price. Dues are an additional $5 per month.

Members may fly the training airplane, an Aeronca Champion, for $2 an hour including gasoline. Flying lessons are available at $4 per hour. A beginner usually solos after between 10 and 18 hours of flying time. To qualify for a civilian pilot's license a student must log at least 40 hours of flying time.

To date eight club members have soloed and four have gone on to earn their pilots' licenses. The total expense of becoming a pilot including airplane rental, instruction and dues, averages between $165 and $200.

While providing the opportunity to learn to fly is the basic function of the club, there are other activities. Once a month the members attend a business-social meeting. And on occasion the members of the club will take "breakfast flights" to various airports within a 150 mile radius.

The group's second airplane is an all-metal Luscomb which is available to members at $3 per hour including gasoline. One member just recently took the Luscomb on a round-trip flight to Boise, Ida.

"But can I learn to fly?"

"If you can learn to drive a car safely, you can learn to fly," says Colonel Esh.

Additional information on the Presidio Aero Club can be obtained from the club president, Captain Douglas Huff, G-3, 3316, or from Colonel Esh, 4471.

Pro Tuckers Will Feature Roadeo Here

The Presidio main parade ground will be turned over to California truck drivers tomorrow morning for the annual Truck Safety Roadeo.

Sponsored by the California Trucking Association and Bay area chapters of the National Safety Council, the contest is open to truck drivers who have successfully compiled an accident-free record for the past year.

Participants in the roadeo will maneuver their rigs in four size categories: full trailers, heavy semitrailers, light semitrailers and small trucks. They will compete for top prizes by tooling their vehicles through narrow spaces, backing, turning and stopping.

Millard Peterson will be in charge of the roadeo, assisted by trucking association, National Safety Council American Society of Safety Engineers officials. The contests will begin at 0800 hours.

The overseas Army is divided into tactical forces deployed in Europe and in Korea, and military missions scattered in many other parts of the world, generally where our combat troops are not stationed.

The Graduates of the Army's Work Simplification School beam happily as they are presented their Department of the Army Certificate of Training. This course, lasting six weeks, covers all aspects of reducing time consuming work processes through a more streamlined system. The work done at this school pertains to the supervisory capacity each student fills in his or her everyday occupation. In this case, the graduates are from the Post Transportation Division. Colonel J. E. Stewart, Post Comptroller made the awards to, right to left, Mrs. Lucretia Farr, Household Goods Division; Mrs. Luba Rubenstein, Passenger Branch; Mr. Walter Elker, Shop Foreman, post motor pool; and Mr. Muncie M. Bonner, Maintenance Officer, post motor pool. Taking part in the presentation is Major J. P. O'Connor, Assistant Post Transportation Officer.

Summer Training Plans

Under the law, young men between the ages of 17 and 18½ may volunteer to serve on active duty with the Army for six months. At the end of that time they revert to National Guard and Army Reserve units in their home towns for the remainder of their military obligation. After this, they will participate in the same training activities as do other members of the National Guard and Army Reserve.

The first major unit to train this year will be the 49th Infantry Division of the California National Guard. The 49th (California's Own) will be at the Complex from 16 June through 30 June.

Major Army Reserve units scheduled for the summer training are: the 91st Infantry Division scheduled to train from 9 July through 21; and the 63rd Infantry Division from 23 July through 4 August.

The 59th Regimental Combat Team, also an Army Reserve unit, will train from 16 to 28 July.

The California National Guard's 40th Armored Division will participate from 11 to 25 August.

Numerous smaller units of the National Guard and Army Reserve will engage in summer training throughout the two and a half month period, overlapping schedules with some of the major units.

This marks the second consecutive year that the marching feet of the Active Army's civilian counterpart have resounded over the broad expanse of the Camp Roberts-Hunter Liggett Military Reservation Complex.

The gigantic training center with its many and ideal facilities is located half way between San Francisco and Los Angeles, extending over a goodly portion of the coastal counties of Monterey and San Luis Obispo.

Band Concert

The Sixth Army Band directed by assistant band master SFC Ben T. Buckley presents a concert of classical and popular music at Union Square, San Francisco, today at 1200 noon.

The concert will be repeated for military personnel and their guests at the Presidio Service Club on 10 June at 1400 hours.

The concert programs include The Dance of the Gnomes, The Gladiator's Farewell, Deep Sea Chantey, Tamboo, Campus Bells and the United States Field Artillery March.

Arriving in this port for the first time since 1945, the fleet is being greeted by seven planes and 18 helicopters from Sixth Army Flight Detachment, the 6th Anti-aircraft Detachment, Fort Baker, the 521st Aviation Company (Topographical); the 30th Engineer Group from Stockton and the 5th Infantry Division Flight Detachment, Fort Ord. Commanding the flight in that order are Major John Gillespie, Captain Lyle Peterson, Major Phillip Meltzer and Major Harold D. Flynn.

Major Jack Ruby, Sixth Army Aviation Officer, is in charge of planning for the military fly-over which was requested by the Mayor of San Francisco.

During the air welcome the Armed Services will be first to greet the 35 ships of the United States First Fleet as it enters below the Golden Gate Bridge for a week-end stay.

The Army's planes and helicopters take off from the Presidio's Crissy Field at 1100 hours to salute the flagship, and fly over the entire length of the task force.

On a second fly-over, the group of Presidio enlisted women will drop a shower of flowers provided by the city of San Francisco over each incoming ship.

Civic functions honoring the entire United States First Fleet are planned by the city of San Francisco during its week-end visit here.

Now hear this! Contrary to the Presidio Teenage Project Clean-up Day announcement in recent issues of the Star Presidian, the correct day and date for the event is 16 June, the day after the school holidays begin.

Don't wash your car that week. Don't clean your windows, beat the carpets or mow the lawn. Let the young boys and girls of the Presidio do it for you—at a nominal fee which will be turned in to the Teenage Club fund as a means of financing the club social and administrative functions.

The day is Saturday. The date is 16 June. The time is all day, until the household clean-up project is completed by the Teenagers under contract to Presidio residents. Give the boys and girls a big hand! It is a worthy cause and they are willing and eager to do the best job possible.

Consult the telephone listings given in the last issue of Star Presidian and call a Presidio boy or girl if you have a job for them to do.

Entries Sought For Presidio's "Community Service" Contest

What man or woman has made the greatest contribution to the community life of the Presidio?

By submitting nominations to determine the Most Outstanding Man or Woman for the month of July, Presidio personnel have the opportunity both to give credit to those who deserve it and to provide incentive for additional contributions of time and energy toward community betterment.

The contest emphasizes free time activities that come after duty and job performances. Each monthly winner will receive a special scroll from the deputy post commander and additional prizes yet to be announced. Tentative plans call for a Man of the Year to be selected from the 12 monthly winners.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, has appointed Kenneth S. Erwin, editor of the Star Presidian, as chief of the committee for judging the monthly contest.

To qualify for the July contest entries must be mailed, prior to June 15, to:

Kenneth S. Erwin
Editor, Star Presidian
Presidio of San Francisco

Nominations should briefly state all pertinent information about the nominee. Names must be submitted by the middle of June to be eligible for the July contest. Later entries will be considered in the following month's contest.

Wife Saver!

One Steel Box For Household Goods Means Less Worry For Army Wives

Washington—The Army has bought 21,127 damage-proof "transporters," an improved all-steel container for shipping household goods and cargo.

The containers, eight feet long, six feet wide and seven feet high, with 1,500-pound capacity, save considerably in packing and handling costs, and at the same time, cut losses in damage and pilferage.

The Transportation Corps also has made arrangements with stateside van lines to ship household goods direct to European destinations through a single agent.

Dependents' possessions will be packed, hauled to the POE and uncrated in overseas quarters with one company responsible for the entire transfer, the Army said.

The elimination of multiple agents is expected to improve service to military families and simplify collection of claims for loss or damage.

The household effects of 10th Inf. Div. members were shipped to Germany from Ft. Riley, Kan., last year in "transporters" and the boxes are now being used in the move of the III Corps from Ft. Knox, Ky., to Europe. (AFPS)

During the week of 11 to 16 June the Troop Information Topic will introduce conventions and regulations pertaining to the treatment of American prisoners of war.

Entitled "The Fighting Man's Code," the discussion will reaffirm the principles of leadership and discipline which instill in the fighting man the responsibility and resolution calculated to aid him in surviving any ordeal inflicted on him through imprisonment and unexpected privation generally.

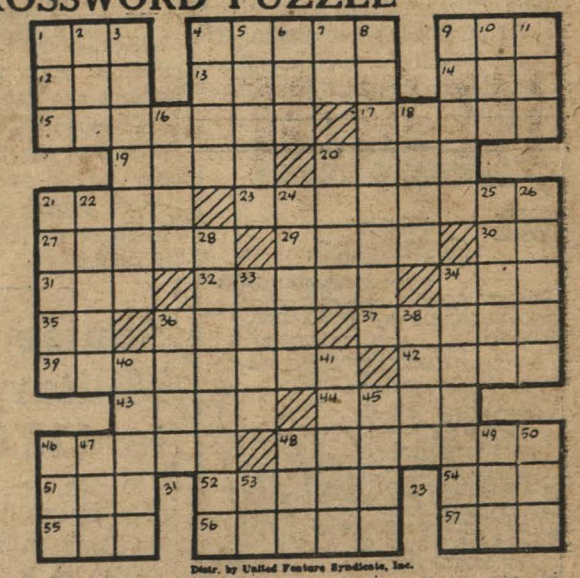
BEHIND THE HIGH WALL is a taut, brutal, suspensful drama of criminals inside and outside prison walls. Tom Tully is seen as an assistant prison warden who is taken along as hostage by two convicts who escape from the prison.

THAT CERTAIN FEELING presents George Saunders as a cartoonist whose comic strip has achieved success through its homespun philosophy. Losing some of its appeal, a "ghost" cartoonist, Bob Hope, is hired, with complicated and hilarious situations resulting.



UNTAMED is based on the best-selling novel by Helga Moray, the story of how Miss Moray's ancestor left Ireland during the potato famine to participate in the great treck of the Boers from the coast to the interior of Zulu-infested South Africa.

PSF Golfers Win Seventh Match, 21-6

The red hot Presidio golf team won their seventh match of the season last Friday when they turned back the invading McClellan Air Force Base six-some 21-6 on the Sharpe Park Course.

Bill Krause and John Roberts teamed as the locals number one team and turned back the top group of Airmen five to four. Krause fired a 70 for low medialist honors and teammate Roberts turned in an 82 over the windy Sharpe course.

Craig Wright and Leon Thomas made up the second Post team, winning their match seven and one-half to one-half. Wright turned in 74 and Thomas fired a 76 for the day's action.

Vern Frankhauser and Milt Rosenberg, with an 81 and 82, respectively, made up the third Presidio squad and won their match eight and one-half to one-half.

Next Thursday afternoon the Presidio sharpshooters engage the Letterman Army Hospital divot men over the Sharpe Park Course.

poetic punch

The folks at Ft. Riley, Kans., are waxing poetic over the doings of Charley Joseph. The pro middleweight has lost one, tied one and taken all the rest in 32 fights. Joseph served as Caisson boxing coach in 1955 and as a gunner in the 48th AAA Battalion of division artillery while the unit was stationed in Germany.

The Chicago Bears have signed Harland Carl for next season. The former Wisconsin gridder played at Ft. Eustis, Va., last year.

Opening Day

Post Youth League Starts With Double Header Here

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The Presidio Youth Baseball League got off to a successful start last Saturday afternoon on the Post PX diamond with a double-header, the Braves taking the opener 6 to 4 from the Dodgers and the Pirates and Tigers playing to a 12-12 deadlock.

Pre-game ceremonies were featured by an opening address by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, who threw out the first pitch to open the new boys' league.

The new loop was formed for boys of the 13-15 year old age group to provide a stepping stone for the sports life of the boys between their Little League experience and future baseball teams.

The opening tilt saw Lester Krause of the Braves win a pitching duel from Bart Salgado, of the Dodgers, 6 to 4.

The winning Braves, managed by Pfc. Ron Parshall, scored two runs in the second, one in the third and three more in the fifth for their six tallies.

The second half of the double header saw the Pirates and the Tigers go all out in a slugfest that finally ended 12 all.

Bob Hall and Pat O'Connor hurled the game for the Tigers under the coaching of Captain Francis Hoskin. Three men shared the mound duties for the Pirates, who are headed by Sp3 James Willey. Coddington started for the Pirates and was followed by Wayne and Stewart on the hill.

Chaplain (Captain) Erhard H. Harms of the 505th Military Police Bn., is president of the new youth league with M/Sgt. John Lupo of the Sixth Army Special Services.

plebes win

West Point, N. Y. (AFPS)—Armys' plebes defeated the Air Force Academy, 78-67, in a track and field meet—the first face-to-face athletic meeting between the service institutions. Both had competed a few months ago in a shooting meet by mail.

The West Point fledglings copped nine of the 15 events. Falcon speedster Mickey Gouyd won the 100 yard dash, the 220 and anchored the victorious quarter-mile relay team.

Track Applications Top Army Olympic Tryouts

Washington (ANS)—What is the favorite sport in the U. S. Army? If Olympic tryout applications are any indication, track and field is way out in front. Canoeing brings up the rear. Ninety Army athletes have applied for track and field competition while only one has made application for a canoeing berth.

Wrestling is second in popularity with 79 bids in free-style and Greco-Roman events.

The Modern Penthathlon has drawn 11 applications while seven have asked for Olympic tryouts as cyclists. Seven yachters and 22 swimmers have entered their names for consideration.

When the 1956 Olympic Games get under way next November at Melbourne, Australia, fencing and equestrian competition will be tough for U. S. participants. Six equestrians and 14 fencing hopefuls have placed their bids to date.

Water Polo has drawn nine applicants and six have requested trials in the weight lifting event. Only eight applied for tryouts in the now completed gymnastic qualifications.

Thus far only four boxers and two shooters have submitted applications for Olympic tryouts. However, applicants for these events advance through the All-Army tournaments. The basketball trials have been completed.

Out of the 61 Army athletes who applied to compete in the Olympic Winter Games held in Italy last winter, 16 actually made the U. S. Team.

Applications are still pouring in as the kickoff date for the various U. S. Olympic Team trials draws near, according to the Department of the Army.

3 Million Fish Planted In Streams

During the past several weeks more than 3,000,000 king salmon fingerlings have been planted in three major northern California salmon streams, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

Another salmon milestone was release of the first fingerling kings from the new Nimbus Hatchery into the American River last week. By mid-June some 3,000,000 fish will have been released from the hatchery.

In mid-April 1,000,000 king fingerlings from Coleman Hatchery were released into the Mokelumne River in an effort to build up the run in that stream. This plant is part of a long range plan.

During March 2,590,000 king salmon fingerlings were released into the Klamath River in Siskiyou County from the Mt. Shasta Hatchery. Eggs from which these fish were hatched were taken at the Fall Creek station.

Another half million kings were released into the Russian River below the site of Coyote Dam, which is expected to create water conditions favorable to the kings.

At present there are only silver salmon and steelhead in the river.

Nimbus hatchery's first year production, while far below capacity because of adverse water conditions this season, will make a definite contribution to the Sacramento River system runs, the department pointed out.

Supermen

Modern Pentathlon Gets Eleven Soldier Athletics

Washington (ANS)—Athletes who master the Olympic's Modern Pentathlon event deserve the title "Sports Superman," according to the U. S. team's coach Nicholos Toth.

Fostered by Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the Modern Olympic Games, the pentathlon consists of the 500-meter cross-country riding event, the 4,000 meter cross-country run, 300 meter free style swim, 25 meter timed-fire pistol shoot and epee fencing.

This gruelling all-military event was first introduced in the 1912 Games at Stockholm, Sweden. One member of the competing U. S. team was the late General George S. Patton Jr., then a second lieutenant of the cavalry.

Participants compete in the five events on five consecutive days. The first day each entrant draws a strange horse furnished by the Olympic Games host nation and is allowed only a 15 minute warming up period before riding over the three mile obstacle course.

The next day each participant engages in epee fencing and duels every entrant in the competition. These intermittent bouts usually take about ten hours.

Athletes fire 200 shots with a pistol at bobbing targets on the third day. The fourth day schedules the 300 meter free style swim and the wrapup is a 4,000 meter cross-country run on the final day.

Eleven Army athletes have applied for the Modern Pentathlon Olympic trials. More are expected to participate in this event's training program which starts on 18 June at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

An eight-man Modern Pentathlon Team will represent the U. S. at the 1956 Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia, next November.

Game Ballots Available For Servicemen

As a special convenience to sports-minded service personnel, the Armed Forces Press Service is serving as an agency to help Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick conduct the 1956 All Star game poll.

The annual game will be played this year at Griffith Stadium, Washington, D. C., 10 July. AFPS joins the nation's press and radio in this service.

To facilitate the poll for AFPS at the Presidio of San Francisco, the Star-Presidian is publishing a ballot in today's edition. Personnel who have player favorites they would like to see play in the game should submit their ballots to AFPS, 250 West 57th St., New York 19, N. Y., before the midnight 22 June deadline.

Voting opened throughout the country on 1 June. Final tabulations will be sent to the commissioner by midnight 26 June. The results will be announced shortly thereafter.

In filling out the ballot, enter nominees for all positions except pitcher. The pitchers will be selected by the respective managers.

By tradition, the previous year's World Series managers pilot the all star teams. This year Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees will head the American League team and Walter Alston of the Brooklyn Dodgers will pilot the National League all stars.

Cubs Lead Little League By 2 Games Over Giants

The Little League Cubs maintained their hold on first place in the Presidio Little League this week with a 20-1 victory over the Cards. The win gives the Cubs a seven and one record so far with the Giants in the second slot with a five and two mark. The Cards with two and five and the Yanks with one and seven make up the rest of the league.

Last Friday the Yanks got their first win of the current season when they blasted out an 11 to 4 win from the Cards.

Bill Quillan went all the way for the winners, giving up four hits along the way. Larry Gouker was the losing hurler.

The Yanks jumped off to a four run lead in the first, added five more in second and two in the fifth for the victory. Jose Salgado with two doubles, Matthew Daily with a triple and Bob Wolf, Ray Mayo and Bill Quillan with one double apiece were the Yanks batting stars.

Last Saturday's double header saw the Cubs drub the Cards 20 to 1 and the Giants edged out the Yanks 9 to 8.

Bob O'Connor with a home run, two doubles and a single and Kim McIntire with two round trippers were the big guns for the Cubs. McIntire was the winning pitcher giving up but ONE hit during the six inning contest. Mike Hulsey was the losing hurler.

The second half of the twin bill saw the Giants score two runs in the last inning to edge the oncoming Yanks, 9 to 8. Tommy Sparks was the winning pitcher and Mike Beauvais suffered the loss.

Two games were played in the minor division of the Little League with the Oaks beating the Seals, 15-1, and the Solons gaining the nod over the Padres, 20-10.

steelhead run

An estimated run of 31,500 adult steelhead ascended the Sacramento River system during the 1955-56 season, the Department of Fish and Game said. This figure is about the same as for the previous season.

Based on tag returns and creel checks, about 8,400 of them were caught by anglers, or less than last year.

The Post Sports Office is still in urgent need of men and women swimmers to fill out the 1956 Presidio Swim squad. Any interested personnel on the Presidio or its sub-posts with any kind of swimming experience are urged to call 3968 for information. The Presidio, as defending champions, have to defend their title at the Sixth Army swim meet at Fort MacArthur, 18-20 July. CG Names New DCO, G-2 In High Level Staff Change

Two major changes in Headquarters Sixth Army staff assignments were announced this week by Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

In the first, Colonel Joseph H. Gilbreth, heretofore assistant chief of staff (G-2), was named deputy chief of staff for plans and operations.

Colonel Gilbreth, a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, class of 1927, succeeds Colonel Duncan S. Somerville, due for reassignment to the Connecticut Military District in Hartford, Conn., later this month.

To replace Colonel Gilbreth, Sixth Army Headquarters named Colonel Calvin A. L. Dickey as assistant chief of staff (G-2). Colonel Gilbreth has been assistant G-2.

Colonel Gilbreth, assigned to the Presidio in November 1954, came to Sixth Army Headquarters after duty with the G-3, Fourth Army at Fort Sam Houston.

He served two years in the European Theatre of Operations during World War II with the Ninth Armored Division.

He was awarded the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart for wounds suffered in action with the unit.

One of the Colonel's two sons is a graduate of USMA, while the second studied engineering at Texas A & M College.

He participated in the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland and Central European campaigns with the 19th Corps.

The colonel wears the Legion of Merit, the Air Medal and Bronze Star Medal. He and Mrs. Dickey have two children, Sandra Ferriel, 16, and Michael Griffin, 13.

Expectancy Deferments Shows Troops Need Better Orientation

The increasing number of enlisted men making application for deferment at stateside oversea replacement stations because their wives are pregnant indicates a need for proper orientation at the home station.

Home station commanders should ensure that oversea replacement personnel are properly oriented on pregnancy deferments prior to shipment, the Army has announced.

To minimize expense both to the government and the individual, such persons should be instructed to submit their applications before departing for oversea stations.

Pregnancy deferment requests are processed in accordance with AR 614-30. (ANS)

Sixth Army Wins National Safety Council's Award

Safety stress in the Sixth Army area has again proved its effectiveness with the winning of the National Safety Council's Award of Honor by the Sixth Army for its accident prevention effort during 1955.

The entire Army recently was presented with an honor award for safety by the National Safety Council. This was the eleventh time in the past 13 years that the Army received such an award.

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff, praised the Sixth Army safety record as an "important accomplishment," and goes on to call for "aggressive command action" in the Army's continuing fight against accidents.

"This award should serve as a further challenge for the continued fine performance and leadership which is needed to eliminate the needless waste caused by accidents," urges Sixth Army Commander Lt. General Robert N. Young.

"With sincere appreciation for each and every individual effort," Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, extends his thanks to those personnel at the Presidio and its adjacent posts who helped win the award.

The National Safety Council, founded in 1913, is a non-commercial, non-profit organization which is endeavoring to promote safety in the United States. It was founded in 1913 and chartered by the United States Congress in 1953. To win the Award of Honor an organization must achieve an established standard in accident prevention.

Unlikely Code Will Be Changed During This Session of Congress

According to Defense officials, it appears unlikely that a proposed amendment to the Uniform Code of Military Justice will be brought up again at this session of Congress.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Overton Brooks (D—La.) in June 1955, is aimed at giving commanders wider latitude and more authority in dealing with first offenders who violate the tenets of the Code.

Official Greetings were extended to Clifford E. Miller (right) by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker (left) at the recent conference in Washington on Civilian Personnel Management. Others are Lt. General Walter I. Weible, deputy chief of staff for personnel, and Mr. Robert H. Wolley, director of civilian personnel, Department of the Army.

Sixth Army's Civilian Chief Back From Pentagon Confab

Clifford E. Miller, director of civilian personnel for Sixth Army, is back at his desk today following a top-level Pentagon conference in Washington, D. C.

Miller, along with 27 other civilian personnel directors, attended a 5-day meeting in the Nation's capital late last month pertaining to civilian personnel management.

The conference, attended by most of the Army's high ranking civil and military persons, embraced major commands in the continental United States, overseas and technical areas. It was the first such world-wide conference held.

The conferees listened to speeches by Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker; assistant secretary Milton; General Taylor, chief of staff; General Vans Weible, deputy chief of staff for personnel; General Gavin, research and development head and Robert Willey, Department of the Army director of civilian personnel.

Secretary Brucker's speech was themed around the "We" not "They" idea of unit and organization of the Army.

General Taylor, expanding this theme, said, "The Army will never be any better than the people in it, since we depend upon men and women to make it effective."

The General also said: "We must have an organization which pulls people together and gives them greater inner strength. It is important to be selective in bringing people into the civilian work force of the Army."

Miller, who has been associated with Army civilian work for more than 25 years, was chairman of one of three work groups.

His group stressed programming and organizing to accomplish future management jobs on needs to be considered in 5 to 10 years to support the Army's mission.

Strengthen Reserves

The strength of the Standby Reserve, on which there is no ceiling, will be about 8,500,000 by 30 June 1956. Army National Guard strength by 30 June will be approximately 407,000.

Reservists to be discharged are those who incurred a five or six-year reserve obligation as a result of service prior to 19 June 1951. The bulk of this group is composed of Korean War veterans who are now established in their occupations and communities. Many would be due for routine discharge within the next year.

Priority for transfer of reservists to the Standby Reserve will be based on combat service and the amount of Ready Reserve obligation remaining.

Reservists who served in Korea at any time during the period 26 June 1950 to 27 July 1953 will be eligible for the Standby Reserve.

The program will also remove from the Ready Reserve those whose call to the military would seriously impair production and research vital to the military effort or activities necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety or interest, unless they possess a critical military skill or volunteer for Ready Reserve service.

Similarly, reservists whose recall to active duty would create extreme personal or community hardship will be transferred to the Standby Reserve.

The Ready Reserve includes those units and individuals required and available for prompt entry on active duty in any expansion of the active Army in time of war or in time of National emergency declared by congress or proclaimed by the President, or when otherwise authorized by law.

The Ready Reserve will be required for early deployment.

The Standby Reserve includes those individuals available for involuntary employment of the active Army only.

Upon a declaration of war or national emergency, standby reservists will be recalled to duty only after Selective Service has determined that they are available for active service.

The Army will not retain reservists engaged in critical civil occupations involuntarily in a Ready Reserve assignment in excess of its Ready Reserve requirement for those skills, unless they also possess critical military skills which are required to meet the Army's mobilization requirements.

DA said it would not be necessary for reservists to write to appropriate military districts or CONUS headquarters in order to be screened — the screening program will be automatic. However, inquiries on the program may be forwarded by persons concerned.

Army Marks 181st Birthday Today

Scheduled for 1100 hours today, the parade is the top feature of the Presidio's observance of the Army's 181st birthday. As organized by Post S-3, the ceremony is scheduled to include almost every unit stationed here, with more than 1,000 troops set to march.

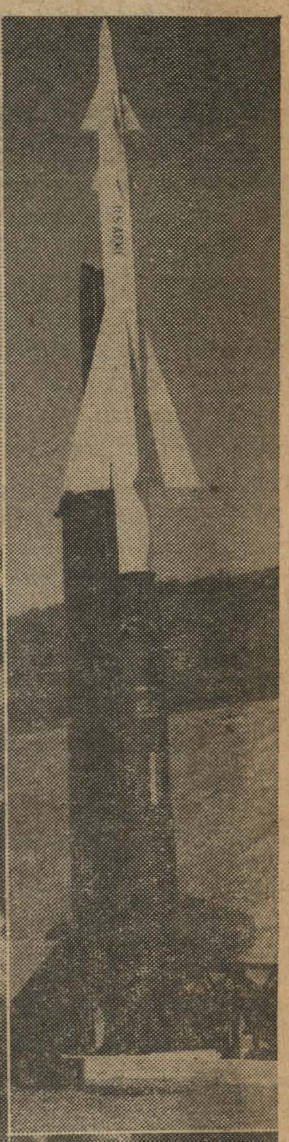
Lieutenant Colonel Wendell T. Jackson, dentist on the Post Dispensary staff, will be awarded the Commendation Ribbon for Meritorious Achievement by the commander of troops during the ceremony.

The Colonel devised a method for using dental plastic in place of wooden splints in surgery of the hand. The method, which enables more rapid rehabilitation of patients, was approved by Department of the Army, which termed it superior.

Orders published by Presidio Headquarters indicate that Co. D, Station Complement, and two companies from Headquarters Sixth Army (6000 SU) will make up the first battalion.

The second battalion will be composed entirely of Station Complement personnel, with Company C, Headquarters Company and Company A swinging past the reviewing stand in that order.

Massed colors will be paraded by color guards from Sixth Army, 30th Engineer Group, 46th Ordnance Group and 505th Military Police Battalion.



The 30th Engineer Group will form the entire third battalion, while the fourth battalion is slated to be made up of companies from the 505th, 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) and the 46th Ordnance Group.

War Without Men?

In Niwre's "World Without Men" two great mechanical armies battle for the world's most vital resource . . . man.

Having become enslaved centuries before by losing control of their fabulous think-machines, man has become a hothouse hybrid with every thought and creative impulse monitored and channeled, by pre-suggestive electronic control, into the service of his mechanical masters.

Yet, despite the perfections of his Utopia—there is no want, no sickness, no fear, everything is pure pleasure, even the happy duty of serving his mechanical overlords—man is slowly becoming extinct.

In an effort to save their happy slaves the monoliths have taxed their greatest mechanical minds to the breaking points. The problem is to reduce "understanding"—the thing men need most for survival—to a pat synthetic formula. Then to produce it as a sort of balm that will save their servants and themselves from ultimate extinction.

Oge, the Mind of Minds, speaks with Homero Sapans, who has long held the position of True Thinker for the Mechmas.

"Tell me O True Thinker, what is this Understanding that men so need to survive?"

Then Niwre has his hero say, "Once when I was a young boy an old man, who had once been a very great True Thinker, told me that machines were only as good as the men who run them. That on any Tomorrow, men, not machines, would prove the impossible reducto facto. Because, only men could understand. . . ."

Niwre's satire may seem an oversimplification from a contemporary standpoint, but is it?

Has man's surge into the Atomic Age misled him once again, he was no less a push-button theorist during the high idealism of the Industrial Age, into believing that the machine is all? Let us hope not!

For the world's prime commodity is still men. And as the world's great moral question hinges on the good or the bad in men, so must the successful militarist ask: "Are they well trained? Are they sufficient for the tasks?"

Today on its 181st birthday the Army is more concerned than ever with the question of men. Well trained men. Men in sufficient numbers for the tasks imposed by a free people on its Senior Service.

And the Army, which learned its early lessons with the hardy band at Valley Forge, and has relearned them in the bitter struggles of every victorious battle since, will ever be concerned with men.

For the Army knows that machines "are only as good as the men who run them." And that men, like understanding, are not market place commodities that come equipped with built-in combat training and automatic technical knowhow.

Resolution of the Continental Congress

14 June 1775

RESOLVED, that six companies of expert riflemen be immediately raised in Pennsylvania, two in Maryland and two in Virginia; that each company consist of a captain, three lieutenants, four sergeants, four corporals, a drummer or trumpeter, and sixty-eight privates.

THAT each company, as soon as completed, shall march and join the Army near Boston, to be there employed as light infantry, under the command of the chief Officer in that Army.

THAT the pay of the officers and privates be as follows, viz.: a captain @ 20 dollars per month; a lieutenant @ 13⅓ dollars; a sergeant @ eight dollars; a corporal @ 7⅓ dollars; a drummer (or trumpeter) @ 7⅓ dollars; privates @ 6⅔ dollars; to find their own arms and cloaths.

THAT the form of the enlistment be in the following words:

I ..... have, this day, voluntarily enlisted myself, as a soldier, in the American continental Army, for one year, unless sooner discharged; and I do bind myself to conform in all instances to such rules and regulations as are or shall be established for the government of said Army.

UPON MOTION, RESOLVED, that Mr. (George) Washington, Mr. (Phillip) Schuyler, Mr. (Silas) Dean, Mr. (Thomas) Cushing, and Mr. (Joseph) Howes be a committee to bring in a draft of Rules and Regulations for the government of the Army.

The Army does not forget its old soldiers after they retire. It remains interested in their welfare, and wants them to serve in their civilian communities as loyal, informed, representatives of the Army.

Permanent exchange facilities in the United States are supplemented by 200 mobile exchanges that serve soldiers and airmen on flight lines, firing ranges, maneuver areas, and similar remote sites.

Newly adopted Army flag, first in the 181-year history of the service, is expected to be dedicated on the Army's 181st birthday, 14 June, which is also Flag Day. The new flag, decorated with 145 streamers representing the campaigns in which the Army has fought since 14 June, 1775, is of white silk. On this background, the seal of the old War Office is embroidered in blue. Below this the scroll of scarlet gives the date of the Army's founding.

Paymasters Also Have Anniversary

The U.S. Army Finance Corps celebrates its 181st anniversary on Saturday. A Pay Department for the American Army was created by the Continental Congress less than two months after the battle of Lexington, and it has been meeting pay days ever since.

The Pay Department disbursed the Army's money until 1912 when the function was turned over to the Quartermaster Corps. Eight years later the Finance Department was created by the passage of the National Defense Act. On July 1, 1920, Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Lord, first Chief of Finance, took command.

Sometimes called the "Pentagon of the Prairies," the huge Army Finance center with 5200 employees has been located at Fort Benjamin Harrison. Also located there is the Finance School, which, since being established in 1920 has trained more than 43,000 students in the techniques of financial management.

Here at Sixth Army headquarters, Colonel R. W. Nuss, Finance and Accounting Officer, pledges the efforts of all Finance officers in Sixth Army to "the best Finance service attainable in any continental Army command."

First Soldier's Message

Chief of Staff Sees Bright Future For Modern Army

Today the United States Army celebrates the completion of 181 years of service to the nation. In that time it has engaged in 12 wars and 144 campaigns with the victorious results recorded in history.

In the course of this period, the Army has ranged in size from about 500 officers and men in June, 1784, to over eight million in May, 1945. Its basic weapons have varied from the flintlock and smoothbore cannon to the present complicated weapons system built around missiles and atomic explosives.

Its supporting budgets have varied from $632,804 during the first fiscal period of 1789-1791 to $49,750,000,000 in FY 1945. Its foreign enemies have come from 14 nations found in three continents of the globe. It has fought abroad in 26 different lands.

In spite of fluctuations in size, organization and equipment, enemy and terrain, there is a common thread which runs through the history of the Army—devotion to duty and country. In every national emergency it has produced leaders capable of meeting the challenge to our national security regardless of the form in which presented.

The Army has played a decisive part not only in winning our wars but also in reestablishing the peace. Particularly after World Wars I and II, and the Korean conflict, the Army was called upon to administer vital programs of rehabilitation both in friendly and in formerly hostile lands. The same administrative and technical skills which had allowed the Army to develop our own West found ready application to the needs of war-devastated lands.

The Army justifies itself not by the record of the past, but by its performance in the present and its potentiality in the future. It is an indispensable member of the national defense team, contributing its visible, ready strength in being to the deterrence of war. Within the Army itself every component makes a vital contribution to the over-all defense mission.

The men and women at home and abroad, active and reserve, in combat units and technical units, in conventional forces and in atomic forces, all combine their respective skills and specialties to give the Army the indispensable flexibility and versatility required by its combat roles and missions.

It is an honor to belong to the Army and to partake of its heritage of service to country.

MAXWELL D. TAYLOR,
General, USA,
Chief of Staff.

What is a soldier?

A soldier is many things at many times and in many climes. . . . he is the stubborn-jawed young warrior who refuses to count the odds in the tide of battle . . . the carrier of the torch that melted the icy winter into the victory of Valley Forge . . . the hollow-eyed volunteer who fought and died for the issue of unity at Gettysburg . . . the thundering adventurer who charged Tomorrow at San Juan Hill . . . a cocky one-man gang who rattled and routed the invincible at Verdun . . . the brilliant strategist who turned from the attacked to the attacker and made unity and initiative twin swords of victory at Omaha Beach . . . the draftee whom training, the enemy and elements turned into the deadly defender of Heartbreak Ridge.

A soldier is many things at many times and in many climes. . . . he was the ragged rabble that lay in a heap of bones on the heights of Ticonderoga . . . the shattered hands that clasped the bloody cavalry hat in the shambles of Shiloh . . . the staked shadow that adorned the ant hills of the Philippines . . . the gray veteran whose last breath of blood spattered the leafy green of the Argonne . . . the burnt ashes that blew in the winds over Berlin . . . the outthrust limbs that protested from shallow trenches the ignominy of treacherous execution in the valleys of Korea.

A soldier is many things at many times and in many climes. . . . he is the calloused old warrior whose free time from the front is spent begging clothing and food for an adopted orphanage . . . the starry-eyed young occupation soldier who fights red tape and protocol for the lifetime right to love and protect the enemy's daughter . . . the staid reservist who makes room in an already large family for the enemy's orphans . . . the two-fisted general who teaches yesterday's foes that freedom is big enough to forgive, but too wise to forget.

A soldier is many things at many times and in many climes. . . . he is the lighthearted youngster down the street who left your town a boy and came back a man . . . the nice girl next door who suddenly showed up in the trim uniform of the WAC . . . the quiet professor at the university who proudly dons his uniform and spends spare time wrestling with the problems of future wars . . . the gray-haired, straight-backed old man who putters in the sun of his flowers and plants, but whose gnarled hands and misty eyes have held and seen the glory and the sadness of many wars.

Yes, a soldier is many things at many times and in many climes, but most of all he is yours . . . mine . . . ours. Thank God! (kse)

CG's Birthday Message

The United States Army, as an indispensable element of American strength since 1775, and the individuals thereof, proudly celebrate the Army's 181st anniversary in a spirit of dedication to its responsibilities for national security.

It is especially fitting on this occasion that we in the Army pause to consider that successful fulfillment of the Army's mission, in this uncertain era of fast and unpredictable change, requires an alert, forward-looking approach. To lag invites disaster; complacence is unforgivable.

Therefore, in our certain knowledge that the Army is and must continue to be one of the strongest bulwarks of our freedom, let us rededicate ourselves to the fresh outlook, the vigorous, farseeing approach, so that fulfillment of our mission will be a certainty—not a gamble.

181-Years Young Today; Army Looks To Future

Keeping abreast of technological advances without discarding historic traditions and principles, the United States Army—"America's Most Versatile Fighting Force"—celebrates its 181st Birthday today.

Pointing toward the future, yet looking proudly at the past, the Army today moved into an era of modern weapons and highly-trained soldiers.

The Nation's oldest fighting organization looks forward confidently to keeping pace with vast improvements in weapons and techniques of warfare and science.

And as it does, the Army looks back at its 180th year as the year blueprints of the Army of the future were first put into being.

Exercise Sagebrush, biggest maneuver since World War II employing more than 100,000 troops, tested new ideas in organization and tactics geared to atomic warfare.

Some of the concepts given a trial in the war games that were played over a 7,000 square miles in Louisiana late last year were adopted by the Army in plans for the reorganization of the famed 101st Airborne Division.

The 101st will use a set-up designed to permit small combat groups to operate successfully over a wide area.

The streamlined division will feature mobility and flexibility in place of massed formations, Army leaders say.

Other highlights of the Army's year include:

- Appointment of General Maxwel D. Taylor to succeed General Matthew B. Ridgway as chief of staff.
- A system to separate specialists from NCOs who have leadership responsibilities and new moves to increase NCO prestige.
- The beginning of unit-wide moves under the Gyroscope plan.
- Announcement of the Missile Master system to control Nike firing.
- Enlistment of almost 20,000 teen-agers for six months' training under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.
- Introduction of the new summer uniform made for uncluttered mobility—shorts.

Readjustment Pay

A DOD-backed bill to provide lump sum readjustment pay to reserve officers and enlisted men involuntarily released from active duty has cleared the rules committee and been placed on the House calendar.

A vote on the measure is expected shortly, according to House spokesmen.

General Peploe

New DCG Arrives Today; Official Honors Slated

Major General George B. Peploe, newly appointed deputy commanding general Sixth Army, will be officially welcomed to the Presidio today.

The General, accompanied by Mrs. Peploe, arrived in San Francisco yesterday from Japan aboard the USNS General Hugh J. Gaffey at the Fort Mason piers.

Until recently assistant chief of staff for personnel (G-1), Headquarters U.S. Army Forces Far East—8th Army in Japan, General Peploe will be officially welcomed at 0830 hours today with an Honor Guard ceremony.

Following a brief leave, General Peploe is scheduled to report to Camp Roberts where he will supervise the summer training of Army Reserve and National Guard units during July and August.

His appointment as DCG was announced by Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

Sec. Higgins Due Here For Conference

Frank H. Higgins, assistant secretary of the Army for logistics, will visit the Presidio and San Francisco Monday for an afternoon-evening conference with businessmen at the Fairmont Hotel.

Higgins will direct the conference and discuss the Army's buying program during the talks.

The assistant secretary will also talk on logistics problems and Stanley Hiller, Jr., president of Hiller Helicopters, will make industry's response.

On arrival here, Higgins will be tendered a Class A Honor Guard Ceremony at 1000 hours Monday.

The ceremony will consist of a motor escort from Lombard Gate, a 17-gun salute and an Honor Guard ceremony in front of Building No. 50.

DPC's Birthday Message

Today, as it has for 181 years past, the Army stands as a bulwark against those who would change our way of life.

No less in the Atomic Age than in the age of Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, the United States Army continues to reflect the pure image of America's great fighting heart in the accomplishments of her undefeated foot soldier.

New concepts of battle, new instruments of war and defense will doubtlessly come and go in the surging flow of our great technocracy, but the indomitable spirit of our individual fighting man will in the end always be our greatest tangible asset.

We should be remiss on this our 181st anniversary if we failed to rededicate ourselves to holding high those ideals for which so many gallant soldiers have died.

Let us salute, then, our past, but with the sure knowledge that our future will be equally bright. For every American heart knows that —United States Army Power is Peace!

Colonel, Infantry
Deputy Post Commander

Augmentation Bill

A House armed services subcommittee has favorably reported to the full committee the Reserve Officer Augmentation Bill sponsored by the Defense Department.

Under the plan, both the Army and Air Force would be permitted to have a regular officer strength of 50 per cent, a factor that would enable many reservists on active duty to obtain permanent commissions.

Colorful Events Will Highlight Local Celebration Of Army's Anniversary

With ceremonies appropriate and traditional of its long history, the United States Army celebrates its 181st Birthday here today.

On a worldwide front, the Army puts its best foot forward to demonstrate its role as "America's Most Versatile Fighting Force," the official theme for the 1956 commemoration.

A full schedule of events has been arranged for the Presidio's celebration, according to Major Walter L. Carppi, project officer, who submitted them to Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist for approval.

Highlight of the day, of course, will be the four-battalion Review and Decoration Ceremony at 1100 hours.

Troops participating in the parade will be excused from regular duties at 1000 hours to prepare uniforms and equipment for the review. Once they've swung past the reviewing stand, troops will be given the remainder of the day off as a half holiday.

Civilian personnel are encouraged to take the afternoon off as leaves and are further encouraged to visit the exhibits mounted on the parade ground, said Major Carppi.

A number of other exhibits and tours have also been arranged for the public and civilian personnel.

Tops among these is a 60 cents lunch with Detachment 2, 6000 SU troops in their mess hall in Building 101. Price of the meal will be 60 cents for persons over 12 years of age and 30 cents for persons under 12. The mess hall will be open for visitors from 1130 hours to 1300 hours.

Guided tours of the Nike site at Fort Scott—a big hit during the AFD celebration a month ago—have also been arranged from 1300 to 1630 hours. Shuttle buses will transport interested persons from the main parade ground to the site.

One baseball and two softball games have also been scheduled by Post Special Services. See sports page for details.

Competitions in field stripping of the .45 automatic pistol, the .30 cal carbine and the .30 M1 rifle have been organized. The competitions will be held on the main parade ground at 1400 hours. Winners of the events will be given a three-day pass.

Two men from each unit on post —down to company and separate detachments—map participate in the competitions.

The Post Theatre will give continuous shows of Army movies from 1300 to 1630 hours. Admission is free to military and civilian persons.

Among the weapons to be displayed are: prime mover and tank retriever; AAA 75mm Skysweeper director; rifle; BAR; LMG; HMG; .50 cal MG; 60mm mortar; 81mm mortar; 4.2 mortar; 3.5 bazooka; recoilless rifle; helicopter; and one light aircraft.

CG CONARC's Message

The 181st anniversary of the United States Army, in June, 1956, is a time to recall with pride our long history and to dedicate ourselves with renewed vigor to our mission of National Defense.

Since 1775 the Army has served the American people with courage, dexterity, and unwavering devotion. It has distinguished itself, in war and in peace, and displayed integrity in the trust placed upon it.

Today our country faces a threat of incomparable magnitude, brought on by vast technological developments of recent years and open aggressiveness of the Communist world. Such a massive peril to our freedom places a major responsibility on the Army as a vital part of America's strength.

As the struggle for freedom's survival becomes more and more acute, the Army must stand as an invulnerable, mobile force. We must be fully capable of either preventing war or defeating our enemies in land combat in any type conflict using all the facilities available to us. How well we perform this arduous mission is a challenge to every individual in the United States Army.

We who face this important challenge have a sacred honor and proud tradition to uphold and preserve. The faith entrusted to us is our National security and we must be unfailing in discharging this high duty.

On this anniversary occasion, I extend my heartiest congratulations to all who serve the Army and the Nation.

Nine Win High School Diplomas On Army Birthday

Today, on the Army's birthday, seven soldiers and two WACs will receive birthday presents in the form of high school diplomas.

Their achievement supplies a graphic illustration of the Army's continued emphasis on adult education. Presently the Presidio Army Education Center, run by the post troop education and information section, provides education at all levels both on and off post. Many courses are tuition free.

The nine persons receiving high school diplomas today have been going to school four nights a week for one semester. Their courses included American history and government, review English, review arithmatic and general science.

The diplomas will be presented at a graduation luncheon, 1300 hours today, at the San Francisco United Schools building, 135 Van Ness Ave. The graduates are: M/Sgt. Eugene R. Moyer, Headquarters Sixth Army, det. 1 (6000); M/Sgt. James W. King, company C, det. 1 (6002); Pvt. Bettie L. Moore, company D, WAC (6002); Pvt. Jack P. Signal Corps Has Birthday This Month

Like its parent, the United States Army, the Signal Corps, too, celebrates its anniversary during the month of June.

This vast organization, as complex as the largest electronic brain and as simple as one individual hand carrying a message, has selected the theme "Serving the Army and the Nation" to commemorate its 96th year of service on 21 June.

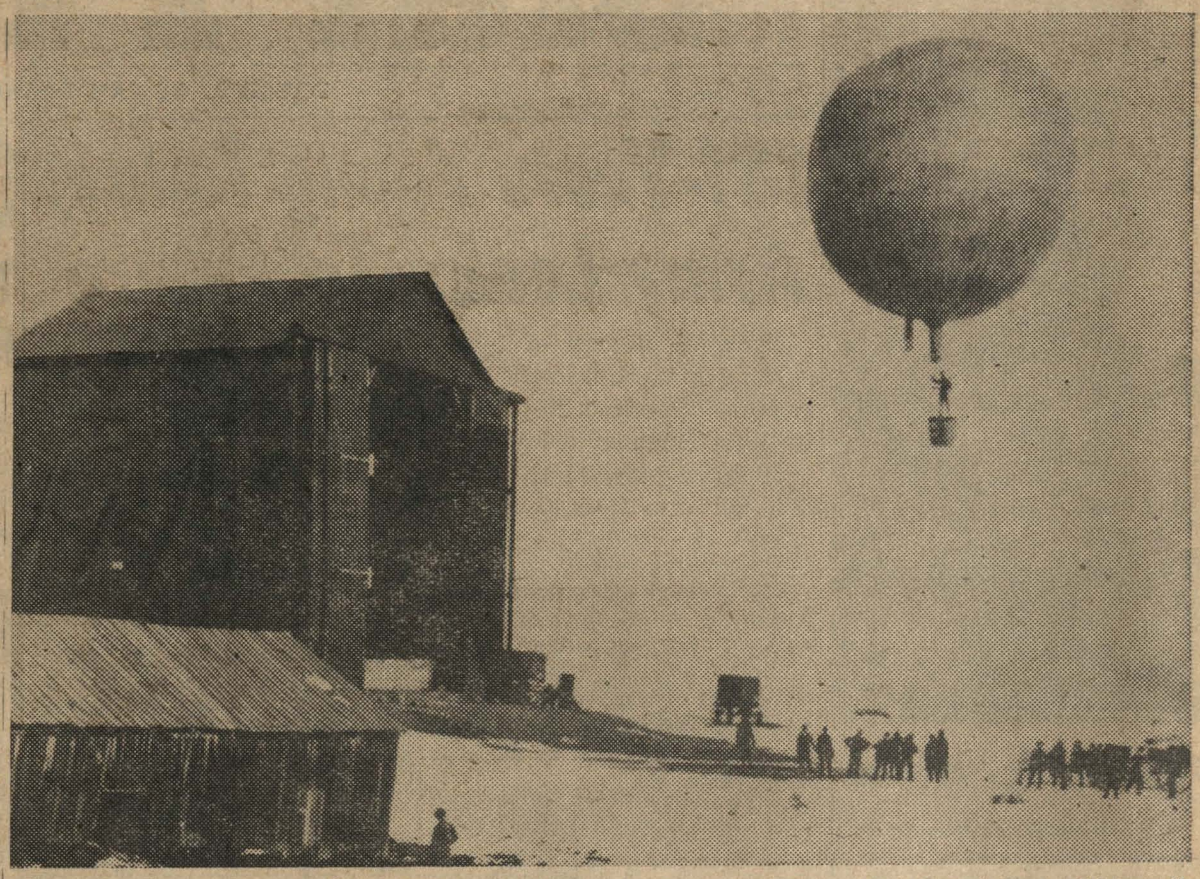
"The Army Signal Corps is in the business of military communications," states Major General J. D. O'Connell, Chief Signal Officer. "Its primary objective," he explains, "is to provide communication and electronic means which all commanders — from the Chief of Staff of the Army down to the squad leader—must have to control their forces."

The Signal Corps has been serving the nation by providing meteorology and weather information since 1870 when it first established the weather reporting system that has since grown into the present Weather Bureau. An aeronautical division with one balloon was established in 1907. Two years later it added the first military aircraft, forerunner of today's Air Force.

Special Signal Corps activities at the Presidio on 21 June will highlight the anniversary in this area. At Sixth Army headquarters the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS) will be open for inspection. At post level there will be open house at the photo laboratory, the telephone exchange and the signal maintenance shop. The event will be officially recognized at a cake cutting ceremony in Building 220. Films will later be shown.

Those attending the MARS open house will see an example of combined Signal Corps service to the Army and the nation.

Here at Sixth Army headquarters Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS) has some 1,052 volunteer civilian and military members in the Sixth Army area. The civilian "ham" operators are furnished obsolete communication equipment. In return they provide an extensive radio network which the Army can draw upon both in time of peace and emergency.



During the California floods of last winter MARS transmitted and received more than 300 vital messages. In peace time this service means free, speedy communications for servicemen and their dependents all over the world. MARS headquarters at Sixth Army handles about 3,500 messages each month. "Many of the messages from Korea come from soldiers sending home for money," reports Major Francis D. Ivey, Sixth Army Signal.

Major General W. Preston Corderman, deputy chief signal officer, sees the world today "entering upon a new age—the age of electronics." This point of view is brought strikingly close to home by the new fully automatic communications center opened last month at Davis, California. The first full scale installation of its kind in the world, this new station makes direct contact with the entire Pacific area as well as Alaska and key points in the United States. Messages are transmitted and received both by radio and teletype.

Most Presidio personnel are familiar with the "twix," or telegraph communications, which go in and out of the Sixth Army communications center at the rate of 1600 per day. Messages to be transmitted are cleared through the Adjutant General section and then sent by pneumatic tube to the communications center.

At the center the message is poked into tape and fed into a teletype sending machine, where it is electrically pulsed to the new station at Davis and thence to any spot in the world.

Looking to the future, General O'Connell leaves little doubt that the Signal Corps will play an increasingly important role in the modern Army. "Our all-out effort," he reports, "is concentrated on developing four major new systems — Grid Communications; Battle Area Surveillance; Air Navigation and Traffic Control, and Electronic Warfare."

Trial Balloon sent aloft in 1907 by the Army Signal Corps, marks the beginning of today's air force. Two years later the corps put the first military aircraft into service. This month the Signal Corps, now entering "the age of electronics" celebrates its 96th anniversary.

Provost Marshal Conference Draws Area's Top Experts

More than 40 Sixth Army area provost marshals and military police officers are back on regular duty today, following last week's third annual Provost Marshal's Conference at Fort Scott.

Colonel Shaffer F. Jarrell, Sixth Army PM, who organized the conference, termed it a success in point of "value of ideas and comments injected and exchanged by conferees," in his summation.

The conferees—provost marshals from Sixth Army Class I installations—and guest PMs from Class II and III installations, heard Austin H. MacCormick, University of California criminologist and consultant to the Secretary of the Army on correction and confinement, and San Francisco's District Attorney Thomas C. Lynch make featured speeches.

MacCormick discussed crime and delinquency and the rehabilitation of federal and state prisoners. Lynch talked on how the San Francisco DA's office functioned and how it could assist provost marshals in their duties.

The three-day conference was opened with a welcoming address by Colonel John G. Ondrick, deputy chief of staff for administration and management, representing Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

The conferees discussed a host of subjects cogent to military police matters during the meetings. These included: military police personnel, custody and processing officer prisoners, protective custody, public relations, crime prevention surveys, traffic regulations, lost, stolen and recovered Government property, domestic disturbances, confinement, utilization of MPs, photographing of AWOL, rear area damage control, reports of investigations, records and forms, investigative jurisdiction, ASPD operations, MP town patrols and foot patrols, unsentenced and sentenced prisoners, youth program, Armed Forces Disciplinary Control boards, and vehicle registration.

Woman's Club Will Sponsor Fabulous Danny Kay Film

"Hey, Kids, come to the post theater next Friday, 22 June, 1430 hours, for the free showing of Danny Kaye's exciting technicolor film, 'Assignment Children.' You'll see what Danny saw and meet the children he met on his 40,000-mile trip around the world."

This invitation is extended to all Presidio young people (and their parents) from the Presidio Woman's club which is sponsoring the film in behalf of UNICEF—United Nations Children's Fund.

While the film is free, the children are encouraged to bring their pennies, nickels and dimes and to contribute to the Children's Fund. UNICEF is an organization dedicated to improve the health and welfare of the world's underprivileged youngsters.

In fulfilling his assignment, to make a motion picture record of the various UNICEF activities, Danny Kaye traveled to India, Burma, Siam, Hong Kong, Korea and Japan. He waded through rice paddies and helped push UNICEF jeeps out of rice paddies. He brought smiles to children who had forgotten how to laugh.

Wherever Danny went, the local children gathered to see the Hollywood funny man make faces and they stayed to hear UNICEF lecturers tell them how to avoid the deadly plagues of their underdeveloped lands.

Often the children would receive inoculations to protect their bodies against tuberculosis, malaria or the dreaded crippler, yaws.

This film, which has never been shown at the Presidio, provides both high entertainment and graphic proof of UNICEF results.

Three Sixth Army Units Slated to Gyroscope To Europe Next Year

Three Sixth Army non-divisional units will move to Europe early next year to replace three like units under Operation Gyroscope, Department of the Army announced yesterday.

The 9th Engineer Battalion and the 720th Field Artillery Battalion, both presently stationed at Fort Lewis, have also been tabbed for European duty, DA said.

Engineers Plan Birthday Party At NCO Club

The Sixth Army Engineer Sections will commemorate the 181st anniversary of the Corps of Engineers Saturday by holding a party in the NCO Club at 1600 hours tomorrow.

All Army Engineer organizations—Sixth Army, South Pacific Engineer Division, San Francisco District, 30th Engineer Group—military and civilian personnel have been invited.

The Corps of Engineers came into being just two days after the establishment of the Army itself in 1775. It has compiled a long list of achievements and taken part in every war in which the United States has taken part in. The C of E's roster is studded with the names of individual members who have added luster and brilliance to the history of the Nation.

The Engineers' proudest boast is that they are a fighting unit in wartime and a bulwark during peace. Rivers and harbor work, flood control, studies on silting of the Nation's great rivers, disaster relief, mapping and surveying and military construction are but a few of the Corps' activities.

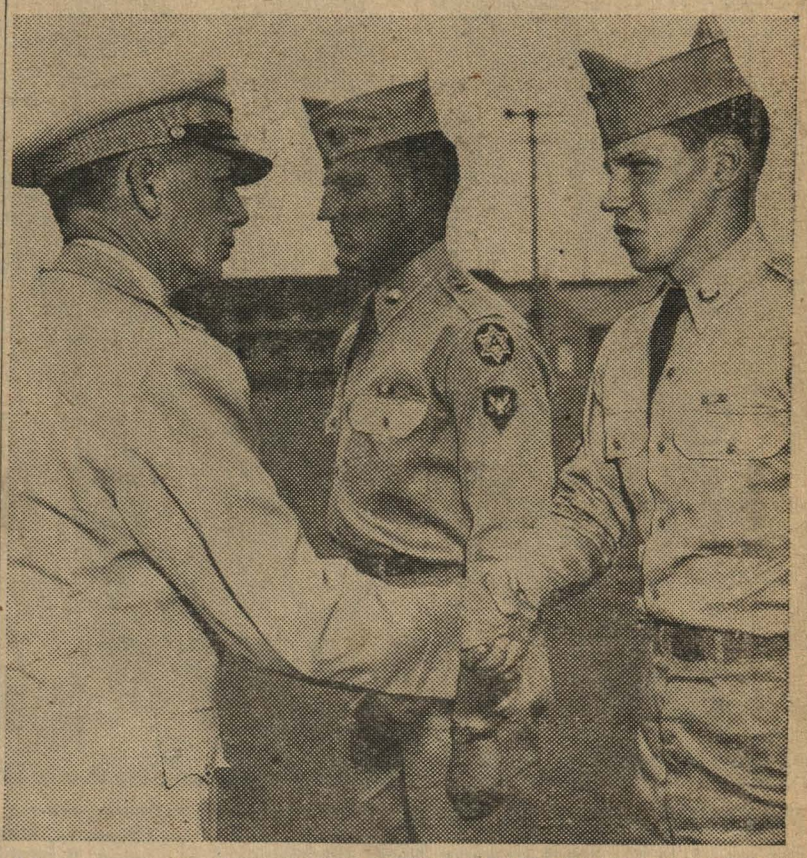
The helicopter fluttered patiently over the scene, its rotors stirring the angry waters as Specialist Third Class Howard Kuni plunged into the flood tide on an errand of mercy one murky day late last year.

In the midst of California's terrible winter flood, the heavy-muscled Kuni, a member of the 521st Engineer Company (Aviation), churned steadily toward a tiny patch of land surrounded entirely by raging flood waters near Manteca.

An elderly man, trapped for three days and in a state of shock and exhaustion, waved feebly as Kuni approached the island, fighting the rapid current. He paused momentarily to catch his breath and then, supporting the man, swam back to the hovering helicopter and helped lift him safely aboard.



That night, as rain continued to saturate the entire northern California area, the flood waters rose even higher and washed away the old man's patch of dry land.

During the same flood period, Specialist Third Class James Hatcher and Lieutenants Donald Coggins and James Allen combed the Geyserville area in nearby Sonoma County, searching for persons trapped or in need of help.

The three men spotted two small boys in a stranded building, and Pilot Coggins immediately maneuvered his craft to a small clearing 150 feet distant from the house.

Dropping into the waist-high water, Hatcher made his way—swimming and wading—to the children. He carried them back, whimpering and panicky, to the waiting helicopter, which rose and took them to a nearby schoolyard where townspeople gathered them up, fed and soothed them.

On a bright sunny day in Stockton recently, Specialists Kuni and Hatcher stood at attention before the massed formations of their 521st Engineers and Sharpe General Depot troops as Colonel Wayne E. Downing, commanding officer of the 30th Engineer Group, pinned the Soldier's Medal to their chests for heroism.

Congratulations were offered by Colonel Wayne E. Downing, commanding officer of the 30th Engineer Group to Specialists Howard Kuni and James Hatcher after he pinned the Soldier's Medal on their chests at a recent decoration ceremony in Stockton. The men were awarded the medal for heroism during the California winter floods rescue operations.

Then, as relatives and friends looked on happily, Kuni and Hatcher took the salute of the troops as they wheeled past the reviewing stand.

Earlier in the day, a grateful Stockton Chamber of Commerce and city service groups and clubs toasted the two enlisted men and Pilots Coggins and Allen and Major Phillip Melzer and Captain Story Stevens at a civic luncheon.

All six were awarded the Sikorsky "Winged S" emblem by the C. of C.'s president because the rescue operations were performed in Sikorsky-built helicopters.

QM Corps Only Two Days Younger Than Army

The Army's Quartermaster Corps—two days younger than the Army and a year older than the Nation—celebrates its 181st Birthday Saturday, proud of past services and determined to provide greater devotion to duty in the future.

The QM Corps, founded just two days after a resolution of the Continental Congress drew up plans for the Army, was established at the request of George Washington, who considered "such an office indispensably necessary for the good government of the Army."

Principal duties for the Quartermaster Corps in its early history was procurement, storage and issue of food and clothing. And from these small beginnings the QM Corps grew into one of the Army's mightiest organizations.

Seemingly with each war the United States participated in, the responsibilities of the Quartermaster grew. By the War of 1812, the QMC was given responsibility for clothing, subsistence, transportation and munitions.

During the Civil War, the Quartermaster Department was put to a real test, but came out in triumph and earned Secretary of War Stanton's highest praise: "During the war this branch of the service never failed. It answers to the demand and is ready to meet the national call."

Cut down at the end of the Civil War, the QM Corps rose to the heights once again in the Spanish-American War and continued to wax prosperous during World War I when the demands for supplies were staggering.

In World War II the QMC took on new responsibilities, providing food, clothing and personal equipment for eight million men and women. In addition, auxiliary duties such as salvage, repair, laundry and bath service, care of the dead and others were given to the Quartermasters.

More than 75,000 rations per month—enough to feed each soldier three meals a day—are issued by the Ration Breakdown section.

Post Quartermaster also runs the Commissary Sales Store, two gasoline stations, the Clothing Sales Store, 17 warehouses to receive, store and issue supplies, Field Maintenance Shops, Clothing and Equipment Shop, Furniture and Office Appliance Repair Shops, and Parachute Maintenance Shop.

Colonel Arthur L. Bivens, Sixth Army Quartermaster, disclosed this week that during the first three-quarters of the 1956 fiscal year, an accelerated program of reclamation, repair and alteration of property in the Sixth Army area is continuing at top pace.

A total of 603,580 major pieces of government property were restored to usefulness and service during the last nine months. Of these items, alteration and repair of clothing and textiles constituted the majority items.

Eleven posts, camps and stations presently operate 62 QM maintenance facilities in the Sixth Army area.

Matzen And Walker Star Against Local Semi-Pros

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Crafty Chuck Matzen of the Presidio Honor Guard scattered seven hits over the nine inning contest Sunday afternoon and the Presidio Toreros rolled to a 10 to 4 victory over the Stockton Braves. The clash with the classy semi-pro outfit was played on the Fort Scott diamond.

Besides hurling the win, Matzen had a home run and single in four official trips to the plate to share hitting honors with outfielder Harry Williams who had a round tripper and a single.

The Presidio ball club scored single runs in the first three frames, followed by two tallies in the fifth. Four more runs came in during a big seventh-inning rally, followed by one in the eighth that wound up the scoring for the afternoon.

Last Saturday the local Army stars journeyed to Napa to crush the Napa All-Stars, 9 to 1.

Lee Walker went the distance on the mound for the Toreros, scattering five hits and striking out nine men for the victory.

The locals opened the first inning with three tallies started by John Blackwell's single, followed by Dick Shannon with a one-baser. Stocky Norm Ellenberger then laced a triple to left center to score the first two runs. Harry Williams followed with a single to score Ellenberger, and the Presidio was off to the races.

The Toreros added one more in the second and two runs in the seventh to take a 6 to 1 lead into the ninth.

Shannon led off the ninth with a double and scored on Al Casino's booming triple to center. Williams' single and Bill Selsor's one-bagger rounded out the day's activities.

Two Army Stars Place On Wrestling Squad

Washington (ANS)—Two Army athletes have cinched berths on the Greco-Roman wrestling squad which will represent the U. S. in the Olympic Games next November at Melbourne, Australia.

During the recent U. S. Olympic wrestling trials in Hollywood Coliseum, Los Angeles, PFC John R. Wilson, 6th Armored Cavalry Regiment, Germany, took first alternate honors in the free-style event and then went on to win the 114 pound Greco-Roman championship. Private Ralph Bartleman, Fort Carson, Colo., captured second alternate honors in the free-style and won the Greco-Roman heavyweight championship.

Six other Army wrestlers were picked as first or second alternates in Greco-Roman and free-style events on the U. S. Olympic Team. They will make the trip only if the champion or first alternate are unable to wrestle in the Olympic Games.

Competing with other services, colleges and athletic clubs throughout the U. S., PFC Filip Jurewicz, 11th Airborne Division, Germany, and PFC Wenzel Hubel, 94th Engineer Battalion, Germany, both grabbed second alternate slots in the 114 and 174 pound free-style events, respectively.

The All-Army Wrestling Team, composed of 16 soldiers from various installations throughout the world, was coached by 1st Lt. Alfred Paulekas, Fort Campbell, Ky. Bartleman, who entered the competition unattached, was the only winner not representing the All-Army team.

AF Lt. Gene Eyler, who is stationed in England, advanced to the fifth round of the British Amateur golf championship before being eliminated.

Fort McPherson's Frank Bolling is playing with the Tigers while on leave and expects to rejoin the club permanently after his discharge later this month.

Eleven Records Broken In Army Track Championships

The 1956 All-Army Track and Field championships wound up action late last week at Los Angeles' Compton Stadium with no less than eleven Army records broken during the two-day meet.

Although no points were given in the meet, Sixth Army won four first places, four second places and three fourths, which would have topped Second Army and First Army scores by one and two points, respectively.

The first three finishers in each event qualified for the Inter-Service Meet which will be held in the huge Los Angeles Coliseum tonight and tomorrow afternoon. The same number of qualifiers there compete in the Olympic Games tryouts later this month.

The Pirates emerged as the early leaders in the Presidio Youth Baseball League this week with a two and zero mark in official league play. The Braves are currently holding down the second spot with a two and one mark, followed by the Dodgers, one and two, and the Tigers, zero and two.

In games played last week the Pirates behind the hurling of Wayne Groth defeated the Dodgers 21-10. Peter Salgado went the distance for the losing Dodgers.

The second tilt went to the Braves over the Tigers by the score of 10 to 1. Art Roth and Doug Campbell shared pitching honors for the winners, and Bob Hall and Pat O'Connor hurled for the Tigers.

In the first half of Sunday's doubleheader the Dodgers downed the Tigers 21 to 6 with a 15-hit attack. Bart Salgado pitched the win and added a home run in the second inning when the Dodgers scored 11 runs. Dennis Youngdahl's triple with the bases loaded was the big blow of the inning. Sunny Summerville pitched for the losers.

The second half of the twin bill saw the Pirates score four runs in the top of the last inning to win the game, 6 to 5. Tom Stewart started on the mound for the winners but was replaced in the third by Tom Coddington who gained credit for the win.

The first three place winners are qualified for the interservice track competition next Friday and Saturday at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

There were fourteen meet records.

Lon Spurrier, world record holder, won his favorite event, the 880, in 1:50.1.

Three enlisted members of local antiaircraft units were decorated by Major General Hobart Hewett, Commanding General, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, who also officially presented Colors to Fort Cronkhite's 441st Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion, in parade ground ceremonies at Fort Baker, recently.

The men decorated were: M/Sgt. Harold R. Myers of Marianna, Pa.; Sfc. Eugene Neblett, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Specialist Second Class Arthur L. Long of Sacramento, California. All three men received the Army Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant.

As General Hewett presented the Colors to Lt. Col. Oliver E. Griest, Commanding Officer of the 441st Antiaircraft Missile Battalion, the history of the battalion was related, starting with its activation in June 1942 at Camp Stewart, Georgia, and leading up to its redesignation as the 441st Antiaircraft Artillery Missile Battalion, at Fort Cronkhite in August 1955.

The Battalion has received Battle Streamers during World War II for service in Sicily, the Naples-Foggia Campaign, the Rome-Arno Campaign, Anzio, Southern France, Rhineland, The Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe Campaigns.

M/Sgt. Myers of the 740th Antiaircraft Missile Battalion at Fort Winfield Scott, "displayed extraordinary ability and initiative in the supervision of the installation, testing, adjustment, and organizational maintenance of the complex Surface-to-Air Guided Missile fire control and associated equipment.

"On his own initiative, M/Sgt. Myers directed the maintenance of his equipment and the training of the maintenance men and operators in his platoon to the end that his equipment was among the best maintained and his crews able to perform their assgined duties with a high degree of efficiency."

Sfc. Neblett, who is with the 441st Antiaircraft Missile Battalion, Fort Cronkhite, received the Army Commendation Ribbon for his "meritorious service as Chief Draftsman in Camp Stoneman, California, during the period of March 1950 to January 1952, where he designed the initial post-war plan for Camp Stoneman.

"Sfc. Neblett worked many hours overtime without regard to personal inconvenience and performed his work with cheerfulness and enthusiasm."

Sp-2 Arthur L. Long, of Battery A, 9th Antiaircraft Missile Battalion at Fort Cronkhite, was cited for "meritorious service during the period of October 1954 to May 1956. As assembly sergeant he was responsible for all technical activities in the missile and assembly areas of his battery.

"His willingness to assume additional responsibilities and his diligent application to every phase of his assignment were definite contributions to the ability of his battery to accomplish its mission."

Slate June Hearing For Finance Group On Survivor Plan

Washington — The Senate Finance Committee has announced hearings began the first week in June on the military survivor benefits plan, one of the six career incentive bills President Eisenhower urged Congress to enact before it adjourns.

Passed by the House during the previous session, the measure would do away with the present $10,000 free government life insurance now given military personnel. Instead, servicemen would be brought into the social security program on a pay basis, a move that is ultimately expected to be many more times advantageous to career personnel.

The Defense Department is expected to send an array of top officials before the Senate group to testify in support of the bill. (AFPS)

Top Driver Sergeant Howard A. Wheatley, 537th Engineer Company, Fort Scott, is seen reflected in the rear view mirror of his "bobtail" class truck as he competes in the Truck Roadeo sponsored by the California Truck Association at the Presidio drill field Saturday. Sergeant Wheatley, who placed third in his event against the best civilian drivers in the San Francisco area, was winner of the first place overall award at the Presidio's all-Army truck roadeo in 1954, and placed second in 1955. Sergeant first class Nolan L. Morgan, 99th Engineer Company, Fort Scott, who also competed in Saturday's roadeo, won a fourth place in the "bobtail" competition.

Local Teams Have Chance To Score High

Special to The Star Presidian

Fort Benning, Ga. — The cream of the Army's shooting talent from all over the world has arrived at The Infantry Center for the 1956 All-Army Rifle and Pistol championships.

Actual shooting in the matches began Tuesday and will continue through 19 June when General Willard G. Wyman, CONARC commander, presents awards to top firers.

CONARC is sponsoring the annual event which is termed the "biggest and best of all time" by Lieutenant Colonel H. Smoot, match executive officer.

Many of the top shooters will be retained by CONARC's Army advanced marksmanship unit at Fort Benning to undergo a series of eliminations for berths on the All-Army Rifle and Pistol team.

The All-Army squad fires in the National matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, 14 August to 8 September. Teams competing in this year's All-Army championships are from the six Army areas in the United States: Eighth Army, AFFE; US Army, Pacific; US Army Caribbean; US Army, Europe; US Army, Alaska; military district of Washington, D.C., and squads A and B from antiaircraft Army Command from the continental United States.

Approximately 400 riflemen and 200 pistoleers, shooting in 21 rifle and pistol events, will be competing for 692 medals and 17 trophies. This year a special award is being given the top new firer in each match, as part of the trend designed to increase interest in competitive marksmanship.

A host of the Army's top shots are present here, including Master Sergeant Joe Benner, ace marksman who has won enough titles to be called the world's champion pistol shot.

Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge, Headquarters Sixth Army, is also participating. The colonel recently set a new National record with a .45 pistol when he fired a sensational 293 out of a possible 300. The old mark was 290.

Also present is First Lieutenant David C. Miller, a newcomer tabbed to replace Benner as top shot in the future.

Team captains and coaches all feel they have enough good marksmen to take All-Army honors.

Gold Medal Winner

Fort Benning, Ga. — Master Sergeant Eugene A. Booth, first soldier of Headquarters Detachment, Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command, became the first local military person to win shooting honors in Georgia this year.

At Fort Benning for the All-Army tournament, the sergeant won first place gold medal for 100 yards and two second place medals in the expert class in the Georgia State championship matches.

Army Secretary's Message

To Members of the United States Army:

As the United States Army celebrates its 181st Birthday we look back with justifiable pride upon its magnificent record of accomplishment. Its indomitable spirit, high courage and steadfast devotion are woven into American tradition. Its history begins with momentous struggle for liberty from which the United States emerged free and independent. It antedates by more than a year the actual establishment of this Nation.

Since 14 June, 1775, when the Continental Congress authorized ten companies of riflemen, our reliable and resolute Army has played a dramatic role in the growth of the United States from a wilderness into one of the world's greatest powers. In more than 100 campaigns, expeditions, occupations and wars it has successfully championed our country's cause throughout the world.

Today as from the beginning, our Army is an indispensable element of our National Strength—one of the strongest bulwarks of our freedom. While it is old in achievement, it is young in its vigorous approach to its responsibility for the security of the Nation. It is altogether fitting that we celebrate the Army's glorious past by dedicating ourselves with renewed vigor and enthusiasm to the challenging tasks of the future.

Local Junior Marksmen Win 36 NRA Awards

Twelve Junior Division members of the Presidio Gun Club were presented with 36 awards by National Rifle Association Director Russell I. Wisler at the club's annual award presentation Tuesday night.

The boys and girls, ages 11 through 16, have been working on their marksmanship each Tuesday night since last fall. They meet at the Fort Scott .22 caliber indoor range and fire military type .22 rifles.

Credit for the efficient operation of the club this past year goes to Master Sergeant John D. Vekich, Headquarters Company, 505th Military Police Battalion. As class leader, Sergeant Vekich is responsible for all phases of the club's activities. Sergeant Vekich is also a member of the Presidio Cub Scouts committee and the Post Character Guidance council.

"One of the best qualified Junior NRA Instructors I have ever known," is the way Sergeant Vekich describes his chief helper, William Petersen. This 17-year-old, who is also ROTC captain at his high school, is the son of Sergeant First Class Eldon T. Petersen of the 548th Ordnance detachment here.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower's words encouraging youth to learn about the rifle, point out the value of the club's service: "Any young man that has ahead of him prospective service in the armed forces will do well to learn all he can about the American military rifle. . . . Expertness in its use cannot be overemphasized."

Benner Again!

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—M/Sgt. Huelet (Joe) Benner, West Point pistol coach, won the New York State outdoor pistol championship with a grand aggregate of 2,340 points of a possible 2,400.

The 1952 Olympic champ, and three-time winner of the world title, shattered his own pistol shooting record by scoring 299 of a possible 300 in the .22-cal. event. (AFPS)

Area I&E Confab

The Presidio will play host to more than 40 troop information and education officers and enlisted men from the Sixth Army area Monday for a three day conference.

The conference will officially open with a ceremony at the post theater at 0915 hours. The group will then adjourn to building 563 for business meetings.

Topics to be discussed include field problems and their solutions, funds, and the Army newspaper.

Driver Shortage!

Shortage in qualified drivers at the Post motor pool has resulted in a directive calling for names of enlisted men who are qualified drivers. Presidio units have been instructed to submit rosters of their driver qualified men. This roster will be maintained on a current basis with reports of additions and deletions submitted monthly.

Sixth Army Champions Win Top Rifle Honors

Vol. 5, No. 4 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 22 June, 1956

Assistant Army Secretary Frank H. Higgins reviewed the Sixth Army Honor Guard during a visit to the Presidio Monday. He was accompanied by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commanding general, and Captain Eugene Gasior of the Honor Guard. Secretary Higgins told the San Francisco press he disagreed with current proposals to fuse completely the Armed Forces into a single service. In his own department, logistics, he said a necessary partial unification was already in effect, however.

Higgins Against Full Unification

Frank H. Higgins, assistant Army secretary in charge of logistics, who visited the Army Monday, expressed blunt disapproval of a recently publicized suggestion that the Armed Forces be completely merged.

"We in the whole Defense Department do not believe in a single service. We do not believe it will function in wartime," he stated at his Presidio press conference. The secretary went on to explain that some partial military unification is in effect or planned for the purchasing of non-military supplies enabling one service to buy for all.

While at the Presidio the secretary attended an honor guard ceremony in his honor and a luncheon hosted by Major General Robert M. Young, commanding general, Sixth Army.

Secretary Higgins, who is in charge of all Army purchasing, attended a procurement panel Monday afternoon for the purpose of explaining Army buying policies to several hundred San Francisco businessmen.

The current stress has been on standardization, Secretary Higgins explained. The fact that in 1952 the Army used 229 different types of auto batteries, and today uses only 14 was offered as an example of this emphasis. The Army inventory on stockpiled items came to $35,000,000,000 in 1952; today this figure has been reduced to $20,000,000,000, the secretary added.

During 1954 the Army was responsible for 60 per cent of the cost for shipment of defense freight within the continental United States.

On Eve Of Illness

President Signs Into Law Dependent Medicare Bill

Washington—On the eve of his recent illness, President Eisenhower signed into law the $70 million dependent medical care bill, which will permit thousands of wives and children of servicemen to be treated in civilian hospitals when no military service is available.

Following the signing, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson issued a statement in which he said his aides have been asked "to do all that is possible to insure that the individual serviceman and his dependents will realize the benefits of the new law without delay."

Mr. Wilson termed the bill one of the Defense Department's major career incentive measures designed to serve as an inducement for servicemen to continue their military careers.

He said it would provide hospitalization for an estimated 40 per cent of all dependents "to whom circumstances have denied the medical benefits traditionally available."

"I believe that the enactment of this new law constitutes a new milestone in our efforts to assure the individual serviceman the peace of mind and adequacy of opportunity that is essential if we are to attract and retain in the military services the caliber of personnel that the maintenance of national defense in this modern era requires," Mr. Wilson said.

Defense officials are confident medical care in civilian hospitals will become a reality in the next six months. However, an insurance plan must first be worked out, and several possibilities are under consideration.

The law states that servicemen whose dependents are treated in civilian hospitals would pay only the first $25 of the fee or the daily subsistence rate in military hospitals, whichever is greater.

The remaining cost would be covered by the government under an insurance plan still to be determined. (AFPS)

Promotions!

June Quota Allows Blanket Grade Hike For 12-Month E-2's

Slick sleeve privates E-2 with 12 months of service are now eligible for automatic promotion to private first class, according to TAG Message 30056, dated 11 June, 1956. This directive authorizes promotions for the month of June only.

While the promotions are to be made without regard to command vacancies or allocation, the enlisted man must have the recommendation of his commanding officer.

The directive will concern approximately 575 men in the Sixth Army area, according to a prediction by the Sixth Army Adjutant General section.

This latest message is in keeping with the Army policy to "equalize promotion opportunities." In March, 846 privates E-2 in the Sixth Army with 17 months' service, made private first class. In April, the time in service requirement for E-3 dropped to 15 months and in May to 14 months, resulting in 959 and 810 Sixth Army promotions, respectively, for the two months.

All commanders who have men in their organizations qualified for promotion under the new directive have been instructed to submit recommendations on them prior to 24 June, 1956.

Commanders have also been asked for the names of men in their organizations with between 9 and 10 months of service and between 8 and 9 months of service.

Each month quotas are issued by Department of the Army that determine Sixth Army's promotion program for that particular month.

106 E-4's

The Sixth Army has been authorized 1,022 promotions to grade E-4 for the month of June according to information released from the Sixth Army Adjutant General section. Of this quota, approximately 106 E-4 slots have been allotted to the immediate Presidio area.

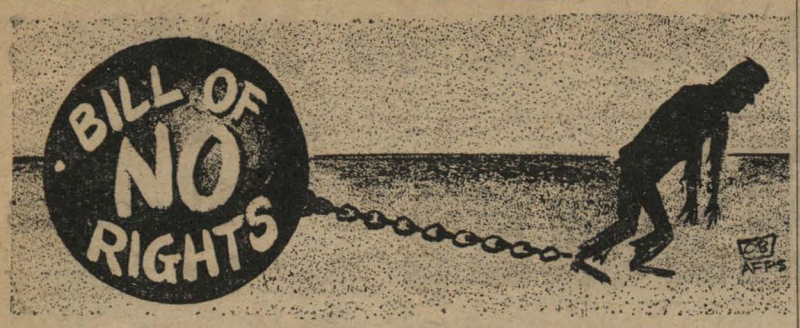
AAA Chief Called To Europe

Major General Hobart Hewett, commanding the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, has been assigned to the United States Army in Europe, the Department of the Army announced this week. His successor has not yet been named.

Antiaircraft personnel of the Bay Area and airmen from the Western Air Defense Force, will present a farewell review for General Hewett at 1530 hours, Friday, 29 June, on the Fort Baker parade ground. Following the parade, a reception for the General and Mrs. Hewett will be given at the Fort Scott Officers' Club.



In command of the 6th AAA since 22 October, 1954, General Hewett has been responsible for the ground to air defense of the Western states. The 6th AAA arsenal includes radar-controlled antiaircraft guns and the Nike.

General Hewett

Before his assignment as commander of Pacific Coast antiaircraft defenses, General Hewett served in Korea as commanding general of Division Artillery, 3d Infantry. He was also Chief of Staff and United States Army member of the United Nations Military Armistice Commission.

General Hewett is a 1919 graduate of West Point. He and his wife will sail from New York, 26 July, for his new post which will be announced by the commanding general, United States Army, Europe.

Our Bill of Rights specifically details some of the major blessings of living in a democratic state—freedom of religion, press and assembly, right to a speedy trial and to face one's accusers. Others are stated in other basic doctrines of our government. Still other rights remain unstated but have arisen through tradition.

We Americans have come to take many of these rights for granted. Often, they can best be appreciated by persons who have lived under governments that ignore such rights.

Imagine what life would like like under a system governed by a Bill of NO Rights. One that detailed:

The religion of the state will be the religion of the people.

A person accused of a crime will be tried by one or more officials in secret and without being informed of the nature of his alleged offense.

And so forth.

Americans, we hope and pray, never will have the misfortune to live under a "Bill of NO Rights." The major reason we are in uniform today is to make certain that we never do.

Another way of making sure is to vote. Being away from home is no excuse for not voting. The Defense Department has taken great pains to give us the opportunity to vote, no matter where we are stationed.

An informed ballot is a good way to prevent NO from worming its way into the title, "Bill of Rights." (AFPS)

Presidio Men Proposed For Area Honors

Four representatives of the Sixth Army in the Presidio area have been nominated for "men of the year" honors by the Federal Business Association of San Francisco, Charles H. Shreve, association president, announced Wednesday.

Winners will be named at a luncheon in their honor Tuesday. They will be awarded plaques decorated with the Great Seal of the United States and citations of their performance to the federal service.

Chief of Police Francis J. Ahern received a certificate of appreciation recently from Lt. Col. John J. Loughran, commanding officer of the Northern California Recruiting Area. Representing Colonel William M. Cohoon, Sixth Army military personnel procurement officer, Lt. Col. Loughran said the award was "in gratitude" for the San Francisco Police Department's "invaluable assistance" to the Army Recruiting Service. When the Army Field Band made its recent visit to San Francisco, the police provided an escort for the military musicians as they moved from one concert area to another. The Recruiting Service and the Police Records Division maintain constant liaison.

Important Topic!

Honorable Service Schedule For Next Troop Meeting

"To thy own self be true, And it must follow, as the night the day, Thou canst not then be false to any man." (Shakespeare)

Although Polonius may have been a fool in most respects, Shakespeare endowed him with at least one lucid moment of wisdom. For Polonius' advice to his son remains the wisest of counsels for any young man and for the soldier in particular, as next week's Troop Information topic, "The Importance of Honorable Service," will point out.

Honor, as a personal matter, is the foundation of the individual's reputation. In the Armed forces, where men live and work closely together, honor may mean the difference between victory and defeat.

From the individual of the unit to the Army as an organization, honor is a combination of self-discipline, honesty and integrity. In all its activities, the Army depends upon the honor, the self-respect of the individual, for the success of its mission.

The griper and the "bugout" destroy the efficiency and the morale of the unit. The bearer of distorted information may actually subvert his organization. Destructive criticism also lowers the will of a unit to accomplish its mission.

Although honorable service bears its own personal reward, the information topics points out that a number of material benefits also result from it.

In many cases, employers will not hire a man who has served in the Armed Forces and been released under other than "honorable" conditions. On the other hand, most states give special consideration to honorably discharged or separated veterans.

The Federal Government through the Veterans Administration provides a number of tangible benefits for the ex-soldier. They include educational opportunities, home and business loans, pensions and hospitalization, preference in civil service opportunities and a number of other advantages which the information topic will point out.

Dental Assistant Honored

Miss Mary Jean Vail, dental assistant at the post dispensary, won the top award in her profession last week when she received the Juliette A. Southard Memorial trophy.

This trophy is presented to that member of the San Francisco District Dental Assitants Association who during the year delivers the most outstanding demonstrational talk, or clinic, on some phase of dentistry.

Miss Vail's clinic explained the dental processes involving root canal packs. This dental technique involves the replacement of the dead tooth nerve with an inert substance making it possible to save teeth that would otherwise be lost. She credits much of her knowledge on the subject to time spent working with Captain Norman E. Edwards of the post dental clinic.

"We're very proud of Miss Vail," says Colonel Clare T. Budge, post dental surgeon, who explains. "It is stimulating for the whole clinic when one of our people is honored for her superior achievement."

Proposed Bill Would Credit ROTC Service As Longevity

A bill which would give up to four years' longevity pay credit for Academy and ROTC service has been drafted by Congressman W. Sterling Cole.

The proposal, which is in keeping with the Department of Defense current career incentive program, could mean as much as $74 more per month to the young officer beginning his active military service.

The Department of Defense has submitted a report to the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee on this bill, H. R. 10212. The proposal would relieve a long-standing inequity that now exists for a large segment of the officer corps.

At present graduates of the Marine Corps Platoon Leaders' course and the Navy Reserve Officer Candidate (ROC) program receive longevity credit for the periods of enrollment. However, graduates of ROTC or a service academy get no longevity for their training period.

It is possible for students to join National Guard or Reserve organizations while pursuing their ROTC courses and obtain longevity credit for the former. Such individuals could accumulate as much as four years' longevity credit during their college training. The result is widely varying pay scales for young second lieutenants and ensigns entering active service.

The new Cole longevity bill would remedy the situation by authorizing longevity pay credit for ROTC and Academy training after completion of four years of active duty. Maximum credit is limited to four years and may not be credited for retirement eligibility.

Today's Staff

Slow Down

People Going On Vacation: "Be Careful"

The "Slow Down and Live" campaign for 1956 is directed at the prevention of motor vehicle accidents during the 101-day period beginning on 30 May and continuing through 3 September. The record to date for Post personnel is excellent.

There are many other accident and injury producing hazards prevalent during the same period such as swimming in unknown waters, exposure to poisonous plants (Poison Oak), overexposure to the sun, heat exhaustion, falls from precipices, docks, boats, etc., which vitally affect all military and civilian personnel and their families who are enjoying well earned and often necessary vacations.

Of importance, also, is the preparation of the home or quarters for extended periods of absence such as removal of any valuables, shutting off gas and electricity, arrangements for caring of pets, lawns and shrubs, mail, newspapers and similar services.

And lastly, if a motor vehicle is to be used, a thorough check of brakes, steering mechanism, lights, horn, windshield wipers, cooling system, battery and tires is essential to an enjoyable trip and safe return.

The hardware which represents the equipment and supplies in the hands of Army troops and in depots amounts to about $25,000,000-000. Obsolescence of materiel occurs at an annual rate of more than a billion dollars.

— Kind Words —

Recently, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, commanding general, Sixth Army, received a letter commenting on the "Star Presidian's" special Armed Forces Day edition. The text of this letter, written by Edmond Gailbraith Toomey, Civilian Aide for Montana, to the Secretary of the Army, is as follows:

Through the most active cooperation of Colonel C. C. W. Allan, General Staff, your Deputy Chief of Staff, I have received extra copies of the Special Edition of the Star Presidian of Saturday, 19 May, 1956. My request for these extra copies was sparked by the super-excellent character of such issue, and, moreover, by the thought that circulation of copies among graduating high school seniors in this area will prove effective in persuading enlistments in the Army Reserve.

In format, type, photographic reproduction, writing and reader appeal the Special Edition is simply superb. when tested against the most critical standards. My sincere congratulations to all the officers and men of the Post Troop Information and Education Office who produced it. Everyone to whom I have shown the issue agrees with this appraisal, including the newspaper men here.

Adjutant General's Corps Celebrates 181st Birthday

Saturday, 16 June 1956, marked the 181st Anniversary of the Adjutant General's Corps.

On 16 June 1775, the day after the Continental Congress in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, named George Washington Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army, the position of Adjutant General was established to take over the administrative and personnel management of the Army.

In 1813, by an act of Congress, the Adjutant General's Department was officially established. The name remained unchanged until 28 June 1950 when the department was officially renamed the Adjutant General's Corps.

During the past fiscal year, the Adjutant General Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, under the leadership of Colonel Robert S. Nourse, has established a record in handling the administrative work load for Headquarters Sixth Army. A few facts and figures on the work load for the AG Section for fiscal year 1956:

Colonel Nourse

The total linear feet of records on hand in Sixth Army area as of June 1956 was reduced to 287,503 linear feet. This figure is 149,613 linear feet less than fiscal year 1955 at an estimated savings of $1,580,680 effected throughout the Army area.

AG Personnel Division processed 345,061 personnel actions. This is an increase of 140,061 personnel actions over fiscal year 1955. During February 1956 a retired activities unit was established to maintain contact with and assist retired personnel in Sixth Army area with their problems. In addition, this unit publishes a periodical newsletter which contains items of official information and other items of general interest to retired personnel. The unit currently averages 30 letters and seven personal interviews per day.

AG Administrative Services Division processed a total of 5,629,554 incoming and outgoing communications during the year. 312,473 pieces of personal mail were handled for personnel assigned to headquarters.

The Machine Records Division processed 601,541 source documents such as: morning reports, enlistment forms, separation forms, special orders, 201 files, changes of address, qualification questionnaires and extension course certificates. 1,463,272 pieces of correspondence were dispatched. The phenomenal increase in requirements imposed on the Machine Records Division is due to the growth of the USAR in Sixth Army area.

In spite of the increase in work load over 1955, improved work management and work simplification have not only kept the AG Section up to the mark, but have resulted in elimination of nine personnel spaces.

Colonel Robert S. Nourse retries on 30 June 1956 on completion of more than 30 years' active service and will be replaced by Colonel Lawton Butler. (cab)

Now That School's Over Record Number Join Up For Sixth Month Training

More young men signed up for the Army reserve in June than any other month since the signing of the Armed Forces Act of 1955.

A total of 2,047 men volunteered for service in the Army reserve bringing the grand total of enlistees under all phases of RFA to 40,252. More than half of this total, 24,950, are in the 17 to 18½-year-old bracket and will serve on active duty for only six months, completing their obligation in local reserve units.

Approximately 6,300 RFA trainees will start their sixth month active duty tours this month. A majority of these young men had enlisted previously, but had been deferred pending graduation from high school.

Draft Call

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department has asked the Selective Service System to provide the Army 13,000 men in August, the same figure requested for July.

The Marine Corps, Navy and Air Force did not ask for any inductees during the month.

The August draft call brings to 2,070,430 the total number inducted since Selective Service was resumed in February 1950.

Strength Drops

Washington (AFPS) — The strength of the armed forces was 2,835,688 at the end of April, a drop of 14,257 from the previous month, the Defense Department has announced.

The preliminary report for April placed Army strength at 1,054,677, Navy at 671,778, Air Force at 910,500 and Marine Corps at 198,733.

The Army has the biggest manpower decrease during the month—nearly 10,000 men.

Once again, the AF continued to lead all the services in reenlistments with 8,650. The Army had 7,960; the Navy, 5,492 and the Marine Corps, 1,211.

New Plan Will Shift Most Service Vets

Washington — Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has asked the service secretaries to make a joint recommendation for other agencies to assume veterinary activities in the medical services of the armed forces.

The primary mission of military veterinarians has been meat and food inspection, since there has been little call for the practice of animal husbandry in recent years.

In a memorandum, Mr. Wilson said adequate facilities are available in the Department of Agriculture to provide necessary subsistence, grading and inspection services and that a suitable plan is needed to channel a portion of Veterinary Corps personnel of the Army and Air Force into other fields.

Although the Navy has no veterinary specialists, the recommendations would affect some 2,800 officers and enlisted men in the other military establishments.

The secretaries of the three services have been asked to prepare their proposal and submit it for approval by 1 July. (AFPS)

Throughout American universities today, over 2,600 U.S. Army officers have taken instruction in fields ranging from bacteriology and business administration to guided missiles and electronics.

Washington — Another 4,251 Capehart Act homes for military families at 17 bases in the U.S., Guam and Hawaii has been approved by the Defense Department.

The new approvals bring the total authorized to 64,947, almost two-thirds the number fixed by the act.

Army—Ft. Banks, Mass., 26; New Cumberland General Depot, Pa., 91; Ft. Sheridan, Ill., 150; Granite City Engineer Depot, Ill., 65; Belle Mead General Depot, N. J., 23; Ft. The Arkansas Traveler had nothing on American soldiers in Europe. Touring accounts for much of their off-duty time, and more than 66,000 automobiles are registered in their names.

Army Given Control Of All Service Traffic Under New Program

Washington—Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has placed management of all stateside traffic of the armed forces under the Secretary of the Army.

Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker's new responsibility covers all forms of transportation in the U.S. and includes direction of all activities.

The newest move in the Defense Department's "Single Manager" program, designed to place authority for supply functions formerly exercised by several military agencies under one head, is expected to bring substantial annual savings.

Mr. Brucker will set up a Military Traffic Management Agency, headed by an executive director. The director will control all commercial freight and passenger transportation used by the services. (AFPS)

The big man at Ft. MacPherson, Ga., again this year will be Frank Bolling, Detroit second baseman. Last season he led the Colonels in almost every department with a .369 batting average, 87 hits, 20 doubles, 71 runs scored and 36 stolen bases.

Presidio Hosts Island Cadets

"Get it on film, men, or they'll never believe us back home— all these trees and no coconuts."

Story and Photos
By Pfc. R. A. Lewis

"All right, you mainland Malihinis," barked the sergeant, "this isn't the compass course at Diamond Head, so STAY on the trails."

Thus instructed, 76 young Hawaiian ROTC cadets, Tuesday afternoon, infiltrated the trails in Muir Woods climaxing a five-day stay as guests of the Presidio of San Francisco. Wednesday, the cadets left the Presidio for Fort Lewis where they will take part in the six-week ROTC summer training program.

Only three of the cadets had previously been to the United States so Muir Woods afforded a striking contrast to the flora of their homeland. The Malihinis,, or newcomers, listened to the ranger, examined the foliage, bought souvenirs, checked the streams for trout and in general took full advantage of this tourist attraction. On the whole the cadets were much more impressed with Muir Woods than their next stop, Stinson Beach.

"Why, we wash our cows in better places than this," grunted one of the accompanying sergeants. Although the sergeant quickly retracted his statement as a joke, all the students were in agreement that the beach was dirty and the water murky by Hawaiian standards. And when some of the more adventurous ones took off their shoes and tried wading in the surf, their howls of frozen agony only certified their impressions.

However, on the beach the cadets did locate an item of scenery that received unanimous approval—a curvacious young lady sunbathing with her boy friend. Immediately an emissary was dispatched to handle the boy friend. With the enemy diverted the troops moved in—cameras ready—on the young lady. Facing 76 cameras, the young lady had no choice. She smilingly stood up and posed with her new-found Hawaiian friends to everyone's delight—boyfriend excluded.

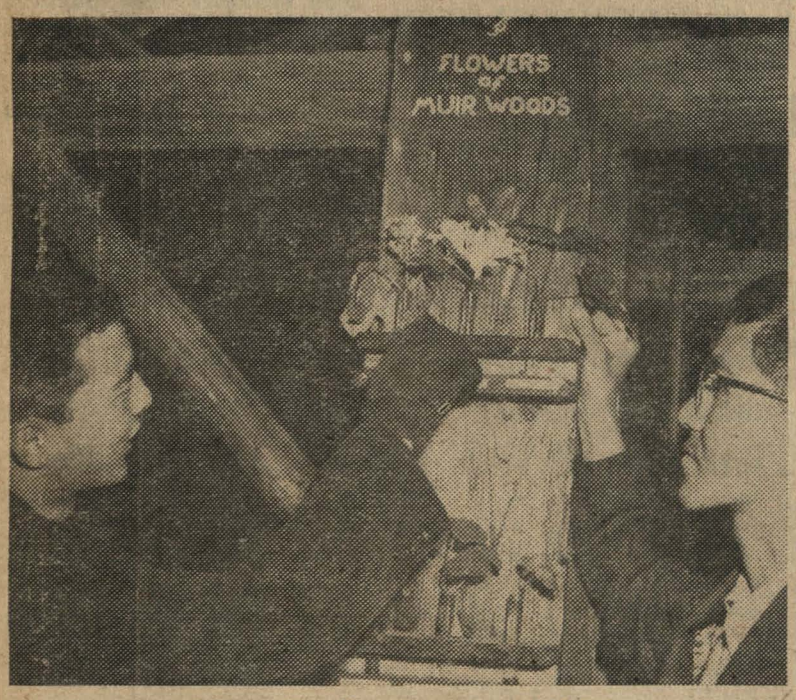
The cadets voiced enthusiastic approval of Presidio hospitality. "They're treating us like lords," voiced one Hawaiian with obvious delight. "It's great," said another.

Monday afternoon the students were given a combination culture and entertainment tour that started at the Legion of Honor's Chrysler Art Exhibit and ended at the Hungry i. In between they saw the aquarium at Golden Gate Park, Sutro's, the Cliff House, Fleishhacker Zoo, the Oriental Tea Garden and the de Young Museum. They drove back to the Presidio via Coit Tower and Fisherman's Wharf and after dinner attended the play "Anniversary Waltz."

The Presidio stay was arranged through Post headquarters in compliance with a request by the officer in charge of cadets, Major Don W. Black. Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist took personal charge of part of the itinerary including making arrangements for the cadets to visit a Nike emplacement.

"They really knocked themselves out for us," are the appreciative words of Sergeant Oliver V. Allen, cadet advisor, speaking of Presidio hospitality. Those dealing directly with the visit were Major Walter J. Symczyk, Post S-1, quarters and messing; Major Charles Francis, Sixth Army Information, public relations; Mrs. Lyn Rubenstein, post transportation, onward movement; Robert C. Patterson, post motor pool, transportation; M/Sgt. Fred Coulson, Post Signal, photographic coverage, and Mrs. Patricia Malone, Special Services. Free entertainment tickets came through the asistance of United Volunteer Services.

Major Black was able to plan much of the itinerary himself for he was stationed here at Sixth Army headquarters in G-3 section from June, 1953 to June, 1954.



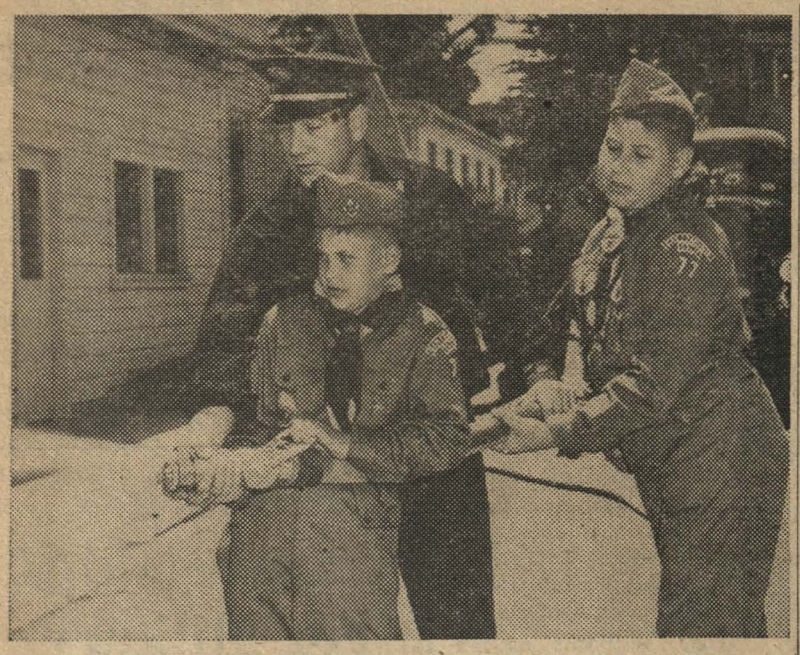
"What impressed you most?" was the question put to one of the young cadets. "Why, seeing Lili St. Cyr," he answered brightly. It seems that last Friday night, their first night ashore after five days at sea, the cadets — practically en masse — converged on Oakland's El Rey theater to see the legendary Miss St. Cyr. Several of the students explained that they had an academic interest in the visit. They wished to compare her art with that of Miss Tempest Storm, who has recently been performing in the Islands.

The glow afforded by Miss St. Cyr apparently did not last, for the cadets to a man spoke no good of San Francisco weather. "Even when it's hot, it's too cold," protested one. Each morning the cadets arise at 0545 and step outdoors in shorts and T-shirts to meet the elements for physical training. They complain that the weather turns them blue.

Last year's University of Hawaii cadets were also guests of the Presidio. They then went on to Fort Lewis' summer camp and won the City of Tacoma trophy for the all-around most outstanding cadet group. "Naturally," said Major Black, "we'll be out to retain this honor."

"This is a dandy luau the Presidio has planned for us, but where's the poi?"

"Man, dig these crazy orchids!"



Ranger Kamaiha (oldtimer) tells cadet Malihinis (newcomers) interesting facts concerning ulula'au (forest).

Fire Study will aid Scouts Conway Campbell and John Vekich as here they are broken in to the use of the big fire hose by Capt. Jimmy Bennot of the Presidio Fire Department. The Scouts are participating in the fire safety program currently being carried out by the Army fire departments in the Presidio area.

At Fire Station

Base Fire Protection Rules Taught Presidio Youngsters

Throw baking soda on a kitchen fire . . . wrap a person with burning clothing in a blanket . . . keep matches away from the little ones . . . and above all call the fire department immediately.

These basic rules of fire protection illustrate the type of training that has been going to Presidio youth in the past weeks. For Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts this knowledge will mean another merit badge. Other youths who show up at the fire station to learn fire safety may become Junior Fire Marshals.

Since most fires start at home, Post Fire Inspector Arthur LeDuc stresses this point when instructing the youth. Clean that inflammable rubbish out of the closets and attics. Keep the matches on a shelf high out of the reach of little brother or sister. Don't let one electrical circuit get overloaded or there is danger of a short circuit, he emphasizes.

Moving on to fire suppression, LeDuc briefs the scouts on all the basic fire-fighting tools. The principle of keeping air from fire is emphasized, whether it be by putting the lid on a pan of burning grease or wrapping a blanket around a person whose clothing is on fire.

"You don't have to be a Scout to help prevent fires," says Colonel James R. Rundell, Post Fire Marshal, who urges all children on the Post to visit an Army fire station and become a Junior Fire Marshal by learning fire safety.

"Fire strikes without warning," says the Fire Marshal, "and when it does, you may have only a few split seconds to act to save your life and the lives of others." Be prepared for an emergency, emphasizes Colonel Rundell, by knowing what to do if a fire breaks out. Know how to eliminate the fire hazards, how to evacuate a building and how to extinguish a fire, he concludes.

Presidio Fire Chief George Geller joins with the Fire Marshal in emphasizing the importance of immediately calling the fire department in any emergency.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

The Army is the versatile member of the defense team with a flexible system of weapons at its command. While possessing atomic weapons of great power, it retains the ability to vary the application of military force to the needs of the moment, to make "measured" rather than "mass" retaliation.

Two Army Pfcs. Tops in Service Picture Contest

Washington—Top honors in the sixth annual Interservice Photography Contest have been won by two Army privates and a Marine lieutenant colonel. The event was sponsored by the Defense Department.

Pvt. Myles J. Adler, Seventh Cav. Regt., Japan, garnered the number one prize in the picture story category for "The American Way"—a graphic portrayal of the woes of a young soldier trying to master chopsticks.

Col. Benedict's winning entry was a shot of the historic Parthenon in Athens, Greece.

Acting as judges in the contest were Jacob Deschin, camera editor of the New York Times, Arthur E. Scott, Past President of the White House Photographers, and Maurice Johnson, Washington Bureau Manager of International News Service. (AFPS)

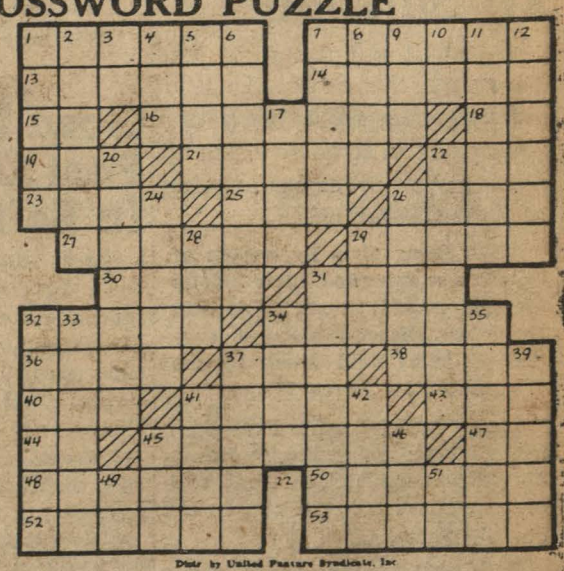
Army Officers Can Learn Languages In 6 Months

Washington — It takes six months to learn to speak the common Germanic and Romance languages needed by Army officers assigned to duty in foreign countries, 12 months to learn all others.

Training time needed for a man to become sufficiently fluent to meet service needs was listed last week in Change 1 to AR 614-185.

In the six or 12 months, depending on the language, an individual obviously won't become a linguist. But he'll achieve sufficient fluency to speak and understand the necessary language. He'll also have the base necessary to continue to develop ability in the language as he uses it in his foreign assignment.



Romance languages for which six months training is allowed in Army planning are: French, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish. Rumanian, also a Romance language, requires 12 months' training, probably because of the number of words from the Slavic, Turkish and other language groups which have become part of the vocabulary.

Germanic languages for which six months are needed include Danish, German, Norwegian, and Swedish.

All other languages offered to Army personnel, including Slavic, Semitic, Indo-Chinese and other language groups, require 12 months. They are: Albanian, Arabic, Bulgarian, Burmese, Chinese-Cantonese, Chinese-Mandarin, Czechoslovakian, Finnish, Hungarian, Indonesian, Japanese, Korean, Lithuanian, Persian, Polish, Russian, Serbo-Croatian, Slovene, Thai, Turkish, Ukranian, and Viet-Namese.

The 32 languages are all offered, in the first phase of training, at the Army Language School at Monterey, Calif.

Toreros Win Two Diamond Tilts

Jones And Walker Star On Mound For Presidio

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Fireball hurler Lee Walker of the Presidio Toreros twirled a six-hitter last Saturday and his teammates scored three times as the Army nine took a 3 to 2 victory from the Walsted semi-pros. The diamond clash was played on the Fort Scott field.

The locals shot off to a one-run lead in the first as second sacker Dick Shannon doubled and was driven in when big Presidio first baseman Al Casino bounced a triple off the left center field fence.

Harry Williams opened the second frame for the Post by singling and advanced to second on Bill Selsor's sacrifice bunt. Outfielder Bob Harbertson followed with a single for the second Army tally.

The Post nine scored their third and last run in the bottom of the third when third baseman Norm Ellenberger doubled and was pushed on around by shortstop Bill Selsor's single into center.

Pitcher Walker of A Btry., of the 9th AAA, struck out ten men to gain credit for the victory.

Early this week the Presidio men traveled to the Navy Hospital in Oakland and handed the Sailor medics a 7 to 0 defeat. Speedy Don Jones of the 505th Military Police went the distance for the locals to gain his first win of the season.

Al Casino with two doubles, Norm Ellenberger with a double and a single and Chuck Matzen with a double were the Presidio batting stars.

Pitcher Chuck Matzen and outfielder Harry Williams were elected co-captains for the Presidio Torero baseball squad it was announced yesterday by the Post Sports Office.

Free Keg Memberships For Military

Washington—The American Bowling Congress, with over two million members, adopted a resolution providing for the continuance of free membership in the national organization for all armed forces personnel during its recent national meeting at Rochester, N. Y.

Local associations will still have the option of charging local dues.

Under the resolution, the new program puts the free membership on a league basis. Military members will receive a special card for the military competition and will be requested to pay regular dues when they participate in civilian leagues.

The ABC, a national and international governing body, has standardized bowling by adopting a uniform set of playing rules and regulations. It has also established uniform specifications for balls, pins and bowling alleys.

The amended version of the 1951 resolution reads in part: "That the American Bowling Congress waive dues from members of the military who are on active service with the United States Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard for competition in military leagues. This membership to be valid only in those military leagues and in tournaments sanctioned by the American Bowling Congress."

The Presidio Sports Office announced recently that a Post Golf Tournament will be held on the Presidio course, 9-12 July. An 18-hole qualifying round will be played starting at 0800 Monday, 9 July, for those that have not yet qualified. The 54-hole tourney will get under way on Tuesday, 10 July, for the top eight from the qualifying round plus the top eight now playing on the Post Golf team. Retired male personnel may enter the competition in the Senior division but must, however, pay their own expenses.

Post Wacs Beat Navy In Softball

Behind the hurling of Pat Doering, the Presidio Wac softball team rolled to a 19-3 victory over Treasure Island Waves on Wednesday evening at Treasure Island.

The Army girls by reason of their win extended their official league record to six wins and one loss. Second place is currently being held down by the Hamilton Air Force Wafs.

Heavy hitters for the Presidio in the TI game were Peggy Harris, Joan Crain and Nina Heffner, each of whom had a home run in the one-sided contest.

Following are the latest league standings:

Grid Antics

Football Men Needed As Practice Starts In July

The Split "T"? or the Short Punt formation is one of many problems running through the head of Presidio football coach Larry McInerney as he prepares for the oncoming gridiron season.

The answer to the above problem will be answered by the number of Presidio personnel that turn out for the football team, as first practice is scheduled to commence on the 9th of July.

Army men on the Presidio or on sub-posts of the Presidio are urged to contact the Sports Office in Building 122 or by calling 3968 for their football application slips.

Coaching the Presidio Toreros for the second straight season is Larry McInerney who last year guided the locals to a successful ten and two mark.

With only four men back from last season's squad, the Post eleven needs players for every position including assistant coaches, managers and trainers.

Coach McInerney, formerly stationed with the 9th AAA at Fort Baker, began his coaching career with the Saint Mary's College freshman team where he enjoyed a perfect season. Next stop was line coach for his old high school, Polytechnic of San Francisco. In the Army he tutored the line for the powerful Fort Ord Warriors prior to being stationed in the Bay Area.

May Angling License Sale Sets Record

After seeing their favorite fishing waters flooded, and outdoors trips cancelled by cold weather for four months, California anglers swarmed to the field in record numbers during May, the Department of Fish and Game reported.

Fishing license sales during the month totaled $783,035 for the greatest number ever sold in a single month. This is $85,000 more than the previous high month in May, 1954.

Army Wins Interservice Track Title

Bob Mathias Takes First In Decathlon

Bob Mathias, the 1948 and 1952 Olympic Games decathlon champ, wound up his career on a victory note last weekend in Los Angeles, when he won the inter-service title with a score of 7193, without competing in the final 1500-meter run.

It was well below his best tally of 7887 but very commendable considering the ex-Stanford star has been semi-retired since entering the Marines two years ago. Of course he's a pro now so is ineligible for the Olympic team.

Final Scores—1. Mathias (Marines), 7193 (9 events); 2. Klein (Air Force), 6234; 3. Kelly (Army), 6081; 4. Moore (Marines), 5899; 5. Saxton (Army), 5731; 6. Black (Air Force), 5482; 7. Norton (Army), 5352.

Lou Jones Climaxes Two-Day Meet With 45.7 Clocking In 400 Meters

World record holder Lou Jones of the Second Army won his heralded rematch with the Air Forces Jim Lea last weekend in the finals of the Interservice Track and Field Meet in the spectacular time of 45.7. The two-day meet was held in the Los Angeles Coliseum last Friday and Saturday before a crowd of some 10,000 speed fans.

The only Presidio entry, Lieutenant Lowell Zellers, of the 505th Military Police, finished third in the 1500 meters behind Wes Santee in the time of 3:49.8. The third place finish for Zellers puts him in the final Olympic Trials next weekend in Los Angeles.

Lou Jones's clocking in the 400 meter churn compares favorably with Jones's record run of 45.4 in the Pan American Games in Mexico City in 1955, when he edged Lea. It tied the fastest metric quarter ever run in the United States, Lea having turned in a similar time two weeks ago.

Running in lanes all the way around two turns, Lea, in lane three, got off first and appeared to have about a yard lead at the 200 meter mark. But Jones accelerated around the curve from his Lane 5 spot and as they straightened out had a clear edge of about four feet.

As both uncorked their drive, Jones, ex-Manhattan star, was able to withhold Lea's bid and in the final 20 yards widened his margin to a big two yards. Lea was given 46 flat, Tom Courtney of the Army, impressive winner of the 800 meters at 1:47.1 Friday, was third in 46.7 and Lon Spurrier, world 880-yard record holder now in the Air Force, was fourth in 46.9.

Also impressive in this, the services' qualifying meet for the final Olmpic trials (first three made it) were Parry O'Brien, Jack Davis, Rod Richard and Wes Santee.

O'Brien, representing the Air Force, took the discus to complete his expected double after setting a world shot-put mark of 61 ft. 4 in. Friday. Richard, of the Army, beat a fine 200 field in 21 flat while Santee looked sharp in winning the 1500 in 3:47.3.

Meet records fell in every event except the hop, step and jump Saturday. As a matter of fact, only the high jump and broad jump survived the record onslaught on Friday's opening card.

Although he set a meet and Coliseum record in taking his high hurdle heat in 13.7, Davis had a real scare in the finals. Of to a slow start, the ex-Trojan who tied the world record of 13.5 last week found himself a good yard behind Charlie Pratt of the Army.

Davis bore down but hit the fourth hurdle and it wasn't until the next to last barrier that he collared the ex-Manhattan flash and won by about a foot. Both were given 13.8.

Richard, ailing most of the season with a pulled muscle, looked as good as ever in taking the 200 meters around the curve in 21 flat. He took a good early lead, widened it to three yards before hitting the straight and then withheld a bid by Larry McBride, former Houston star.

Both were given special permission to compete for Olympic trials berths although they didn't qualify in the Army meet.

Thane Baker of the Air Force, who won his 100-meter heat Friday night and then withdrew, came up with a muscle twitch and also scratched out of the 200. He expects to give it a good try in the AAU meet tomorrow.

George Mattos of the Air Force cleared 14 ft. 7¼ in. to take pole-vault honors while Willie Hollie of the Army won a seesaw battle with Ron Duckett of the Air Force to take the hop, step and jump, 49 ft. 5 in. to 49 ft. 3 in.

Former NCAA 2-mile champ from Oregon, Ken Reiser of the Army, won the 3000-meter steeplechase in 9:20.1. A nice finish enabled him to hold off Jerry Smart of the Air Force, who was clocked in 9:22.1.

AF Wins 3-Weapon Title In National Fencing Bouts

New York (AFPS)—The Air Force staged a major upset in the 64th annual national fencing championships here, slashing its way to the three-weapon team crown with a decisive victory in the finals over Salle Csiszar of Philadelphia.

On the way to the national championship, the first won by a service team, the Air Force swordsman defeated Northern California; N. Y. Fencers Club, defending champions; Salle Santelli of New York, and the Third Naval District.

Members of the three-weapon championship team were: Lt. Bob Goldman, Sampson AFB, N. Y. (foil); A/2C Henry Kolowrat, Mitchel AFB, N. Y. (epee); Lt. Col. Thomas Carhart, Allied Forces Central Europe (sabre); and Lt. Bob Nielsen, Mather AFB, Calif. (substitute).

The Third Naval District team—Lt. (jg) Richard Berry, Ens. Roger Jones and Lt. (jg) Robert Parmacek—finished third in the three-weapon event. Col. Laurence Brownlee of the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., fenced with the Northern California contingent.

In the national epee team championship, the Third Naval District lost to Salle Csiszar in the final bout to place second. Competing for the Navy in this event were Lt. Berry, Ens. Jones, Lt. Parmacek and Lt. (jg) Lawrence Lazovick.

Fencing for the N. Y. Fencers Club, winners of the national foil team championship, was Marine Lt. Aubrey Seeman of Quantico, Va. Third place in this event went to an air force team composed of Capt. Charles Steinhardt, USAFE, Maj. Jerry Mau, O'Hare International Airport, Ill., Lt. Goldman and Lt. Nielsen.

A Maryland Div. team which included Lt. Edmonds and Air Force Lt. J. Wolverton, a recent graduate of the Naval Academy, took third place in the national sabre team championship.

Some 300 fencers—including 40 servicemen—are competing in the tournament, conducted by the Amateur Fencers League of America, for national team and individual honors and a chance to make the 18-man 1956 U. S. Olympic team (six in each weapon).

Record Number Of Vacationers Visit Hatcheries

California's 19 fish hatcheries not only produced a record number of fish last year, but proved to be a mecca for vacationers and tourists, the Department of Fish and Game reported.

According to best estimates 720,000 persons visited the installations to watch hatchery activities and to see fish ranging from tiny fry an inch long to big king salmon weighing 45 pounds.

Yosemite Hatchery, located in the national park in the valley floor, attracted 330,000 to lead the list. Nimbus Salmon Hatchery, on the American River 14 miles east of Sacramento, had 200,000 visitors.

Pirates Lead Youth Loop By 1 Game Over Braves

The Pirates maintained their narrow lead in the Presidio Youth Baseball League this week with a three and one record in official loop action. The Braves are currently holding down the second slot with a two and two mark followed by the Dodgers, with a two and three, and the Tigers, one and two

Only one game was played last week with the Pirates emerging victorious over the Dodgers by the score of 13-4. Wayne Groth went all the way for the winners to gain his second win of the season.

In the first game of Sunday's double-header the Tigers handed the Pirates their first loss of the year as they rolled to an 18-9 win. The winning Tigers scored 11 big runs in the last of the fifth for the margin of victory. Pat O'Connor was the winning hurler in a relief role.

Behind the steady pitching of Bart Salgado the Dodgers captured the second half of Sunday's twin bill, 10-9, over the Braves. Leading batters for the Dodgers were Tom Holimon with a round tripper and triples by Russ Moore and Dennis Youngdahl.

Only extra base blow for the Braves was Art Roth's home run in the seventh inning.

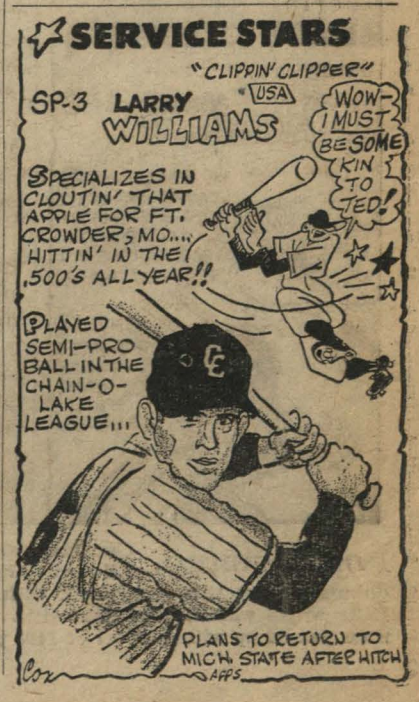
Tonight at 1800 hours on the Presidio PX diamond the Braves tangle with the Tigers and Sunday at 1330 hours the Braves meet the Pirates and the Tigers face the Dodgers in a double header.



Good news for track and field followers. NBC plans a two-hour telecast of the final men's tryouts for the U. S. Olympic team from the L. A. Coliseum 30 June.

Presidio Plays Host To First Sixth Army TI&E Conference

Already leading the nation's six continental armies in average educational level per man, the Sixth Army in the past year has also made the greatest substantial improvements in its over-all information and education program, said Mr. Wilmot Jacobs, senior education advisor for the Continental Army Command.

Mr. Jacobs spoke Monday at the opening session of a three-day conference on Troop Information and Education in the Sixth Army area. First of its kind for the Sixth Army, the conference brought together at the Presidio civilian and military representatives from eight Western states to discuss the problems of a constantly expanding program.

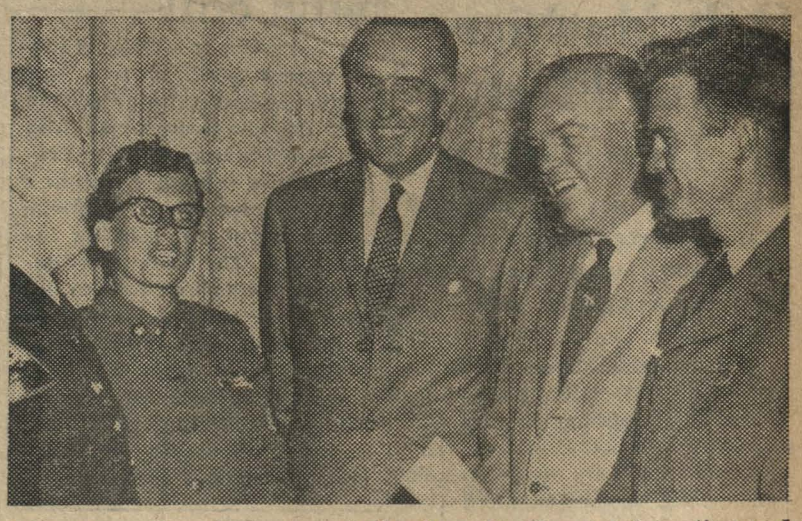
In the initial speech of the three-day conference, Maj. Gen. Walter J. Muller, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, pledged Sixth Army support to the information and education program which this year provided 15,000 men in eight states with opportunities to secure educations at elementary college and post graduate levels.

Colonel Robert Connolly, chief of the Sixth Army TI&E Section, pointed out that Sixth Army I&E supports all the installations in the Sixth Army area, including stations like Fort Huachuca, Arizona, (under Signal Corps Command), Dugway, Utah, a Chemical Corps post, and the antiaircraft units of the Bay Area.

In cases like that of Dugway and the antiaircraft units, the men are isolated with little opportunity for educational advancement unless the I&E program can find the means to reach them. Bed-ridden, hospitalized personnel present similar challenges.

Throughout the three-day conference, representatives bartered solutions to specialized problems. Major Earle K. Stewart, Post TI&E Officer, outlined methods of presenting a Troop Information program to large numbers of troops at a single installation. Colonel Arthur Timboe, Chief, Sixth Army Public Information Office, discussed the need for close relations between the Troop Information program and the Army's Public Information facilities.

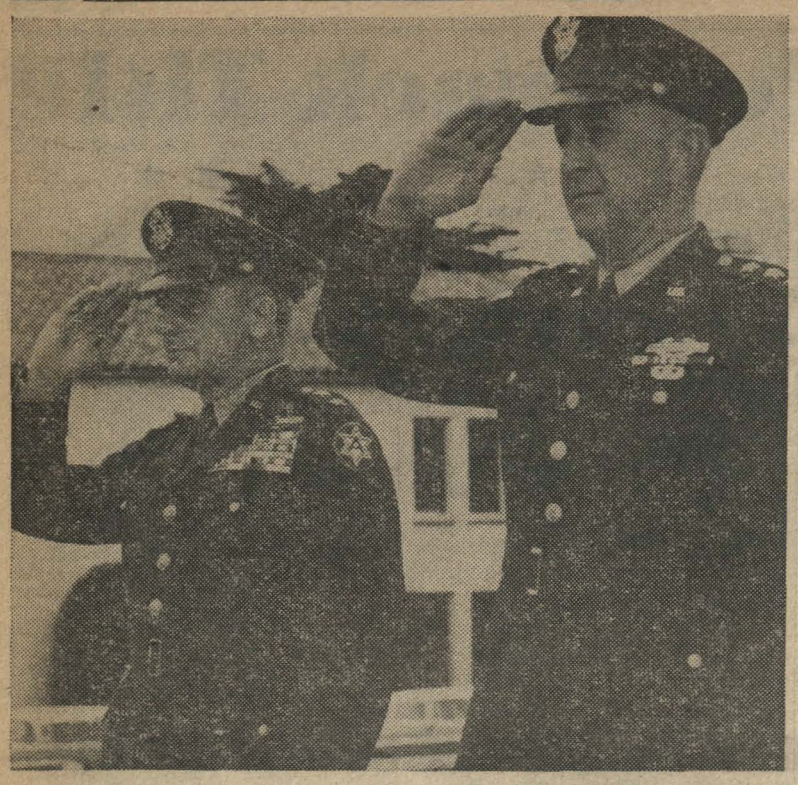
Mr. Kenneth Erwin, editor of the Star-Presidian spoke on the role of Army newspapers as Troop Information media.



Among the other speakers was Mr. Ralph McElroy, who outlined techniques for teaching English to Puerto Rican soldiers. Fort Lewis has as many as 1,000 Puerto Rican men in service, many of whom speak little English.

Other conferees included representatives from some of the 41 universities cooperating with the Sixth Army education program. Among them were Dr. Thomas N. Barrows, associate director, University Extension, University of California, and Dr. Leo Cain, dean of education services and summer sessions, San Francisco State College. Mr. Dalton Howatt of the San Francisco Board of Education spoke on the role of civilian secondary schools in the Army's Troop Information program.

In his address, General Muller pointed out that the conference reflected the growing importance of Troop Information and Education to the modern army.



Today's American soldier, he said, must be able to take over, if his commander is put out of action. The soldier "not only carries the field marshal's baton in his knapsack, but he is likely to have to take it out and use it.

"It is my opinion," said General Muller, "that the Troop Information and Education program is one designed to develop in the individual soldier the qualities of potential leadership."

During the Breaks at the three-day Troop Information and Education Conference held at the Presidio this week, civilians, officers and enlisted men discussed informally some of the problems involved in bringing information and education to Sixth Army troops in eight Western states. Left to right are Colonel Robert Connolly, chief of the Sixth Army TI&E Section and conference chairman; Sfc. Virginia Chaffee, I&E NCO, Company D, Station Complement; Dr. Thomas N. General Peploe was officially welcomed by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commanding general, and the Honor Guard. for individual honors in the series of matches which began 12 June.

A new All-Army record was set by Specialist Meeks, who fired a perfect 100 in Match 8 to break the previous record of 99 held by Private First Class R. T. Gabel of Third Army.

Approximately 30 members of the Sixth Army's representation of 48 in the All-Army matches are classed as "new shooters," men who have little previous experience in top-flight match competition.

In a message received from Fort Benning, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, learned that 22 members of the rifle teams from his command have been selected to remain at Benning to try-out for the All-Army team that will participate in the forthcoming national matches and Olympic Team try-outs scheduled to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio, beginning in mid-August.

In pistol competition the Sixth Army's "Gold" Team captured second place in the National Match Course for center-fire pistols; fourth in 22 caliber competition, and seventh in 45 caliber firing for the All-Army Pistol championship, while the Sixth Army's "Silver" team took sixth place in the All-Army championship for 45 caliber weapons.

Officer-in-charge of the Sixth Army's competitors in the rifle and pistol matches was Colonel Albert L. Hettrich of the 46th Ordnance Corps Headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., assisted by Major Joseph L. Anzini, 5th Infantry Division, Fort Ord, Calif. (rifle); Captain C. D. Jones, 5th Infantry Division, Fort Ord, Calif. (pistol); Captain J. F. Kallam, 505th Military Police Battalion, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif. (pistol); and Master Sergeant C. R. Barnett, Sixth Army Pers. Team, Oakland Army Terminal, Oakland, Calif. (pistol).

Fort Benning, Georgia, was the scene of the All-Army Rifle and Pistol championships this past week with the Sixth Army Rifle squad winning the 1956 title. The Sixth Army men wound up with a total of 1404 points to edge out the First Army "A" team by two points over the McAndrew Range. Twenty-two Sixth Army personnel were selected to remain at Benning to try out for the All-Army squad.

Defense Sec'y Names Group To Study Higher Pay For Key Technicians

Washington—Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric Co., has been named to head Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson's advisory committee on higher professional and technical pay proposals.

Others appointed by Sec. Wilson to the group, composed of civilian members and defense manpower officials, are: Charles R. Hook, chairman of the board of Armco Steel, Dr. John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State College, and H. Lee White, lawyer. In addition: Carter L. Burgess, Department of Defense, Hugh M. Milton II, Army; Albert Pratt, Navy, and David S. Smith, Air Force.

The committee will make recommendation for additional compensation for enlisted and officer technicians of the armed forces and military and civilian personnel in upper-bracket defense management activities.

Sec. Wilson has asked the committee to complete its study in time to prepare pay legislation to submit to the first session of the 85th Congress next January.

The active Army is aware of the importance of the civilian components and supports wholeheartedly the program to strengthen and improve them. It insists, however, on getting fair return in efficiency and combat readiness.

Old Station Hospital Becomes Landmark Today

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 5 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 29 June, 1956

DAR To Mark Post Building At Ceremony

The Old Station Hospital (post dispensary) officially becomes a historical landmark today with the presentation of a marker by the Daughters of the American Revolution, California Chapter, at 1430 hours.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young will receive the monument for the Army from DAR representative Mrs. Lynn M. Bell. Deputy Post Commander Carl E. Lundquist will present greetings for the Army and Mrs. Bell greetings for the DAR. Mrs. O. George Cook will unveil and dedicate the marker for the DAR. Guests may join a conducted tour through the building immediately following the ceremony.

Dating from about 1857 the Old Station Hospital is the first permanent building completed by American forces after their arrival at the Presidio. It is reputed to be the oldest frame building still in use in California.

In the 99 years since its completion in 1857, the Old Station Hospital, Building 2, has been in continuous use as a medical center, the purpose for which it was originally constructed. Probably the first unit to use its facilities was the 3d Artillery Regiment, which received its nickname, "The Gay and Gallant Third," during the Mexican War.

By the outbreak of the Civil War, a dozen sets of quarters, occupied by the officers and families of the 9th Infantry Regiment, were built adjacent to the Station Hospital. In 1862, a row of wooden barracks was constructed along the west side of the parade ground, of which buildings 86 and 87 (containing the office of the Star Presidian) are still in use today. The remainder were destroyed in 1951. In 1862, across present-day Lincoln boulevard, were the company gardens which provided fresh vegetables for hospital patients. A cow was kept to supply fresh milk.

Until 1898, the Old Station Hospital was adequate to meet the Army's medical needs. But with the outbreak of the Spanish American War and the Philippine Insurrection, the sick lists were swollen with hundreds of troops returning from Philippine service. The overflow of patients were treated in the new brick barracks, constructed in 1894 and 1895, while a new hospital (later to become Letterman Army Hospital) was under construction.

General Lauds Army Stars For Rifle Use

"You are all winners," General Willard G. Wyman, Commander of the Continental Army Command, told the 611 participants in the 1956 All-Army Rifle and Pistol championships which ended at Fort Benning, Georgia, late last week.

The Sixth Army "Gold" Rifle team had earlier captured first place in the key matches with a total score of 1404 points. Highest position won by a Sixth Army Pistol squad was second place in the National Match Course for center fire pistols.

General Wyman went on to say, "You are a winner to be here as you represent the cream of our Armies who use weapons in their hands." The General told how the Navy and Air Force build great instruments and weapons of war which are handled by crews of men. "In the Army," he explained, "victory is acquired by individual effort of the soldier who fights with his body."

The CONARC commander went on to state that "in war, battles fought by the Navy are measured in costs of ships, and battles fought by the Air Force are measured in terms of airplanes. The battles we fight on the ground are measured in the cost of men's lives and the economy in life is dependent on the ability of the man to use his weapons."

The General stated that shooters will go back to their stations and prepare for future conquests either in the Olympic Games or in our National Rifle Association matches. "But more important," he added, "you'll go back home to your units and there you will be the example of the man who is superior in the use of weapons which you control yourselves."

Helicopter Award Presented To Army For Rescue Work

The United States Army, jointly with other services and the helicopter industry, has recently been presented the Kossler award by the American Helicopter Society for participation in the relief operation during the winter floods of 1955.

"The value of the service performed by these individuals can be measured by the lives of hundreds of men, women and children who were saved through evacuation by Army helicopters," states Major General John A. Klein, The Adjutant General.

Congress Gives Green Light To Vital Service Measures

The Senate has passed and sent to the President for his signature legislation permitting 12,081 enlisted men, overpaid a total of $3,485,752 when they re-enlisted under the 1954 bonus law, to keep the extra money they received.

Legislation that would authorize longevity pay credit for time spent as a cadet in one of the service academies or in an ROTC program has cleared its first legislative hurdle with assignment to the House Armed Services sub-committee for consideration.

The bill, introduced in the last session of Congress by Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R-N. Y.), would amend the Career Compensation Act of 1949. It would not, however, affect present promotion or retirement procedures.

Sub-committee spokesmen expect hearings to begin on the measure within the next few weeks.

The Senate Finance Committee has given its approval to the Military Survivor Benefits Bill, which will bring all military personnel into the Social Security program on a pay-and-go basis and do away with the present $10,000 free government life insurance.

Especially advantageous to the families of career servicemen, the servicemen, the measure is designed to remove many inequities in the present survivor benefits program.

The House has passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate the lump sum readjustment pay bill for reserve officers and EM involuntarily released from active duty.

The bill, which would affect only those released after it becomes law, would provide one half of one month's pay for each year of service up to 18 years for all reservists who have spent at least five years on active duty.

The House Armed Services subcommittee has favorably reported to the full committee a measure calling for the burial of an unknown member of the Armed Forces, who died in the Korean fighting, alongside the tomb of the Unknown Soldier of WWI.

The sub-committee amended the bill so that the burial would take place on Memorial Day, 1958.

He and his wife will sail from New York, 26 July, for this new post.

Army Waives Waiting Period For 'Truly Outstanding' Officer

Washington—The Army has announced adoption of a program that will permit selection of "truly outstanding" captains, majors and lieutenant colonels for temporary promotions to the next higher grade from three to five years ahead of schedule.

The Army said the number of captains and majors eligible for the early advancements will be limited to 10 per cent. The figure for lieutenant colonels will be 15 per cent.

To be promoted, outstanding captains must have a minimum of three years in grade; majors, four years and lieutenant colonels, five years.

In the past the average waiting period for promotion to major and lieutenant colonel was nearly six years, while colonel was 10 years.

For promotion to major, 17 July; for promotion to lieutenant colonel, early in 1957; for promotion to colonel, 26 June.

The Army said the program will be in addition to present temporary officer promotion procedures. There will be no change in the methods by which boards select officers from primary zones.

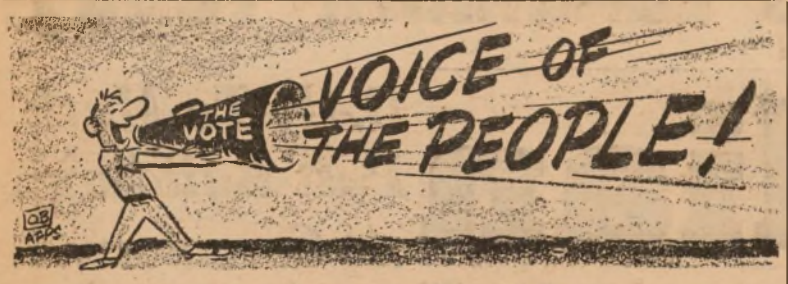
It was emphasized that officers will be promoted early only on the basis of records available at the Department of the Army.

Recommendations are neither required or desired. If forwarded, they will not be referred to the boards, the Army said. (AFPS)

San Francisco Today Celebrates Birthday

Today the city of San Francisco officially celebrates its 180th birthday. The Presidio, whose own past is an integral part of city history, again takes an active part in the festivities.

This morning Founding Day observances begin with an anniversary mass offered by Auxiliary Bishop Merlin J. Guilfoyle at the Mission Dolores, 1000 hours. San Francisco's birth dates from the first Spanish mass performed at the mission.



Following the mass, Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist will lay a wreath on the tomb of Lieutenant Jose Joaquin Morage, first commandant of the Presidio.

The group will then adjourn to the Presidio Officers' club for the Founders' Day Luncheon from 1200 to 1400 hours. Approximately 250 guests are expected to attend the luncheon.

Strolling musicians will help create atmosphere at the luncheon. Highlight of the affair will be the cutting of the San Francisco birthday cake with a military saber by La Favorita.

Among those present will be representatives of the Daughters of the American Revolution which will later, 1430 hours, sponsor dedication of a marker at the Old Station Hospital (Post Dispensary).

Founders Day is sponsored by the California Historical Society and Citizens Committee.

An idea has been kicking around in the minds of the world's best political theorists for hundreds of years: just governments derive their powers from the consent of the governed. The idea is the cornerstone of our Declaration of Independence, although Thomas Jefferson, who was largely responsible for the document, was not the first to express the idea.

Down through the 170 years or so of our existence, we Americans have given life to this idea every time we entered a voting booth or held a town meeting. "Consent" came to mean the will of the majority: the "governed," every citizen.

During these 170 years, we have seen governments based on other notions tumble like the walls of Jericho. Absolute monarchies—government by the "consent" of one man, the king or tsar—have all but disappeared. Other totalitarian varieties—government by "consent" of a Fuehrer or Duce—have also been given the gate.

Some totalitarian forms are still around but their lives and the lives of their leaders always are in doubt. This must be so when a government mutes the voice of its people.

We servicemen—no matter how far from Washington or the state capital—will have an opportunity to express our "consent" by voting this year. If our way of life is to rest on a firm, democratic base, we must cast a well-considered vote. (AFPS)

Today After 100 Year Struggle To Vote Servicemen Have Won Right In 47 States

A little less than 100 years ago 21 of the-then 34 states prohibited servicemen from voting and the other 13 gave them a franchise only if they appeared at the polls in person on election day.

Today, thanks to sweeping legislative reforms, the individual serviceman or woman can cast a ballot no matter where he is located in every state except New Mexico.

Conceivably, three million servicemen and women, dependents and civilians employed by the armed forces could exercise their franchise by mail in the November presidential election.

Over the past 100 years, absentee voting for servicemen has struggled through a widely varying course.

In 1864, Civil War pressures resulted in 25 states permitting some type of absentee or proxy voting. In the election of that year, military personnel cast 235,000 votes out of a total of four million.

By 1875, most of the liberalized voting laws had been repealed and the same pre-Civil War restrictions against military voting were once again in force.

In WWI, a number of states had absentee voting laws but because of a lack of effective administration nearly all of the two million eligible voters overseas were unable to cast ballots in the 1918 election.

In September 1942, Congress moved to prevent a repetition of the 1918 experience, but it came too late to be of any help in that year's elections.

Even though the law was considered greatly inadequate, it was vigorously executed in the 1944 presidential election and a record 2½ million of the 9 million eligible voters in uniform cast absentee ballots.

No exact figures were compiled on military voting in the 1952 Presidential election but many states reported unusually high requests for absentee ballots from service voters.

Last August, the Federal Voting Assistance Act of 1955 was signed into law by President Eisenhower. This act repealed all previous federal absentee voting legislation and set up a uniform procedure aimed at eventually assuring every serviceman a ballot.

Principally, the law calls for the Defense Department in coordination with the Department of Justice to assist the states in formulating absentee voting legislation that incorporates simple and uniform balloting procedures.

Since the law was enacted, 20 states have liberalized their absentee voting procedures through legislation and in eight others bils are pending to correct various inequities.

The state of Texas, which previously did not allow regular members of the armed forces to vote, struck that law from its statute books shortly after passage of the Act.

In addition, servicemen from Hawaii and Alaska now are permitted for the first time to cast absentee ballots.

Although many obstacles still exist in the absentee voting program, at no time in history has the serviceman had a better chance of voting.

Defense Department officials offer this reminder to servicemen: "If you want to vote, see your voting officer—normally, there's no reason why you can't." (AFPS)

Army Revamps Extension Correspondence Courses

Fort Monroe, Va.—The Army extension course program is being revamped to provide correspondence courses for all Army components that will parallel resident instruction in general service, specialist or branch service schools, according to the G-3 Section, Continental Army Command.

Equivalent credit for residence courses will be given in such schools as Armor, Adjutant General, Chaplains, Ordnance and Transportation Schools, effective 2 July. Other schools are adjusting their curriculum, wherever practicable, toward that aim. In some cases, short tours of active duty will be combined with correspondence courses to achieve this equivalency.

The old "series" course designations will be abandoned for names more descriptive of resident instruction—Pre-Commission, Company and Advance Extension Courses. Subject matter covered in the Staff Extension Course will parallel that given at Command and General Staff College and the Special Extension Courses will cover such fields as psychological warfare, and legal and hospital administration.

Effective 2 July all pre-commission courses, regardless of branch, will be administered by The Infantry School for Continental Army Command.

More than 131,000 persons are currently enrolled in the Army Extension Course Program. Some 34,000 of these are on active duty, the remainder are members of the reserve components.

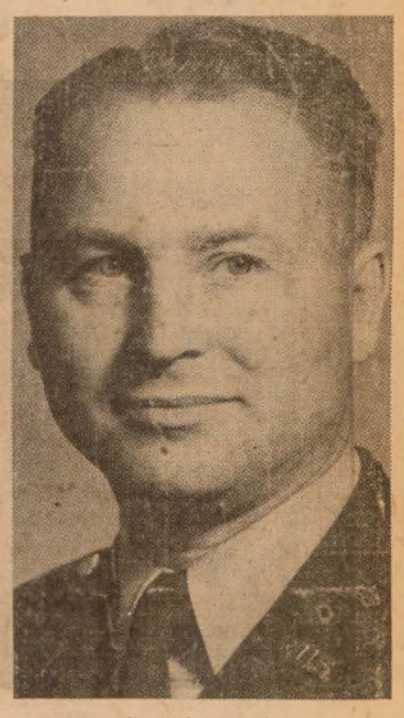
Retirement Ceremony Honors Five

Colonel Brady



Colonel Nourse

Colonel Sewall

Colonel McFarland

Captain Hastie

Thirty years since they tossed their cadet hats into the air, four colonels, all alumni of the West Point class of 1926, ended their active Army careers Wednesday in formal retirement ceremonies at the Presidio.

The four retiring West Pointers are Colonel Brookner W. Brady, inspector general, Sixth Army; Colonel Robert S. Nourse, adjutant general, Sixth Army; Colonel Alexander R. Sewall of the Sixth Army Inspector General's Section, and Colonel John A. McFarland, president of the Sixth Army Physical Evaluation Board. A fifth officer, Captain Francis A. Hastie, operations officer, 30th Engineer Group, also retired Wednesday, ending a 20-year Army career.

Accompanied by the Sixth Army Band, two battalions of Presidio troops, nearly 1,000 soldiers, paraded past the reviewing stands in honor of the retiring classmates and Captain Hastie.

Colonel Brady became Sixth Army Inspector General in September 1954 after commanding the 1st Infantry Regiment, 6th Infantry Division, for two years at Fort Ord. In his early career, he served in a number of Infantry assignments and in 1932 was a member of the U. S. Olympic Pentathlon team. During World War II he served in Tunisia and Sicily with the 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Division. In 1944, he was commander of the 339th Infantry Regiment, 85th Division, in Italy. From 1948 to 1951, Colonel Brady served as Army attache in Bulgaria and Turkey. Awarded a Ford Foundation fellowship, Colonel Brady plans to attend San Francisco State College, then take a teaching position under the sponsorship of the San Francisco Board of Education.

Colonel Nourse during World War II served as Adjutant General of the 9th Infantry Division Replacement and School Command and IX Corps. In 1944, he became Adjutant General, 1st Army, serving in that assignment until the end of the war. After the war, Colonel Nourse was assigned to the Office of the Adjutant General, as Adjutant General of the U. S. Military Academy from 1947 to 1951. Until his assignment to Sixth Army in 1954, Colonel Nourse was Director of Personnel, Caribbean Command. Colonel Nourse has accepted a position as commandant of cadets and professor of military science and tactics at San Rafael Military Academy.

Colonel Sewall before World War II saw service in Hawaii and later taught military science and tactics at Ohio State University. From March, 1942, to September, 1943, he served in the Southwest Pacific and commanded an artillery battalion on Guadalcanal. In the last year of the war, he commanded an artillery battalion of the 95th Infantry Division in Europe. After serving as a member of the Army Ground Forces Board No. 1 at Fort Bragg, Colonel Sewall was assigned in June 1949 to the 1st Cavalry Division in Japan. In May 1950 he became Deputy Commander of Troops with Headquarters and Service Command in Tokyo. His next assignment was to Sixth Army Headquarters. Colonel Sewall will retire to Phoenix, Arizona.

Before World War II, Colonel McFarland also taught military science and tactics at Ohio State University. During the war, he saw service with the X Corps Artillery in New Guinea and the Philippines. Before coming to the Presidio, Colonel McFarland pursued a varied career, first as attache in Lima, Peru, then with the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence in the Pentagon, and with the NATO Standing Group. He reported to the Presidio in September, 1955. Colonel McFarland will teach at North Idaho Junior College in Coeur d'Alene.

Captain Hastie, who ended a 20-year Army career Wednesday, began his Army service with the 29th Topographic Engineer Battalion in 1936. After serving with the 30th Engineer Group just before World War II, he attended Engineer Officers' School at Fort Belvoir, receiving his commission in 1942. He saw service with the 649th Engineers in North Africa in 1943 and 1944, then returned to the states as a faculty member of the Engineer School until August 1946. Assignments in Japan and Germany followed. Captain Hastie arrived at the Presidio in September 1955, to become Plans and Operations Officer of the 30th Engineer Group. Captain Hastie plans to attend Washington State College.

German V-2 Rockets Gave U. S. Headstart In Missile Development

If the Germans had not developed their V-2 rocket, chances are no guided missiles would now be rolling off U. S. assembly lines.

The V-2 rocket has been serving the Army as a research workhorse since 1946. It provided us with fundamental data that save more than $50,000,000 and five years in research and development.

The story of how the V-2 (German Vengeance Weapon Number Two) got to the United States reads like a page of fiction. German scientists, their families, rockets and documents were evacuated from Germany only a few days before the Russian advance would have captured the Hitler laboratories.

The U. S. Army evacuated 120 scientists and 100 V-2 rockets to the U. S. Eleven months later on 16 April, 1946, the first American fired V-2 rocket was shot into the air above the New Mexico desert to initiate the Army's guided missile program at White Sands Proving Ground.

By close co-operation between these German scientists, Army Ordnance missile technicians, and the General Electric Company, more than 70 rockets were built and launched successfully from 1946 until 1951.

In July 1951, General Electric transferred all V-2 material to the Army Ordnance Corps which assumed responsibility for completing the program.

In the next year, the Army V-2 project conducted nine static firings of V-2 propulsion units and successfully fired five missiles for high altitude research. Maximum height registered was 132 miles before the program ended in October 1952.

The V-2 rocket project served a great purpose by making the guided missile program a reality.

Honors Go To Two Drivers With Long Safety Record

Two drivers from the Presidio of San Francisco Motor Pool were honored at an informal ceremony here recently in recognition of ten years of Army driving without an accident. Earl Q. Hayward, 2670 Pine Street, San Francisco, and Robert Lee Finley, 1727 Louvaine Drive, Colma, received safe driving awards and letters of commendation from Lt. Colonel J. J. Speciale, Motor Pool Officer, at a gathering attended by their fellow workers.

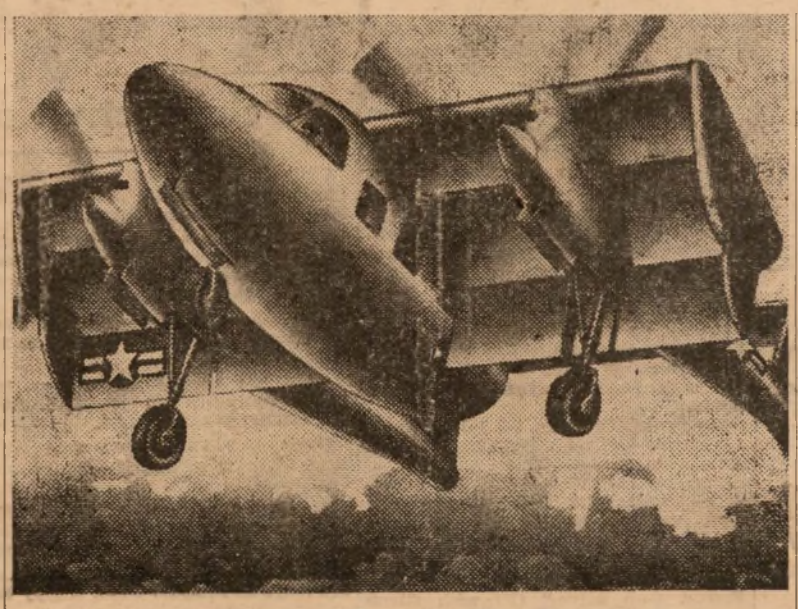
During the past ten years both Mr. Finley and Mr. Hayward have racked up accident-free records in 132,000 miles of truck and passenger-bus driving for the Army.

Army Awards Contract To Test Vertical Takeoff 'Deflected Slipstream' Aircraft

Washington — Award of a contract for the design and development of a flying test bed, "deflected slipstream," turbine-powered, vertical take-off and landing (VOTL) aircraft was announced by the Army.

The $700,000 contract is being administered for the Army by the Office of Naval Research and was awarded to the Ryan Aeronautical Co., San Diego, Calif.

Employing the deflected slipstream principle, the new aircraft is called the "Vertiplane" and uses large propellers and double retractible wing flaps.



Scheduled to be powered by a single gas turbine which will drive two propellers, the "Vertiplane" embodies a conventional configuration except for the wing, which incorporates large double retractable flaps located in such a way that the propeller slipstream can be deflected 90 degrees downward during take-off, hovering and landing.

For transition into horizontal flight, the flaps are retracted as the plane picks up forward speed and the slipstream then flows horizontally.

Flying test beds (research aircraft) are flying "mock-ups" intended to simulate the essential design and performance characteristics of new design concepts. They are designed to determine by flight experience the validity of new design concept.

Through projects such as this, the Army, in cooperation with the Office of Naval Research, is exploiting the basic research that has been accomplished by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics (NACA) in the development of new design concepts for vertical lift aircraft. The Army expects to use the most promising of the new aircraft design configuration in the development of a new family of VTOL (vertical take-off and landing) and STOL (short take-off and landing) aircraft.

Development of aircraft in this field, which will have the speed, range and pay-load of the fixed wing airplane coupled with the short to vertical take-off and landing capability of the helicopter, is part of the Army's program to increase the tactical mobility of its combat troops.

Paradise Cove Picked As Site For Gala Fete

A whiz-bang, star-spangled Fourth of July picnic is planned by the combined Service Clubs of the Presilio for servicemen and their guests and for military familes.

Forts Baker and Cronkhite hostesses are joining forces with the Presidio Service Club to provide transportation, food and a light-hearted schedule of outdoor events calculated to gladden the hearts of any red-blooded American. Paradise Cove (near Tiburon and Belvedere) is the place, and comfortable clothing will be the order of the day.

There will be dancing and singing with junior hostesses from the three clubs; volleyball, baseball, children's playground, scenic views for camera fans and good music under the stars.

All that is necessary for prospective guests at the Fourth of July picnic in Paradise Cove is to expend only one dollar per person or admission to the grounds, or $250 for whole families.

To avoid parking problems, enlisted personnel, their guests and family groups, are asked to avail themselves of the Army bus service to and from the picnic. These vehicles will leave from the Presidio, Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite Service Clubs at 1030 hours on Wednesday morning.

It is necessary for those planning to attend the picnic to sign up at any of the three clubs and submit the cost of admittance in advance.

For the benefit of families, an early bus will leave the picnic grounds for the return journey at 1730 hours. Another is slated to leave at 1900 hours, with final departure time set for 2100 hours.

Additional information on the Fourth of July picnic may be secured by calling the Presidio Service Club—2000; the Fort Cronkhite Club—58-257, or the Fort Baker Club at 58-239.

Learn To Dance For Free

Servicemen who feel they have "two left feet" when it comes to dancing have the opportunity to improve their technique by taking advantage of free dancing lessons now being offered at the Embarcadero Armed Services YMCA in San Francisco.

The class, primarily for beginners, is held every Thursday evening from 1730 to 2030 hours, in the program lounge of the "Y." Basic steps of the fox trot, rhumba, waltz, mambo, bob and jitterbug, are taught by Miss Audrey Wheeler. Miss Wheeler has wide experience in teaching social dance to adults and teenagers in the San Francisco area. She was recruited by the volunteer bureau of San Francisco to conduct the present service program for members of the Armed Forces at the YMCA.

Boys And Girls At Presidio Earn $274 For Cleaning Up

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Commanding General Sixth Army, expressed surprise and gratification when he was informed that the Presidio teenagers cleaned up literally to the tune of $274.85 on the first day of summer vacation this month when they rolled up their sleeves and tackled any and all cleaning jobs to earn money for their Teenage Club.

Boys and girls—165 strong—visited 216 homes on the Presidio, including the Wherry housing area, where they washed dogs, windows and cars; painted fences and porches; beat rugs, ironed, shopped and sat with babies. Their good work often brought tips which also went to the fund.

Results of the initial clean-up day were so gratifying that many householders have invited the young clean-uppers back to earn summer spending money by doing additional work.

The project was planned by the board of governors of the teenage club. Mrs. Arthur L. Bivins, Officers Wives Club representatives, and Sergeant First Class John A. Hoyt directed the operation. The young people, working in groups, were given assignments on advance contracts made by telephone and door to door canvassing.

The project proved so successful that the teenagers plan a return engagement of clean-up day sometime in the future.

The Army is a progressive Service, looking steadily ahead to the future. While respecting experience and avoiding fads, the Army concerns itself with the next war, not the last one.

The population of the United States is now 166,966,000—an increase of 2,808,000 or 1.7 per cent over last year, according to the Census Bureau.

Women's Army Corps Provides Happy Home For Girl Orphaned Since Her Early Childhood

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

Adversity in the form of a broken home and an orphanage childhood, was the stepping stone by which a young enlisted woman now at the Presidio, moved up to change the structure of her life and bring added meaning to the values of faith and citizenship.

Second eldest in a family of eight children orphaned through family tragedy, Peggy Ann Harris, with her three brothers and four sisters, became a state ward when only a tot. The two youngest sisters were eventually adopted by a relative in North Carolina. The remainder were placed in two orphanages, one in Lexington and one in Thomasville, N. C.

On her 11th birthday, Peggy Ann left the orphanage with a minimum of education and an enormous desire to leave the past behind her. She was tutored by family acquaintances and through a hit-and-miss school interim until she was 16 when she went to work in a North Carolina cotton mill.

At 18, Peggy Ann enlisted in the Women's Army Corps. She was trained as a medical technician and served in the U. S. Army hospitals, here and in Okinawa.

Peggy Harris

When she returned to the United States, Peggy Ann took a military leave and went in search of her brothers and sisters. Of the seven, only three have been located to date. The others left the orphanages and their adopted home and have not been heard of since.

Meanwhile, Peggy Ann was assigned to duty at the Presidio. While serving in the Post Dispensary here, she became interested in the Army Cooks and Bakers School at Fort Ord. It was arranged for her to attend there as a student. She and Sgt. Agnes Masterson, senior cook at the Presidio Consolidated Mess Hall, were graduated as honor students from the school and returned to duty here where the most severe of military critics— Wacs and male soldiers— give both women cooks a "Duncan Hines" rating.

"It is really our mess steward, Master Sergeant James Kinches, who deserves the credit for the quality of my cooking," Peggy Ann says; "he is a master in the art of planning and preparing good food. His kindness and unfailing courtesy to me and other staff members are what bring out the best in us."

Not content with being just a good cook, the sturdy, wholesome young Wac has also helped to bring laurels to the Sixth Army Command as a woman athlete. After entering the Army, she learned swimming, basketball, volleyball and softball and she justified the confidence of her coaches by taking first place for the Sixth Army in the 100-meter free style swimming meet and second place in the All-Army finals last year.

The softball team of which she was a member in Okinawa, took first place in the Far East Command championships, 1954-1955, and the Presidio basketball team on which she also played, later, took second place for the Sixth Army in the 1955 Basketball championship and first place for the Command early this year.

"I was never so happy as now," Peggy Ann declares; "the United States Army and the Presidio have given me all the comforting security I never knew as a child."

"I wish they'd let me homestead right here," she adds wistfully; "and I pray often that I can continue to be worthy of the benefits the Women's Army Corps presents to me as one of its members."

new warrants

Washington — An Army selection board will meet late in August to consider for permanent promotion to the next higher grade, all eligible USAR warrant officers serving on active duty as warrant officers or as enlisted men.

Paragraph 19 of AR 135-158 also prescribes that warrant officers holding higher AUS grades will not be considered but will be placed on the recommended list.

Daughter for Editor

A daughter, Kira Arlette, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Erwin, at French Hospital, San Francisco, on 21 June. The infant, fifth girl of six children, rounds out a potential all-girl basketball team, complete with a male coach, for the Erwins whose daddy is editor of the Star Presidian. Kira Arlette weighed in at 7 pounds 3 ounces and is gaining rapidly. Last reports had it that mother and all the children were doing fine but that Daddy Erwin was suffering from acute combat fatigue. The Erwin family resides at 275 Ramsell Street, San Francisco.

Ask Vets Cash Leave Bonds; Buy E Series

Many World War II veterans in this country are holding Armed Forces Leave Bonds that have drawn no interest for five years or longer, and Uncle Sam would like to pay up— an average of $200 apiece.

Vincent I. Compagno, San Francisco County Chairman of the U. S Treasury's Savings Bonds Program, has an idea for these ex-G.I.'s who could be receiving interest on this "idle money." He suggests they redeem their Leave Bonds and put the money in Series E Savings Bonds, which pay 3 per cent interest compounded semi-annually when held to maturity.

In the country as a whole, veterans hold Leave Bonds worth $26 million. These five-year bonds, carried an interest rate of 2½ per cent a year and were used to reimburse veterans for unused leave. Some $1.5 billion were cashed in 1947; others were held to draw additional interest. However, the last of these matured on October 1, 1951, and have drawn no interest since that date.

"Now the Treasury would like to clear its books of these Leave Bonds," the Chairman said. "When these bonds are cashed, I can think of no better place to put the money than in safe, sure, indestructible United States Savings Bonds. And, even if you don't have Leave Bonds, Savings Bonds are an excellent buy."

The Seventh Infantry Regiment of the Third Infantry Division is known as the "Cottonbalers." In the War of 1812, it defended part of New Orleans from behind a barricade of cotton bales.

Margin of Mobility

Organic Air Arm Vital to Mission Of Ground Forces

Washington — Organic aviation has the potential to provide Army troops a margin of tactical mobility, flexibility and a decided edge in any conflict against an enemy. It is an intrinsic part of the ground forces in a theater of war.

Aviation's combat and logistical support enhances the battle efficiency of ground forces. It has had and will continue to have a tremendous effect on the outcome of any land battle.

Certain types of aircraft can be integrated into small unit tactics of ground troops, particularly when both elements are under the direct command of the ground commander. Therefore, the basic objective of the Army's organic aviation program is to provide ground elements that aid support which demands "intimate coordination of effort.

Organic Army aviation performs six functions in support of ground combat. They are (1) observation, (2) rapid troop movement, (3) rapid movement of critical supplies, (4) augmentation of land reconnaissance, (5) command, liaison and communications, and (6) evacuation of battlefield casualties.

Army aircraft must be capable of "living with the troops." They must be able to use small, unimproved areas such as fields and pastures for take-off and landing. Maintenance and operation without elaborate ground handling facilities are also essential.

The skillful employment by the Army of light fixed and rotary winged aircraft is a must in modern ground warfare. (ANS)

Savings!

Three Bond Awards Now Available To Army Units

For outstanding achievement and participation in its Savings Bond Program, three awards are now available to units, the Army announced.

The awards are being given for participation in the civilian employees' payroll savings and bond allotment plan for military personnel. Cash purchases will not be used in computing the participation percentage.

The three awards are The Minuteman, Secretary of the Army U.S. Savings Bond Certicate and The Minuteman Flag. The Minuteman Award is an individually inscribed colored print which requires 65 per cent or more participation by a company-size unit or units of at least 100 civilian employees.

The Secretary of the Army U.S. Savings Bond Award is a certificate which requires 80 per cent or more participation by a battalion-size unit or a civilian unit of 500 or more.

The Minuteman Flag Award may be flown from a headquarters beneath the flag of the United States. To qualify, regiment-size units or units of at least 1000 civilians or more must have 90 per cent participation. If participation falls below 90 per cent during any two-month period the Flag must be lowered. It may be raised again when 90 per cent participation is regained.

Mixed units of civilian and military personnel require the same percentage of participation.

Daine Named Sixth Army Surgeon

The assignment of Colonel Henry W. Daine as Sixth Army Surgeon, announced recently by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, will return the colonel to the Presidio where 28 years ago he began his Army medical career as an intern at Letterman Army Hospital.

Colonel Daine received his medical degree from the University of Iowa in 1928 and in July of that year entered the Army at Letterman Hospital as an intern in the Medical Corps.

During World War II he served as the surgeon of the 2nd Infantry Division from January, 1942, until May, 1943, and was then named commander of the 107th Evacuation Hospital, the unit he commanded through Normandy, Northern France, the Ardennes Campaign, and in Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Germany.

Colonel Daine

Following his return to the United States in August, 1947, Colonel Daine was assigned to Fitzsimons Army Hospital in Denver, Colo., until December, 1947.

He then reported to Fort Knox, Ky., as Chief, Surgical Service of the Army Hospital there, and in 1949 was named commanding officer of the hospital in addition to his surgical assignment.

In June, 1951, he became commanding officer of Rodriguez Army Hospital, San Juan, Puerto Rico, and Antilles Command Surgeon, holding both posts until May, 1954, when he was ordered to Washington, D. C., to be Inspector General, Office of the Surgeon General of the Army.

Colonel Daine graduated from the Army's Medical Field Service School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., in 1931, and from the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in 1942.

22-8 Record

Post Loses Thriller To Area Semi-Pros

By Pfc. Bob Malone
*Star*Presidian* Sports Editor

The Presidio Toreros suffered their eighth loss of the current season last weekend when the Yountville semi-pros rallied for 11 runs in the seventh and eighth frames to edge the locals 11 to 8, in Yountville, California.

The local Army nine boasts a 22-8 record so far this year in official competition.

The Post nine jumped off to a one run lead in the top of the fourth inning when John Blackwell singled, took third on Norm Ellenberger's one bagger and scored on a fielder's choice by Harry Williams. The Toreros scored one run in the fifth when Jerry Louderback singled, stole second and scored on a long fly to the outfield.

Two more tallies poured across the plate in the sixth for the Army nine when Al Casino walked and was driven in by Harry Williams' 450-foot home run over the left field fence.

The home town semi pros rallied at this point, however, and drove Lee Walker and his successor, Don Jones from the hill with seven runs on seven hits. Roger Collins then took over the hurling duties for the Presidio until the ninth when John Blackwell finished up the game.

The Presidio rallied, however, in the bottom of the seventh with three runs on a walk to Roger Collins, a towering home run over the right center field fence by Dick Shannon, a single by Harry Williams and a two bagger by shortstop Bill Selsor.

The semi pros came right back with four tallies on four hits to run the count to eleven to seven.

A ninth inning Post rally failed when only one run scored and the side was retired when Al Casino's long blast was caught in deep center field.

Tomorrow morning the Toreros leave on a nine-day road trip to northern California where they will engage some fast semi pro clubs in Eureka and Susanville.

Following is the local box score for Sunday's diamond tilt:

Pirates Maintain Margin By Edging Braves, 5-4

The first place Pirates maintained their top position in the Presidio Youth League last weekend with a narrow 5 to 4 victory over the Braves on the PX field. The winning tally was scored in the last of the final inning on a walk and a three base error by the losers.

The Pirates now have a four and one mark followed by the Tigers with a three and two record. The Dodgers and the Braves are currently deadlocked for third with two and four marks.

In a lone game played last Friday evening the Tigers rallied for five runs in the third inning, sparked by John Kemble's triple and beat the Braves ten to eight.

League records revealed that Bart Salgado of the Dodgers is leading the loop in home runs with two and Dennis Youngdahl of the Dodgers and Greg Kuznecous of the Tigers are tops in triples with two apiece.

Wayne Groth of the Pirates is the top chucker in the league with a three and 0 record. Groth is also leading in strike-outs with 38 and in total hits with 36. Bill Milburn of the Tigers with a two and 0 mark rounds out the list.

Final Olympic Trials Set For Tomorrow In LA

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Five more Army athletes qualified for the final Olympic tryouts tomorrow in Los Angeles as a result of their performances in the National AAU track and field championships last weekend in Bakersfield. The five new men bring the list of Army men in the championships tomorrow to a new total of 25.

Bush sprinted his way into the finals at the Amateur Athletic Union meet by placing in both the 100 and 200-meter dashes. Bush was timed in 21.2 seconds in the 200-meter finals and though no official time was given in the 100-meter final, the Army speedster had a 10.4 second clocking in a preliminary heat race.

Donaldson gained admittance into the Olympic tryouts by placing in the discus with a 155 feet eight and one-half inch throw.

Eugene Maynard proved himself a potential Olympic candidate in the 800-meter run by placing second in the finals with a 148.2 time.

Nabbing a fourth place in the 5,000-meter run enabled Soth to qualify for the final tryout meet while Thompson, competing against such champions as the Army's Charlie Pratt and world record holder Jack Davis, managed to snare a fifth position. The first six men in each finals race were eligible to participate in the Olympic tryouts.

Tom Courtney, Willie Hollie and Charlie Pratt were first place winners for the Army in the AAU tournament which attracted the nation's best track and field athletes.

Courtney, foregoing the 800-meters run, entered the 400-meter dash and emerged victorious with the fourth fastest clocking in history, 45.8 seconds.

As a result of this performance, the outstanding Army star proved himself a top potential Olympic Gold Medal winner in both the 400 and 800-meter races.

Hollie's final hop, step and jump mark of 49 feet 6 inches was good for a blue ribbon while Pratt, competing in the 200-meter low hurdles, sped to a 22.8-second second place clocking. This race is a non-Olympic event.

Other Army stars who placed in the National AAU meet were Rod Richards, sixth place in the 100-meter dash, and Willard Thompson, a fourth place in the 200-meter low hurdles.

Armed Forces Swimmers In Annual Overseas Meet

Berlin, Germany (AFPS)—A number of American servicemen with impressive swimming records are now training at Andrews Barracks for the Conseil Internationale du Sports Militaire (CISM) meet which will be held at The Hague, Holland, July 1-7.

The American team will compete against a number of military teams from other countries, including strong representations from France, Holland, Belgium, and Egypt.

Leading candidates in the free style sprints are Pvt. George Mowatt, 24th Engineering Gp., a member of the Stanford University swimming teams of 1951 through 1953; SP3 Charles Chadwick, Hq. Paris Detachment, captain of the 1954 Wesleyan University swim team, and A/2C William McGregor, 10th Recon. Technical Sq., who took fourth in the 100-yard free style in the 1955 AF championships.

A threat in the 400 and 1,500 meters free style races will be Pfc. Gilbert Westwell, 291st FA Bn., who last year placed fifth in the CISM competition.

Multiple Missions

Army In Peace And War Slated As Information Topic

Though less publicized, the exploits of the United States Army in time of peace are as impressive as its history in battle, according to this week's Troop Information topic, "The Army in War and Peace."

The peacetime missions of the Army have changed and multiplied with the growth of the nation. To the pioneer, the Army meant protection and exploration. Zebulon Pike, Merriweather Lewis and William Clark were military men who made significant advances in America's march West.

The Army as a builder participated in the earliest mapping and surveying of the American continent, the construction of railroads and waterways. The Panama Canal, the Pentagon Building, the Washington Monument, and the Hoover, Grand Coulee and Chief Joseph Dams are among its major engineering achievements.

In its relief role, the Army has made its facilities available in times of domestic disaster. It came to the relief of San Francisco during the earthquake and fire of 1906 and more recently to the aid of northern California during the forest fires and floods of the past year. In the past half-century, the Army as an emergency relief force has assumed world-wide responsibilities.

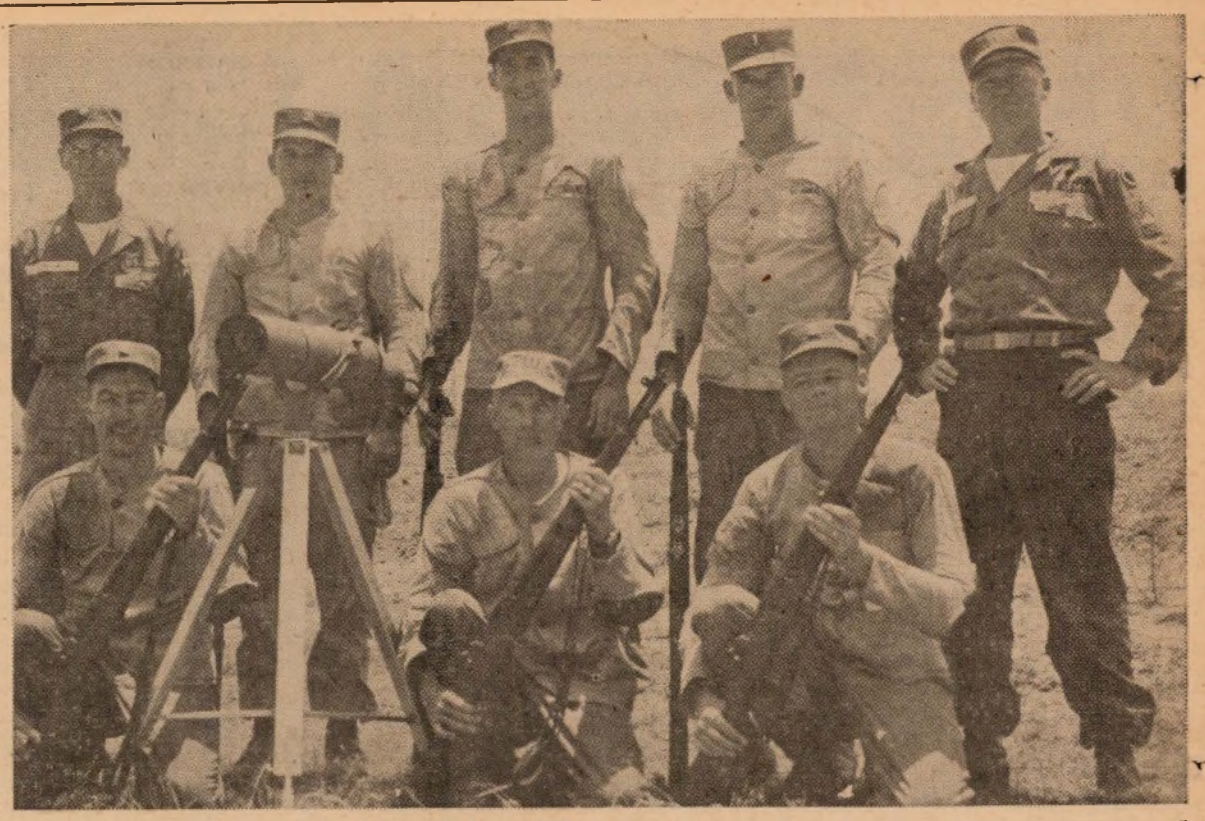
The Army's history in research and development includes Major Walter Reed's conquest of yellow fever and current developments in the fields of radio, atomic energy and medicine.

Most important of all, according to the information topic, the Army is strength in the gloved hand of the American statesman, particularly in the diplomacy of the Cold War. The Army is a deterent force against aggressors, strengthening both America and its allies in their ability to prevent war or to defend themselves, if it again becomes necessary.

100 Children Attend AAA Bible Classes

The final week of a special vacation Bible School for servicemen's children residing at Forts Baker, Scott and Cronkhite, closes today.

Under supervision of Chaplain (Lieutenant) Edward E. Carson of the 740th AAA Missile Battalion, the Bible School opened its doors to local youngsters in mid-June.



The classes, conducted from 0900 to 1130 daily, attracted the interest of nearly 100 children whose fathers serve in the various AAA units in the given areas.

A similar Bible class for children of the Presidio will begin at the Post Chapel 16 July, continuing through 27 July, from the hours of 0900 to 1130 daily, and at the Fort Scott Chapel on the same date and during the same hours.

Children of kindergarten age will be accommodated at the Presidio Post Chapel, while those of junior and intermediate grades will be instructed at Fort Scott Chapel.

The Presidio children's Bible classes are being conducted by Chaplain (Major) Henry C. Butt. The Fort Scott religious studies will be handled by Chaplain (Captain) Erhard H. Harms.

Brucker Announces Assignment Of Two Generals To Presidio

Two generals have been assigned to the Presidio, Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker announced this week.

Major General John H. Stokes, Jr., Chief of Military History, Office of the Army Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C., will arrive in October. Brigadier General Charles A. Sheldon, commanding general, Camp Irwin, has been assigned to Headquarters Sixth Army and will report 1 August.

General Stokes served as chief of staff of the Sixth Army here at the Presidio in 1950. Prior to that he had served as chief of staff for the California Military District.

A graduate of West Point in 1918, General Stokes served as assistant football coach at his alma mater in the early thirties when he was commanding the 72nd Ordnance Company, 29th Infantry.

General Stokes' most recent foreign duty took place from 1951 to 1953 when he was stationed in Naples, Italy, as assistant chief of staff for plans and operations of the Allied Forces in Southern Europe.

General Sheldon has a long background with horse cavalry units during the period between world wars. He joined the 1st Cavalry Division at Fort Bliss in 1942 first as Adjutant General and later as Chief of Staff. This division helped liberate the Philippines and went on to raise the first American flag over Tokyo and then stayed as occupation troops.

Graduating from the Strategic Intelligence school in 1950, General Sheldon spent the next two years as U.S. Army Attache for Thailand. He was then Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group for Thailand with headquarters at Bangkok.

He returned to Washington in August, 1953, serving for nine months on the Joint committee, Continental U.S. Defense Planning Group, before being assigned as commander of the Armored Combat Training Center at Camp Irwin.

Life Membership Question For Vote At NCO Club Meet

A constitution revision that would allow life membership in the NCO club for $10 is a major point of business to be discussed at the club's semi-annual general membership meeting Wednesday.

Free refreshments will be served at the meeting that begins at 1330 hours, 11 July, in building 69.

New members will be elected to the board of directors and club manager, Master Sergeant David K. McMillan reminds members that if they want representation they must show up to vote.

Same Pay

Specialist Can Become NCO WithoutQuota

Individuals may be appointed to NCO from specialist status without regard to Army Department quotas, as long as the pay grade remains unchanged, according to revised AR 624-200.

The regulation which covers appointment and reduction of personnel, also forbids lateral reduction of an NCO to specialist in the same paygrade.

"An NCO may not be made a specialist 'as punishment'," the AR stipulates. Under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, commander above the grade of Captain may reduce an NCO or specialist by one pay grade.

It is still possible, however, for an NCO to be appointed a specialist, without regard to quotas, in the same pay grade but only for "cause" (usually inefficiency) or "with consent," according to the AR.

Congressmen Speed Pace To Pass On Military Bills

Washington—With adjournment only weeks away, Congressional committees have been working at a hurried pace to clear the legislative docket of military career bills President Eisenhower has urged enacted at this session.

The Senate Armed Services Committee has voted approval of $11.8 million lump-sum readjustment pay bill for reserve officers and enlisted men voluntarily released from active duty.

Under its provisions, reservists discharged against their will would be given one-half of one month's pay for each year of service up to 18 years. However, they must have spent five years on active duty to become eligible for the lump-sum payment.

In some cases, officers could draw nearly $4,000 under the plan.

A measure permitting regular officers to receive up to $5,000 annually in retirement pay and still hold government jobs has been favorably reported by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

The present limitation is $2,500 under a law enacted in 1894. A vote on the Senate floor is expected shortly.

The House Banking and Currency Committee has voted approval of a three-year extension of the Capehart Housing Act, which is due to expire this September.

The Committee bill authorizes the services to build 49,000 military homes over the next three years with funds normally alloted as quarters allowance.

Similar legislation passed by the Senate earlier this session contains authority for 100,000 Capehart Act homes during the same period.

Senate Approves Defense Appropriations Bill

Washington (AFPS)—The Senate has unanimously approved a $34.7 billion defense appropriations bill for the 1957 fiscal year.

Tacked on to the bill was an extra $960 million for the Air Force, most of which the Senate decreed would be used to speed up production of the B-52 intercontinental jet bomber.

The extra funds were written into the bill over the protest of top defense department chiefs. Prior to the Senate vote, Air Secretary Donald A. Quarles told the lawmakers the additional appropriation was not needed because the AF has "the most powerful striking force on earth."

The bill allots $16.5 billion for the Air Force; $10 billion for the Navy; $7.5 billion for the Army and $657 million for other defense department activities.

Manpower Cut In Army Force May End Draft

A cut of 500,000 in Armed Forces strength over the next four years could put an end to the draft, according to an article by Monte Bourjaily, Jr., in the 30 June issue of Army Times.

According to Army Times, hints of such a cut "leaked" out of "secret sessions" at the recent Secretary's Conference in Quantico, Va. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson himself indicated to the press at Quantico that cuts in armed forces strength were under study, the Army Times said.

If such a slash in the armed forces were made, the Army would receive the major cut, according to Bourjaily's article.

Under such a policy, the Army would be reduced from its present 1,042,000 to about 800,000 by 1960. In its 1957 budget testimony, the Army said it expected to have 660,000 RA enlisted, 83,000 officer and warrant officer career personnel. The total would leave the Army just 57,000 short of the 800,000 figure.

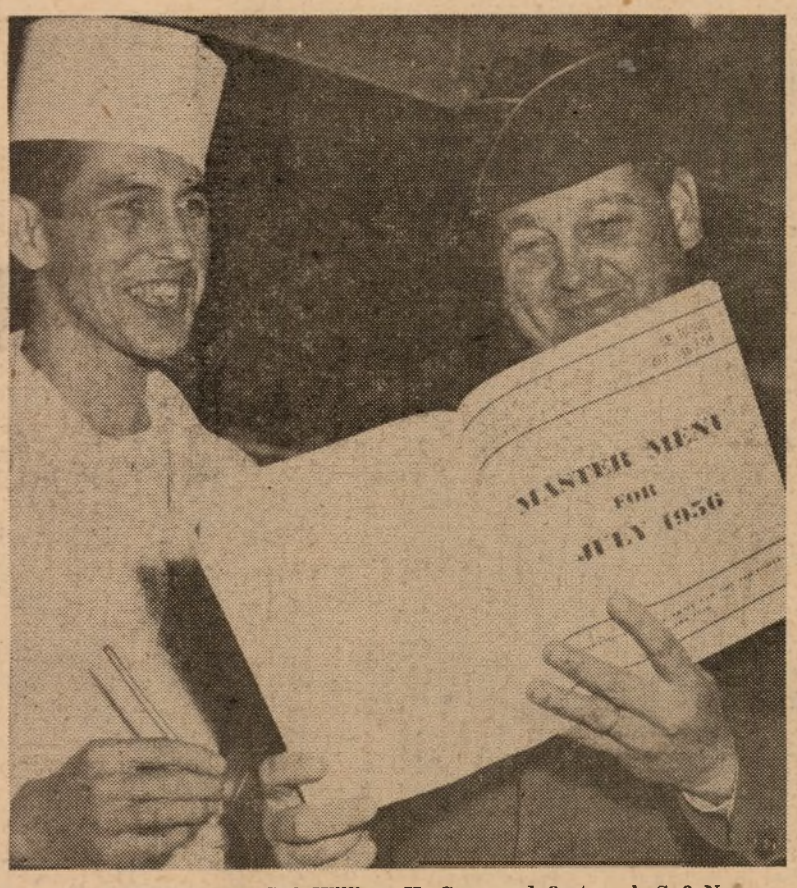
Army Chow Planned 6 Months In Advance

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Writer

Did you know that the meal you are now about to eat in the Presidio Consolidated Mess, or in any of the 29 mess halls in this area was planned for you six months ago, in Washington, D. C.?



And just in case you haven't yet gotten to the mess hall and you are curious to know what the meal is going to be, we can tell you!

Assuming that this is Friday morning about 1100 hours, the steam table in your mess hall is giving off a series of pleasant cooking fragrances which come from tomato soup, fried fish (possibly fillet of sole), with tartar sauce or lemon wedge, French fried potatoes, buttered green beans, pineapple and cabbage salad on lettuce, bread, butter, cherry cobbler, hot coffee, iced tea or milk.

Should you even desire to know what the mess hall will serve for supper on the evening of the 31st of July we can also tell you! (It's Southern fried chicken, corn on the cob, mashed potatoes, lettuce salad with fruit dressing, bread, butter, coconut layer cake and coffee.) And we can supply the complete information on any and all meals between the given dates.

This fund of knowledge comes from an interesting cook book known formally as the Army-Air Force Master Menu for July, 1956. Working bible and master of mess hall stewards and cooks, it is so unyielding that it doesn't permit even a woman cook to change her mind. But it's a faithful ally to the military man or woman cook whose days are often filled with the wailing of customers wanting hot tamales instead of roast beef, or chicken chop suey rather than steak.

The Army's new "Man-Pack Television System" makes its west coast debut at San Francisco's Civic Auditorium this weekend when it will be demonstrated at the American Radio Relay League's national convention.

The television equipment has been in Army hands for about a year. It is still being experimented with and tested.

The first part of the democratic election process, nomination of candidates, is now under way in the United States.

Within the two major parties—and in smaller ones as well—men are competing for the right to represent their party and receive its backing in the next election.

Campaigns for nomination, like election campaigns later on, give alert citizens lots of facts about the men seeking votes. Each candidate makes sure that his good points get publicity, and rivals usually air each other's weaknesses.

Now is an excellent time for servicemen to get a picture of the people who will be running for office in November. Newspapers, magazines, radio and television are reporting their actions and statements on public issues. Read, watch, and remember.

Above all, keep in mind that the best-informed serviceman in the world won't be able to cast his vote this fall if he's not eligible. So find out what the candidates stand for, make sure you meet your state's voting requirements, and you'll be prepared to exercise one of your most precious rights. (AFPS)

Telescopes and Radar

New Army Spy Networks Can Track Missile Flight

Washington, (ANS) — "I shot a missile into the air and it fell to earth I know not where." This sad refrain was once sung by control officers at White Sands Proving Ground, N. M.

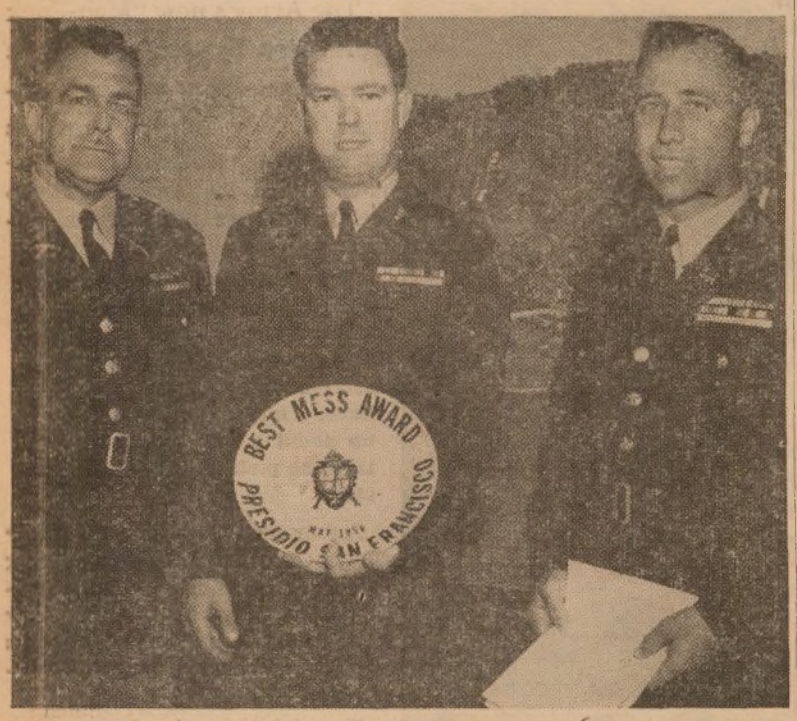
Now the Army has two spy networks which enable control officers to follow the complete flights of guided missiles at the New Mexico testing. site. The network, developed by the Army Ordnance and Signal Corps, consists of a chain of telescopic observation stations and a radar system.

Though some missiles shoot through the atmosphere at thousands of miles per hour, the radar and telescopic eyes enable control officers to keep projectiles in view from launching to impact. These telescopic observation stations are able to track missiles which sometimes zoom across the sky more than 100 miles above the earth's surface.

The telescopic stations are equipped with 16-inch reflecting telescopes containing built-in 35 millimeter motion picture cameras which record the missiles' positions from take off to impact.

As trackers keep the GM within the camera's field of vision, each picture frame records the missile's time, direction and elevation.

A master radar chain station, located near the launching site, flashes detailed information to the first link in the radar chain. With this information at hand, the relay station picks up the missile as it comes into range and makes a report to the master station. This process is repeated from station to station.



If a missile gets off the radar track to an extent considered serious, it is exploded by a change in signals to the missile-borne radio receiver.

Radar automatically trains highly accurate short-range cameras on the missile to record its dive into the target area at the end of the flight. This network can always tell whether it was a hit—or a miss.

"Critical Shortage" Exists For Men In Explosive Disposal Ordnance Field

A critical shortage exists today at Presidio for Explosive Ordnance Disposal personnel. An appeal is being made to personnel in Grades E-1 to E-4—particularly to men carrying a surplus MOS—to volunteer for technical training and transfer to the EOD units of the Ordnance Corps.

Personnel selected will be sent to the Ordnance School, Aberdeen, Maryland, for a period of 12 weeks for training in the location, detection, identification, evaluation, recovery and destruction of unexploded ordnance and assistance in rendering safe operations. Successful completion of the course qualifies personnel for MOS 413.1, Explosive Ordnance Disposal Assistant.

Prerequisites for the course include normal color perception. Applicants must not be allergic to explosives such as TNT, Tetryl, explosive D, or RDX composition. Eighteen months of active duty service must remain after completion of the course. Assignment, actual or anticipated, must be to EOD duty. A standard score of 100 or higher is required in aptitude area GM.

Assignment to EOD units is on a voluntary basis, and applicants must express a desire for assignment to this field. Attendance at the school and assignment to an EOD unit qualifies an applicant for incentive pay of $55.00 per month.

Interested personnel should contact the Commanding Officer, 548th Ordnance Detachment, Presidio of San Francisco; telephone WEst 1-6111, Extension 4447 or 4467.

Oakland To Process Officers For Asia

Washington (AFPS) — Most officers issued orders to Far East duty stations now will be processed through Oakland, Calif., instead of Seattle, Wash., the Army has announced.

The move is expected to reduce the time a Far East bound officer is in a transit status since Oakland is near Travis AFB, the West Coast aerial port of embarkation.

It will also enable the Army to cut travel fund expenditures considerably.

Exempted are officers scheduled for transfer to the Far East from Washington, Montana, Idaho and Oregon, and those traveling with their families or units in Operation Gyroscope moves.

The new policy affects officers whose orders to the Far East are dated after 15 June, 1956.

Catholic Chaplain Plocki Is Here After Tour In Iceland

Chaplain (Captain) Robert J. Plocki is newly assigned as Post Catholic chaplain to the Presidio. He replaces Chaplain (Captain) Ferdinand B. Demsher who is now on leave, prior to reporting to a new assignment in Germany.

Father Plocki came to the Presidio from duty with the 2nd Battalion Combat Team, Iceland Defenses Force, NATO, where he ministered to Army, Navy, Air Force and to government civilian employes in the arctic circle area.

He was the only Roman Catholic chaplain within a 500-mile radius of his military headquarters in the great ice belt. Father Plocki and seven Dutch Missioners were the only priests in Iceland.

An Army chaplain for the past eight years, Father Plocki served previous assignments in Camp Cook, California; as a chaplain for the Prisoner of War Commission on the islands in the Korean Straits. He also served a chaplaincy in Pusan and as Post Chaplain for Fifth Army Headquarters in Chicago, Illinois.

During his tour of duty in Iceland, Father Plocki made a religious pilgrimage to Europe (12 hours by air from the Arctic Circle area), during which he visited Germany, Switzerland, Italy and England.

Pending Enactment

Social Security Bill Would Raise Payment Rates

If the Survivor Benefits bill now pending enactment becomes law, servicemen and women will pay more than $2 billion into Social Security coffers during the next 18 years.

At a rate of two per cent on the top taxable income per year of $4,200, the maximum cost to the individual will be $84 annually for the next three years. But under the proposed law, rates will rise by half a percent every five years through 1975.

Based on an estimated military strength of 2.85 million each year, the Serviceman's contribution will rise from $114 million annually to $228 million a year by 1975. Maximum cost to the individual in 20 years will be $168 annually.

DA Answers EM Complaint On Re-Up Pay

Washington, (ANS) — According to a recent Department of the Army Circular, some enlisted men have claimed that the amount of reenlistment pay they received was less than the bonus promised as an inducement to reenlist.

The reason for this difference in amounts is due to computation based on incomplete information as to whether the individual is to be paid for a first or subsequent reenlistment.

Although the reenlistment bonus is important in influencing EM to reenlist, no promise of a specific amount may be made to an individual until facts have been verified from personnel records and confirmed by a finance officer.

Enlisted personnel, who desire bonus information and are still in the service, should see their personnel and finance officers for specific reenlistment computations.

Specialist System Success!

Army NCO System Year Old; Air Force Eyes Like Program

Command Reports Said "Favorable" To New AF Plan

The Air Force is making headway toward the adoption of a specialist program in its NCO ranks.

Letters outlining the AF plan have been sent to all major commands, inviting comment on the program and officials here report reaction has been "generally favorable" to date.

As outlined in June following a year-long study, the AF program would do away with present temporary noncoms. The enlisted structure would then be broken down into four groups—permanent NCO, acting NCO, permanent specialist and temporary specialist.

Permanent NCO status would be awarded to each pay grade only after an airman had demonstrated necessary qualities of leadership. The AF said this would be done "on a highly selective basis in order to insure quality in the NCO corps."

The permanent specialist category would give permanent status to fully qualified specialists not selected as NCOs. This ranking would be awarded regardless of leadership ability and would be based on demonstrated qualifications as a specialist.

The temporary specialist setup would permit increasing the airman's pay without placing him in the NCO category, as is now done. Inclusion in each of the top three pay grades would be through temporary promotion programs.

AF personnel officials state that the contemplated airman grade structure would permit rapid promotion through higher pay grades without advancement to NCO.

It would permit specially qualified civilians to be enlisted into one of the top three pay grades according to technical ability, and would eliminate the lengthy waiting period they now ordinarily face. (AFPS)

Pay Study

Washington — With the Army's NCO-specialist program one year old and the Air Force considering an NCO-specialist plan of its own, a special Defense Department committee is working on much the same problem.

Chairmanned by Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric, the committee is hopeful it can draft legislation by the next session of Congress that will overhaul the present system of compensating specialists.

Its particular aim is the retention of career personnel, especially technicians, in the Armed Forces, a problem that is now becoming acute. (AFPS)

Army's Specialists Outnumber NCOs Today By 25,000

Slightly over a year ago, the Army made a sweeping reappraisal of its non-commissioned officer system and adopted an NCO-specialist program geared to bolster the prestige of the noncom and, at the same time, recognize the value of the technician.

The Army inaugurated the NCO-specialist program on 1 July, 1955, due to the existence of many noncoms who did not hold leadership positions.

On the other hand, it had not been uncommon to find NCOs, whose forte was their ability as leaders, to be engrossed in such chores as k.p. and fatigue duty.

Presently, specialists outnumber NCOs in the Army. At last count, there were an estimated 220,000 compared to a noncom force of 195,000.

Although the pay scale is the same for both groups, a clear-cut distinction is made. The NCO is the leader, the enlisted commander of the troops.

The specialist is charged with technical and administrative work, not requiring the exercise of leadership. Besides their normal duties, specialists in the lower grades can be called on to perform work not required of the NCO.

Army officials state it is too early to make any complete determinations of the success of the specialist program.

However, the Operations Evaluation unit of the office of the Adjutant General is currently studying the attitudes and opinions of the program reflected by Army personnel. Although the AF plan also distinguishes between the NCO and specialist, it differs in several respects.

Army Designs First Atomic Food Plant

Washington, (ANS) — Department of Defense has announced that the world's first pilot-production-size facility for irradiating food is now being designed and developed by the Army Quartermaster Corps.

Named the Army Applied Ionizing Radiation Center, the facility will have a peak capacity of 1,000 tons of food per month. All aspects of radiation preservation of foods for use by the Armed Forces are being studied by QM.

Upon its completion, the Center is expected to be the first atomic plant in the world devoted to full use of gamma radiation accompanying nuclear reactions.

Advantages of the process include a reduction in refrigeration requirements, reduced food losses, control of certain food-borne diseases, and wider availability of fresh foods under field conditions.

Tests show that by using radiation storage, life of many perishable foods may be extended up to three months and longer without refrigeration. Many foods are not noticeably affected by radiation. In some foods, however, the color, odor, or flavor are adversely affected.

Research indicates that radiation preservation does not detract from the wholesomeness or nutritional value of food items and does not make it radioactive.

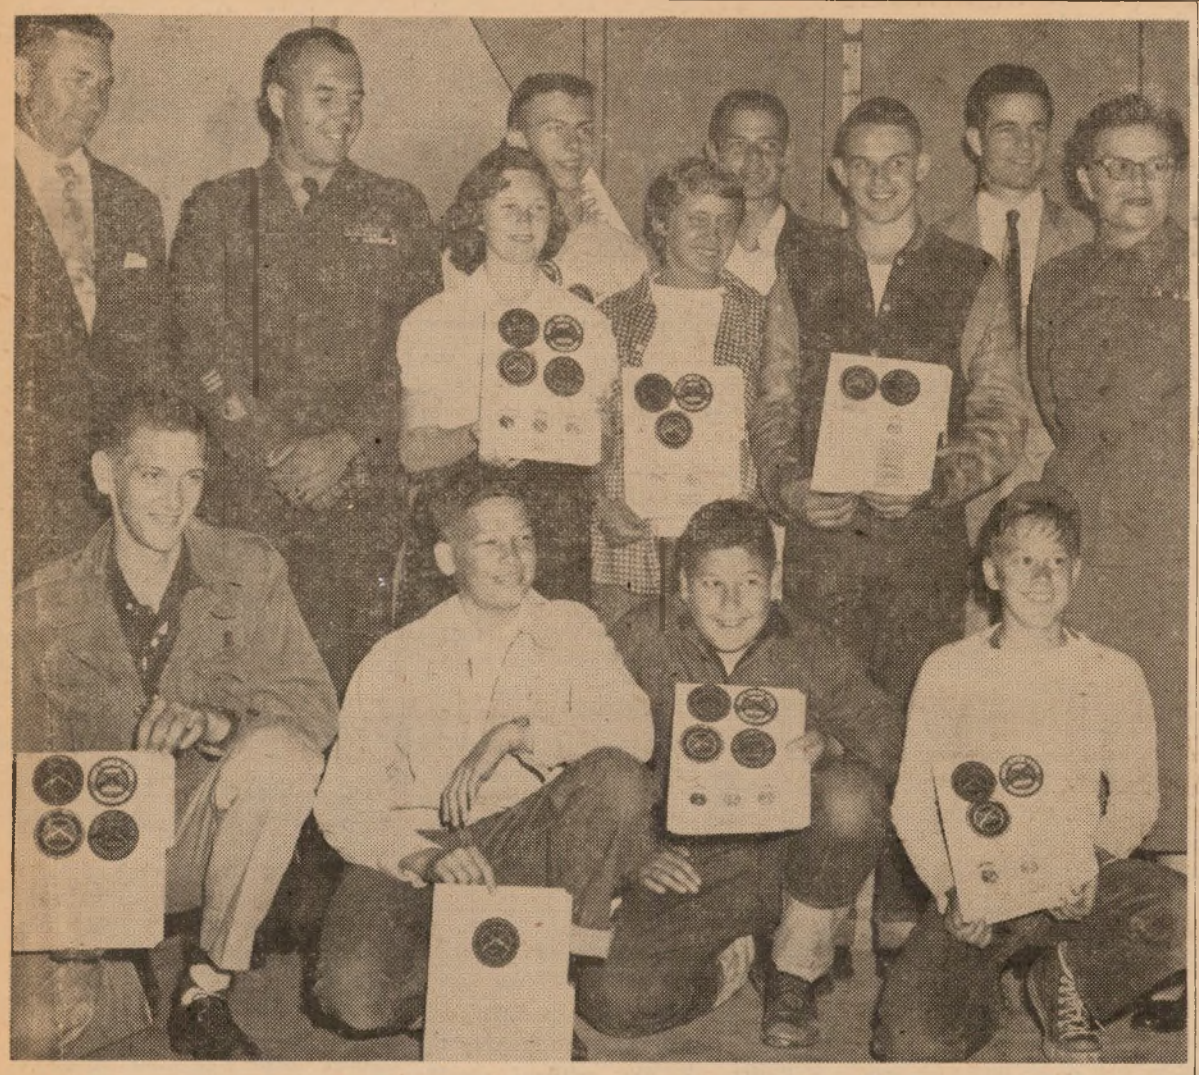
4 Receive Winged "S" Awards For Helicopter Rescue Work

Three officers and one enlisted man of the 521st Engineer Company (Topographic Aviation) have been presented with the Sikorsky Winged "S" awards for performing a life saving mission.



Receiving the winged "S" from the Sikorsky Helicopter Corporation were 1st Lt. Donald S. Smith; 1st Lt. Frank R. Wilson; 1st Lt. Bobby Bogard and Specialist 3rd Class Frederick C. Rhodes.

Lt. Smith received his Winged "S" for his outstanding flying and navigational ability under the most adverse weather conditions in Northern Alaska, where as an H-19 helicopter pilot he located an injured surveyor, picked him up and evacuated him to a base where fixed wing aircraft could land and transport the surveyor to the Ladd Air Force Base hospital for treatment.

Lt. Wilson as pilot and Lt. Bogard as co-pilot and flying an H-19 helicopter were responsible for many rescues during the December floods in Yuba City, California. In one instance, by flying the large helicopter under power lines and low over the flood waters in a gusty wind, the two were able to reach a woman clinging to a roof.

SP3 Frederick Rhodes, crew chief on an H-19 helicopter on December 12, 1955, rescued a woman from a burning automobile after the helicopter crew noted a burning automobile on the highway and landed. Rhodes immediately jumped from the 'copter, performed the rescue and then directed traffic around the helicopter while the patient was being loaded into the helicopter and flown to a hospital.

The total number of military and civilian employees of the Army add up to more than the combined payrolls of any three or four of the nation's largest civilian corporations.

Lesson From Nature

Honeybee Gave Quartermaster Corps Idea For Air Drop Shock Absorbers

Washington — The bee, inspirer of man and his works on more than one occasion, has done it again.

This time it's paper honeycomb shock absorbers, developed by the Army Quartermaster Corps for use in the aerial delivery of supplies.

Repeated testing has shown that the lightweight and inexpensive honeycomb material, when attached to the bottom of a load of airdropped supplies, lessens cost, conserves valued aircraft weight and space, and affords greater accuracy in dropping supplies within the target area.

Resembling nothing so much as the honeycomb, this paper "energy absorber" is usually 12 inches thick and comes in assorted widths and lengths, but can be compressed into a small space when not in use.

The shock of the falling load is absorbed by the crushing action of the honeycomb. To insure that the load falls on its cushioned bottom surface, a small ribbon-type parachute is attached to the upper part of the load.

A cargo of 48 cases of C rations weighs 2,200 pounds. To drop this load by conventional means requires a 64-foot parachute and 345 pounds of drop equipment, all costing $726.

By attaching a 12-inch honeycomb at the bottom of the load and a 24-foot ribbon parachute at the top, the weight is reduced to 143 pounds and the cost to $164.

Because the conventional parachute allows the load to descend at the rate of 20 feet per second, the cargo is susceptible of being carried off target by wind drift. The ribbon parachute, with its separated strips of fabric through which the air passes freely, speeds the drop to 90 feet per second and thus better counters drift. The cargo lands undamaged because the shock is absorbed by the honeycomb material.

The Quartermaster Corps is now experimenting with other materials, such as plastics, which may also have possibilities as energy absorbers.

Besides helping to speed up supply delivery to troops in modern warfare, the new equipment could help in providing quick relief for disaster-stricken areas.

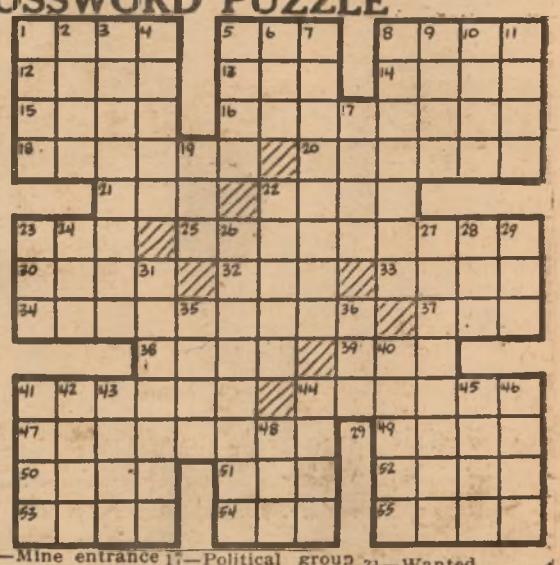
"Storming The Bastille" Dance Slated At Service Club



French Independence Day (Saturday 14 July), is being honored at the Presidio with a "Storming the Bastille" dance at the Service Club on the evening of Tuesday 12 July, normally Post Dance night.

Special feature of the dance will be an intermission event, Le Groupe Folklorique, during which a French Folk Dance Group wearing colorful Gallic costumes will do dances evocative of the French countryside. A native French girl will bring added color to the scene with accordion selections from gay Paree. Other French-flavored numbers will also be presented.

The Folk Dance Group participating in the French Independence Day festivities at the Presidio Service Club are slated to make a similar appearance at Golden Gate Park on Sunday 15 July, as a special mark of honor for France's Bastille Day.

Preceding the Service Club dance, the club is also showing French films on the evening of 11 July. Obtained from Pan American Airways and French World Airlines, the special movies promise an excellent hour of entertainment on the 15th, beginning at 2015 hours.

Angel Island Serves Traditional Defense Role

Gun Site That Once Scared Sea Raiders Today Has NIKE To Defend Against Attack

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

By Lt. Tommy D. Marlatt
D Btry., 9th Mis. Bn.

Three nautical miles inside the Golden Gate, like the dot over the i of the Tiburon Peninsula, lies lovely Angel Island. Compared to the grim, almost treeless, building-encrusted Alcatraz Island, Angel Island is an unspoiled beauty spot in San Francisco Bay.

Yet this lovely "Island of the Angels," named for the gentle heavenly spirits, has seen more death-dealing armament than almost any other such small piece of real estate on the West Coast.

From American Indians to the Greek Goddess of Victory is a big step backwards in history and ancient Greek mythology. But the step forward from the bows and arrows of these Indians to Nike, the famous anti-aircraft guided missile named for the Greek Goddess of Victory, is even more impressive.

In order to prevent undue exertion and bloodshed.

Mexican explorer Don Juan Manuel Ayala first used the island as a base of operations in 1775 and gave it the ethereal name. Anything but angelic were the smugglers, clandestine hide traders and other unsavory characters who used the island up until 1839, however.

In that year Antonio Mario Osio purchased the island from the Mexican government and started raising cattle and vegetables. His tenancy was short-lived, for during the Mexican War, U.S. Naval forces occupied the island and ate up Osio's investment. The U.S. Supreme Court turned down Osio's claim to the island in 1859 and it became federal property. Now, nearly 100 years later, this island again figures prominently in warfare as a strategic guided missile base protecting the San Francisco area from hostile aircraft.

An interesting sidelight in the story of Angel Island is its use during the 1850s as a favorite spot for the frequent duels of the times. Bustling, brawling San Francisco of that period turned out in droves to witness these well-publicized events. The duel between United States Commissioner George P. Johnston and State Senator William I. Ferguson was the biggest crowd-puller of the times. Ferguson later died from coming out second best in the exchange of pistol shots.

Forerunner of the present U.S. Army unit on Angel Island was the Army Engineer unit which began construction of coastal defense positions in 1863. They built barracks, quarters and gun emplacements at strategic locations on the island. Beautiful Angel Island soon bristled with ten 32-pounders; two 10-inch Rodman guns; one 10-inch howitzer; and one 8-inch Rodman gun. Five more 32-pounders were mounted on the wharf of the camp site and during 1865 six 32-pounders and one 10-inch Rodman gun were installed at Point Blunt.

Angel Island and its post, called Camp Reynolds in honor of Major General John Fulton Reynolds, a former officer of the 3d Artillery who was killed at Gettysburg, was the station for several artillery and infantry units during the declining years of the century. Then about 1900, several new coast defense batteries were installed, with the latest 5 and 8-inch rifles on disappearing mounts. At this time, too, the camp was renamed Fort McDowell in honor of the late commander of the Department of the Pacific and former Army of the Potomac commander at the first battle of Bull Run.

Fort McDowell was a bustling place during World War I and again during World War II. During its nearly 100 years of military watchfulness, it had served as a coastal defense bastion; an infantry base camp; a training center; a prisoner of war camp; a reception and separation center; a quarantine station; and a replacement depot. Then on 22 August 1946, it appeared that the post had completed its final tour when its last commanding officer, Captain Tachur Moser, said to his assembled men:

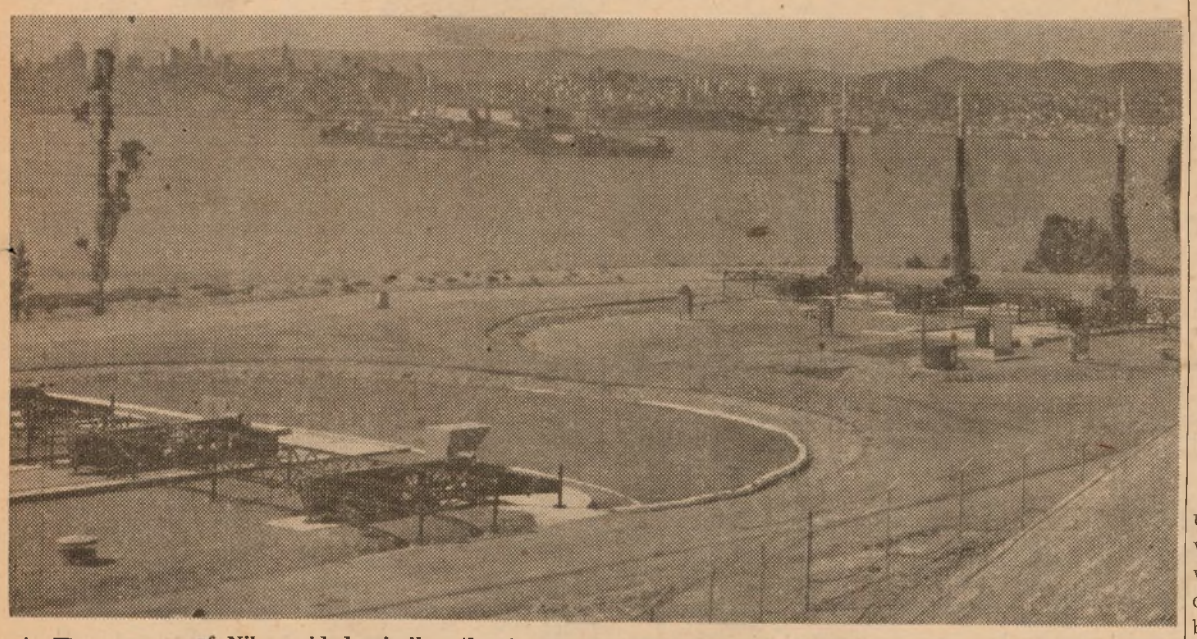
"Our duty completed, I have turned the property over to the District Engineer. With the sounding of retreat and the lowering of our colors, this post will end its history as an active post of the United States Army."

Captain Moser was a good soldier but a poor prophet! In September 1954 work was begun on the construction of an ultra-modern Nike antiaircraft guided missile site.

The Nike launching platforms were built on the south side of the island near main post of Fort McDowell. A steep, winding road was bulldozed to the top of the island's highest point, 185-foot Mount Ida, and the radar control area constructed. Here on the commanding peak are the "eyes" of the Nike site; a long-range radar which can "see" a hostile aircraft many miles before it reaches the San Francisco area; a radar which tracks the target when the aircraft comes almost within Nike range; and a radar to track the deadly Nike in flight until she intercepts and destroys the enemy aircraft.

Present wide-awake tenant of historic Angel Island is Battery D, 9th Antiaircraft Missile Battalion, with Captain Allen S. Bowen doubling as Battery and Island Commander. Other tenants on the island include two California State Park Rangers, who operate the 35-acre park maintained by the state at Hospital Cove; three Coast Guardsmen who operate the fog lights and signals; and a small U.S. Navy detachment which operates a degaussing station.

Rehabilitation of the island for use of the Nike antiaircraft troops was not too difficult. The buildings were in good repair and one wing of the post hospital now serves as battery headquarters and living quarters. Big, old-fashioned sets of quarters were cleaned up, utilities repaired, and now are home to 16 families of officers and enlisted men. The battery became operational in the antiaircraft defenses of San Francisco in May of 1955 and remains on the alert 24-hours per day, seven-days a week to help guard this vital area against any hostile attack from the air. Although the site is isolated and far from the city, no Nike missile will be fired from Angel Island unless it is to intercept an enemy airplane. For training, men of the unit go to Red Canyon Firing Range in New Mexico and fire Nike missiles at radio-controlled airplane targets.



For the families of the officers and men, and for the men themselves, living on an island presents its problems. It has compensations, too. The families receive weekly delivery service from the Quartermaster Commissary at the Presidio of San Francisco. The Transportation Corps furnishes a small boat for passenger trips between 0600 and midnight. The quiet and the view are unexcelled and the television reception is wonderful.

Recreational facilities on the island are generally good. There are tennis courts, a hobby craft shop, baseball field and plenty of room for hiking and fishing. The post chapel furnishes religious services regularly, and plenty of reading material is on hand. A well-stocked post exchange provides the daily necessities and comfort items. The old Fort McDowell Officers Club was turned over to the enlisted men and with considerable ingenuity and elbow grease they turned it into a first class service club. The men have formed their own small musical combo for weekly dances.

From the primitive weapons of the early Indians to the awesome electronic marvel of Nike antiaircraft guided missiles, the Island of the Angels has made military history. And although weapons will continue to change, as they have on Angel Island for more than 100 years, this strategic spot seems destined to continue for many years its vital role in the defenses of the City by the Golden Gate.

Quarters shown above are typical of those housing 16 families of officers and enlisted men stationed on Angel Island.

A Battery of Nike guided missiles, the Army's most deadly ground to air defense weapons, silhouette the San Francisco skyline that they stand ready to protect.

For today a bird's-eye view of Angel Island may show several of the slim, deadly missiles pointed to the skies ready for instant trips to the stratosphere and destruction of hostile enemy airplanes.

In the old coastal defense days when attack from the sea was feared above all else, Angel Island served as a strategic fortress. Any ship that broke through the formidable screen of big guns which protected the Golden Gate, would soon bump into relentless fire from the tiny island. In addition, the rapid firing guns of the island could cover the approaches to Richardson Bay and San Pablo Bay with equal ease.

Looking over the old gun emplacements today, the roar of the old 32-pounders; the brisk snap of the five and eight-inch rifles; and the dull "whooom" of the big 10-inch howitzers seem almost audible.

But warfare changes rapidly and there have been many evolutions in the stormy history of Angel Island. There is no doubt that its future will be equally active and interesting.

The first humans to inhabit Angel Island were Indians of the Coast Miwok tribe and their weapons were bows and arrows, primitive hatchets, clubs and stones. The brief wars of that period were of short duration and it appears were often arranged well in advance, in

Army Stars Dominate Olympic Trials

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Four Army track stars won places on the plane for Australia last weekend as the thrilling tryouts for the XVIth Olympiad closed in Los Angeles before some 37,000 speed fans.

The four soldiers making the regular team are Tom Courtney, 800 meters; Lou Jones, 400 meters; John Bennett, broad jump; and Ira Murchison, 100 meters.

Three more cinder men from the senior service were selected as alternates by reason of their finishing fourth in the trials. They are Ken Reiser, 3,000 meters steeplechase; Willie Hollie, hop-step-jump; and Martel Engel, hammer throw.

Big Lou Jones, a 24-year-old private from Manhattan College created the third new world's record of the meet when he sped around two turns for 400 meters in :45.2, bettering his own mark of :45.4 set in Mexico City at last year's Pan American games. Jones edged Jim Lea, former USC star now in the Air Force, by four yards.

Jones' incredible clocking in the 400 sprint coupled with a seven-foot leap in the high jump by Compton College's Charlie Dumas and Ohio State's Glen Davis turning in a :49.5 for the 400-meter hurdles, were the world records that were shattered.

The big upset of the day was turned in by the former Fordham flash, Tom Courtney, now hailing from Fort Dix, who closed with a tremendous kick to win the 800 meters over the favorite, Arnie Sowell of the University of Pittsburgh. Courtney's 1:46.4 time was a new American record for the distance.

Courtney's victory over Sowell in the 800 was a stunner, though not a surprise. The big Army private's finish was perfectly timed and Sowell's big start may have been delayed slightly because he was forced to cut across from lane eight to the inside. Sowell's time was 1:46.9.

The lone Presidio entry, Lowell Zellers, finished eleventh in the 1500-meter run which was won by Jerome Walters of the Los Angeles Striders with a clocking of 3:47.6.

Another first was racked up by the Army's John Bennett with a broad jump leap of 25 feet 8 inches.

Ira Murchison, Army, made the team with a great closing surge in the 100-meter to capture second place in the excellent time of 10.4.

The American Olympic team will remain in Southern California for the most part with several meets scheduled during the summer and three meets for Los Angeles prior to departure for Australia, 5-6 November.

The games will be held during the last part of November and the first half of December due to the reversed seasons in the land down under.

Army Man Was Early Pentathlon Victor

Washington, (ANS) — An Army lieutenant was the first American ever to compete in the Olympic's modern pentathlon.

The young officer entered this gruelling event in the 1912 Games without any special training or preparation. He was not a good swimmer and the 300-meter swim was almost too much for him.

In the shooting event some of his friends claimed he was charged with a miss because his bullet passed through a hole made by an earlier shot and left no trace on the target.

Nevertheless, this gamester defeated the ultimate winner of the pentathlon in three of the five events and placed third in total points scored.

The world heard much more of this young officer as a victor on more serious fields of battle some 30 years later.

His name—General George S. Patton, Jr.

Returning to the United States, Colonel Barnes was assigned to the Office of the Adjutant General in Washington until 1946 when he returned to Texas as a recruiting officer. In 1950 he went to Japan as recruiting and enlistment officer for the Eighth Army. A short time later, Colonel Barnes went to Korea with Eighth Army's advance headquarters detachment. In March, 1951, he was assigned to General Headquarters in Japan.

Colonel Barnes returned to the United States and to duty as Assistant Adjutant General Sixth Army in March 1952.

"Two, One, Fire..."

Army Training Crews Fire Bullet-Like Corporal Rocket From White Sands PG

Washington, (ANS) — Just five seconds remain. The firing crew gets set as the hot loop phone chants the count down, "Five, Four, Three, Two, One, Fire."

At the command "Fire," the firing panel operator pushes the red button and the Army's Corporal guided missile is on its way into the hot desert air above White Sands Proving Ground. The gigantic missile rises ponderously, hesitates and then roars off into space.

Thus, another Corporal training round streaks at thousands of miles an hour toward a pair of coordinates somewhere in the New Mexico desert. This marks the end of a service practice by one of the Corporal battalions training at Fort Bliss, Texas.

The Corporal is a surface-to-surface guided missile. It is capable of engaging tactical targets far beyond the ranges of any of our artillery weapons. This missile, which can deliver an atomic or conventional type warhead, gives the Army field commander far greater firepower on the battlefield.

Like a rifle bullet, the Corporal follows a ballistic trajectory in flight to the target. Weather and visibility place no restriction on the use of this massive five and one-half ton missile. Its motive power is supplied by a rocket motor developing a thrust nearly equal to twice the weight of the missile itself.

The Corporal was developed primarily to give the Army long range atomic artillery support. And White Sands Proving Ground continually reverberates with the sound of these training missiles as they seek their targets.

Army Times article said, "the Army will meet the 1960 goal. For active duty personnel, therefore, there will not have to be a draft."

All the services argue, however, that the draft itself is responsible for the entry of men into the armed forces for a first tour of duty. Although the Reserve Forces Act will increase considerably the number of men in the Reserve, the Services also argue, it will not fill the Reserve to 1960 requirements.

The present Selective Service Act expires 30 June, 1959. It would be extended, according to the Army Times, and kept on the books on a standby basis.

Army Chow

Actually, the mess steward may improve the menu by adding to it, or by substituting seasonal fresh fruit and vegetables for the prescribed canned or frozen types listed in the menu — but never, never — by taking away from it.

As planned, the Master Menu provides a nutritionally adequate diet for temperate climates and the performance of sedentary to moderate activity in line of military duty.

Depending on the particular activity and the ages of the troops, or on climatic conditions prevailing at a given installation, the local medical authority may be called on to recommend an increase or decrease in the nutritive level of the menu.

Space does not permit further discourse on the Army's Master Menu, other than to say that the staples such as meat, milk, ice cream, bread and pastry flour, fruit and vegetables, are bought through bids on the local markets and inspected by the Post Veterinary Service before purchase is made.

A monthly board of officers and enlisted mess stewards meet locally to discuss food supply covering a three-month period in advance of the mess hall needs.

Rations are drawn through Ration Breakdown Section of the Post Quartermaster, as presented by the mess stewards for the mess halls in the Presidio proper, Forts Baker, Cronkhite, Scott and Barry and the outlying AAA units in the vicinity.

Ground Broken For Reserve Armory

Public groundbreaking ceremonies were held Sunday on the site of a new $375,000 Army Reserve armory to be constructed at Middlefield road and Bayshore in Mountain View.

To the accompaniment of the Sixth Army Bagpipe Band, Colonel Frank R. Maerdian, chief of the California Military District, shoveled aside the first mound of earth, beginning the construction program scheduled for completion 22 February, 1957.

The two-story L-shaped structure will serve as training quarters for 11 Army Reserve units in San Mateo and north Santa Clara counties. When completed, the building will accommodate 400 trainees, providing them with a drill floor, indoor rifle range, supply and classrooms.

The building is "expandable" to provide additional space for more troops at a future time. The first reservists are expected to occupy the new armory early next spring.

Reserve Units At Summer Training In Presidio Area

Military facilities at Sixth Army Headquarters and Post Sections on the Presidio are presently being used by units of the United States Army Reserve Officers and Enlisted Training Program which began at the Presidio late last month.

First to break the tape leading to the Presidio for the 4-month training interval covering two weeks per unit were the 447th Transportation Company (Float Craft), the 663rd Engineer Company (Topographical), and the 353rd Loudspeaker & Leaflet Company. They took training in that order at the Presidio Harbor Craft Detachment, the 30th Engineer Group, Fort Scott, and C & A at the Presidio.

On hand for summer training through next week are the 418th and the 458th Strategic Intelligence Research Analysis units.

Incoming units covering the period between now and mid-September include officers and enlisted men of the 449th Transportation Company, the 6227th USAR School (C & G S Branch) and the MP Branch attached to the 6242nd USAR School; the 458th Strategic Intelligence Detachment, 971st Engineer Company (Topo.), 6840th USAR, Training Unit, 6232 USAR School (JAG Branch), 335th MRU (Mobile Ty Z), 338th MRU (Mobile), 9059th Finance Accounting, 6221st USAR School (JAG Branch), 6237th USAR School (Finance Branch and Ordnance Branch). The last named units will conduct their own school at Harmon Armory and Stillwell Hall in California Military District on the Presidio.

Qualified EM's Urged To Seek Warrant Slots

Washington (AFPS) — The Army has urged qualified enlisted men with technical skills to apply for appointments as reserve warrant officers.

EM selected as warrants will be called to active duty immediately and may serve for an indefinite period, the Army said.

At the same time, reserve warrants on active duty were encouraged to apply for conversion to regulars in critical specialties.

Applications for the switchover should be made to the appropriate career branch.

NCOs Elect New Board Of Governors

DPC Lauds Progress As Group Meets

By M/Sgt. Merrill S. Harrison

Five members of the board of governors were elected, specialists were given the voting franchise and a hotly-argued constitutional amendment providing for life membership was defeated at the general membership meeting of the Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess, Wednesday afternoon, 11 June.

The newly elected members of the board include Master Sergeant Michael L. Bray, Headquarters Company, 6002, who by virtue of his seniority will serve as president of the board of governors; Sergeant First Class Leonard F. Mountain, Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey); Sergeant First Class Georgia F. Kelly, Presidio Wac Detachment, and Master Sergeant Andrew W. Horn, Battery A, 9th Antiaircraft Artillery Battalion. Master Sergeant James C. Coleman, Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey), was re-elected to a second term on the board.

The four new members of the board replace Master Sergeant George Van Kirk, Company A, 6002, retiring president of the board; Sergeant First Class Virginia Chaffee, Presidio Wac Detachment; Master Sergeant Steve Shish, Headquarters Battery, 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group, and Sergeant First Class

Impact Of New Order Will Be Vast

Special to the Star Presidian

The long-standing marriage of Troop Information and Education was dissolved by Pentagon judges in a decision handed down on Tuesday, 10 July.

The surprise divorce, which will reflect no major changes in the field at present, puts Education in the custody of the Director of Personnel Operations in the office of Lieutenant General Walter L. Weible, chief of personnel at Department of the Army.

Major General G. S. Meloy, formerly designated as chief of Information and Education, retains responsibility for Troop and Public Information as before.

Director of Personnel Operations is Major General Edward H. McDaniel.

Department of the Army emphasized that until new regulations are issued Army wide there will be no major changes at operational levels.

House Passes New Augmentation Bill; Now Up To Senate

The House has passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate the Defense Department's proposed augmentation legislation, which would boost the ceiling on regular officers in both the Army and Air Force to nearly 50 per cent of the total strength.

Hearings on the measure are expected to begin shortly before the Senate Armed Services Committee, headed by Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.).

Under the bill, the Army limit on regulars would be upped from 30,600 to 49,500 while the AF quota would be hiked from 27,500 to 69,425.

President Eisenhower and top Defense Department chiefs have urged enactment of this legislation as a means of giving reservists incentive to stay on active duty by creating "career stability."

Moving Ahead !

8 Local Officers Win Promotions On New Lists

Eight officer promotions for the first month of the new Army fiscal year were announced this week.

Sixth Army quartermaster section and inspector general section each had a staff officer promoted to full colonel. They are respectively Colonel Raymond R. Guehring and Colonel Roy W. Marcy.

Company commander for Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, was promoted from Major. He is Lt. Colonel Verne E. Marsden.

Black Shoes Slated For Sept. Wear

Black low quarter shoes become an official part of the Army uniform on 1 September 1956. All male personnel at the Presidio will be expected to comply with the order on that date.

Chief of Staff Maxwell D. Taylor has approved recommendations of the Army Uniform Board making the black footwear mandatory with all uniforms with which low quarter shoes are authorized.

Shoes presently being worn by the troops may be dyed to meet the regulations, but socks will have to be purchased.

The Presidio's quartermaster requisition for black shoes and socks will not be submitted until 15 August and it will take from 30 to 45 days to meet the order. The post exchange, however, reports that it is making necessary arrangements to meet the large demand for black shoes, socks, dye, polish and shoe laces.

The order also involves National Guard and Army Reserve personnel who participate in active duty training.

The change in foot gear coincides with approval of the new Army green uniform for optional off-base duty wear for officers and enlisted men beginning 1 September this year.

Black combat boots are also being considered, officials said.

The Whole Person

An evaluation of the whole person and not his parts should be the criteria by which young men are judged "fit" for service, commented Major General Louis B. Hershey last week.

Speaking to the President's Conference on Fitness for American Youth, the head of the Selective Service explained that too many people are being rejected from the armed services because of flat feet, poor eyesight or some other specific infirmity. The "fitness" category should be revised to include any who could do a good job for their country, he said.

Washington — Negotiations are being completed to lease 250 off-base family housing units for personnel stationed at nine antiaircraft sites scattered across the U.S., the Army has announced.

The new units are the last of 1,000 authorized by the previous session of Congress. They will be located in New York City, Bridgeport, Conn., Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Legislation authorizing an additional 2,000 leased units is now pending before Congress.

R & D Sees Anti-Missile Missile

Washington—Top Army research chiefs have predicted development in the forseeable future of an anti-missile missile that could blast enemy long range ballistic missiles from the skies. The disclosure was made in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Air Power recently made available to the public.

Members of the staff of Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, Army Research and Development chief, said the Nike guided missile program can be looked upon as a series of steps leading to the development of the anti-missile missile.

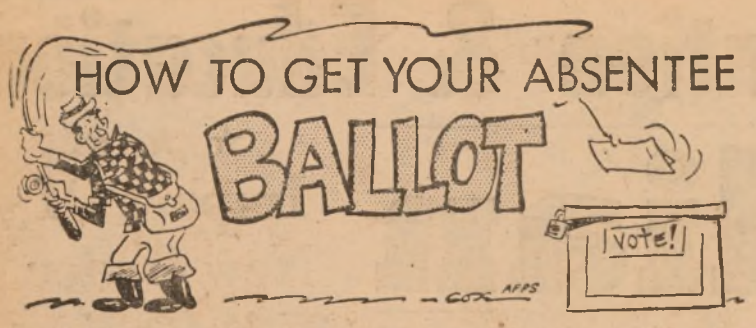
The Army believes it is possible to provide an early anti-ICBM (intercontinental ballistic missile) capability, the legislators were told.

General Gavin said the Army is convinced missiles will have the capability to inflict "very heavy losses against aircraft in the very near future . . . exceptionally heavy losses in the 1960s."

He said "a manned interceptor cannot compete with the Nike B," the latest development in the Nike guided missile family, in shooting down enemy aircraft.



Testifying along with General Gavin was Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, commander of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., where the Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile is being developed.

General Medaris said "with no great difficulty other than the time required in fabricating the pieces, a missile can be built, or an object can be fired well over 3,000 miles.

"We will do that shortly ourselves and by no great stretch 5,000 miles could be achieved," he said.

The research chiefs told the subcommittee 1955 was the turning point in the Army's ballistic missile program, and now the main effort will be production instead of development. (AFPS)

Federal Post Card Application

The Federal Post Card Application is provided by the government so that servicemen and others may apply for absentee ballots.

The card is self-explanatory, and requires no postage. Servicemen may obtain them from their voting officers.

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education and the States have joined forces to help persons who, by virtue of their duty or service with the departments or agencies of the United States Government, will be absent from their legal voting places this presidential election year.

To guide you as to your state's particular absentee voting laws, AFPS has prepared a three-part voting series. This article is the first in a series of articles dealing with how you become registered in order to vote by absentee ballot.

MAINE

All unregistered residents, except members of the armed forces and certain civilians, must register in person at times and places established by local boards of registration.

Registration is permanent unless a person has changed his name or his residence.

Members of the armed forces, civilian employees serving outside the territorial limits of the U.S. and their spouses may vote without making a formal application for registration by completing the Federal Post Card application for an absentee ballot and mailing it to the clerk of your home town.

MISSOURI

All persons, except members of the armed forces, must register in person if residing in a city or town where registration is required.

Registration is required in cities having a population of 10,000 or more, in counties of more than 450,000 and in counties where there is a city of at least 400,000 population.

All members of the armed forces may vote by absentee process without being registered.

NEBRASKA

Registration is permanent in Douglas and Lancaster counties. In cities of over 7,000 population, re-registration is required this year.

Unregistered members of the armed forces, civilian employees serving outside the territorial limits of the U.S. and their spouses may make application for registration when an absentee ballot is requested.

Enter the statement "please mail registration forms" in the margin of the Federal Post Card application and mail to the county clerk of residence or, if a resident of Douglas or Lancaster county to the election commissioner.

These requests may be made at any time, but it is recommended that they be made at least 90 days before election day.

NEW YORK

A member of the armed forces and accompanying spouse, parent or child, if a qualified voter and a resident of the election district, becomes registered automatically when one of the following has been properly filled out and returned to the Division for Servicemen's Voting, Office of the Secretary of State, Albany 1, N. Y.:

1. Federal Post Card application; 2. New York Division for Servicemen's Voting Form 1; 3. A letter containing your New York and present military address, signed by you and all dependents who are also requesting ballots.

Except for those named above and residents of Nassau and Broome counties, registration in person is required of all other qualified voters. Such registration is accomplished at the office of the board of elections, home of residence any time before September 20.

PUERTO RICO and the VIRGIN ISLANDS have no provisions for absentee voting.

For further information, consult your voting officer.—(AFPS)

All questions must be answered completely and legibly. It is preferable—and in most cases called for by state laws—to have the completed card certified by a commissioned officer.

Application cards must be mailed on the time schedule of the state to which they are addressed. If state laws say that the card should be mailed to an official other than the Secretary of State, that official's title should be substituted for the printed address on the card.

AFPS will provide state-by-state information on absentee voting in a continuing series. Oregon, one of the states requiring early action to vote by mail, begins this group of summaries.

OREGON

Servicemen, civilian employees of the government outside the limits of the U.S., members of religious groups or welfare agencies officially attached to and serving with the Armed Forces and their dependents accompanying them may vote by absentee ballot.

A Federal Post Card Application should be sent to the County, City or Town Clerk, place of residence, or the Secretary of State not before September 7, or later than October 17.

Others eligible to vote may obtain absentee ballots by writing to the Clerk, place of residence, within the above time limit.

Ballots will not be sent to the voter before Oct. 17. The marked ballot must be back in the hands of election officials five days before election day.

You is had it?

O.K., you service grammarians, does this stump you as much as it did the delegates to the National Conference of Teacher Education and Professional Standards here?

All you have to do is punctuate the following to make sense:

That that is is that that is not is not but that that is not is not that that is nor is that that is that that is not.

Army Reserve Training Plan Still Expands

Over 10,000 enlisted men per month will be joining reserve units by June, 1957, said Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker at a recent meeting of the Reserve Officers Association in New Orleans.

The present rate of 400 to 600 men per month is expected to reach 5,500 by the end of 1956.

Under the expanding program provided by the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, about 12,000 men between the ages of 17 and 18½ began six months' training schedules 24 June at five Army installations.

The program, which gives draft-deferred status to participants, has attracted 25,701 young men since its inception in August 1955. The six months training is given at Ft. Ord. Ft. Jackson, Ft. Chaffee, Ft. Knox, Ft. Leonard Wood and Ft. Bliss.

A recent poll at Ft. Bliss showed that better than 60 per cent of the six-month soldiers found adjustment to Army life easy. Some 31 per cent wanted tougher training.

When the six-month trainees complete the half-year program, they will enter reserve units and report to local Reserve Training centers. Secretary Brucker said 157 such training centers are already completed or in construction and that the Army plans to have 1,765 such training centers by 1960.

A graduate of the University of Maryland, Captain Wittlinger served in Iceland as resident Army Engineer during his last foreign service tour. He is a veteran of 16 years Federal service and during World War II he was assigned to the 398th Engineer Regiment in England, France and Luxembourg. He attended the Engineer Officers Advanced Course at Fort Belvoir, Virginia.

During the Korean action, Captain Wittlinger served in the Second Engineer Brigade at Hung Nam and Inchon during the evacuation and invasion. He is married and the father of two daughters.

Major EVELYN A. ROTHROCK is a woman officer of 14 years' Federal Service. She was recently assigned to the Sixth Army as assistant chief of USAR Branch Reserve Component Division, replacing Major Kathryn Royster who has been reassigned to the Aberdeen Ordnance School in Maryland.

New Battalion Chief Assigned AAA In Berkeley

It's a long way from Thailand to Berkeley's Grizzly Peak.

It is also quite a transition from assignment as a member of a Joint Military Advisory Group to the command of a key antiaircraft battalion.

This week a "good soldier," Lt. Col. Charles A. Jenkins, was proving this adage out as he assumed command of the 752nd AAA Gun Battalion in Berkeley, California.

A civil engineering graduate of the University of Missouri, he received his commission as a reserve second lieutenant in 1938 and was integrated in the Regular Army in 1946. Colonel Jenkins served in combat during World War II as S-3 of the 78th Division Artillery in Europe.

Previously, Colonel Jenkins has held assignments including that of G-3 of the 31st AAA Brigade in Germany, Executive Officer of the 60th Infantry Regiment in Germany and Chief of Artillery Section in the Tactics Department of the Staff and Faculty at Fort Bliss, Texas.

The Jenkins family is now making their home in Orinda.

Hot Issues Debated As NCOs Meet

Francis P. Miller of the 21st Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey).

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Presidio deputy post commander who spoke briefly at the opening of the three-hour meeting, announced that plans for the repair and rehabilitation of the swimming pool in the basement of the Mess in Building 69 are well under way and the pool may be in use in the not too far distant future. He pointed out that although the pool will be in and part of the NCO Mess, it will be necessary for the Mess management to set aside certain hours during which non-members may use the pool, since it will be the only swimming facility on the Presidio directly under Post control.

The Deputy Post Commander also expressed his satisfaction with the growth of the Mess, crediting it to the interest in and support of the Mess by the members and the staunch backing of "two lieutenant generals," referring to Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, and his predecessor, now General Willard G. Wyman, Commanding General, Continental Army Command.

Membership in the Presidio NCO Open Mess, including the annexes at Fort Scott and Fort Cronkhite is now 1,039, according to Master Sergeant Harry Kellman, Mess secretary-treasurer. Six months ago, according to Sergeant Kellman, membership totalled 324.

Several amendments to the Mess constitution, offered by Master Sergeant Melvin A. Korchenko, 21st Engineer Company, were adopted, including the amendment providing for specialists to vote, hold office and participate in the management of the Mess, and other relatively minor ones providing for change in the name of the Mess and other technicalities.

But Sergeant Korchenko's proposal for adoption of an amendment providing for life memberships in the Mess was soundly defeated after a lengthy and at times hot discussion. It was argued that adoption of Sergeant Korchenko's proposal of a total cost of $10 for such memberships, including the present $3 initiation fee, would result in eventual financial and management difficulties for the Mess.

Yesterday Sergeant Kellman announced that several projects are in various stages of planning for the Fort Scott and Fort Cronkhite annexes, as well as in the main building.

Plans for the Fort Scott annex call for the installation of a new lounge to overlook the Bay, while the Cronkhite project, soon to be completed, includes a rehabilitated kitchen and the installation of open and field messes. The Presidio building's improvements will be primarily in the ballroom, which will be renovated and redecorated.

Silver Eagles are pinned on newly promoted Colonel Raymond R. Guehring, Sixth Army Quartermaster section, by Colonel Arthur L. Bivens, Sixth Army Quartermaster.

Food Expert!

QM Colonel Gets Eagles; Has Unique Service History

A Sixth Army food expert, whose accomplishments include helping change the size of the C-Ration box and giving square meals to Korean ROC's, learned this week of his promotion to full colonel.

Colonel Guehring, who was born in San Francisco in 1910, attended the University of San Francisco and the University of California, receiving a degree in chemistry. He worked as a civilian chemist in San Francisco for Langendorf Bakery and later Bowerman's Pharmacy.

He received a direct reserve commission as first lieutenant in 1936 because of his background in food chemistry. In 1940 he came on active duty here at the Presidio, serving as executive officer to the commandant and commander of troops for the old Bakers and Cooks school housed in what is now post headquarters.

After World War II service in the central Pacific, Colonel Guehring was transferred to Governors Island, New York. In 1949 the Army sent him for two years to the University of California where he obtained a masters degree in bio-chemistry.

It was during his next tour at the Armed Forces Food & Container institute in Chicago that Colonel Guehring worked on various aspects of the C ration. The size was changed to accommodate shipping and packing considerations. Other research proved that the plastic spoon should be retained and that salt should be furnished in the ration.

Next called to Korea, Colonel Guehring did research on the basic diet of the Korean soldier. Later he went to Japan to study the Japanese soldier's diet. For three months he was a member of a team in Formosa also studying soldier diets.

Several Key Jobs Now Open At Presidio

Civilian positions as editorial clerk (general) and supervisory general supply officer are now open at the Presidio, L. F. Scanlon, chief, Civilian Personnel section, announced this week.

For the editorial clerk position, which pays $3,670, the applicant must have a total of three years' experience within the field of news, advertising or public relations work.

The clerk will perform research writing with responsibility for conducting extensive research on organizations, publications and individuals; analyzing and evaluating information resulting from research, and writing required reports, summaries, etc.

Male applicants only are acceptable for the supply officer position which pays $5,440. He must have had five years' total experience in two or more of the following supply fields: requirements and distribution, procurement and purchasing, storekeeping and storage, property and stock control, surplus property disposal, and supply cataloging. Applicant must have had at least one year in a supervisory or administrative position.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

Newly Appointed Sixth Army Adjutant General, Colonel Lawton Butler (right), confers with Colonel Frank H. Stone, executive officer of the Sixth Army's Adjutant General section, also recently appointed.

Head Key Section

Sixth Army AG Section Has New Pair Top Officers

Assignment of a new Sixth Army Adjutant General and a new Executive Officer for the Sixth Army Adjutant General section were both announced last week.

The new AG is Colonel Lawton Butler, who comes to the Presidio from Washington, D. C., where he has served with the office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Personnel since January, 1953.

Colonel Frank H. Stone, new AG executive officer, has also been most recently on duty in Washington, D. C. He served in the office of the Adjutant General as assistant chief of the Personnel division.

Colonel Butler, who was born in Massachusetts, spent his youth in Nevada and California before attending the United States Military Academy from which he graduated in 1927. His first military assignment was here at the Presidio where he served with the 30th Infantry regiment.

Throughout the D-Day invasion of Normandy and five subsequent campaigns in Europe, he served under General J. Lawton Collins as AG of the 7th Corps. With deactivation of the Corps and reactivation of the Sixth Army at the Presidio in 1946, Colonel Butler became the AG of this headquarters, remaining until 1949. He then served in the Caribbean area and later attended the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in Washington, D. C., and after graduation was assigned to the office of the Secretary of Defense.

Colonel Stone received his commission upon completing ROTC training and graduating from the University of Wisconsin with a degree of civil engineering. He first served with the Civilian Conservation corps in Wisconsin and Illinois. In 1940 he joined the 30th Infantry regiment here at the Presidio. The following year he was named Assistant Headquarters Commandant of the combined Western Defense Command and Fourth Army headquarters at the Presidio.

From the Presidio Colonel Stone went to Camp Wheeler, Ga., and then to the Caribbean. In 1944 he was named AG, 102d Infantry Division, and served with that unit in the Rhineland and Central European campaigns.

After the war he attended American University in Washington and received a master's degree in public administration.

Unique Guard Unit On Local Duty

Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the 30th AAA Group and San Francisco Defense Commander, welcomed the 184th AAA Operations Detachment, California National Guard, as they began their annual two weeks' active training this week. These men from all walks of life and all around the Bay Area, moved in complete with baggage and equipment and each sat down with his regular Army counterpart in the 518th AAA Operations Detachment, commanded by Major Harold A. Neill.

The National Guard unit is commanded by Captain M. C. Teschendorf of San Lorenzo, who for the other fifty weeks of the year is employed with the Pacific Telephone Company. The Executive Officer, Captain Minchin, is from San Francisco.

This is not a two-week vacation or camporee—it is a serious intensified active duty period during which the National Guard unit gradually trains to a point where they could take over the duty and functions of the personnel manning the AAAOC of the San Francisco area defense. The crammed schedule includes cross training in each of the important positions on the "bridge" and plotting board. The bridge is a three-tiered gallery covered with communications equipment and which gives everyone sitting there an unobstructed view of the plotting boards. Each plotting board is a vertical sheet of heavy plexiglass on which target and weapons data is written for the Defense Commander's use.

These men, the United States first line of Ready Reserves, (some of whom give up their annual vacations in order to take part in this training) move into the barracks of Fort Barry and live, eat, and work the entire two-week period there.

Personnel of the 184th Operations Detachment have all completed their basic training cycle and this active duty period is the final polishing to make them a combat-ready unit. The high proficiency attained by this integrated "Buddy System" will be maintained at its peak by a twice-a-month day of duty here at Fort Barry.

Representative of the many young members of the National Guard now on active training duty throughout the Sixth Army Area are these members of the 184th AAA Operations Detachment now on two weeks duty with the 30th AAA Group. Here Pvts. James Utter, Sidney Norton and Pfc. Louis Meyer work on the plotting board at Operations Van.

Only the latest equipment and up-to-date techniques are used by the National Guard. This includes mobile Communications and Operations Vans that contain everything needed to carry operational control of an area defense into the field. All the functions of an Operations Detachment must be fast as well as accurate. Control must be geared to keep ahead of all types of aggression including jet aircraft and supersonic missiles. It takes a lot of practice to copy complicated data given rapidly over the telephone. It takes even more to write backward on the transparent plotting boards, so it can be read and immediately relayed to all elements of the firing batteries.

This is only a part. All personnel are cross-trained to enable them to do any job in the detachment. Radio and telephone procedures and operations, emergency repairs, knowledge of defense organization and weapons capabilities are a few of the subjects mastered to make this unit ready for immediate mobilization.

Final Handshake in a colorful military career that spanned 31 years is tendered M-Sgt. Antonio W. Cruz, 752nd AAA Bn., by Colonel Arthur Roth, deputy commander of the 6th AAA Regional Command, on the day of his retirement. A Silver Star veteran of the rugged guerilla warfare in the Philippines, Sgt. Cruz now resides with his family in Sharp Park.

Would Do It Again!

AAA NCO Ends Colorful 31-Year Army Assignment

A bit of the unusual was added to the retirement ceremony of Master Sergeant Antonio W. Cruz, 1st Sergeant of "D" Battery, 752nd AAA Battalion, Saturday 30 June, when Colonel Arthur Roth, Deputy Commanding Officer, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, made a flying trip by helicopter from his headquarters in Fort Baker to Fort Funston, to congratulate an old friend and officially present him with a final discharge certificate.

"It is a great honor," said Colonel Roth at the ceremony. "I first met M/Sgt. Cruz 21 years ago, in 1935, at Corregidor. At that time I felt that he exhibited all of the desirable qualities of a good soldier. I only regret that some of the men who served with us at that time cannot be here today."

Sergeant Cruz's World War II experiences read like a history of the Philippine Campaign. He saw action with AAA units at Bataan and Corregidor and was taken prisoner when Corregidor fell in May, 1942. Falling ill, after undergoing the brutal treatment of Cabanatuan prison, Cruz was transferred to the prison hospital from which he escaped just 10 days after being admitted.

Sheltered and restored to health by the underground, Sergeant Cruz joined the guerrilla forces in July 1943 and rose to rank of battalion commander. By January 1945 the guerrillas were joined with the U. S. 32nd Division.

At war's end he was commissioned a second lieutenant and spent 2 years in Okinawa commanding an AAA unit.

From 1948 on, he was assigned to posts in the U. S. but when the Korean police action broke out, Cruz was once again in battle, this time for 14 months. With his Korean duty over, Cruz returned to this country where he was assigned to the 30th AAA Group, Fort Barry, California.

The 30th AAA Group, commanded by Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, is made up of six battalions and other attached elements, whose mission is the Antiaircraft Artillery defense of the San Francisco Bay Area.

Of all the many decorations Sergeant Cruz possesses, the most outstanding is the Silver Star Medal, awarded him for the heroic rescue of his wounded battalion commander at Corregidor under heavy cross fire and later reporting the position of his unit's guns to his headquarters.

Other honors and ribbons include the Bronze Star Medal, the Presidential Citation with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Pacific Theatre Medal with 2 Campaign Stars, the Philippine Campaign and Liberation ribbons, the American Defense Medal, the Occupation Medal (Japan), the Victory Medal, and the Korean Theatre and service ribbons.

After the retirement ceremony there was an informal coffee session in the Battery "D" Mess Hall.

"I don't regret my 31 years Army service," remarked Cruz. "In fact, I would enlist far more readily now than before. Today's soldier has a better life, much better clothes and equipment than when I enlisted. The Army is a good life."

Mrs. Maura M. Cruz who accompanied her husband to the coffee party said, "I am proud of my husband's service. The U.S. Government has made it possible for us to raise and educate our children. It has always been our dream to live in the United States."

M/Sgt. and Mrs. Cruz have eight children; four boys and four girls.

Just Promoted

New Light Colonel Has Big Plans For 4-Legged Future

When Headquarters Company Sixth Army's commanding officer joined the Army 28 years ago as a 17 year old boy, he could hardly have imagined the promotion to lieutenant colonel which happened this week.

Lt. Colonel Verne E. Marsden, who was an enlisted man for 14 years, says some of his happiest memories stem from his enlisted service, especially his assignments in the horse cavalry. He started out in the 14th Cavalry and also saw service in 11th Cavalry.

In fact, Lt. Colonel Marsden, who will retire in two years at the age of 47, is thinking seriously of turning to his first love, horses, and making it a life work. He is considering using his G.I. Bill to go to college and take animal husbandry and then taking up the breeding and training of jumping horses.

Commissioned in 1942 after attending Officers Candidate School at Fort Benning, Lt. Colonel Marsden spent the war years in the Pacific theater. In 1945 he went to Germany to serve on the U.S. Constabulary there during the early occupation years. He went from Germany to the Army General School at Fort Riley.

Prior to coming to the Presidio in the summer of 1955, Lt. Colonel Marsden had been serving with Army forces in the Panama Canal Zone.

The newly elected officers of the club, which now numbers approximately 50 members, will be installed at a meeting next month.

The group meets the first and third Tuesdays of each month at the Presidio Non-Commissioned Officers' Open Mess, Building 69, and is primarily a social organization.

Membership in the club is open to the wives of all Presidio noncommissioned officers whose husbands are members of the Open Mess.

Unique Dog Show Slated For Letterman Sunday Afternoon

Thirty Afghan hounds, whose blood line can be traced 4,000 years into history, will be shown at Letterman hospital 15 July at 1400 hours in the first annual sanction match of the Northern California Afghan Hound club.

Relatively unknown today, the Afghan is described on 4,000 year old Egyptian papyrus documents as "baboon or monkey-faced dog." Records of Afghan tribesmen indicated that on occasion wives have been traded for Afghan hounds.

Exceptionally fast, this hound has been used in his native Afghanistan to run down gazelle, deer, and other such game. In small packs, the hounds are used for killing leopards and wolves and for protection of villages.

The Afghan match will be held on the hospital parade grounds bordered by O'Reilly and Eddie streets and Sternberg road. In case of rain the match will be held in the Sports Center.

Fort Ord Tops Area Club Contest

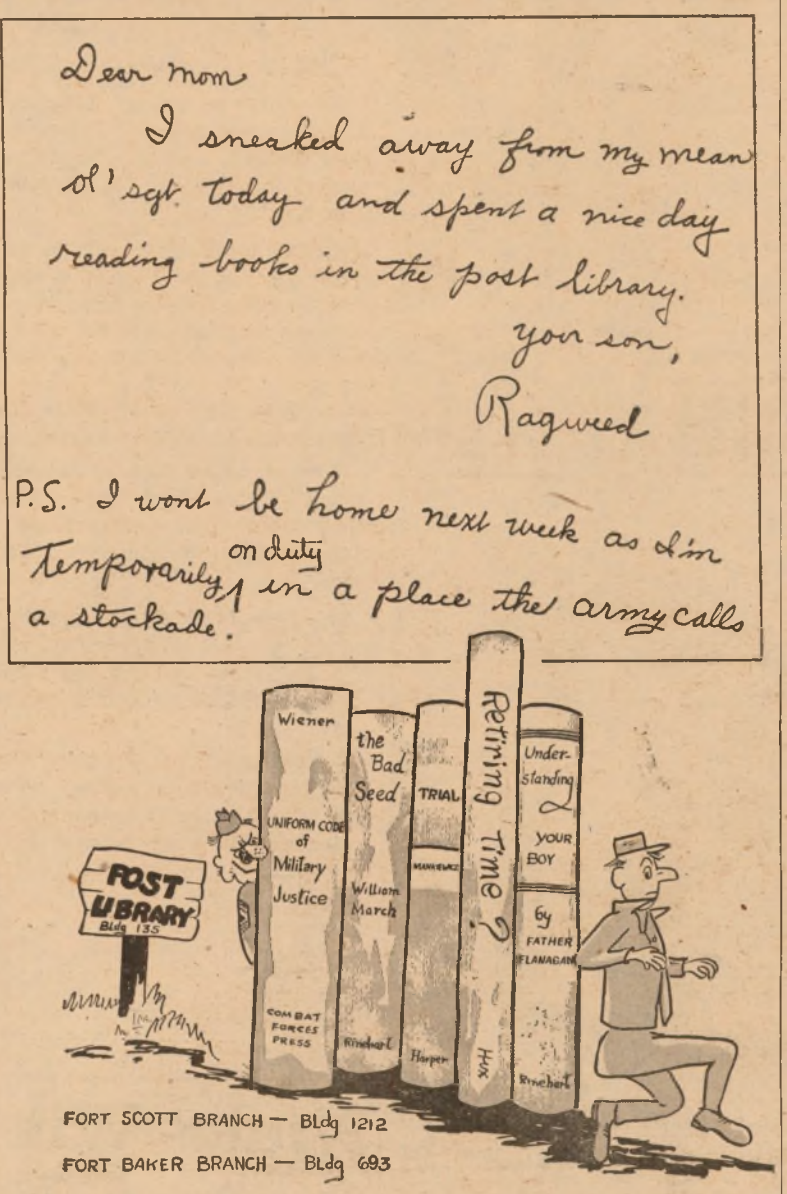
The competition, sponsored by the Adjutant General's office, will result in the selection of three outstanding organizations. They will receive prizes of $300, $200 and $100.

Selections from the field will be judged in Washington, Sept. 1-15.

Three phases of Special Services work are considered: publicity in programming, program and community relations.

Fort Ord Central Service club walked off with a first place and a $150 prize for its winning entry in the Sixth Army "Operation Service Club" contest held at the Presidio last week.

Entries were submitted in scrapbook form and judged for originality, general interest, effectiveness, appeal, practicality and thorough development of plan.



Yuma Test station took second place of the 15 entries submitted and collected a $100 prize. Two entries tied for the third place $75 prize, Camp Hanford and Service Club Number 1, Fort Lewis. Honorable mentions went to Camp Irwin, Fort Baker Service Club, Presidio of San Francisco and Sharpe General Depot.

The prize-winning entries will be forwarded to Department of the Army for competition in the first Army-wide "Operation Army Service Club" contest.

Major commanders are responsible for elimination contests within their commands, and may award prizes to lower-level winners.

Entries will be in the form of scrapbooks including pictures, text and publicity media showing service club projects.

After final judging all scrapbooks that made the finals, including the three winners, will be rotated among major commands in groups of three. When the circuit is complete, the entries will be returned to the Department of the Army.

In Northern California

Post Toreros Win Two Lose Two On Road Trip

The Presidio Toreros baseball club returned from a week long road trip in northern California last Monday boasting an even 500 per cent average in games played with two wins and two losses against strong semi-pro competition.

The locals opened against the Eureka Braves with a 4 to 3 victory to hand the semi-pro team their first loss of the current season. Crafty Chuck Matzen of the Sixth Army Honor Guard hurled the win, scattering six hits along the way.

Next stop was Klamath Falls where Presidio pitcher Roger Collins threw and lost a three-hitter. The Klamath squad took the four to one decision by scoring three unearned runs on errors.

Last stop on the journey saw the locals split two games with the Susanville Tigers. The host Tigers won the first contest seven to five with George Hane on the mound for the Post giving up eight hits.

The Presidio bounced back in the second tilt to take a six to three victory behind the hurling of Roger Collins.

Outfielder Harry Williams led the team in batting on the safari to the north with a .410 mark and was closely followed by first baseman Al Casino with a .390 average.

Pfc. Gene Guerra of the Honor Guard stepped in at second base to replace Dick Shannon (departing for a new station), and hit the ball at a .300 clip for the trip.

On 21 July the Presidio baseball men will enter the Atwater Invitational Baseball Tournament for top flight service teams. State Sets Regulations On Birds

Adoption of a 16-day statewide pheasant season, 17 November through 2 December, with a daily bag limit of two birds during the first two days and four birds per day thereafter, highlighted action on upland game.

The Commission of Fish and Game set a seasonal limit of 10 pheasants with one hen permitted in the seasonal bag in central and northern California. Ten pheasants of either sex, however, may be taken in the counties of Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Kern, San Bernardino, Inyo, Mono and all counties south thereof.

Quail seasons adopted include 21 October through 31 December in north and coastal areas which were open during the same period last year; 17 November to 15 December in northeastern counties open during the same period last year, but including Plumas county; and 17 November to 31 December in the balance of the state.

Bag and possession limits of eight quail per day in the aggregate of all species remain the same as last year.

A special mountain quail season of 6 October through 14 October was set for the same areas included in the special mountain quail season in 1955.

Planting Of King Salmon Announced

During the past several weeks more than 3,000,000 king salmon fingerlings have been planted in three major northern California salmon streams, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

Another salmon milestone was release of the first fingerling kings from the new Nimbus Hatchery into the American River last week. By mid-May some three million fish will have been released from the hatchery.

Next week one million king fingerlings from Coleman Hatchery will be released into the Mokelumne River in an effort to build up the run in that stream. This plant is part of a long range plan, and will be made 19 April.

During 2 March, 590,000 king salmon fingerlings were released into the Klamath River in Siskiyou County from the Mt. Shasta Hatchery. Eggs from which these fish were hatched were taken at the Fall Creek station.

Another half million kings were released into the Russian River below the site of Coyote Dam, which is expected to create water conditions favorable to the kings.

Army Cyclist Takes First In Road Race

Richard Ring of the U.S. Army captured the 100-mile handicap bicycle road race at Lake Merced last Sunday in the excellent time of four hours, 50 minutes.

Dave Rhoads, 1952 Olympic team member and Bob Best of San Francisco, two of the pre-race favorites were forced out with leg cramps. Only eight of the 20 starters finished the grueling grind.

Grid Players Needed For Presidio Team

Old man football got off to a slow start on the Presidio this week as a small group of hardy soldiers commenced workouts for the 1956 season here on the Presidio.

Head Coach Larry McInerney stated "that more players are urgently needed with centers, a backfield coach, a line coach and a manager on the critical shortage list."

Interested young men on the Presidio or its sub-posts should contact the Post Sports Office in building 122 or by calling 3968 for further information.

A tentative 11 game schedule has been drawn up against service, semi-pro and college teams beginning in late August.

bear rules

The proposed bear regulations call for hunting season openings to coincide with deer season openings and to continue through 31 December, instead of 15 January as last year. The year-around open season in Humboldt county is recommended for continuance.

Post Natators Set For Sixth Army Swim Meet

Next stop Fort MacArthur is the story as the Presidio swim team leaves tomorrow for the southern Army Post. Here, after long weeks of extensive practice, the six-man team will engage the top Army splash artists in the western states in the All-Sixth Army swim meet.

Starting the 18th the first two days will be spent qualifying for the finals which will be conducted on the 20th. The first two or three finishers in each event will stay at Fort MacArthur for the All-Army meet, 25-28 July.

From the All-Army the road gets still rougher, as the Olympic trials in Detroit, 7-10 August, is the next possible step for the Army champions.

Sparking the locals in the 100 and 200 meter sprints will be Norm Van Herzen and Kervin Meyer. John Hendricks will toe the mark in the 300 meter churn and Jeff Rice will attempt the 200 and 400 meter races.

Toeing the springboard for the post will be Marlin Dehaas and Bill Zeleyeta, each doing five selected dives, of which two are mandatory and three are optional.

Events scheduled to be held include the 100 meter butterfly breaststroke, 200 meter freestyle, 100 meter backstroke, 200 meter conventional breaststroke, 800 meter freestyle, 400 meter medley relay, 400 meter freestyle, 200 meter backstroke, 100 meter freestyle, 3 meter springboard diving and the 400 meter individual medley.

Army Sets Up Three Trophies For Women

Washington (AFPS)—The Army has established three perpetual trophies for women athletes to be awarded yearly to women champions in bowling, tennis and golf.

The trophies will be retained for one year by the command sponsoring the individual winners in the three sports. Replicas of the trophies will be presented to the individual champions.

The first award, the Col. Mary A. Hallaren Trophy, will be awarded to the winner of the all events championship of the women's division of bowling. The second trophy, honoring Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, will be presented to the winner of the singles division in tennis. The third will be called the Col. Emma E. Vogel Trophy and will go to the women's golf champ.

Colonel Hallaren was former director of the Women's Army Corps, while Colonel Blanchfield was a member of the Army Nurse Corps. Colonel Vogel was a member of the Army Medical Specialist Corps. All three are now retired.

Washington (ANS)—How old are the Olympic Games? This question has two correct answers: 2732 years, and 60 years. The ancient Greek games held at Olympia go back at least to 776 BC, earliest date of existing record in the form of a list of Olympic victors. But for several centuries before that, Olympia was the scene each four years of a religious and patriotic festival featuring athletic contests.

From 776 BC on, the games were numbered as consecutive "Olympiads" for more than 1000 years until Emperor Theodosius abolished the games in 394 AD.

Exactly 1500 years later, a Frenchman, Baron Pierre de Coubertin, initiated the idea of reviving the ancient games. His circular of 1894, addressed to all the governing bodies of sport, suggested that the friendly competition of athletes on an international scale would tend to promote peace and understanding. His idea bore fruit in 1896, when athletes of nine nations, including the U.S., took part in the first modern Olympic Games at Athens, Greece, near the site of the last games 1502 years before.

Since that first revival, games have been held at Paris (1900), St. Louis (1904), special "off-year" games at Athens (1906), London (1908), Stockholm (1912), Antwerp (1920), Paris (1924), Amsterdam (1928), Los Angeles (1932), Berlin (1936), London (1948), and Helsinki 1952). The games have also included winter events at various winter sports centers since 1924.

Earlier this year the winter games took place at Cortina, Italy. The regular games will be held in late November and early December at Melbourne, Australia.

During the 5th Century BC, when the ancient games were at their height of importance, the favorite events were foot-racing and discus-throwing. The discus champion, in fact, was always honored as the greatest athlete in the land, and winners of the other events were considered to be of lesser importance.

Although track and field events tend to hold center stage in the modern games, many other events have been added as regular or one-time features. Perhaps the oddest of the one-time events occurred in the Paris Games of 1900—a fishing contest in the River Seine. All in all, the modern Olympic list of events would look mighty strange to a fan of the ancient games.

Most Army personnel with athletic skills approaching Olympic caliber are undoubtedly aware of the pertinent details regarding the U. S. Olympic tryouts for their respective events. This is particularly true of the former college or Olympic performers now in the Army. Occasionally, however, the preliminary competition for places on the U. S. Olympic team uncovers some previously unheralded star. There is always the chance that somewhere in the Army a potential Olympic performer remains "undiscovered."

Anyone who feels that he may have what it takes to be an Olympic prospect should see his Special Services Officer for detailed information about the Army's program of finding and developing Army candidates for the U. S. Olympic team.

'Indian River' Only Test Slated For This Area

Double Congratulations were in order for Lt. Col. Corthay (the former Major Helen Hart) executive officer of the Sixth Army Information Section, this week. Besides winning a promotion to lieutenant colonel, the popular WAC officer was recently married. On hand with best wishes are Colonel Arthur C. Timboe, chief, Sixth Army Information and new husband Louis Corthay.

Happy Ending!

Cupid-Army Join Forces To Route WAC Officer

Cupid and the United States Army joined forces in a recent maneuver at the Presidio of San Francisco to add a storybook chapter to the already interesting and varied career of an American soldier.

In a single month of joint operation the two irresistible forces managed to capture a heart, change a name, add rank and crown with distinction and happiness the life and career of one of the Army's most popular women officers.

Cupid led the attack with an arsenal of tried and true weapons: handsome, eligible bachelor; chance meeting; interests in common and soft lights and music all played their part in forcing the enemy to capitulate.

On 8 June, in a surprise ceremony in the Chapel of Our Lady, Major Helen Hart became Mrs. Louis Corthay in private life. Her husband is sales manager for the Edwards Dental Supply Company of San Francisco.

Their objective still groggy from Cupid's initial success, the Army moved in to secure a permanent beach head. On 6 July the attractive WAC major became Lt. Col. Corthay, one of five women officers to win silver leafs on current promotion lists. Colonel Arthur C. Timboe, Sixth Army Information chief, handled the pinning honors with new husband Corthay on hand as a proud witness.

A graduate of Duchene University, Colonel Corthay entered the service in 1942 at her home town of Omaha, Nebraska. She has held various executive assignments which included the first and second WAC Training Centers; Office Chief of Chemical Warfare; Sixth Army WAC Staff Advisor; First Military District in Bad Tolz; Public Information Office in Frankfort, Germany; Information Office, National Guard Bureau in Washington, D. C.; and Public Information Officer at the WAC Training Center at Ft. McClellan, Alabama.

This is! Right?

That, that is, is; that, that is not, is not; but that, that is not, is not that that is; nor is that, that is, that that is not.

Survivors Bill Okayed

Washington — The Senate has approved a "moderately" amended version of the Military Survivors Benefit Bill.

The legislation, passed by the House a year ago after three years' of study, would bring all members of the Armed Forces under the Social Security system on a permanent, contributory basis and up survivor and retirement benefits for service families.

The bill, pegged by President Eisenhower as a key move to make military careers more attractive, will now go to a joint House-Senate conference committee to reconcile relatively minor changes made by the upper chamber. (AFPS)

Newest Warrant Officer

New Warrant Officer Marvin A. Olson of the 19th Ordnance detachment was recently appointed from sergeant first class. A Korean veteran and father of five children, Warrant Officer Olson is now assigned to the 20th AAA Battalion, Ft. Lawton.

First WACS Now On Duty With Ack Ack

After almost six years as a solidly male organization, four members of the Womens Army Corps have recently been assigned to Headquarters, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command. The formerly all-male Signal Section of the headquarters is the gate through which the girls joined the antiaircraft defense team.

All four of the first Wacs to be assigned here are communications specialists and June graduates of the Southeastern Signal School at Fort Gordon, Georgia. They are now working in the communications center of the headquarters, where all Signal communications between West Coast Antiaircraft Artillery units and the Army Antiaircraft Command headquarters at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado, is centralized.

The girls are quartered with the Sixth Army Wac detachment at the Presidio of San Francisco, due to the lack of facilities at Fort Baker, and commute back and forth over the Golden Gate Bridge to their jobs.

The Wacs are Privates Carole M. Greene, Kittery, Maine; Laura F. Ault, Charleston, S. C.; Florian M Vierra, Wailuku, Maui, Territory of Hawaii; and Patsy L. Shultz, Harpers Ferry, W. Va. All four entered the Army in January and February of this year and completed their basic training at Fort McClellan, Alabama, in April.

More Wacs are scheduled to be assigned to the Pacific Coast Antiaircraft defenses in the near future. They will replace male personnel in the administrative and communications fields. The men will then be made available for reassignment to isolated installations and for retraining in the NIKE guided missile field, which stands as a last bastion of the male Army as it is not open to the women soldiers.

Discharge Proposal

The Armed Forces would be permitted to issue only honorable and dishonorable discharges based on a man's service record under legislation introduced in the House by Rep. James Roosevelt (D-Calif.).

The bill would eliminate unsatisfactory, undesirable or less than honorable discharges based on actions allegedly performed in civilian life before joining the service.

Big Field Exercises Scheduled In FY '57

Washington—Seven major field exercises involving an estimated 84,000 troops have been tentatively scheduled by the Army to take place during the next 12 months.

The maneuvers—to include divisional, mountain, jungle and Arctic training—will be highlighted by "Exercise King Cole," a large scale command post exercise at Ft. Polk, La., next April.

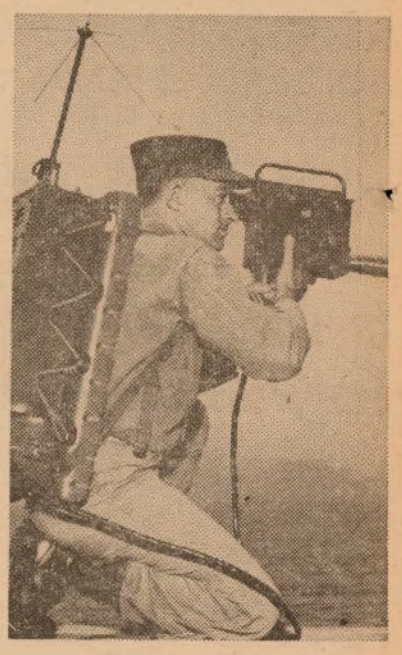
About 26,000 men will take part in King Cole, which will be geared to train staffs and participating units in new tactical concepts.

The line-up for the exercise will include the following units: Hq. III Corps; Hq. XVIII Abn. Corps; Hq. 1st Armored Div.; Hq. of the 1st and 3rd Inf. Divisions; Hq. of the 82nd and 101st Abn. Divisions; the 2nd Armored Cav. Regt.; the 2nd Logistical Command and field artillery units equipped with Honest John rockets and Corporal guided missiles.

The series of maneuvers will be kicked-off next November at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., with "Exercise Red Arrow." Participating will be the 1st Inf. Div. from Ft. Riley, Kan., and other supporting units.

In January and February one regimental combat team from the 82nd Abn. Div., Ft. Bragg, N. C., will be airlifted to Alaska for "Exercise Northern Light," a training maneuver in Arctic operations.

The 1st Armored Div., Ft. Hood, Tex., will journey to Ft. Polk for "Exercise Sledge Hammer" in February and March.



This maneuver will feature troop tests of SKY CAV II, engineer assault of equipment and aerial resupply of armor in the exploitation phase.

"Exercise Rio Selva" will be conducted by a battalion of the 82nd Airborne Div. in the Panama Canal Zone in March and April to provide training in jungle operations and the reinforcement of the Caribbean Command from the U. S.

Yakima, Wash., will be the scene of "Exercise Indian River" next May. The 4th Inf. Div., now in Europe, will return to Ft. Lewis, Wash., in time for the maneuver.

Dubbed "Exercise Cold Spot," it will involve about 3,500 troops over an extended period. Scheduled to take part are two battalion combat teams of the 1st Inf. Div. and elements of the 77th Special Forces Gp. (AFPS)

This TV camera and transmitter represent the latest accomplishment in front-line surveillance. Army's new "Man-Pack Television System" weighs just 55 pounds. Its first appearance on the coast came last week when the Army demonstrated it before the American Radio Relay League's national convention meeting in San Francisco.

The yellow is for yellowlegs (cavalry color), the black bar for first (in name and battle) and the black horses head, for thoroughbred.

But if you really want to know the story behind the First Cavalry Division shoulder patch why not ask the lady who designed it.

Mrs. Gladys Dorcy, who considers the whole first cavalry "her family," arrives in San Francisco today to visit First Cavalry friends. She is the widow of Lt. Colonel Robert Dorcy, Cavalry, USA, former commander of the 7th Cavalry Regiment of the First Cavalry Division. He died in 1926 and is buried at the Presidio.

The Dorcys were married at St. Louis in 1916 after meeting at a party given by the governor of Missouri. Mrs. Dorcy was with her husband when he served on General Pershing's staff during the border strife of the Pancho Villa era.

In 1920 the Dorcy's designed the shoulder patch since worn by 300,000 soldiers of the First Cavalry Division. She still has the original patch and a plaque showing regimental badges of all regiments of the division.

Childless, Mrs. Dorcy has devoted the years since her husband's death to her "adopted family" the First Cavalry Division, with whose members she carries on an extensive correspondence. She is an expert on Division history and is accounted one of the country's foremost experts on military heraldry.

She is visiting here as the guest of Colonel Frank J. Culley, former Chief of Staff of the First Cavalry in Korea, and Mrs. Culley, who are in the Bay Area enroute to a new station in Hawaii.

Flood Effort Of Soldiers Wins Praise

Three Presidio soldiers were officially honored yesterday for their outstanding contributions to the relief and rescue operations during last winter's Christmas holiday floods in Northern California.

Following a formal 800-man parade and review the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant was awarded to Colonel Robert Erlenkotter, Sixth Army G-1; Colonel Wayne E. Downing, 30th Engineers, and Master Sergeant Lee A. Nichols, Headquarters Company Sixth Army.

Also decorated at the ceremony with a similar award was Master Sergeant Frederick G. Brown, Sixth Army G-1, cited for meritorious service during a three-year period in Japan.

Colonel Erlenkotter, who at the time of the flood served as Deputy Commander of the 136th Engineer Aviation Brigade, an Army unit attached to Beale Air Force base, directed his men in all phases of the flood operation. They filled sandbags on the levees, evacuated refugees, set up a huge refugee camp at Beale Air Force base and distributed food, clothing and medical supplies to the homeless.

His citation credits him with "displaying outstanding ability in directing effective employment of aviation engineers in relief of the Marysville and Yuba City communities threatened by disastrous floods. Through his superior performance of duty and exceptional resourcefulness, the command was credited . . . with saving countless lives and untold property loss."

Pension Bill Moves

The House has passed and sent to the Senate a bill increasing from $78 to $90 monthly the pension paid WWI veterans for non-service connected disabilities.

The legislation provides that veterans reaching 65 automatically qualify for the pension if their income at the time is not more than $1,400, if single, and $2,700, if married.

The bill, passed by a 364-51 vote, would increase pensions paid WWI veterans more than $365 million next year if enacted.

Chief Scores 'False Impressions'

Washington—General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, has scored the "false impressions" of Army life that movies, television and comic strips give the nation.

In a recent address before the National Jewish Welfare Board in New York City, Gen. Taylor said, "the concept of the officer as a sharp-tongued martinet and the non-commissioned officer as a hard-boiled taskmaster has often predominated in the minds of young men as they have approached their military service."

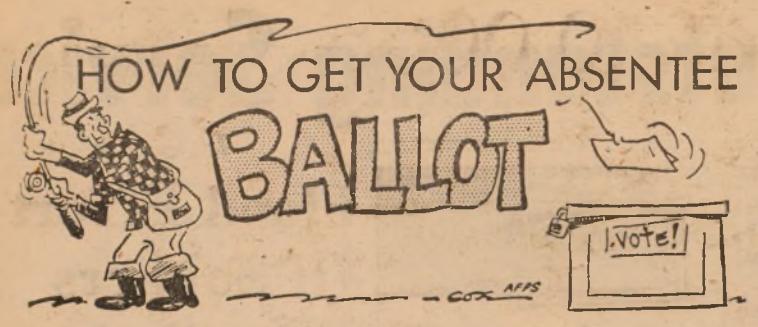
"Of necessity, our officers and non-commissioned officers have been taught to exact from their troops essential discipline, without which armies could not be distinguished from mobs, and without which there is no hope for victory," the Army's top leader explained.

"But," he added, "the kind of discipline imposed in the U. S. Army is not the yapping discipline of martinets."



Army discipline follows a definition inscribed on a bronze plaque at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, Gen. Taylor said.

This inscription reads: "The discipline which makes the soldiers of a free country reliable in battle is not to be gained by harsh or tyrannical treatment. On the contrary, such treatment is far more likely to destroy than to make an army.

"It is possible to impart instruction and to give commands in such a manner and such a tone of voice to inspire in the soldier no feeling but an intense desire to obey, while the opposite manner and tone of voice cannot fail to excite strong resentment and a desire to disobey.

"The one mode or the other of dealing with subordinates springs from a corresponding spirit in the breast of the commander. He who feels the respect which is due to others cannot fail to inspire in them regard for himself, while he who feels, and hence manifests, disrespect toward others, especially his inferiors, cannot fail to inspire hatred against himself." Grip on Grippe

Respiratory Disease Markedly Reduced By Army Vaccine

Washington—Army medical scientists have developed a vaccine expected to bring a sharp drop in hospitalization from such respiratory diseases as grippe and virus pneumonia.

In tests at recruit training centers, the new vaccine, developed at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research here, reduced hospital confinement for respiratory infections by more than 80 per cent.

The viruses against which the vaccine is effective were discovered some three years ago during an outbreak of chest and throat ailments among soldiers at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. Other diseases caused by the viruses are catarrhal fever, sore throat and severe colds, but not the common cold.

According to the Army, prevention of respiratory diseases is of great importance to the armed forces since at Ft. Dix, N. J., alone, some 20 per cent of all trainees are hospitalized during the winter with these complaints.

The new Sixth Army Inspector General, Colonel DAVID A. WATT, JR., who graduated and was commissioned from West Point in 1928, also has a degree in civil engineering from the University of Iowa.

Prior to his Presidio assignment, Colonel Watt had been serving on the Review Board council as executive officer, OSA, in Washington since June, 1955.

Colonel Watt first saw foreign duty in 1932 when he went to Panama to serve with the 11th Engineer regiment.

Upon activation of the 4th Armored Division in 1941 Colonel Watt was assigned as tank battalion commander in the 37th Armored Regiment. He went overseas with the division in 1943, serving as G-3 and division trains commander. For his combat service with the division in France, Colonel Watt, was awarded the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Croix de Guerre with palm and Legion d'Honneur.

Returning to the United States he served on the Army General Staff in 1945 in the plans and policy office of G-4. Assigned to a military mission in Iran in 1947, Colonel Watt served there as G-3 advisor to the Imperial Iranian General Staff.

In 1952 Colonel Watt was assigned to the Korean Military Advisory Group, Taegu, Korea, where he served as KMAG chief of staff until the summer of 1953 when he was reassigned to the I U. S. Corps as Inspector General.

Major CURTIS D. HINDMAN comes to his new Presidio assignment as chief of the correction and confinement division of the Sixth Army after serving three years in Mannheim, Germany, where he was confinement officer for the USAREUR military prison there.

Major Hindman has also seen overseas service in Japan where he was stationed from 1947 to 1949 as Provost Marshal and commander of a Military Police company.

Entering the service on 1 April, 1941, the major saw service as an enlisted man. He received his commission after attending OCS at Fort Benning in 1942. He has also attended Aerial Observation School at Brooksfield, Texas. He took the provost course at the Provost General School in 1946, the basic course for Military Police officers and the associate-advanced Military Police class at Camp Gordon.

The major, who emphasizes that he is from Texas, is married and has one daughter and lives at 6338 Fulton Street in San Francisco.

Army Aviator 1st Lieutenant FREDERICK L. CLAPP has recently been assigned to the flight detachment at Crissy Field. He was last assigned with the Lawson Army Airfield Command at Fort Benning.

Lieutenant Clapp spent 17 months in the Caribbean as a rifleman before attending OCS at Fort Benning in 1951. He attended paratrooper school at Fort Benning in 1952 and Army Aviation School in 1953. He also attended the associate company officer's course at Fort Benning in 1956.

As an Army aviator he spent 13 months in the Far East with the 45th Division.

Security Risks Can Win 'Honorable' Slip

Washington—Discharges for men considered security risks and refused retention in the Army will be "based on the character of service performed," if they complete their obligated tours, under provisions of AR 604-10, change 2.

This revision makes it possible, an Army official explained, for a man serving in "specially controlled duties" to receive an honorable discharge if he earns it.

Discharges, for men who do not complete their obligated tours or complete them only by delaying discharge proceedings, will be "based on the gravity of the substantiated derogatory information which requires their discharge and upon the character of service performed," according to current provisions.

The just-published change is an "interim document" pending a complete revision of the regulation, which is now in the works.

Soldiers discharged for security reasons will not normally be transferred to the Reserve at the end of their obligated tour, but will be given an outright discharge, according to a new subsection of the regulation.

All those who refuse to fill out the loyalty form (DD Form 98) or qualify their answers are required by the new procedures to be given a hearing. This provision is aimed particularly at inductees.

However, men will not be able to evade induction simply by refusing to fill out a form 98. Except in cases where there is a flat refusal to fill out a form 98, major commanders may consider cases and, where convinced that it is not inconsistent with the best interests of the service, may decide that the information is not a bar to induction.

Need A Career?

LA Seeks Firemen, Policemen; Offer Top Salaries

Servicemen who are soon to return to civilian life may be interested to know that the City of Los Angeles has just boosted the initial salary range for Police Officers and Firemen to $417-489 per month. Opportunities are good for advancement to higher paying ranks of greater responsibility by competitive examinations.

These professional careers permit early retirement with liberal pensions after only 20 years of service and offer the distinction of serving with two of the foremost municipal public safety departments in the nation.

Important to servicemen is the fact that they may take the required written examination for either or both positions while still in the armed forces if they are not stationed near Los Angeles. These tests are administered at their stations and posts of duty through arrangements made by the Los Angeles Civil Service Department with commanding officers.

Candidates must be between the ages of 19 and 30 years inclusive, be at least 5 feet, 8 inches tall, and have a high school education or its equivalent.

Men interested in investigating these opportunities should write to Los Angeles City Civil Service Department, Room 5, City Hall, Los Angeles 12, Calif. A simple postal card will do. Just ask for details concerning the job in which you are interested. Information and forms for application will be mailed without delay.

Army Commander Swears In 50,000th RFA

New AR Will Close Gate On 'Easy Outs'

Loopholes which enable scientific and professional men to get a discharge and then turn right around and go back to work at the same job only with higher civilian pay, have been plugged by a new Army regulation.

The revised regulation allows discharge for "convenience of the government" in cases involving the national interest, or health, and safety.

Key to the change—C2 to AR 625-205—is that an applicant for discharge under this section cannot be assigned to a critical MOS using his civilian skill or to another critical MOS unless there is a qualified replacement available.

Most of these cases which apply both to enlisted men and officers, especially doctors, are referred to local draft boards for a ruling as whether there has been such a change in the local situation as to make the discharge or release necessary.

The change contains a revised explanation of the policy and spells out the details of administrative procedures that individuals and their commanders must follow.

Promotions

Washington — The Army has announced the temporary promotion of 463 officers in the grades of first lieutenant through lieutenant colonel.

Receiving promotions are: lieutenant colonels, 146; majors, 108; captains, 72; first lieutenants, 137.

The Army, by the nature of its requirements, attaches the greatest importance to human values. It recognizes man as the basic element of military strength. Hence, it works constantly to improve the moral, physical and intellectual capacity of its men. It creates for them an environment of decent, clean living and of intolerance of vice, dissipation, or flabbiness.

Colonel Robert Dorcy, former regimental commander of the division, is the designer of the First Cavalry Division shoulder patch which has been worn by 300,000 soldiers since it was designed in 1920.

Flying Saucers May Be Back In Vogue Late This Month

West Coast citizens spotting flying saucers this month had better look twice, because what they're probably seeing is only lazily floating "Rockoons."

Ten "Rockoons," which are actually balloon borne rockets, will be launched off the southern California coast late in July to furnish naval scientists with data on the effects of solar disturbances on radio communications.

The balloons, 68 feet in diameter, will carry the rockets high into the ionosphere. Then a radio signal from the launching ship's transmitter will fire the rockets by remote control. In the next two minutes, the rockets are expected to reach a height of 60 to 70 miles and radio back to the observing station aboard the ship data on the strength of X-ray and ultra-violet radiations from the solar flare.

Information from the experiment will contribute to the U. S. rocket program in the 1957-58 International Geophysical Year when the widely heralded earth satellite is expected to be shot into outer space.

Draft Up

Washington — The Defense Department has asked Selective Service to furnish 14,000 men for induction into the Army during September, 1,000 more than July and August quotas.

The Army draft call for September is the largest since January, 1955, when 23,000 were inducted.

Time In Grade Info Important To Promotions

Time in grade has become an additional factor in determining Army promotion quotas with the publication of AR 624-200, paragraph 16 dated 8 June, 1956.

In the past a command's quota has been determined strictly from a consideration of actual strength and authorized strength. Commands now, according to the AR, are to submit information in addition, which will show the time in grade held by their men.

The sooner individual units submit this time in grade information, the sooner the information can be relayed to Washington for use in figuring new quotas, a Sixth Army AG spokesman said this week.

Supermarkets Slated For Army Posts

Washington—The Army has announced that self-service supply centers will be installed at 11 military installations throughout the United States between July and next December.

This Army version of a commercial supermarket is a point of distribution for specified expendable supplies to activities authorized logistical support.

The six ZI armies will install Class I centers at Fort Dix, N. J., (First Army), Fort Knox, Ky., (Second Army), Fort Benning, Ga., (Third Army), Fort Sam Houston, Tex., (Fourth Army), Fort Carson, Colo., (Fifth Army), and Fort Ord, Calif., (Sixth Army). Class III installations will be built at the U. S. Military Academy, Fort Monmouth, N. J., Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., Fort Eustis and Fort Belvoir, Va.

Top Officials Attend L.A. Ceremonies

The Army welcomed the 50,000th recruit into its six-month active duty training program yesterday in a ceremony at Los Angeles that was attended by high ranking Army officers from both the West and East coasts.

Bernard Y. del Valle, age 17, who was sworn in by Sixth Army Commander Lt. General Robert N. Young at the Los Angeles Federal Building, said he was attracted to the new program because it enabled him to more quickly fulfill his active duty obligations so as to be able to return to school sooner.

He enlisted for Company B, 254th Infantry Regiment, 63d Infantry Division, U.S. Army Reserve, because it was close to California Polytechnic Institute which he will attend following his active duty tour.

Under provisions of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, a young man between 17 and 18½ years of age can take six months of active duty training and then return to civilian life. He will then be required to attend the weekly meetings of his reserve unit and two-week training course annually for the remaining 7½ years of his obligation.

A statement from Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker was read at the ceremony in which he expressed sorrow "that it is impossible for me to be present on this important occasion."

"The Reserve Forces Act provides, for the first time, a practical program by which the people of this nation can build and maintain on a voluntary basis a substaptial long-term military shield against aggression," the statement continued.

A powerful Ready Reserve serves notice on would-be aggressors—in terms they can understand—that the United States is determined to resist aggression in any form and has the means by which to do it, Secretary Brucker's statement explained.

Military officials attending the ceremony, in addition to General Young, included Major General Walter J. Muller, Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army; Major General P. D. Ginder, Chief of Reserve and ROTC Affairs, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C., and Major General Henry K. Kellogg, Jr., Commanding General of the 63d Infantry Division.

Among the ranking California officers also present were Major General Earle M. Jones, Adjutant General of California; Major General Roy A. Green, Commanding General, 49th Infantry Division, California National Guard; and Major General Charles Lyn Fox, Commanding General, 91st Infantry Division, U. S. Army Reserve of Northern California.

"Break Through" Planning Begins

Exercise "Break Through II," a tactical-type command post exercise (CPX) gets underway Monday with the activation of the permanent planning staff which will lay the groundwork for the exercise which takes place in late January of next year.

The planning staff of 10 officers and 14 enlisted men is the nucleus of the operation which at its culmination will involve the 4th and 5th Infantry Divisions of the Sixth Army as well as six infantry divisions and one armored division from West Coast USAR and National Guard commands.

While the maneuvers will all be made on paper, approximately 1200 officers and a like number of enlisted men will be actively involved when the operation takes place the weekend of 26-27 January 1957. The operation is somewhat similar to the "High Seas" exercise which concluded this spring.

The exercise is a continuation of operation "Break Through" in 1955 which ended with an attack in Northern Germany. Such exercises are held annually by each Army area and involve the USAR and National Guard as well as active Army commands.

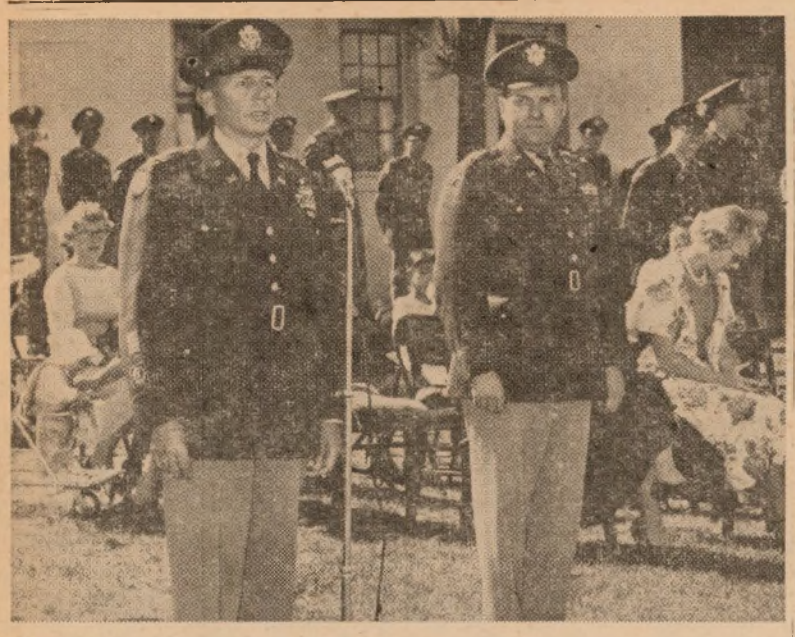
The plan for "Break Through II" calls for the 4th and 5th Infantry Divisions to serve as corps headquarters at Fort Lewis and Fort Ord respectively. The reserve divisions will be moved to these locations and be attached to the corps. Radio, teletype and telephone communications will be set up to link the corps headquarters with Sixth Army headquarters.

The Headquarters Maneuver Director of "Break Through II" will be under the direct supervision of Colonel Franklin G. Smith and Colonel Roland J. Halada, both Sixth Army G-3.

Lt. Colonel Malcolm W. Smith, Chief, Special Projects Branch, Sixth Army G-3, will be Acting Deputy Chief of Staff. His administrative officer is Major John F. Kwock, 505th MP Battalion.

Other officers on the permanent staff are Lt. Colonel Roger O. Williams and Lt. Colonel Howard D. Lowe, both Sixth Army G-1, who will be G-1 and assistant G-1, respectively. The project's G-2 is Lt. Colonel Clarence S. Howe, who is assisted by Major Charles I. Phillips; both are from Sixth Army G-2.

Sixth Army G-3 has provided Lt. Colonel Gust E. Olson as G-3 and Major John J. Tkacik as assistant G-3. The G-4 assignment has gone to Lt. Colonel Freeman F. Gage, Jr., Post Special Services. Assistant G-4 is Lt. Colonel Charles J. Schauers.



The permanent planning staff will be augmented by project officers from each special staff within Sixth Army Headquarters.

Master Sergeant J. E. McConnell, Sixth Army G-3, heads the group of enlisted men who have volunteered to serve on the project. All were formerly on the "High Seas" staff.

While the exercise is primarily an Army operation, the Air Force will take part in the Joint Operation Center.

30th Engineer Group Has New Commander

Colonel Lawrence Robert St. John took command of the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey) Monday, replacing Colonel Wayne E. Downing, who has been reassigned as Commandant of the Army Helicopter School, Camp Walters, Texas.

Colonel St. John comes to Fort Scott from the Armed Forces Staff college at Norfolk, Va., where he instructed logistics. Prior to this he served in the Operations and Training Division of the Office of the Chief of Engineers and was Chief of the Construction branch, Headquarters, USAREUR.

A West Point graduate, Colonel St. John also has a master's degree in Civil Engineering from Iowa State college.

During World War II, he saw action in the Pacific area, participating in the New Guinea and Luzon campaigns. Among his decorations, Colonel St. John wears the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star and the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation.

The ultimate decision in any future war will be obtained by soldiers on the ground. . . . Our modern Army is equipped with both atomic and conventional weapons. . . . Our Army is now helping to train over 200 foreign divisions, which form a most important part of the Free World's strength. . . . There is no real ultimate weapon but man himself.

PX Seeks Info That Will Help Compile History

New York — The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is trying to trace its family tree.

At some time in the past 61 years, military personnel and civilian employees began referring to the post exchange as the PX, but nobody knows exactly when.

So the search is on and all military personnel and exchange employees, past and present, are being asked to submit any evidence they have on when, where, and how the term PX originated.

Old post maps, regulations, orders, directories, newspaper clippings that mention the post exchange as the PX, and photos showing PX signs dating back to 1945 or earlier are especially desired.

All material should be sent to the Office of the General Counsel, 25 West 43rd Street, New York 36, N. Y. (AFPS)

Status Not Quo

New Bills Move Rapidly Towards Final Enactment

Washington — The House has cleared and passed on to the Senate a proposal that would permit the service secretaries to declare certain housing substandard and charge Armed Forces families reduced rentals instead of full quarters allowances.

As amended by House legislators, the bill provides that quarters considered inadequate could be occupied for a period of two years, after which time units below standard would either have to be rehabilitated or destroyed.

The measure, included in President Eisenhower's list of six legislative moves essential to military-career incentives, would save service families an estimated $15 million yearly.

The bill now will go before the Senate Armed Services committee for consideration.

● AUGMENTATION NEARS

The officer augmentation bill, which would allow more reserve officers to be given regular commissions in the Army and Air Force, has been voted out of the Senate Armed Services committee and is awaiting action on the floor of the Upper Chamber.

The legislation would almost double the authorized officer strength of the two services.

● UP COAST GUARD

The Senate has sanctioned hiking to 3,000 the ceiling for officers in the Coast Guard.

Approved by voice vote, the bill has been returned to the House, which had fixed officers' strength at 3,500.

The Coast Guard presently has about 2,600 officers, some 350 more than its permitted limit.

● NEW HOUSING FADES

Military housing legislation authorizing some 73,000 quarters for service families appears to be "dying on the vine."

Hardest hit in a House Rules committee motion to table the bill during this session of Congress would be the Air Force.

Of the units proposed, the Strategic Air Command would be permitted to build 56,300 Capehart Act homes at long-range bomber bases.

The Army also would get authority to construct additional privately financed housing to relieve critical shortages near many Nike sites which guard major cities throughout the nation.

The Defense Department is awaiting further developments in the White House to move the bill out of committee.

● NO CODE CHANGES

Present indications are that the House Armed Services committee will take no further action before adjournment on recommended changes to the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

● EXTEND SCHOOL AID

The House has approved a two-year extension of federal aid to schools over-crowded by children of government agency employees and members of the Armed Forces.

The extension would make $378 million available to these and other educational institutions to expand their facilities. (AFPS)

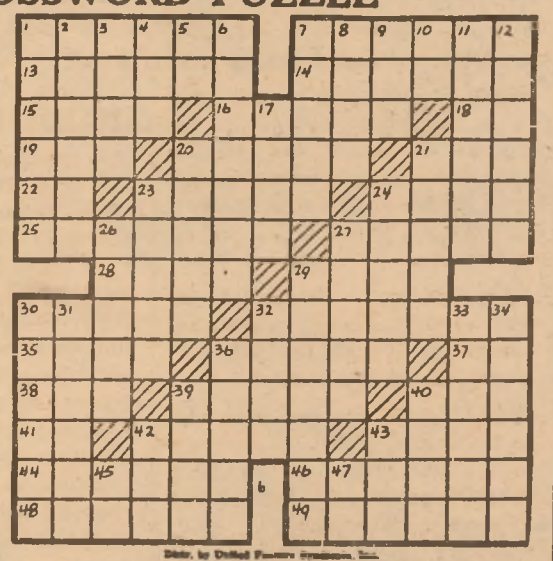
Emily Post was never in any chain of command. What she had to say, however, does have a place in the military life.

Our Armed Forces are built on mutual respect—respect for the individual and his mission. Respect, too, for the fact that his opinions may differ from yours.



Every time you extend a salute or use the word "sir," you are expressing good manners. But courtesy does not end there.

It extends, for instance, to the mess hall. You may be hungry as the proverbial bear, but there is no excuse to ram a fork into someone's gullet as you reach for the bread or catsup.

It isn't sissy-like, either, to avoid spicing your sentences with those colorful little phrases. A man who must curse to express himself proves the low status of his I.Q. every time he opens his mouth.

No. Emily Post would have seemed ridiculous toting an M-1 or swabbing the deck. But what she had to say carries weight for us in the service. So—Pass the salt, PLEASE! (AFPS)

THE CONQUEROR is a tale of the early life of Genghis Khan, a Mongol leader whose drive, passion and uncanny foresight enabled him to conquer half the world and gain a place in history as "The Perfect Warrior."

WALK THE PROUD LAND has Audie Murphy as the first Indian agent at the San Carlos Apache Reservation. He replaces the Army's control, against the wishes of the Commanding General. In time his methods and example bring peace between white and red men, only to be threatened by Geronimo, who rejects all peace efforts and terrorizes the territory. Glum, with the help of the peaceful Apaches, organizes a force and captures the renegade brave. The picture is based on the life story of John Philip Glum, the first Indian agent, who actually captured Geronimo.

HOLD BACK THE NIGHT has John Payne, as Captain Sam Mackenzie, commander of Easy Company of the tough fighting 7th Marines in their march to the Yalu River in Korea in 1950. With victory almost in sight, the men are stunned at the order to retreat. From the first hour of the "fighting withdrawal" Easy Company is under constant attack, suffering heavy casualties. At their destination the gallant company is reduced to a handful, every one a hero.

THESE WILDER YEARS have James Cagney, as a highly successful industrialist, who visits an orphanage in search of his son, born there 20 years ago, out of wedlock. As the directress, Barbara Stanwyck refuses to divulge any information about the boy on the grounds that such disclosure would be illegal and unfair to the foster parents. Dissatisfied and stubborn, Cagney risks exposure and scandal in a futile court battle to upset the original adoption.

A BULLET FOR JOEY is the inside story of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Canada's counterpart of our F. B. I. It is a tale of crime and intrigue on an international scale.

Doctor: "The thing for you to do is to stop thinking about yourself. Try burying yourself in your work."
Patient: "Yeah? I'm a concrete mixer!"

Versatile is the Word!

Educated 'Whirly Bird' Can Do Many Tricks

Ft. Belvoir, Va. (AFPS)—An amazing light-weight helicopter that flies by remote control from a ground station or another 'copter has been unveiled here by the Army and Navy.

Equipped with TV camera and transmitter, it could give combat commanders a running view of battlefield action and movement behind enemy lines.

It can lay communication wires rapidly over rugged terrain; carry cargo and supplies to otherwise inaccessible areas; drop smoke bombs to mark targets for artillery fire and is highly maneuverable against such land vehicles as tanks.

Remote Control 'Copter

It can also uncoil a line of explosive charges through an area spotted with enemy mines, exploding the charges as it zips along thereby clearing a path for troop and vehicle movement.

The contract to develop a remotely controlled helicopter was awarded to Kaman by the Office of Naval Research in 1952.

Although its system is somewhat similar to the remote control of airplanes, the problems that had to be overcome were far more complex because of the helicopter's ability to rise and descend vertically, stand still in mid-air, and fly forward, backward and sideways, either slowly or rapidly.

Besides eliminating hazardous duty for pilots, the remote control 'copter is especially advantageous because of its simplicity of design and light weight.

All the safety devices needed in an ordinary helicopter are eliminated and structural strength is reduced considerably.

9th inning thriller!

Guerra Sparks Win As PSF Edges Lucky Lager

By Pfc. Bob Malone
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The Presidio Toreros pushed across the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning to capture a close 4 to 3 win from the semi-pro Lucky Lager nine in an Olympic Benefit game last Tuesday night. The game was played before a crowd of 400 baseball fans in San Rafael's Alberts Field.

With the score tied at three all, Torero second baseman Gene Guerra opened the bottom of the ninth with a walk. Outfielder John Blackwell then bunted with the throw going to second base. Guerra, running hard, slid into the second baseman knocking the ball into center field. By the time the dust had settled, Guerra had scored. Blackwell was on second and that was the old ball game.

Lucky Lager opened the game with two unearned runs in the first frame on a walk, a single, an error and a force out. The semi-pros added one tally in the fourth on a triple and a long fly to centerfield to take a 3 to 0 lead.

Big John Blackwell opened the bottom of the seventh for the Post by lining a one bagger to center field. Norm Ellenberger then slapped a long single to left center field scoring Blackwell with the first PSF run.

Al Casino kept the rally going with a single and Harry Williams then bounced a line drive double off the third baseman's head, pushing across two tallies, tying the score and setting the stage for the dramatic ninth inning.

Crafty Chuck Matzen of the Sixth Army Honor Guard went all the way for the Presidio on the mound, allowing but one earned run and striking out nine Lucky Lager batters. Centerfielder Harry Williams led the Toreros in hitting with three big blows.

The Atwater Invitational Baseball Tournament that was scheduled to commence this weekend has been delayed for one week with action slated to begin on the 28th of this month. The tourney will pit top service teams from throughout California in a double-elimination affair.

After the Sixth Army meet, the top three finishers in each event will remain at Fort MacArthur for the All-Army meet which pits stars from Army commands throughout the world.

Bright Geese Trace Route To North

About 430 pink, green, purple, and yellow geese are now winging their way northward over the United States and Canada, following a dip in the dyepots of the California Department of Fish and Game.

The normally white snow geese and Ross' geese were dyed these bizarre colors to help trace their migration routes, the Department explained today.

Already reports of pink and yellow geese have come in from incredulous observers as far away as Alberta, Canada, the Department said.

Later reports are expected from wildlife technicians and other observers still farther north, as the birds continue the migratory flight to the arctic breeding grounds.

The program, now in its second year, was conducted by State technicians at the Tule Lake National Wildlife Refuge, in Siskiyou County.

Presidio children this summer are burning up excess energy and learning tennis fundamentals all in one operation thanks to the volunteer services of Tennis Coach Major Arthur Hyman.

More than 30 young tennis tyros go twice a week to the Infantry Terrace Tennis courts for their instruction. On Wednesday afternoons they arrive at 1530 and on Saturday morning 1030 hours.

Major Hyman, who played football and track at West Point, didn't even get interested in tennis until after college. Now he is an enthusiastic player as well as coach. He favors the children's tennis lessons both as a means of developing timing and coordination and as a method of using up some of the youngsters' energy surplus.

The tennis classes, which began 1 June with about 60 participants have dropped some in enrollment during the vacation months, but Major Hyman expects the students to be out in full force come fall. The current classes will continue until the end of August at which time tentative plans call for a tournament among the pupils. New classes will begin in October.

While the students aren't quite Tildens and Moodys, yet, Major Hyman is gratified with "some amazing progress," made by the older children. Classes are divided into three groups: 7-10, 11-14, and 14 years and older.

752d AAA Wins First In Softball

Bravo Battery of the 752d AAA Battalion won the 1956 Presidio softball championship late this week when they edged out the Headquarters Company of the 505th MP's by the score of three to two on the Post PX diamond.

Last week the ack-ackers opened the Post season playoff with a two to one victory over the same Headquarters MP's. Rolling on, the champions shutout the 21st Engineers, four to 0, in their second game in the finals.

The 505th entry bounced back from their opening defeat to knock the 21st Engineers out of the double-elimination twenty-four to four and earned the right to meet the 752d in the finals.

The 752d squad qualified for the tournament by taking first place in the Northern League of softball action with a perfect sixteen and 0 record. By winning three tilts in the playoffs, the ack-ackers ended the season with a perfect nineteen and 0 mark in official competition.

First Splake Trout Taken By Anglers

The first splake trout ever reported caught in California were taken from Lower Salmon Lake in Sierra County this month, the Department of Fish and Game has reported.

A total of 17,500 fish at a size of 12 fish to the ounce was marked and stocked from eggs received from Quebec and reared at Mt. Shasta Hatchery.

Presidio Unit Finds Pacific Duty 'Interesting'

Bull Sessions are about the only off-duty entertainment for these members of Company C, 505th MP Battalion, currently on TDY duty in the South Pacific. Here members relax and cutup a few touches about the "good old days at the Presidio in SF."

Staying Sharp on tropical or cold weather assignment is part of Military Police tradition. Here members of Company C's motorized patrol undergo pre-duty inspection from the "old man," CO Capt. Leaman C. Harvey. The unit is currently TDY to the Marshall Islands from the 505th MP Battalion at the Presidio.

Though Tiny Atoll Is Not 'Paradise' They Envisioned

Special to the Star Presidian

Eniwetok (Marshall Islands) — Although this is not the lush tropical paradise they envisioned after viewing Hollywood South Sea epics, officers and men of Company C, 505th Military Police Battalion, are carrying out duties here with good cheer and high morale.

No swaying palms and lovely hula hips greeted them on arrival for temporary duty—just a barren, sandy Pacific Ocean atoll.

But the unit, commanded by Captain Leaman C. Harvey, immediately pitched in and made things liveable, as shown in the exclusive pictures reproduced in the Star Presidian for the first time.

Having very little vegetation, the atoll was spruced up by the men of the 505th. The eight officers and 252 enlisted men dolled up their area with rocks, palm leaves—and a few real live palm trees, the tips of which can be seen hovering over the tent tops in the pictures.

And in order to carry out their duties with the greatest degree of comfort possible, Charlie Company's troops got the jump on the rest of the Army by appearing in short pants, short sleeved shirts and baseball caps.

The only item missing was the ribbed knee length stockings, standard wear as prescribed by the ARs governing tropical uniforms.

In the beginning, gags flew thick and fast as long covered legs appeared in shorts under the glaring sun. But the unit quickly became bored with the gags and accustomed to wearing the abbreviated uniforms.

Off duty hours wear is different only inasmuch as khaki military shirts are hung away and replaced by gaudy sports shirts. The strong sunshine is tanning many of the men, a strange development for those used to the fog and winds of the Presidio and Fort Baker.

They, along with battalion commander Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, can point with pride to serving with distinction at Camp Desert Rock, Nevada; Fort Polk, La., for Exercise Sagebrush, and at Camp Roberts, California.

And the long hours of training in the faraway hills of Marin County has paid off handsomely for Captain Harvey's command, too.

Company C is upholding the 505th's reputation as a military police battalion that knows how to do its job—and do it well.

It's Law !

Reserves Will Get 'Lump Sum' Adjustment Pay

Washington — President Eisenhower has signed into law legislation granting lump sum "readjustment pay" to reserve officers and enlisted personnel involuntarily released from active duty after at least five years' active service.

The bill, which contains no retroactive features, is effective as of 9 July, 1956, the date the president affixed his signature.

Drafted by the Defense Department to assist reservists separated from the Armed Forces to readjust to civilian life, the law provides one-half of one month's base pay for each year of active duty up to 18 years, or a maximum of nine months' pay.

As an example: A major or lieutenant commander with 14 years' service draws base pay of $514.80. If involuntarily released from active duty, he will receive seven months' pay totaling $3,603.60.

For those eligible, fractions of a year over six months will count as a full year.

The law also states that accepting the readjustment pay "shall not deprive a person of any retired or retirement pay or other retirement benefits from the U. S. to which he would otherwise be entitled." (AFPS)

Our active Army, numbering over a million men, is equipped with the finest weapons of all kinds that science can devise and industry can produce. It has powerful atomic weapons specifically tailored to its requirements. It also has, and will continue to have, the best conventional weapons. It has the ability to apply the exact amount of force at the exact spot necessary to the performance of whatever task may come to hand.

to become commandant of the Army Helicopter school, was commended for assuming "full responsibility during this period as officer-in-charge of military flood relief operations in the Northern California flood disaster . . . his brilliant leadership, his outstanding planning and foresight and his intelligent utilization of available men and equipment saved innumerable lives and property of incalculable value."

The 30th Engineer Group was among the first units alerted for the emergency. Besides providing transportation and communication facilities, the 30th Engineers were able to call upon the 66 light planes and helicopters of their 521st Aviation company.

Colonel Downing, who joined the 30th Engineers in March, 1954, headed "Task Force Alaska" last summer. Its mission was to survey and map areas of Alaska north of the Arctic Circle.

A veteran of service in the European theater during World War II and in Korea during hostilities there, Colonel Downing has been awarded the Legion of Merit and Bronze Star medal.

When the flood hit, Sergeant Nichols, then first sergeant of Headquarters Company, 136th Aviation Brigade at Beale Air Force Base, suddenly found himself in charge of the company; his commanding officer was cut off by the flood and his executive officer on leave. His citation credits him with displaying "outstanding ability and resourcefulness in organizing crews to combat the floods raging in the Marysville-Yuba City area."

Without sleep for three days, Sergeant Nichols had to provide men to keep the brigade staff sections operating in addition to providing others for sandbagging details, issuing supplies and equipment, maintaining transportation and communication and caring for refugees.

Enlisting in the Army in 1943, Sergeant Nichols served during World War II in Europe. He was awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism when he rescued a fellow-soldier from a burning tank in France. During the Battle of the Bulge he was wounded and received the Purple Heart.

Sergeant Brown was honored for meritorious service from July, 1953, to March, 1956, as chief clerk of the Technical Advisory Branch, Logistics Division, Army Section, Military Assistance Advisory Group, Japan.

He served in Europe during World War II and has since seen duty in Germany and Korea.

Slate Final Parade For Five Officers

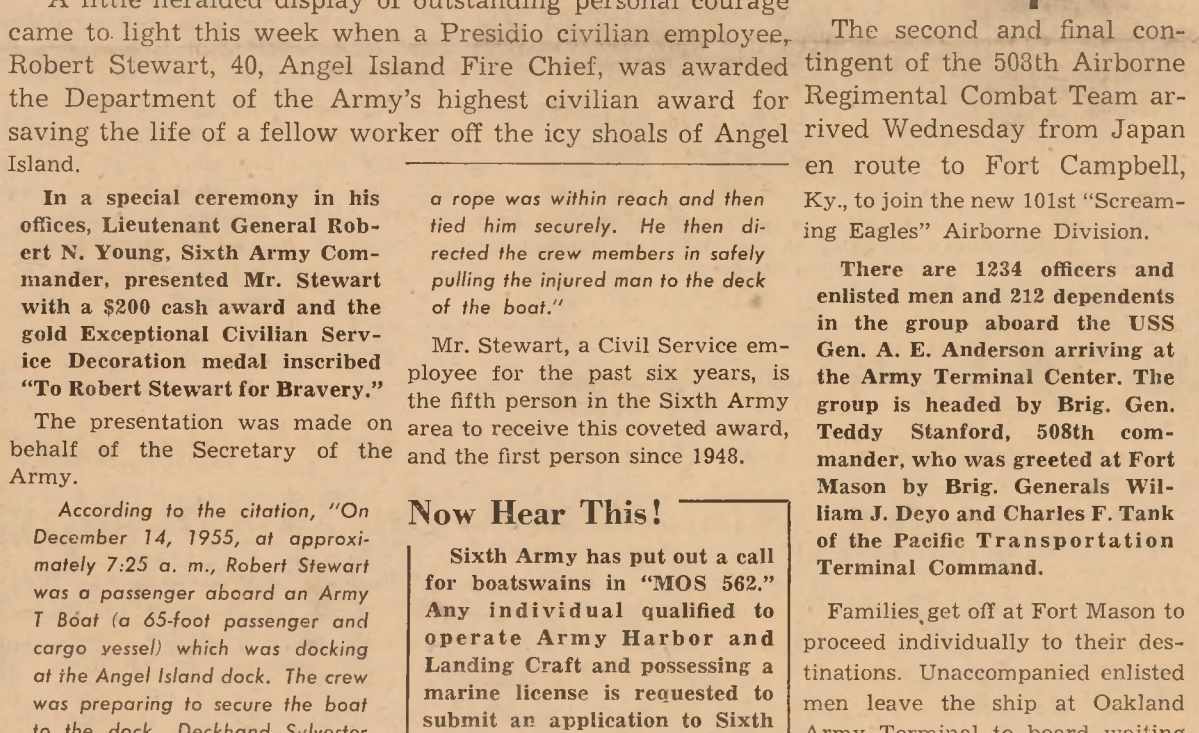
Last Salute To 141-Years 'Top' Service

Pomp and Patriotism in the best military tradition will keynote the Army's final salute to five of its retiring officers on the Presidio Parade Ground, this afternoon.



Two battalions, some 700 troops, will pass smartly in review while the famed Sixth Army Band will give full vent to its penchant for martial airs. The public has been invited to attend the ceremonies which get underway at 1600 hours.

Slated to retire with combined career totals of 141 years are Lt. Col. Harry Spitz, Lt. Col. Raymond J. Burke, Lt. Col. Otto C. Person, Major Ernest E. Bade and CWO Russell H. Hansen.

A graduate of Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, Colonel Spitz served in the Army Reserve for 18 years prior to entering on active duty in December, 1942.

In 1943 he was assigned to the 6th Convalescent Hospital and served in England, France, Germany and Czechoslovakia throughout five campaigns in support of the Third Army with that hospital. The hospital was awarded the Distinguished Unit Citation for outstanding performance of duty in returning Highest Award that can be bestowed upon a civilian by the Army went to Robert Stewart this week for his outstanding "personal courage" in saving a fellow worker from drowning. Lt. Gen. Robert N. For Bravery!

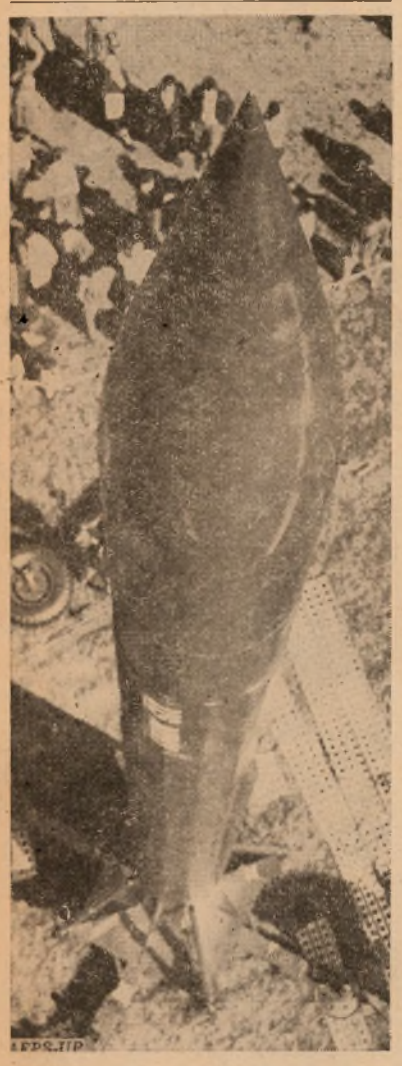
Fire Chief Wins DA's Highest Award For Courageous Rescue

A little heralded display of outstanding personal courage came to light this week when a Presidio civilian employee, Robert Stewart, 40, Angel Island Fire Chief, was awarded the Department of the Army's highest civilian award for saving the life of a fellow worker off the icy shoals of Angel Island.

In a special ceremony in his offices, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, presented Mr. Stewart with a $200 cash award and the gold Exceptional Civilian Service Decoration medal inscribed "To Robert Stewart for Bravery."



The presentation was made on behalf of the Secretary of the Army.

According to the citation, "On December 14, 1955, at approximately 7:25 a. m., Robert Stewart was a passenger aboard an Army T Boat (a 65-foot passenger and cargo vessel) which was docking at the Angel Island dock. The crew was preparing to secure the boat to the dock. Deckhand Sylvester Smith was attempting to drop a line over a piling. The boat was moving forward slowly and Mr. Smith was leaning over the side of the boat when he was struck by a piling, causing him to fall over the side of the boat. As he fell he struck his back and side on the piling, causing serious injury to himself. He plunged into the water, which at that point is 30 feet deep, and immediately began to sink. Adding to this grave danger was the fact that Mr. Smith was wedged in between the dock and the boat. The boat was not yet secured and any sudden shift of the boat into the dock would have crushed Mr. Smith instantly. Mr. Stewart, who was sitting in the passenger compartment, heard shouting and immediately went out to investigate the apparent trouble. . . . Observing the injured status to Mr. Smith and the fact that the space between the dock and the boat was severely limited, Stewart with complete disregard for his own safety, jumped into the water and went to Mr. Smith's aid. He grabbed and held him afloat until a rope was within reach and then tied him securely. He then directed the crew members in safely pulling the injured man to the deck of the boat."

Mr. Stewart, a Civil Service employee for the past six years, is the fifth person in the Sixth Army area to receive this coveted award, and the first person since 1948.

O'Hagan Will Carry Local Views To Meet

Special to the Star Presidian

Commanding General Robert N. Young has named Master Sergeant Patrick L. O'Hagan as Sixth Army's enlisted man representative at a top priority conference meeting in Washington, D. C., next week to draw out the real factors that encourage or discourage career military service.

The Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines will all hold meetings attended by representative non-coms in order to learn the professional enlisted man's views on a variety of subjects that include training, housing, pay and allowances, overseas tours, medical care, recreation facilities and uniforms and insignia.

Sergeant O'Hagan, who is first sergeant for the Second Signal Company at Fort Lewis, leaves tonight for the Washington conference. Prior to departing he spent three days researching the situation at Fort Lewis. He then visited G-1 Sixth Army here and was furnished with the section's studies on service problems (the studies contained only facts, not conclusions). Finally he visited Fort Ord for two days where he interviewed fellow enlisted men, heard opinions and saw problems first hand.

"Duty assignments," is Sergeant O'Hagan's special topic problem which he will be prepared to discuss in full detail. He must also have opinions, facts and comments on the other 14 topics slated for discussion.

Results of the four service non-com meetings will be forwarded to the Defense Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation, headed by Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric. It is expected that a large portion of career type legislation to be endorsed by the Administration next year will stem from recommendations from this committee.

"It is emphasized that the essence of this entire venture is to obtain — directly from the source—the organized objective and uninfluenced views of this career enlisted group," explained Assistant Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess.

It is hoped that information compiled during the non-com meetings

Reorganization For Far East

Sweeping reorganization and consolidation of U.S. forces headquarters announced by the Defense Department will shift the Far East Command from Japan to Hawaii under the Navy, 1 July, 1957.

A division of the joint headquarters, Far East and United Nations Commands, in Tokyo, also will establish the United Nations Command in Seoul, Korea, the Defense Department said. The Hawaii merger will consolidate the areas and responsibilities of the commander-in-chief, Far East Command, with those of the commander-in-chief, Pacific, who now directs U.S. naval forces in Asian waters and the Pacific theater, from Pearl Harbor.

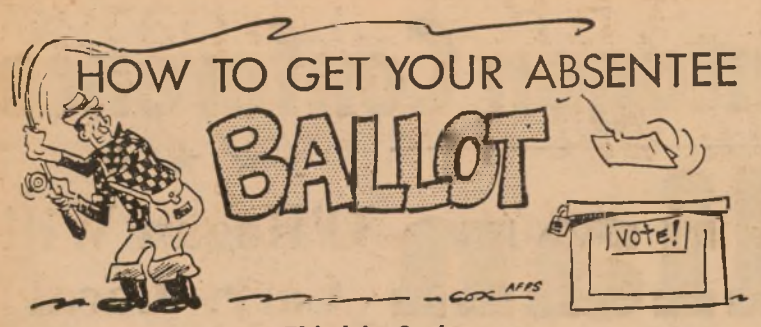
In other major shifts the Defense Department announced abolishment 1 Sept., 1956, of the U.S. Northeast Air Command under Lt. Gen. Glenn O. Barcus.



Air Defense responsibility for that area, which includes Newfoundland, Labrador and Greenland, will be assigned to the Continental Air Defense Command under Gen. Earle E. Partridge.

Air Defense responsibilities for Alaska also will be transferred from Lt. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, USAF, Theater Commander, to the Continental Air Defense Command, while protection of Alaska sea communications will be assigned to the commander-in-chief, Pacific.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, Jr., USA, who commands the Caribbean theater from the Canal Zone, will take over responsibility for U.S. military aid and American defense interests in Central and Latin America with the exception of Mexico.

The UN Command in Korea will be retained as a separate major command because of the "unresolved" politico military situation there which has resulted only in suspension of hostilities and a state of truce, the Defense Department said. (AFPS)

New Law Would Draw RA Officers From Three Groups

Washington — The Army will integrate aspirants for regular commissions from three groups other than active duty reserve officers under the augmentation legislation awaiting President Eisenhower's signature.

In addition to drawing from the pool of officers now actively serving, the long-range Army plan to build regular strength to some 50 per cent of the authorized ceiling provides consideration of applicants in the following categories:

1. Reserve and National Guard officers who have served in the Army since 7 December, 1941.

2. Individuals not now holding commissions who were Army officers after the start of WWII.

3. Civilians who have never held commissions, if they have special skills needed in the regular forces.

Besides meeting age, physical and character criteria, candidates must:

- Apply on DA form 61 through major command channels if on active duty, an enlisted man or warrant officer, civilian, or Army Reserve member; if National Guard, through State Adjutant.
- Make application not earlier than 60 days or later than 120 days after date the bill is signed into law by the President.
- Indicate three choices of branch assignment in order of preference.
- Be able to complete 20 years' active federal commissioned service by age 55.
- Meet special education and experience stadards set for each grade in seeking a technical branch assignment.
- Come within "constructive age"—actual age less active service—ranges fixed between the ages of 21 and 27 years, including "constructive credit" allowances under certain conditions. (AFPS)

Besides the regular theatre decorations, Colonel Ennis has won the Legion of Merit and the Commendation Ribbon.

He has two sons, Clarence H., Jr., currently attending the University of Alabama, and Allan, who is now in service under the Reserve Forces Act. His wife, Leona, will join him at his new assignment shortly.

A West Point graduate of 1950, Captain Pederson saw some active duty and considerable reserve duty with the Army Air Force during World War II.

From 1951 to 1953 he was assigned with the 4th Regimental Combat team at Ladd Air Force base in Alaska. Following this tour he went to Fort Sill, where he was an instructor in basic gunnery.

Captain Pederson has attended the battery officers course at Fort Sill, the weapons effect course at Sandia Base in New Mexico, as well as the Navy school at Monterey.

Major ALEXANDER K. STEWART has been named executive officer for the Sixth Army Aviation Detachment. He comes to his new assignment from Headquarters, 4th Division at Frankfort, Germany, via the Ft. Sill Advance Artillery Course.

A veteran artillery and special missions pilot with the 3rd Army in Europe during WWII, Major Stewart served on like assignments during a year of combat flying in Korea.

Besides the standard theatre decorations, Major Stewart has earned the Air Medal with seven Oak Leaf Clusters.

Wife, Elaine, and 3½-year-old Alexander III will shortly join him at his new duty station.

The 752nd AAA Gun Battalion in Berkeley has a new Chaplain (Captain) LEONHARDT STUCKWISCH, who will be responsible for the religious activities of all members of the Protestant faith assigned to AAA units in the East Bay.

Chaplain Stuckwisch comes to his new duties from the 34th General Hospital and the 9th Transportation Highway Group in France, where he has just completed a three-year assignment.

Previous service included a stint with the 79th AAA Battalion in Chicago. During WWII he was a transport chaplain serving out of the Port of New York.

Key civilian employees for overseas exchange positions are recruited for the overseas exchanges by Headquarters Army and Air Force Exchange Service in New York. Last year, 118 of these key civilians were processed through that office.

Chaplains To Celebrate 181st Anniversary On This Sunday

The 181st anniversary of the Army Chaplain Corps will be celebrated Sunday, 29 July, with special services in all Army chapels. The public is invited to attend services on that day in all Bay Area Army chapels.

On 29 July, 1775, the Continental Congress founded the Army Chaplaincy to care for the spiritual needs of American soldiers, conferring official status on chaplains in the Army, and fixing their pay at $20 a month, the same as the pay established for officers with the rank of captain.

For many years the chaplains' primary mission of furnishing spiritual ministration suffered because of the numerous other functions they were called upon to discharge. At the time of the Mexican War, for example, the law required them "to perform the duties of schoolmasters" at Army posts, and as late as World War I the operation of Post Exchanges, post offices, the sale of War Bonds and supervision of athletics were some of the miscellaneous duties which the Army chaplain had to undertake.

Today, however, the Army's 1,200 chaplains' service is geared entirely to spiritual ministration, their time being occupied with baptisms, instructions, counseling of servicemen and women, Sunday School and youth programs, and character guidance activities, and officiating at weddings and funerals, in addition to the regular conduct of worship services.

During World War II nearly 8,900 chaplains saw Army service and chaplains made spiritual ministrations available to troops on a scale never before attempted. Chaplains have served with the Army in all its wars, have given their lives on the battlefield, and have been decorated for gallantry and for distinguished service. Since the establishment of the Chaplaincy in 1775, a total of 279 Army chaplains are known to have died in the line of duty during wartime; this includes those who were killed in action and those who died as a result of wounds, disease, prisoner-of-war confinement, or non-battle injuries.

At the head of the Army Chaplains today is Chaplain (Major General) Patrick J. Ryan, a veteran of 28 years of Army service, and from 1948 to 1952 Sixth Army Chaplain at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

Presidio Launches Annual AER Campaign

Outstanding Service of over thirty years won a Sixth Army Certificate of Achievement for Colonel John A. McFarland, retiring president of the Sixth Army Physical Evaluation Board. Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, presented the certificate on behalf of the Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young. Colonel Charles G. Rau, post executive officer was on hand with congratulations.

CG, DPC Urge Troop Aid For 'Soldier Own' Fund

Army personnel will be asked for voluntary contributions to the Army Emergency Relief Fund during the coming month. The strict purpose of the fund is to render emergency financial assistance to members of the Army and their families.

In 1955 the Presidio Army Emergency Relief made loans and grants totaling $9,936. This was considerably more than the $5,110 collected at the Presidio last year.

The 1956 campaign goal was set at $5,500 at the kickoff meeting opened by Deputy Post Commander Colonel Charles E. Lundquist last week. The campaign runs from 31 July to 31 August encompassing two pay day periods. The stress of the campaign will be to reach everyone once, according to Major Florence B. Boush, post funds custodian.

"Traditionally, the Army takes pride in caring for its own. Disaster may strike at any time, and part of the success in coping with it is the ability to help quickly," explained Colonel Lundquist at the kickoff meeting.

He continued: "The Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society, by gathering funds ahead of time, provide the most effective and timely means of our helping each other in time of need and distress."

The Army Emergency Relief works closely with the Red Cross and takes over in cases where Red Cross aid is not available or not adequate because of policy or other reasons.

Assistance is usually given in the form of a loan without interest and repayment normally made by Class E allotment in small monthly payments. If repayment of a loan would cause undue hardship, then assistance is given as an outright grant.

Examples of situations that might require Army Emergency Relief are as follows:

- Loss of pay or nonreceipt of pay, allotment or allowances.
- Acute illness when government facilities for treatment not available.
- Funeral expenses of dependents.
- Travel expenses due to emergencies.
- Payment of initial rent, or payment to prevent eviction.

The Army Relief Society is closely affiliated with AER and is supplied with money from the same contribution funds. Here on Post the representative for this organization, which assists needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel, is Mrs. Arthur L. Bivens.

The annual campaign to raise funds for Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society will be held at the Presidio of San Francisco during the period 31 July through 31 August 1956.

It is through this fund that we in the Army assist one another in time of need. Last year 40,000 members of the Army and their dependents were rendered financial assistance by Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society. More than four and one-half million dollars were disbursed in helping persons in unfortunate circumstances. Although most of this money returns to the funds to be used again, our annual contributions are necessary to meet the greatly increased demands.

I urge each member of the Army to give wholehearted support in the 1956 fund campaign. It is through your generous contributions that the Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society continues its successful role of assisting those in need.

DOD Simplifies Supply Forms; Paper Work Cut

Washington — The Defense Department in a new move to simplify paper work in the Armed Forces will standardize forms used in military supply operations.

All requesting, shipping, billing and receiving of material will be done on a single series of forms after Dec. 31, 1956, the Defense Department said.

The consolidation, which follows the recent establishment of the single manager system for food, clothing and medical supplies, was ordered when it became apparent that the lack of common supply forms impeded the furnishing of material by one service to another.

Existing stocks of forms will be used until exhausted.

The "uniform documentation program" will ease the task of training thousands of military and civilian personnel, streamline supply operations and bring substantial savings by eliminating numerous forms used throughout the services, according to the DOD. (AFPS)

Young Corps Celebrates Birthday; Transportation Is A Bouncing 14

The Transportation Corps, youngest of the Army services, approaches its 14th birthday next Tuesday with the combined emphasis of adapting itself to the limitations of the peacetime Army and eyeing the future always alert to change and advancement.

"We face a dual problem . . . to tighten our belts to absorb cuts in appropriations and contraction of personnel and facilities . . . and to establish a firm and expanding base from which we can speedily meet the demands of full or partial mobilization," explains Major General Paul F. Yount, Chief of Army Transportation in a letter to Colonel Calvin L. Whittle, chief, Sixth Army Transportation.

But the problem is a healthy one, continues General Yount, who credits it with posing a tremendous challenge to imagination and ingenuity. It has sparked research and development with the result of more diversified and improved transportation—land, sea and air.

Here in the Sixth Army area Transportation Corps efforts have been directed at providing the best possible service for this large western area. Maintaining and operating more than 2500 motor vehicles that travel over 20 million miles a year requires the organizational skill of the largest fleet operators.

Traffic management of commercial movements of cargo, military personnel and their families is another of the Corps big jobs in this area. Last fiscal year more than 9,000 families were assisted in moving overseas while an even greater number were assisted in making permanent changes of station within the United States.

The diversified activities of the section, manned by 10 officers, 5 enlisted men and 46 civilians, also include supervision of the operation and maintenance of railway equipment and harborcraft as well as supply activities and aircraft maintenance.

The Army Transportation Corps which serves the function of traffic manager for all armed services has placed great emphasis during the past year on integration of the air with surface transportation for the movement of manpower and supplies.

Stress has also been put upon improved support of the 3,500 aircraft now under Army control through transfer of maintenance responsibility from the Air Force to the Army. Presently under consideration is the application of nuclear power to transportation equipment.

The intensity and perseverance with which the Transportation Corps pursues its present mission is in keeping with its heritage. The corps was born in July, 1942, under extreme emergency. An integrated transportation system, staffed by experts in the field, was set up and expected from scratch to perform a gargantuan job.

During World War II this infant Corps moved more than 30,000,000 men within the United States and transported 126,000,000 ship tons of cargo and 7,000,000 men overseas. At the end of hostilities it was called upon to reverse direction. In less than 10 months it returned 5,000,000 troops home, meeting every schedule.

So effectively did the Transportation Corps perform during the war years and following that Congress made it a permanent service in 1950 during the reorganization of the Army.

Today more than ever the Transportation Corps plays a vital role in the overall operation of the Army. As Army Commanding General Maxwell Taylor puts it, "The mission of the Transportation Corps increases in importance as the Army moves ahead into an age demanding greater and greater land, sea and air mobility for Army forces."

Corps Insignia - -

TRANSPORTATION CORPS insignia first made its appearance in January of 1919. It was described as a winged car wheel, flanged, on a rail, surrounded by a rim one inch in diameter. A year later the insignia faded from sight when the Transportation Corps and the Motor Transport Corps were put under the Quartermaster Corps.

Then in 1942 when the Transportation Corps again became a separate unit, the insignia, slightly altered, came back to symbolize this newest of the Army services.

It consists of a winged car wheel, flanged, on a rail, all charged on a shield placed upon an eight-spoked steering wheel. This insignia thus represents rail transportation, by the winged car wheel on a rail; land highway transportation, by the shield which is representative of the National Standard Highway markers; and water transportation, by the steering wheel.

The colors of the present Corps is brick red, piped with golden yellow. In World War I the Transportation Corps color was purple.

Local Soldier Is Delegate

"No doubt that Methodists are moving firmly to unite into a single organization," is the report brought back from the General Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church at Miami, Florida, by Specialist 3 Alex White, chaplain's assistant of the 752d AAA Gun Bn.

Specialist White was one of 500 delegates to attend from all over the nation. He reports that many members of the armed forces participated in the discussions.

Buses to Bridges!

Post Transportation Plays Key Role In Local Operations

Be it bridge passes or school buses, ferry service or household moving, Post Transportation is always ready to handle these problems and more as one of the most active sections at the Presidio.

Post Transportation Section, which is commanded by Lt. Colonel J. J. Speciale, is divided into four basic divisions: Movements services, supply, highway, harbor craft and marine maintenance.

Post Motor Pool, which operates and maintains 331 assigned vehicles, has the additional responsibility of caring for 75 Sixth Army vehicles. It operates school buses which last year carried daily more than 1,000 children to classes.

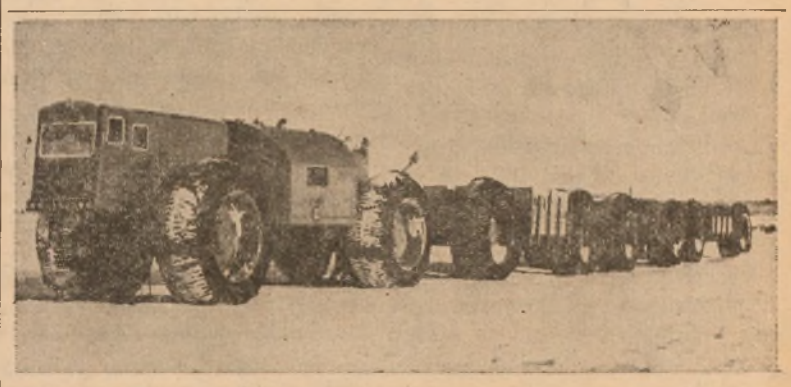
The Bay Area Armed Forces Radio Sedan Service, the military taxi service, is supported by the Motor Pool also.

Each month between 800 and 1000 requests are received by the Movement Services Division for the transportation of military personnel, their families and household goods to other installations. Of this number, between 250 and 400 personnel and dependents are moved overseas and 100 to 150 are transferred stateside.

The passenger branch issues approximately 5,000 Golden Gate bridge passes monthly providing toll-free passage for government and private vehicles. The supply division maintains an active inventory of more than 1,000 items, including land transportation gear, mostly in the category of marine items.

The Harbor Craft and Marine Maintenance Division operates and maintains passenger and cargo service daily to Angel Island with the use of three T-type vessels. A Q-boat is maintained for emergency Air-Sea rescue for the entire Bay Area. Harbor Craft also maintains a Fire-Watch for Angel Island and the surrounding areas.

New Army Shelter Will Withstand Stiff Arctic Winds



Ft. Belvoir, Va.—A new cold weather shelter has been developed by the Corps of Engineers' Research and Development Laboratories here.

It is capable of withstanding winds of 100 miles per hour and snow loads up to 75 pounds per square foot. Seven men can erect the shelter in 90 minutes under ideal conditions.

After highly successful tests at Ft. Churchill, Canada, and Big Delta, Alaska, the building was adopted by the Army for use as barracks, communication shelters, and first aid stations.

The 20x48-foot structure is made of 3" panels. The cracks are lined on the inner surface with aluminum foil on kraft paper.

It is furnished with an oil burning space heater which can keep the inside temperature at a comfortable 70 degrees when the outside temperature is 65 degrees below zero. (AFPS)

Pictured above is the Army Transportation Corps' Sno-Train, a gigantic freight train developed for use in the Arctic Circle. The attached trailers each are capable of carrying 12 tons.

Mush to Chug!

Sno-Train Continuing Proof Of Corps' Top Adaptability

The Army Transportation Corps and the machine age may soon make the sled dog just a house pet along the Arctic Circle.

With an eye toward conquering the frozen north, the Army has developed a gigantic "Sno-Train" that bounces along its icy course with all the zest of a locomotive.

Constructed for the corps by R. G. LeTourneau, Inc., Longview, Tex., the Sno-Train is 174 feet long and travels on 16 of the largest tires ever rigged on a vehicle.

Standing 10 feet tall and four feet wide, the tires are of the extremely low pressure, tubeless type. They give the Sno-Train a high degree of flotation for easy travel over deep snow and marshy ground.

Officially designated as a "Logistical Cargo Carrier," it is designed to overcome the severe transportation problems encountered above the Arctic Circle and similar isolated regions.

Carrying 500 gallons of fuel and driven by a 600 horsepower diesel engine, the Sno-Train is capable of hauling a payload of 15 tons on snow.

It can be operated by one man from the control car, which has sleeping space for a crew of four.

Only the two front wheels of the vehicle are steered by the operator. Succeeding cars are guided by mechanical coupling devices, which enable them to track automatically.

The Army said the Snow-Train was extensively tested during the winter under the direction of the Transportation Research and Development Command at Houghton, Mich.

When its evaluation period is completed there, the Sno-Train will be shipped to the Greenland Ice Cap for more tests.

Drama Expert Seeks Talent; Plans Meet

Some of San Francisco's renowned theatrical tradition is about to rub off on the Presidio of San Francisco if Post Special Services and M/Sgt. Allen J. Larkin have their way.

Sergeant Larkin, a newly assigned NCO with a wealth of experience in almost every facet of entertainment, has been named to organize and head a new Presidio Little Theater Group.

Lt. Col. Freeman F. Gage, Jr., Post Special Services officer, has given the project his blessing and assigned use of Bldg. 117 to the group.

This week, via the Star Presidian, Sergeant Larkin sent out an urgent first call for a meeting of all those who might be interested in any phase of little theater. He urged everyone with, or without, any specialized skill, either technical or dramatic, to meet with him at Bldg. 117 at 1700 hours on Wednesday 1 August.

"If you have ever aspired to the theater in any form, now is the time to get in on the ground floor. We will welcome your help whether you are military, civilian employee or dependent. There is a vital need for actors, directors, playwriters, set designers, electricians, et. al. We're even in the market for idea men."

Sergeant Larkin has had extensive experience in the production of service entertainment. He served with Special Services in Japan and Korea from '46 through '51 and was with Armed Forces Radio Services in Tokyo. He wrote and directed a highly successful musical while serving with the 10th Special Services Company in Korea.

He has worked with such outstanding groups as the Tokyo International Players and the Niagara Falls Little Theater Group.

During a three-year tour in Germany, Sgt. Larkin served as a music librarian and writer and also worked on several musical productions. He was later assigned as entertainment chief for the Munich Sub Area Southern Area Command where he escorted numerous French, English, Spanish and German entertainers on tours of area installations.

DoD Hits Low Taste Of Some PX, Libraries

Washington — The Defense Department has told commanders to keep close check on books and magazines available to servicemen at exchange stores and libraries to insure that higher standards of decency are maintained.

A memorandum, signed by Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Defense Secretary for Manpower, Personnel and Reserves, stated that criticism has been leveled by segments of the press and members of Congress from time to time on the moral quality of periodicals sold to military personnel.

Mr. Burgess singled out the Far East as the particular area that has been under criticism.

He said a lack of command guidance in the choice of publications available overseas could result "in loading shelves with poor quality magazines, which contribute nothing to . . . the development of high moral standards."

Commanders were requested to take action "to insure that the books and periodicals offered to service personnel through military and quasi-military sources reflect the standards of decency and morality which characterize our military forces." (AFPS)

Cronkhite's New Club Director Loves Work

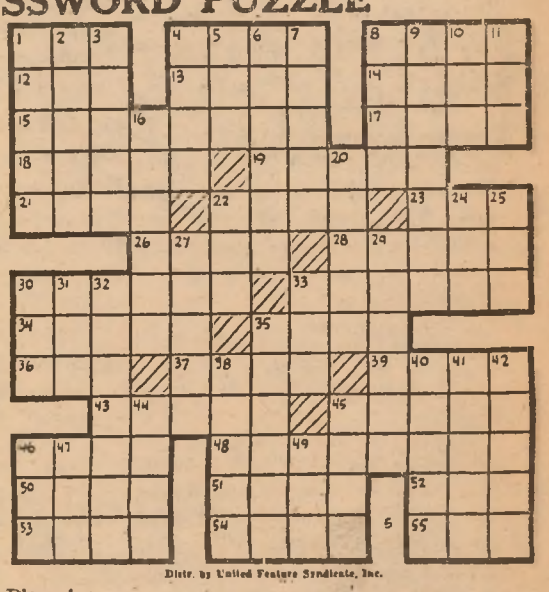
New director of the Fort Cronkhite Service Club, Miss Aliisa Gronroos, who is in this work "Because it is interesting . . . satisfying and provides an opportunity to travel," has a long, varied career in Service Club direction.

She came to Fort Cronkhite from Central Service Club at Fort Ord. Prior to that she was with service clubs at Sharpe General Depot, Fort Carson, and Augsburg, Germany. She served two years at the latter station.

Tan, blond and beaming Miss Gronroos says that the highlight of the past few years was her trip to Helsinki, Finland, for the 1952 Olympics. The trip to Finland gave her the opportunity to travel all over the country looking up her many relatives.

Miss Gronroos worked for United Air Lines as a stewardess for two years. She flew out of San Francisco, first up and down the West Coast, and then on the Hawaiian run.

Also in her colorful background is a period when she worked for the Roy Rogers Enterprises. She did promotional work for Rogers, who she describes as being "a very informal sort of guy."



"I like it, I really do," she says of Fort Cronkhite, her new assignment. "The fellows are very nice and cooperative and it's a nice setting," she explains.

Miss Gronroos, who is assisted at Fort Cronkhite by Isabelle Walker, replaces Eileen Pierce, who left to teach school.

3 Servicemen Win Berths On U.S. Fencing Team

New York — Three service swordsmen—Yeoman Third Class Sewall Shurtz, Lt. (jg) William Andre and AF reserve Lt. Richard Pew—have been named to the 16-man U.S. fencing team which will compete in the 1956 Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia.

Shurtz, who won the national foil championship and was third in epee, was chosen for both weapons on the Olympic squad. In 1954, the 23-year-old fencer from the Brooklyn Receiving Station won the national epee crown.

Lt. Andre of the Naval Academy, runner-up to Abe Cohen of the N. Y. Fencers Club for national epee honors, was selected for that weapon on the Olympic team. Cohen beat Andre, 5-3, in a fence-off for the epee title. Andre was a member of the 1952 U. S. Olympic pentathlon team and is a candidate for that team for this year's games.

Also chosen for epee on the Olympic team was Richard Pew, who recently graduated from Cornell University, where he was a member of the AFROTC unit.

Lt. (jg) Richard Berry of the Third Naval District was named as an alternate to the Olympic team in epee and Capt. Charles Steinhardt of Orly Field, France, was picked as an alternate in foil. Berry finished ninth in epee and Steinhardt eighth in foil in the nationals.

Servicemen made a strong showing in epee, placing seven out of 12 in the final standings. Andre was second, Shurtz, third; Ens. Frank Zechlin, a recent graduate of the Naval Academy, sixth; A/2C Henry Kolowrat, Mitchel AFB, N. Y., eighth; Berry, ninth; SP3 Robert Miller, a pentathlon candidate from Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., 11th and Lt. Ben Firth of James Connally AFB, Tex., 12th.

Some 40 servicemen competed for team and individual honors in the annual fencing championships which were sponsored by the Amateur Fencing League of America. (AFPS)

An extensive athletic program for antiaircraft personnel of the San Francisco Bay Area Defense, and other antiaircraft units on the Pacific Coast, is being developed, the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command announced recently.

3 New Candidates Bolster U.S. Pentathlon Chances

Ft. Sam Houston, Tex (AFPS)—U. S. modern pentathlon hopes in the forthcoming Olympic Games in Melbourne have been bolstered by the appearance of three new candidates and the return of 1st Lt. Harlan Johnson to daily workouts after suffering an injury in recent international competition.

Biggest name athlete among the new aspirants is Lt. (jg) William Andre, 24, of the Naval Academy. He has competed in three world modern pentathlon championships and the Pan-American Games and is a member of the 1956 Olympic fencing team.

This marks the first modern pentathlon competition for Daniels, a 1955 graduate of Montana University, where he lettered in swimming. Daniels, assigned to Ft. Sam Houston from the 3rd Inf. Regt. in Korea, recently took fourth place in the Inter-Service triathlon competition.

Steinman, a 1956 graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, tried out briefly for the pentathlon team last year prior to the world championships. He is from Ft. Dix, N.J.

Johnson, who was thrown from his mount while competing in the international meet here between the U.S., Mexico and Brazil, and suffered a shoulder separation, is again making jumps on horseback.

Trials to determine the four-man team which will represent the U.S. at Melbourne will be held sometime in October.

The modern pentathlon is the military all-around event of the modern Olympics consisting of the 5,000-meter, cross-country run on horseback; the 25-meter, timed-fire pistol shoot; the 300-meter free-style swim; the 4,000-meter cross-country run, and epee fencing.

For the damage control exercise, the men entered the U.S.S. Buttercup, a mock up of several cruiser compartments, and tried to keep the water out, while Navy personnel scored "hits" on them.

Salt Water Soldiers Prove Seaworthy During Summer Test

By Sp3 R. A. Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

Question: What kind of Army company needs sextants to operate, has 32 warrant officer slots and an assigned officer can pull rank on the CO?

Answer: The unique USAR 449th Transportation Company (Floating Craft). This Oakland unit—one of five in the United States—last week completed at Fort Baker its first summer training under its new title. (Former designation: Harbor Craft and Marine Maintenance Battalion.)

Dubbed the "sailgers," these salt water doggies have an active duty equipment authorization that includes 47 vessels—everything from the 240-foot refrigerator barge to four floating 240-horse "outboard motors" used for propelling barges.

During World War II the varied missions of floating craft units included manning the Sea Mules for the Rhine crossing, running tugs on the Thames, sailing barges up the Rouen canal to Paris and carrying VIPs and strategic supplies between adjacent islands of the South Pacific.

If the 449th were called to active duty, a major would command the refrigerator ship while the company itself would be run by a captain. This inconsistency results from a lesson learned during the Second World War. Then the company commanders outranked the captains of the huge "floating ice box" refrigerator ships. Consequently headquarters company oftentimes got all the choice goodies and others had to do without. Today the CO can no longer pull rank on his "grocery ship" commander.

The 43 officers and men of the 449th who last week completed their summer training tour at Fort Baker made full use of the Harbor Craft Detachment's facilities there. The unit would each day hold dry land classes on maritime fundamentals and then put the lessons to work by keeping the detachment's 65-foot LCM-8 running all hours and making the Angel Island ferry runs several times each day.

Highlight of the training session came when the company took the 65-foot freight and passenger carrying T-boat on a cruise to Rio Vista and back, a trip of 117 miles. Leaving before dawn to get the feel of night travel, the men received practice in every phase of harbor craft operation. They plotted positions, solved time and speed problems, and handled all mechanical operations.

The most hectic training day came when the company visited Treasure Island for fire and damage control training. The men were put in the U.S.S. Buttercup, a mock up of several cruiser compartments, and given the choice of keeping the water out or swimming. The Navy men who ran the problem had 23 different ways of simulating "hits." And after each hit water gushed into the Buttercup; needless to say the 449th was kept sloshingly busy.

But the Navy chief, who upon their arrival cracked, "Whata you need damage control for—somebody blow a hole in your latrine?" blinked with admiration when the day was over. "As good a job as the Navy could do . . . and with very high morale," he admitted.

One factor in the high morale of the 449th is no doubt their splendid opportunity for advancement. The company which presently has only 43 officers and men is authorized full strength which calls for 5 officers, 32 warrants and 235 enlisted men. Presently two of the warrants and one officer are men who have come up through the ranks. The program today is geared to take a private to warrant in four years.

Vacancies at present include slots for 27 warrants, 3 master sergeants, 14 Sfc's, 1 sergeant, 14 Sp2's and 80 Sp3's. In the company, warrant officers hold positions of masters, mates and marine engineers in all vessels over 65 feet. A man holding a Marine License is eligible for a direct warrant officer commission.

The company, made up almost entirely of East Bay people, meets every Wednesday from 2000 to 2200 hours at building 270, Oakland Army Terminal. More information about the unit may be obtained at the weekly meetings or by calling the Unit Advisor at TW 3-4100, extension 2185.

NCO Meeting

will furnish the Cordiner committee with material from which they can plan "a dynamic program of legislative and administrative measures," that will attract and retain needed personnel, Burgess said.

Authorities say non-coms chosen for the symposiums will be able to speak their piece. "Officer guidance" will be limited to organizing the conference. No restriction has been placed on the variety of topics to be discussed. Officials say they hope for full and free discussion—on irritating conditions of service that can be corrected without legislation, as well as corrections that require law changes.

The 15 Army Command enlisted man representatives that are going to confer in Washington were chosen on the basis of experience, leadership and technical qualification in their specialties. Important was their "familiarity with the opinions of their contemporaries and their ability to express themselves."

While in Washington Sergeant O'Hagan will be housed at Fort Belvoir, Va., 20 miles south.

Army Discloses Size Of Redstone Missile; Towers 69 Ft. High

Washington—The Army has disclosed the actual size of the Redstone guided missile, fore-runner of the Jupiter intermediate-range ballistic missile.

An Army fact sheet released on the Redstone described the missile as standing "some 69 feet tall with a diameter of about 70 inches." It has a cylindrical body, conical nose and cruciform tail surfaces.

Since the Redstone operates in the upper atmosphere, it carries its own supply of oxygen as well as fuel. Liquid oxygen, alcohol and hydrogen peroxide are used to power the missile, the Army said.

The Redstone, which has a range far beyond that of normal artillery, was developed by Army Ordnance scientists at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Huntsville, Ala. (AFPS)

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 10 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 3 August, 1956

Some Start!

The sum of over $1,000 is the gratifying sum tabulated by the Central Post Fund office in the pay day kick-off collection for Army Emergency Relief. The above sum approximates donations made by 12 sections within the Post.

Company A of the 6002nd SU was the first military unit to come through 100 per cent in the collection total for the first day.

When final tabulation of Presidio AER collections is completed it is anticipated that donations here will triple the amount collected last year for the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

Neophytes Please Note!

Army Air Offers 'Whirlybird' Ride To Uninitiated

Curiosity shown toward the "whirlybirds" at Crissy field by persons in the Presidio area has prompted the Sixth Army Aviation Section to extend an invitation to officers and upper two grade NCO's to come down for a briefing and a short ride in the aircraft.

The Army Aviation Section has requested the names of those persons "who would be interested in a brief description and demonstration of the capabilities and limitations of the Army reconnaissance type helicopter to include a 10 or 15 minute orientation flight in the local area."

The invitation specifies "officers, and NCO's of the top two grades," and is primarily intended for those persons (including WAC personnel) who have not previously flown or have only had a short flight in a helicopter.

Section chiefs are requested to submit names by 3 August of those two top graders in their sections who would like to take advantage of the invitation. A negative report is desired if applicable.

Army Lets Contract For Jupiter Missile

Washington—A $3,175,000 contract to design and produce the Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile has been awarded to the Chrysler Corp.

An artillery-type missile, the Jupiter has a range of 1,500 miles, the Army announcement said.

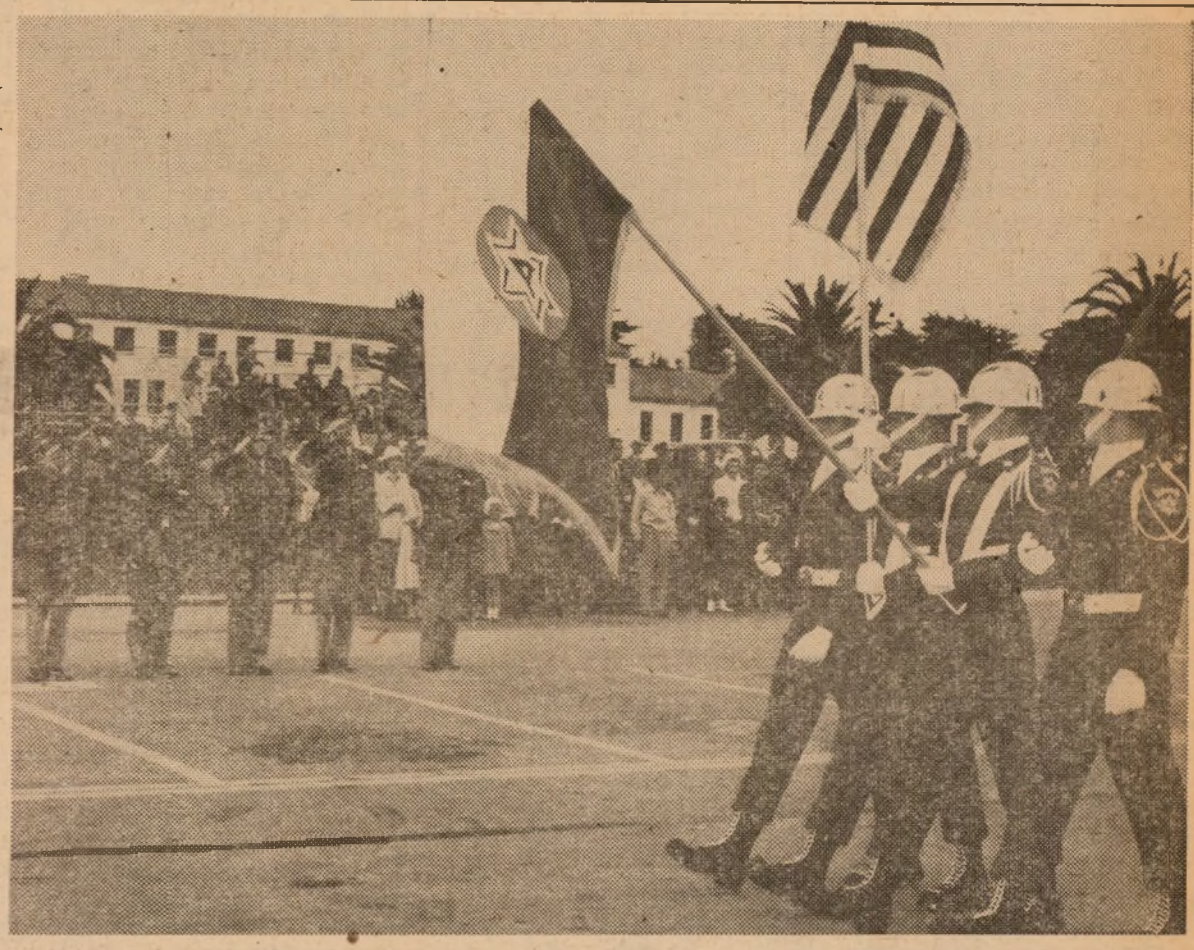
Reserve WOs And Some EM Are Needed

Washington — Reserve warrant officers and qualified enlisted men are encouraged to apply for active duty as warrant officers in critically needed specialties, according to a recent Department of the Army Circular.

Eligible personnel may get direct appointments based on previous training or experience or by attending a technical course which upon graduation leads to a subsequent commission.

Present critically needed warrant officer specialties are Master or Mate, Artillery Electronic Fire Control Assistant, Guided Missile Integrated Fire Control Assistant, Guided Missile Material Assistant, Rotary Wing Aviator, Fire Control Maintenance and Repair Officer, Guided Missile Systems Maintenance Officer-Nike, and Guided Missile Maintenance Officer-Corporal.

The Army advised that all applications for direct appointment to warrant officer and concurrent active duty must be forwarded through command channels to the Adjutant General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C. (ANS)



Coming—Deep Freeze!

Washington — The deep-freeze will soon become standard equipment in Army kitchens.

The Army has revealed that messes in the U. S. and overseas will be supplied with frozen food cabinets in addition to present electric refrigerators.

Main reason for the freezers is the increased use of frozen food delicacies in Army menus.

Army officials, explaining the move, stated something the housewife has known all along —refrigerators just won't keep food frozen if they don't have a freezer. (AFPS)

Camp Perry, O.—Preparations for the 1956 National Matches which start 14 August are nearing completion, it was announced today by Colonel Charles F. Leonard, Jr., Fort Benning, Ga., executive officer for this year's championship rifle and pistol meet.

Advanced detachments have been working since early July to make this year's matches the best ever held at this yearly site of the National championships. The matches will conclude on 8 September.

Leading off in this year's event will be the free pistol matches to select members for the Olympics this fall in Australia. Other Olympic events to be fired during the three and a half weeks include 300 meter free rifle, 50 meter free rifle and international rapid fire pistol.

Main interest among service competitors will be in the National Trophy rifle team and individual matches as well as the National Trophy pistol and individual events. Another match gaining increased attention among servicemen is the infantry trophy match.

The Small Arms Firing School will conduct both advanced and basic courses in rifle and pistol. This is the first year the advanced course has been given and graduates will receive instructors' certificates.

Assistant executive for this year's shoot is Mr. Russell B. Warye, National Rifle Assn., Washington, D. C. Colonel Ransom M. Wood, USMC, Camp LeJeune, N. C., is range director. Range support battalions are from the Army's 16th Infantry Regiment, First Infantry Division, headed by Lt. Colonel Edward E. Mayer and the Second Marine Division's Sixth Marines, commanded by Lt. Colonel W. M. Caulfield.

Army's New Missile Tops Old Corporal

Washington — The Army's Corporal guided missile, a high-powered artillery weapon, now has an even more destructive successor. The Corporal II is similar in appearance to its 45-foot forerunner but much more effective.

The new version of the Corporal has sturdier parts and is simplified for speedier assembly and easier maintenance.

In addition, modifications provide greater durability to withstand shock and damage, to which sensitive supersonic missiles are vulnerable.

The Corporal I was rushed into production in 1954 to give U. S. military forces in Europe an atomic deterrent to possible aggression.

Since that time, research and development scientists and engineers had been intent upon producing an improved Corporal. Artillerymen who had been manning the Corporal I overseas are being returned to the States in crews for retraining with the new missile.

Slate Nuclear Tests At Stoneman

Facilities at Camp Stoneman, inactive Army installation at Pittsburg, Calif., will be utilized for a joint Army-Navy research project for testing methods of decontamination of radioactive fall-out. The tests, in which simulated fall-out will be used, will last about six weeks commencing August 15th and will involve about 70 personnel.

Conducted by the U. S. Naval Radiological Defense Laboratory of San Francisco, the test will be participated in by Sixth Army troops using standard Army equipment to achieve maximum realism in the decontamination procedures. Various decontamination methods will be evaluated on buildings and hardstand contaminated by simulated nuclear weapon fall-out material—actually, soil mixed with a small amount of radioactive tracer material.

The Test Commander will be Major William M. Home, Chemical Corps, U. S. Army, of the U. S. Naval Radiological Defense Laboratory technical staff. Most of the Army personnel involved will be members of the 50th Chemical Platoon of Fort Ord.

VA Offers Detailed Info On Application Of Law

The President, this week, signed the Survivor Benefits Act revising benefits for the dependents of deceased servicemen and veterans who died of service-connected causes.

Veterans Administration announced that it is taking immediate steps to put this new law into operation even though payments cannot begin prior to the current basic military pay of January 1, 1957, the effective date of the Act.

VA stressed that this law does NOT change death pension benefits to widows and children of veterans whose deaths were not as a result of service.

Widows, dependent parents and guardians of orphan children receiving compensation for the service-connected death of a veteran are requested NOT to contact VA for information.

Veterans Administration will notify each person receiving death compensation under present law concerning his rights under the new law.

The new law is designed to:

● 1. Revise the death compensation program by providing monthly payments to widows partially related to military pay; slightly increase existing uniform payments for orphan children; and to provide a sliding scale of benefits for dependent parents subject to certain annual income limitations.

● 2. Extend Social Security coverage to those in the armed forces on a contributory basis; and

● 3. Revise the six months death gratuity to range from a minimum of $800 to a maximum of $3,000. This will be administered by the various service departments.

● The new law also eliminates coverage of service personnel under the Servicemen's Indemnity Act (the so-called "$10,000 free insurance") and coverage of reserve personnel under the Federal Employees Compensation Act on and after January 1, 1957.

● The new law continues the right of veterans disabled in service to apply to VA for the five-year policy or any of the six permanent plans of National Service Life Insurance within one year from the date VA finds their disabilities to be service-connected.

● However, the special five-year nonconvertible NSLI term policies, for which those now in service have to apply within 120 days after their discharge will be discontinued under the new law on and after January 1, 1957. Policies now in force or issued before January 1, 1957, will not be affected.

● The new form of compensation for widows, orphan children and dependent parents of those who died as a result of service will be called dependency and indemnity compensation. It will be paid by VA.

● Persons eligible for death compensation under present laws are protected in their existing rights and will be able to elect the new form of compensation if it is to their advantage.

● VA will send election forms outlining the new benefits to help them to reach a decision. For this reason, VA asked that no inquiries be made either by letters or at its offices until after the forms are received. The forms are expected to be mailed to widows, guardians of children and dependent parents within the next 30 to 60 days.

● New rates of dependency and indemnity compensation will be paid only if the person who elects the new benefit surrenders servicemen's indemnity payments. National Service Life Insurance and U. S. Government Life Insurance payments do not affect the right to elect benefits under the new law.

● Payments to widows under the new law are made at the monthly rate of $112 plus 12 per cent of the rank held by the veteran at the time he died or was separated from service. This combination ranges upwards from a minimum of $122 monthly.

● Dependency and indemnity compensation payments are made in addition to Social Security payments to widows and children. Generally, no additional compensation payments to widows are provided for children.

● Where there is no eligible widow, children under 18 years of age are eligible to receive this new form of compensation at the following monthly rates: One child, $70; two children, $100; three children, $130; and each additional child, $25 each.

● Children over 18 years of age may be eligible to receive the new compensation if they are attending school or are helpless.

● Dependency and indemnity compensation for parents is paid at a sliding scale of rates related to annual income. A single parent may receive rates ranging from $15 to $75 monthly if his income does not exceed $1,750 per year.

● Rates for two parents living together and for parents who have remarried are similarly related to income limitations. In computing income under this law, however, certain VA benefits which are excluded under present law must be counted.

Insurance Still Good Under Act

Washington—The Survivor Benefits Act, slated to become law 1 Jan., 1957, will provide greater long-range protection for the families of servicemen who die or are disabled on active duty than present free insurance.

At the same time, the new law preserves the government insurance rights of members of the Armed Forces contracted prior to April 25, 1951, the date free insurance started.

Under the 1951 provision, the death indemnity paid to a widow was $92.90 a month for 10 years, plus Veterans Administration compensation. However, when the 10 years elapsed, she was left without adequate income, usually when she needed it most.

The Survivor Benefits Act pays a continuing amount, ranging from $122 to $266 a month, for the balance of her life or until she remarries.

Under the act, those disabled who now are serving, or those who become disabled on active duty, or active duty for training, or inactive duty for training, including National Guardsmen and Reservists, may apply for $10,000 in government insurance within one year of incurrence of disability.

For servicemen who had U. S. Government Life Insurance or National Service Life Insurance on permanent plan under partial waiver of premium, five year level term, or who surrendered government insurance policies for cash, the act provides:

● Those in the Armed Forces who had government insurance on permanent plan and waived a part of the premium prior to Jan. 1, 1957, shall have their insurance contractual rights preserved and can continue this policy by application and payment of the premium for the current month and subsequent months thereafter.

● Any individual who had USGLI or NSLI on the five-year-level premium term plan which expired when he was in active service after April 25, 1951, or within 120 days after separation from active duty, and in any case prior to Jan. 1, 1957, shall, upon payment of the premium and evidence of good health, be granted an equivalent amount of insurance on the same plan at the premium rate of his then attained age.

● Any person who surrendered a USGLI or NSLI policy on a permanent plan for cash while in active service on or after April 25, 1951, and prior to Jan. 1, 1957, may, upon application (in writing) while on active duty or within 120 days of separation, be granted without medical examination, insurance on the same plan not in excess of the amount surrendered for cash or may reinstate the policy by paying the reserve and the current and subsequent monthly payment.

● Servicemen who have these reinsurance rights must take up the option to reinstate them by May 1, 1957.

● Those who dropped NSLI policies for any reason after WWII or prior to April 25, 1951, will not be reinsurable, except "that such renewals shall be effected in cases where the policy is lapsed only in the event the elapse occurred not earlier than two months prior to expiration of the term period. . . ." (AFPS)

The Senate ratified the Geneva international treaty regarding rights in aircraft on 17 August, 1949.

New Law Will Become Effective On 1 January

President Eisenhower has signed into law the Survivor Benefits Act. Termed "one of the most important pieces of career legislation" during the past session of the 84th Congress, the new bill becomes the law of the land on 1 January.

Since the new measure will establish an entirely new system of dependent benefits, the Star Presidian will endeavor to present and keep you right up to snuff on every detail.

The following is information gleaned from several news sources and includes material from AFPS, Army Times, ANS and others:

Divided into five parts insofar as the serviceman and his family are concerned, the Act increases death compensation allowances—especially to widows—and provides them with more equitable payments, particularly later in life.

It also puts all service personnel under full Social Security paying monthly benefits to those who live beyond the age of 65 and giving greater protection to their dependent survivors in the event of death.

Full participation in the Social Security System requires a monthly deduction of two per cent from the pay check of the worker plus an additional two per cent contribution by his employer based on the employe's wages up to $350 a month.

Since servicemen work for the U. S. Government, the employe's share will be matched by Defense funds at no penalty to the individual.

Under the present system, Armed Forces personnel are given Social Security credit based on an average monthly wage of $160. Thus, a man separated from active duty without being retired can add these credits to any he may receive on a civilian job. At age 65 he can draw old age benefits based partially on the time he spent in the Armed Forces and partially on his civilian employment.

However, the man who is drawing retirement pay cannot now receive Social Security benefits based on the same period for which he is drawing retirement pay—except for those retired on disability. Thus a man retired under the present system, without a disability, gets no social security credit for time spent in service. The only Social Security benefits he can receive are those based on civilian employment.

The Survivor Benefits Act would change this. Beginning 1 Jan., 1957, military personnel will begin accumulating Social Security credit based on their actual pay. They can count this time toward both retirement pay and Social Security benefit. Moreover, they can go back and claim credit also for the time spent in service since April 25, 1951. Normally, they will be eligible for old age benefits at age 65 based entirely on their years of service, and this will be in addition to retirement pay.

The five parts to the new law of interest to the serviceman, each one better for him dollar-and-cent-wise over a period than present statutes, are:

● Six-month death gratuity—This is a lump-sum payment to the widow, child or parent of a serviceman who dies on active duty.

The gratuity, paid to eligible survivors as quickly as possible, is computed at six times all items of monthly pay of the deceased—but not allowances—in an amount not less than $800 or more than $3,000. Previously, this payment could be as low as $468.

● Widow's compensation—This is a new type of monthly benefit, called "dependency and indemnity compensation," paid to a widow by the Veterans' Administration. The amount is calculated at the rate of $112, plus 12 per cent of the base pay of the serviceman.

For example, the widow of a private first class with three years service (see chart) will receive $127 a month from the day of his death for the balance of her life or until she remarries. This will be paid whether she is employed or has other income.

In the event the serviceman is survived by a widow and children, the monthly benefits for the children will be derived from Social Security.

● Children's compensation—When a widow is not eligible for dependency and indemnity compensation due to death, divorce or remarriage, the VA will make monthly compensation payments to the children at the following rates: One child, $70 a month; two children, $100; three children, $130; and $25 a month for each additional child. Payments to a child normally end at age 18, but may continue to age 21 if a student, or as long as the child is incapable of self-support.

In addition, children will be eligible for income from their deceased father's Social Security.

● Dependent parents' compensation—The new law is fairer than the old as far as parents are concerned. In the past a parent, or parents, could not receive compensation if their income was more than specific amounts.

The act prescribes payments to dependent parents on a sliding scale. That is, they may receive income if the work and the amount of the benefit depends on these earnings, or their total income.

For example, a parent with an income of less than $750 a year can receive $75 a month compensation. If income ranges between $1,250 and $1,500 a year, the payments will be $30 a month. When both parents are dependent, the total benefit may be as much as $100 if their combined income is less than $1,000 a year.

Under the old system, compensation payments to a widow, children or parents were made at one rate if a serviceman died in time of war and at a lesser rate if death occurred in peacetime. Now, the compensation is the same.

● Social Security—All military personnel will be covered by Social Security. This will, at present, require a monthly deduction of two per cent of base pay from each individual serving on active duty.

However, the maximum amount of pay which may be taxed is $4,200 a year. A private first class with two years service will pay $2.34 a month and a sergeant first class with eight years service, $4.45 a month. The maximum yearly deduction will not exceed $84, regardless of the base pay in any grade.

Social Security will provide monthly income for a widow with children, for children alone, for a widow at age 65, or for dependent parents and also for the serviceman at 65. This will be in addition to his military retirement pay.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

Reserve Unit Boasts Business Talent

The 335th Machine Records Unit (Reserve) now on active duty at the Presidio is living proof that should national emergency arise, a stockpile of trained men and women of varying skills and professions could be drawn into military service at practically a moment's notice.

Here on their annual summer active duty tour are 20 people whose former military training has been so thorough that although their civilian ways of life are widely divergent they can be absorbed in a single section and work together on a project calling for united knowledge of the job in hand.

The parent organization at the Presidio now utilizing the services of the 335th MRU Reserve is the 56th Machine Records Unit whose mission it is to collect, audit and maintain military records for the headquarters and the Department of the Army.

Similar units function at all Army installations throughout the United States. They are staffed by highly skilled men and women whose working days are dedicated to accuracy, to machines which make dots and dashes and symbols on cards telling a complete story of person, place or item, of money spent and money saved, or in general, of the vast and complicated system of bookkeeping which is necessary for the maintenance of an army.

The 335th MRU Reserve unit is composed of men and women from the San Francisco area. Its commanding officer is Captain Harold Gannon whose civilian job is office management. The executive officer is Lieutenant Alfred P. Alessandri, owner-partner in a general contracting firm. Warrant Officer Harvey Granquist is a supervisor for an IBM Corporation Service bureau. The 335th MRU's first sergeant is co-owner of a doughnut shop and Master Sergeant Lawrence Marks is a mail carrier. There are men from food stores, printing concerns and paper factories in the 335th; from bakeries, railroads and from colleges and in many cases from civilian positions identical to those they now serve during their reserve duty tour.

Another unique factor about the 335th MRU Reserve Unit is that it carries on its roster five ex-service women who were once assigned to the parent organization at the Presidio and who now serve there in civilian capacity. These are reservists Master Sergeant Dorothy Nichols, Sfc. Gloria Guardino, Sergeant Dorothy Bond, Sergeant Jane Brost and Sp/2 Clara Haase.

Together at the 56th MRU with their male counterparts they share honors with the Nation's army of men and women reservists in conveying a vital message to the observant; that the program which brings their annual services into focus, is a worthy and a valuable one to the United States.

Sp3 To WO In Four Years!

A young man who joined the Army a year out of high school in 1952 was sworn in as a warrant officer Monday.

Warrant Officer M. Harless, currently serving as fire control maintenance mechanic, was sworn in by Lt. Colonel Charles M. Ashley, battalion commander. He will assume the duties of his new rank when he reports to the 513th AAA Missile Battalion in Seattle, Wash., next month.

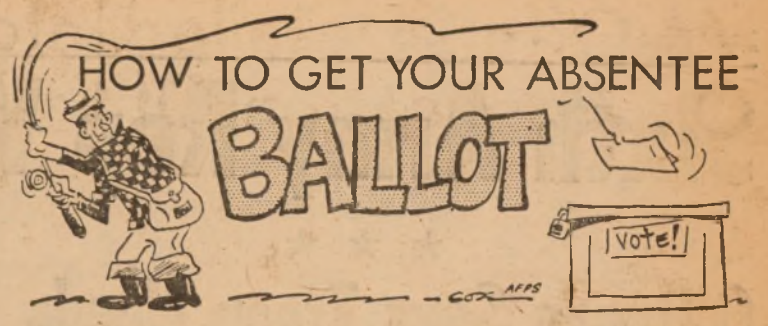
This 23 year old warrant officer graduated from high school in Greenville, O., in 1951. After working a year as apprentice civil engineer for the American Aggregates corporation, he volunteered for Army duty. Early in his career he successfully passed the USAFI College GED test.

He has graduated from the Radar M33 maintenance course and the guided missile FCS maintenance, SAM, course. Prior to coming to the 740th AAA Bn., he was assigned with the 606th AAA Gun Bn., Fort Niagara Falls, New York.

He's His Own Grandmaw? - - - Or Something!

A modern turnabout situation terminated last week when Lieutenant Earl K. Lloyd, Battery Commander, of Headquarters Battery 752d AAA Gun Battalion, pinned silver bars on his Intelligence Sergeant, now First Lieutenant Paul J. Tate.

Lieutenant Tate was formerly Lieutenant Lloyd's commanding officer in the 899th AAA Battalion in Germany. Then in 1954 Lieutenant Tate left the service to attend college. Returning to active duty as a sergeant first class in June of 1955, Lieutenant Tate was assigned to the 752nd AAA Battalion where he assumed duties of Intelligence Sergeant.



Shortly afterwards Lieutenant Lloyd returned from Germany and took command of the battery creating the turnabout situation of a commanding officer commanding a former commanding officer.

The situation resolved itself when Lieutenant Tate was recalled to active duty in the USAR and assigned to the 501st AAA Battalion at Camp Hanford, Washington.

Today, in 44 different countries, American officers and soldiers are engaged in teaching self defense to friendly nations. Thus, they are accomplishing two important purposes. First, they create indigenous strength which will discourage any aggressor seeking booty without a fight. At the same time, that development of self-strength builds morale and self-confidence in areas which otherwise might incline to neutralism or even to capitulation.

Armed Forces Press Service is issuing state-by-state information on absentee voting. Four states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are covered this week as part of the continuing series.

MISSOURI

Any qualified person who may be absent on election day may vote by absentee ballot.

Members of the Armed Forces may send a Federal Post Card application to the Clerk of the County Court or Board of Election Commissioners, county of residence, any time before the election. However, it is recommended that such application be made before Sept. 7. Marked ballots must reach officials by 6 p.m. Nov. 7.

Other voters must send for an "Application for Absentee Ballot" from one of the above offices. This form, when completed, can be sent in as early as Oct. 7, the day on which officials start mailing ballots.

All marked ballots must be in by 6 p.m. Nov. 7.

RHODE ISLAND

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians officially attached to units of the Armed Forces, their spouses and dependents may send Federal Post Card applications to the Secretary of State, Providence, any time before Nov. 6. Ballots will be sent starting about Oct. 17, and must be returned — complete with the prescribed oath—not later than Dec. 4.

Other qualified voters should apply for an "Application of Absentee Voter for Civilian Ballot" from the Secretary of State or City or Town Clerk. The form must be received by the Secretary of State by Oct. 12. Marked ballots, with the required oath, must be completed by Nov. 6, and must reach the Board of Elections by midnight Nov. 19.

CALIFORNIA

Any absent person may vote by absentee ballot.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilian employes serving outside the U.S., members of religious or welfare agencies assisting the Armed Forces and their spouses and dependents may send a Federal Post Card application to their County Clerk any time before election day.

Persons in the above categories discharged after Sept. 13 will be allowed to vote in their home counties after presenting proof of discharge date to their County Clerks.

Other qualified voters should request an "Application for an Absentee Ballot" from the County Clerk, if possible on or before Sept. 7. The completed application must be received by the Clerk between Oct. 17 and Nov. 1.

All ballots and registration forms will be mailed out as early as Oct. 17. They must be filled out by Nov. 6, and received by election officials by Nov. 22.

KENTUCKY

Any qualified voter who will not be present for voting may use an absentee ballot.

Members of the Armed Forces and overseas employes of the government and their wives may send Federal Post Card applications to their County Court Clerk any time before Oct. 27.

Other voters should obtain an "Application for Absentee Voters' Ballot" and return it to their County Court Clerk before Oct. 27.

All ballots will be sent out when available and must be returned to election officials by Nov. 6.

There is no absentee voting in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

For further information, see your day For further information, see your voting officer.

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education and the States have joined forces to help persons who, because of their duty or service with the United States Government, will be absent from their legal voting places this presidential election year.

To guide you as to your state's particular absentee voting laws, AFPS has prepared a three part voting series. This article is the fourth in a series on registering to vote by absentee ballot.

CONNECTICUT

Registration is permanent and re-registration is not required.

Active service personnel, members of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service may apply for registration by mail to the Town Clerk, place of residence, at any time.

All other persons must appear in person in order to be admitted as a voter.

IOWA

You must re-register this year in those cities and townships where registration is required except Des Moines. Registration is permanent in Des Moines unless the voter did not vote at least once in the past four years.

All qualified absent persons are considered registered when a marked absentee ballot and the executed affidavit on the back of the ballot envelope have been accepted by the election officials.

LOUISIANA

Registration must be accomplished once every four years by every person except in parishes of more than 100,000 which have permanent registration. Registration may be accomplished only by appearing in person at the office of the Registrar of Voters, parish of residence, at any time up to Oct. 7.

FLORIDA

Registration is permanent in most Florida counties. Permanency is determined by the County Commissioners of each county. A voter who changes his residence from one county to another is subject to re-registration, which may be accomplished after he has lived in the new county six months.

First registration, where required, and re-registration must be in person at the office of the Supervisor of Registration, county of residence, before Oct. 5.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilian employees of the U. S. and their dependents whose registration has lapsed will receive a blank form for re-registration in the same envelope as the absentee ballot.

Any resident under 21 in the Armed Forces may pre-register for voting. He must appear in person at the Office of the Supervisor of Registration, county of residence, and fill out an affidavit that he is in service. When he reaches 21, he will obtain a certificate of registration.

KANSAS

All persons except members of the Armed Forces, civilian employes working with the Armed Forces overseas and their dependents whose residence is in counties with a population of 250,000 or more must register once every four years. Also, re-registration is required if person changes address or name. If these persons reside in cities with a population of 2,000 or more, they must register but such registration is permanent unless the voter failed to vote in a general election, moved or changed his name.

If registration is required, it must be accomplished in person at the office of the Registrar, or city of residence. This must be done before Oct. 17 in the cases of Kansas City, Topeka and Wichita and before Oct. 27 in the other instances.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians working for the Armed Forces outside the U. S. and their dependents need not register to vote by absentee ballot.

For further information, see your voting officer. (AFPS)

Sixth Army Rep Will State 'EMs' Views' Only

O'Hagan Says Troop Needs Vary; Not All Feel Alike

Special to the Star Presidian
Story and Photos by Sp3 R. A. Lewis, Associate Editor

Sixth Army non-com representative, Master Sergeant Patrick L. O'Hagan, who attended the Army level EM symposium in Washington, D.C., this week—organized to dig out the real factors, pro and con, that determine re-enlistment—wanted to make this point clear before he left last Friday:

"I'm not going back there as a know-it-all to tell them my opinions; I'm representing the Sixth Army EM's and I'll report all the viewpoints I've heard. . . . whether I agree with them or not."

And there were a lot of viewpoints—complaints, recommendations, gripes and a surprising number of compliments—for the Sergeant to take to Washington with him.

For 10 days prior to departure this deliberate speaking Master Sergeant spent all his waking hours interviewing nearly 200 enlisted men — privates, sergeants, RA's, US's, sixth month boys and career men. He spoke with men at Fort Lewis, Fort Ord, Camp Roberts and the Presidio.

"You know, I've met more people in the last ten days," commented the sergeant momentarily overawed with his project, "than I have in all the past year." His technique of operation was to just walk in wherever the mood struck him. Usually he was provided with an office where he could interview men in complete privacy.

"Everybody has a suggestion," says the 30 year old sergeant, whose black hair is just beginning to show flecks of gray, "but often I have to draw it out of them." In interviewing he found it best to ask a few hard leading questions and then sit back and listen to the comments.

Draftees had two major bones of contention, reports Sergeant O'Hagan. "Many felt that their civilian skills could have been better utilized, and, of course, most everyone agreed that they should be getting more pay.

"Regular Army men wanted more choice in overseas assignments and more permanent type housing. Many felt that the system for determining MOS's and promotions could be improved," said Sergeant O'Hagan.

"Everybody seemed very happy with recreation facilities which in most cases were felt to be not only adequate, but better than adequate," the sergeant reported, explaining that satisfactions as well as dissatisfactions were voiced during the interviews.

"Leaves and passes were considered quite liberal," he said, "and the men were generally satisfied with the food — of course, some companies were more satisfied than others."

The Sergeant found that most persons were happy with medical care, but unhappy with dental service. "It takes too long, and they can't get it when they want it," he explained. Almost to a man, those interviewed thought the new Army green uniforms would be a change to the better.

Besides being well briefed on the 15 topics on the agenda, each of the Army command EM representatives were expected to be able to discuss—in full detail—one assigned topic.

"Duty assignments," is Sergeant O'Hagan's special topic problem, and he is especially enthusiastic about it. "The main complaint," he explains, "is improper assignment in MOS. And the most popular solution is implementation of the career field program."

Such a program had been adopted by the Army before 1950 and was just getting a good start when the Korean War broke out. Rapid expansion of the Army at that time forced abandonment of the system.

"Basically it is a career guidance program. . . . It boils down to a man having to take a test to get promoted," says Sergeant O'Hagan. "If a man scores high enough he is promoted and awarded an appropriate MOS digit."

Such a program would also offer a warrant officer commission as incentive for the man who scores high enough. "This would create incentive for the top EM's to try to improve themselves," the Sergeant remarked.

"This will actually get to the roots of things," said Sergeant O'Hagan, praising this high level conference. "And if they are really serious about making changes they will hear the complaints and the solutions to the complaints."

But just who is this man who is representing all the enlisted men of Sixth Army? Sergeant O'Hagan would protest if he were called anything but a typical career enlisted man. Born in 1926 this native Californian joined the Army 12 years ago.

Each of the 15 Army commands were requested to send an EM representative from a different job field. Sixth Army was assigned the signal field and Sergeant O'Hagan was selected from all the signal unit nominees in the area.

He started out his Army career as a rifleman with the 45th Division in Germany. After a year he switched to signal work. In the ensuing years he has held positions as battery communications chief, chief teletype operator and message center supervisor. He will return to Fort Lewis as first sergeant of the 4th Signal Company.

Sergeant O'Hagan reports that the official Sixth Army G-1 position during his 10-day research investigation has been one of complete non-intervention. He was given a "free rein" to see anyone, talk about anything and carry any information he could find back to the symposium.

All four of the services have symposium-type conferences of top enlisted men planned for the first part of August. It is hoped that with the "grass roots" information gleaned from the meetings, the services can improve their enlisted personnel programs and better encourage career service.

All information brought out in the symposiums will be furnished to the Defense Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation, chairmaned by Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric. This committee's recommendations are expected to be the major factor in determining what career type legislation is endorsed by the administration next year.

Dinnertime Conversation is all part of the job for Master Sergeant Patrick L. O'Hagan, who prior to leaving for Washington, D.C., to attend Army level EM symposium on ways to improve Army personnel system, spent 10 days interviewing enlisted men in Sixth Army area. While dining at Headquarters Company (6002), Sergeant O'Hagan discusses his mission with Sgt. Alvin Linton, Post Personnel; and Sp3 Douglas W. Kirkland, Post S-3.

Forced Retirement after 20 years is a topic that comes up for consideration by Sergeant O'Hagan and Presidio soldiers as they relax in the new (6002) dayroom following dinner in that company. Opinions both for and against such a plan were expressed, and Sergeant O'Hagan—who personally does not favor such a plan—prepared to carry all views back to Washington. In the conversation, left to right, are M/Sgt. Raymond L. Everding, 6th Army Mobile Food Service; M/Sgt. O'Hagan; M/Sgt. James L. Patton, first sergeant (6002); and Sp3 Lee J. Ingram (6002).

Career Field Program implementation would solve a lot of problems agrees Sp2 Clarence D. Martin as he chats with Sergeant O'Hagan following dinner at (6002). "Duty assignments," is the Sergeant's special topic of discussion at the Army level Symposium which met in Washington, D.C., this week. He found that most enlisted men interviewed favored a return to the Career Field Program.

Group Labels Code Program Commendable

Washington — The Defense Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War has given high praise to service presentations of the six-point Code of Conduct to the Armed Forces.

Following a two-day review of training methods, the committee, headed by Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense, reported to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson that it viewed "the progress of the services in the Code of Conduct program to date as commendable."

Commenting specifically on progress in military training, the committee report said: "In preparation for a future conflict, the services have completely disseminated the Code with clarity and understanding in order to elicit complete support by the serviceman as being in his best self-interests."

Mr. Wilson expressed his personal appreciation to the service secretaries for the effort made.

From a childhood in the Shakespeare country of Stratford-on-Avon, to formal education in London and Paris, later to Hunter College, New York; to a movie career in Hollywood, and from Hollywood to the Presidio of San Francisco as an enlisted woman, is the capsule odyssey of Sfc. Renee C. Shearing, now assigned here to S-1, Billeting and Housing.

Twice widowed in England, Sgt. Shearing is the mother of a son, a Roman Catholic priest who is arch-diocesan director of a weekly theological radio and television program emanating from the University of San Francisco. Born to her in London by her first marriage, he is Father George M. Twigg Porter, S.J., who has frequently celebrated Mass at the Chapel of Our Lady at the Presidio.

Educated in British Public Schools, Father Porter attended the Jesuit Seminary in Los Angeles and completed the 15 years of study for the priesthood at the Jesuit Seminary of the Sacred Heart.

White-haired, astonishingly youthful and meticulous in appearance, Sgt. Shearing returned recently from a special study course at Loyola University where she effortlessly won an A in her subject: "How To Apply The Religious View In The Working Day World." (Of non-sectarian nature, such studies at Loyola University are open to the public.)

"What impressed me most while I was there," she declares, "is the importance of wearing the United States Army uniform as a medium of bringing before the public the purposes which our military men and women serve! My own white-dress uniform was directly responsible for my being asked to give an address at Loyola on the nature of enlisted women's assignments at the Presidio and in general."

Sgt. Shearing was first married to William H. T. Porter, a British Consul to Venezuela, who died under tragic circumstances. Her second marriage also ended disastrously when her last husband, Captain Charles D. Shearing, an RAF pilot, lost his life in a plane crash while flying members of the British nobility from Le Touquet, France, to London, in 1929.

After coming to the United States with her son, Sgt. Shearing entered Hunter College as a special student in Greek History and Dramatics. Her civilian background includes several years as a Hollywood actress for MGM studios where she starred with the late Leslie Howard in the Earl Haig series of Scotland Yard detective movies. She took the part of a Scottish dancing girl in "Random Harvest," with Greer Garson and Ronald Colman, and in "Street Scene," as an English nursemaid with Sylvia Sydney. She came into the Women's Army Corps from Los Angeles 13 years ago.

"My father was an American," Sgt. Shearing says proudly; "he met my Scottish Highlands mother here when she was only 16, and now my son and I are also American citizens." (Her parents returned to England before Sgt. Shearing was born.)

Since her assignment to the Presidio, Sgt. Shearing is credited with winning the esteem of practically everybody who knows her. She served part of her duty tour here as an assistant in supervising and chaperoning activities for the Presidio Service Club.

Recent conditions of ill-health involving major surgery at Letterman Army Hospital have not dampened Sgt. Shearing's buoyant spirit or her love of life.

Variety of interests and a zest for living a full life have been the major factors in the colorful career of Sfc. Renee C. Shearing. Sgt. Shearing is currently assigned to the Billeting and Housing section of Post S-1.

"If I had not been ill," she tells you, in an accent carrying the haunting lilt of heather bells, "I would never have known personally the service to God and humanity the medical profession contributes daily; "and if anyone across the world should ask me where the best doctors and surgeons are, I would unhesitatingly say: they are at Letterman Army Hospital in the Presidio of San Francisco."

Got An Old Spare Voice Around? Join Our Chapel Choir

Chaplain (Captain) Robert J. Plocki announces that plans are underway to establish a Catholic choir for the Chapel of Our Lady on the Presidio.

Officers, enlisted men and women and civilians who can carry a tune in a bucket—or a barrel—are asked to contact the chaplain's office, extension 2111, with a view to joining the prospective choir.

It is not necessary to have a trained voice to become a member of the church choir. It is, however, expected that choir members will be in a position to attend rehearshal once or twice at night during the week.

Further information on the new chapel choir may be secured by calling the chaplain's office.

Dear Mad'm, by Stella Walthall Patterson. Louise Dickinson Rich of Maine and Betty MacDonald of "The Egg and I" bow to the new champion—a lady who doesn't let her 80 years stop her from spending a year alone in the Siskiyou mountains, and then not only survives the dangers but likes it!

WACs Seek 3d Softball Crown

FACE TO FACE are these sluggers from Presidio of San Francisco's post baseball team. Expected to supply strong hitting for the Toreros in the Atwater Semi-pro Tourney are Sp2 Al Casino, Pfc. Harry Williams and Pfc. Norm Ellenberger. The locals resume action in the Tourney tomorrow.

Collins Twirls For Presidio In Tourney

Roger Collins, senior member of the Collins-Matzen pitching firm, will attempt to fireball the Presidio Toreros successfully through the second round of the Atwater Invitational baseball tournament tomorrow.

Collins, a 20-year-old right-hander who has a 10-5 record so far this season, flings against Hamilton Air Force Base's always pesky Flyers in earnest hopes of propelling the locals into the third round of play.

The 5-11, 172 pounder, who was a 20-game winner for the Presidio last year, will probably draw Hamilton's top hurler as his opponent in the all-important clash.

These worthies were the big factors in Collins' 6-2, three-hit victory over Parks Air Force Base last week. Selsor merely batted a perfect 4 for 4, while Sage banged out a two-run homer to aid the Presidio cause.

The Parks contest, however, got the locals exactly nowhere in the Atwater affair. It merely supplied them with practice for their tournament opener with March Air Force Base.

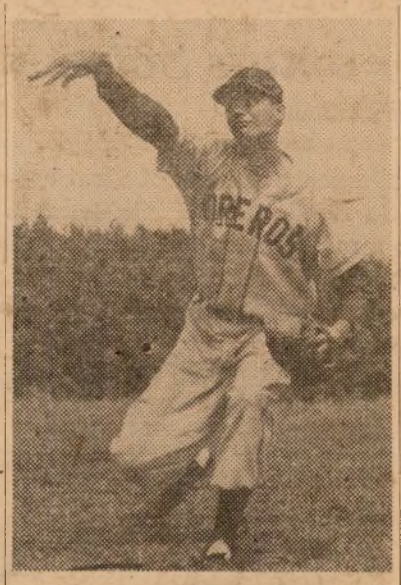
The enormous 6-3, 195-pound Matzen lived up to his advance notices by twirling the Toreros to a 5-0 triumph, scattering five meager hits along the way.



Again Selsor provided the big batting punch. The small—as ball players go—infielder from Humboldt State College in Eureka, cracked out a fancy 3 for 4 against the Air Force club's best pitcher.

In fact, if past performances are any indication, Selsor should do equally as well against Hamilton. He seems to thrive on Air Force pitching.

If Collins should falter against Hamilton, he'll be well backed up by Matzen or Lee Walker.

The Atwater tournament, which will continue for two more weeks, gives the Toreros an excellent opportunity for getting into top shape for the upcoming Sixth Army and All-Army tournament next month.

The Toreros will be idle next week with the exception, of course, of the Atwater tourney's third round. Provided they get past their second round foes tomorrow.

Softballers To Enter Central Area Tourney

It's tournament time for the Presidio varsity softball team Monday at Fort Ord.

The local softballers, embroiled in a hot San Francisco City League struggle, leave off toiling in that loop to open festivities in the Pre-Sixth Army, Central Division Tournament in Monterey County, home of the Fifth Infantry Division.

Coach George Van Kirk's hustling roundballers will start Ed Johnson on the mound in order to repeat last year's performance when they won the Central Division title and finished third in the All-Sixth Army games.

The post softballers whipped the Shopping Baggers, 6-3, in a City League contest Monday.

After that Pitcher John Broughton successfully stymied the civilian batsmen and the locals went on to the triumph.

The Presidians expect to get their usual heavy hitting support from Bob Moran, Gary Blanshan and Ray Hoylman. All three have been hitting well in the clutch, the mark of a good batsman.

Shepherded by Van Kirk and Johnson the Presidio squad leaves for Fort Ord Sunday.

Locals Share Northern Cal WACs Crown

Presidio of San Francisco WAC softballers, rolling along in high gear, "go for broke" Monday at Fort MacArthur.

The local WAC team—fresh from winning a tie in the Northern California Armed Forces Women's Softball League championship—seeks to reach the heights when it goes for its third consecutive Sixth Army title.

Coach Julian Kite's crew, stocked with heavy hitters and durable pitchers, puts its two-time championship on the line against the best in the Sixth Army area. And as usual the WACs go into the tournament calm and confident.

But educated opinion from other Sixth Army installations has it the locals will be hard pressed this time around.

Fort Lewis and Fort Ord, always tough, appear to be the other topnotch contenders for the crown, worn so proudly by the Presidio outfit.

Last season the Presidio was hard pressed to eke out a 2-1 triumph over Fort Ord for the championship, and only the four-hit hurling of Edith Thompson, plus some timely hitting in the fourth, enabled the Presidio to annex the championship.

This year the story is expected to be much the same.

The locals enjoyed an advantage in last year's tourney they won't have this year. Playing on their home field before familiar audiences probably supplied the post team with an intangible "lift." Monday, however, they'll play on a foreign diamond in front of Fort MacArthur partisans.

Parks threw the race into a three-way tie by dumping the Presidio, 13-8. Presidio spokesmen may protest the game, however.

Earlier the WACs soundly walloped Moffett Naval Air Station Waves, 29-4, as the locals unlimbered their heavy bombs. Kite featured the assault on the Waves' hurling with a homer in the fifth inning.

Pat Doering, coasting all the way, was credited with the victory.

Three Hitter

McIntire, Ruffin Star In Little Loop Baseball Win

Ken McIntire and Dale Ruffin teamed up Wednesday night to spark the Presidio's Golden Gate Little League baseballers through the first round of the District Level play for the National League tournament.

McIntire checked the Tiburon All Stars on three hits to lead the locals to a 6-2 victory on Pop Hicks field before a large and enthusiastic crowd. He issued only four walks in racking up the triumph.

Ruffin supplied the big blow of the evening when he cracked out a homer to lead the Golden Gaters at the plate. The local youths collected 8 hits off the slants of two Tiburon hurlers.

Pitcher Earl Stewart gave up only six hits as the Giants crushed Sausalito's entry, 11-1. Stewart gave up no extra base hits in racking up the triumph.

Sunday, Mill Valley applied the blocks to the local baseballers, 13-3. Mike Frye started on the mound but was yanked after less than two innings in favor of Rickey Stone, who finished the error filled contest with a minimum of trouble.

Youth League Gets Diamond And Uniforms

The Presidio Youth Baseball Leaguers finally got to play on their own field this week.

In the opening game on the league's field near the 30th Engineer Motor Pool by the 25th Avenue Gate, the Dodgers downed the Braves 8-6, as Tom Holiman and Bartolme Salgado combined to twirl the victory over Teter Spencer.

The opener was also markedly different inasmuch as players wore their uniform jerseys for the first time. Previously the youngsters played in jeans and suntan pants.

A twin bill is on tap for tomorrow. Starting at 1 p. m., the Tigers tangle with the Braves, while the Pirates mix with the Dodgers at 3 p. m.

A single game, scheduled for 6 p. m., is on tap for Tuesday, 7 August, between the Dodgers and Tigers. The Braves go against the Pirates at 6 p. m. on 9 August. Another double bill rounds out next week's schedule. The Pirates meet the Tigers at 1 p. m. and the Dodgers tangle with the Braves at 3 p. m.

Ft. Carson, Colo., could come up with a good basketball team next year with Pvt. Paul Wilcox leading the attack. Wilcox, 6 feet 5 inches, netted 1,828 points in two seasons at Davis and Elkins College in Elkins, W. Va. Last year he was the sixth leading scorer for small colleges in the nation.

George Van Meter, the Army's 23-year-old hope for an Olympic Games bicycle berth, suffered a rude blow here this week.

Training for the upcoming Olympic trials in San Francisco, Van Meter was struck by a speeding auto on Skyline boulevard Wednesday and suffered cuts and bruises.

The Oakland Army Terminal lieutenant, accompanied by another cyclist, Pvt. Erhard Newmann, also of OAT, was thrown from his cycle when it was hit on the rear wheel by a northbound auto.

Van Meter hopes to recover in time for the trials, scheduled for early next month.

Headquarters Holds Pin Lead

The Bullets regained second place from the Keystone Kops in league play when they dumped the Hardnoses, 3-1, behind Chan's 211 rolling performance. The Kops, however, with Ed Johnson coming through with a 201 game, kept in hot pursuit with a 4-0 triumph over the King Pins.

Mahon's 626 was the high individual series score for the night, while Lansing (King Pins), Herman (Rascals) and Alexander turned in high individual game results.

The bowling oddity of the evening was the 131-130-129 series turned in by the Dispensary's McClaflin.

Gridders Call For More Players

Toreros Lack Top Linemen, Coaching Help

Football Coach Larry McInerney, beset by a host of problems, today sent out an urgent SOS to all football players stationed on the Presidio and sub-posts.

With the season opener mere weeks ahead, Presidio gridders—top service team hereabouts last year—are suffering a dearth of players.

Only three linemen and 15 backs have reported to McInerney's workouts on the Fort Scott gridiron. And, as McInerney moans, "that just won't do."

What the former St. Mary's College freshman coach needs above all is strength up front—linemen. "We need," he said, "plenty of tackles, centers, guards and ends. We're well stocked with backs—although a good breakaway back or booming fullback is always welcome—linemen to open the holes are desperately needed."

In addition to his lack of front line players, McInerney also could use some personal help.

"I need a couple of experienced assistant coaches, fellows who know the game from college, high school or service play," he said.

McInerney, long familiar in Bay Region grid circles, starts his second year at the helm of the Presidio's grid team. Last year he coached the then Red Raiders into one of the best service teams in northern California.

He came to the Presidio following three years as line coach with San Francisco's perennial champions, Polytechnic High.

McInerney urged members of Presidio units to take out applications for the team by reporting to Special Services Sports Office. Former gridders with experience will be joyfully welcomed.

The team practices daily on the Fort Scott field starting at 1 p.m. To date, McInerney has had his charges going through light workouts and running through plays.

Grid Coaches Attend Clinic

Sixth Army football coaches, preparing for the upcoming season, got some professional advice from four Bay area college coaches recently when they attended a three-day clinic at Two Rock Ranch Station, Petaluma.

Wes Fry, Rod Franz and John Ralston of the University of California staff, and Joe Verducci, San Francisco State headman, conducted the grid clinic July 30 to August 1.

The clinic was aimed to train sports personnel within the Sixth Army area in the techniques of coaching and play currently practiced in colleges and universities.

The clinic was coordinated by Henry S. Gustafson, chief of the Sixth Army sports division.

Bill Abernathie, former ace righthander of the Hawaii Marines, is now the relief pitching sensation of the San Francisco Seals.

NARROW MISS for over-all high gun championship in the Sixth Army skeet shoot was the fate of Master Sergeant David R. Dunsmoore of the Presidio. The Sergeant bagged 47 of 50 clay birdies in the competition but lost out when M/Sgt. Harold A. Grewe of Fort Lewis picked off 49. The tournament was held at Fort Lawton. Presidio shooters finished third.

ag golf

Colonel Lawton Butler, newly appointed Sixth Army Adjutant General, is expected to award trophies to winners of the just-completed AG Golf Tournament Monday at 0900 hours.

Receiving winners trophies will be Lieutenant Colonel Herman Bretzer, AGP, in Flight A competition, while Lieutenant Harry R. Matthews, MRU, will receive an award for winning in Flight B.

Colonel Bretzer took top honors in the tourney with a narrow, 1 Up victory over CWO John Drake on the Presidio course. Matthews was an easy victor over Major William MacLaren, 9 and 7.

Games Trials, Golf Shown On 'Sportsreel'

Washington (AFPS) — Olympic tryouts and the National Open highlight the latest "Sportsreel" released for distribution at military theaters by the Defense Department's Office of Armed Forces Information and Education.

Captured on celluloid for cinder enthusiasts is the unprecedented 7' high jump by Compton Junior College's Charley Dumas at the track and field trials at Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

The Sportsreel, AFIF 205, is now being sent to military film libraries.

Dunsmoore Second

Presidio Gunners Third In 6th Army Skeet Shoot

Presidio of San Francisco skeet gunners couldn't quite muster the requisite number of pigeons recently in the Sixth Army championship skeet championships at Fort Lawton, Washington.

And as a result, the local shooters were outgunned by those from Fort Ord, the number 1 team, and Fort Lewis.

Fort Ord scattergunners outshot everyone on the lot, annexing the team trophy with a total of 468 clay birds, while Fort Lewis could muster only 463 and the Presidio 453 of a possible 500.

Overall champion in individual competition was Master Sergeant Harold A. Grewe of Fort Lewis with a near-perfect score of 49 x 50 birds to down Master Sergeant David R. Dunsmoore of the Presidio, who finished second with 47 x 50.

Trophies to the winning team and individuals were presented by Colonel Roger W. Goldsmith, assistant chief, Washington Military District, at a banquet held at the Fort Lawton NCO Mess following the shoot.

Master Sergeant Robert DeLaresby of the Presidio won the Class A championship with 96 x 100. He edged out M/Sgt. James Bork, Fort Lawton, who came home with 95 x 100.

Outlook Good For Cal Deer Hunt Season

Wardens of the Department of Fish and Game report prospects for the August 4-September 16 deer season in the coastal areas appear most favorable for those hunters who obtain permission to roam private lands.

The animals are in good condition, the wardens report, and numbers generally are plentiful in the closed areas, where owners' permission or gun club membership is needed. In the national forests, open for public hunting, deer are likely to be fewer.

Fire conditions again are hazardous. Heavy rains caused greater growth of grass and weeds which now are tinder dry. Extreme caution is necessary to extinguish all campfires and to be careful in discarding matches and cigarettes. In most coastal areas, hunters should carry water for themselves and their vehicles.

4 Sixth Army Aces Qualify In Swim Meet

Special to The Star Presidian

Los Angeles—In a show of strength, Sixth Army swimmers and divers took four of seven possible berths to lead the way in the All Army Swimming and Diving championships.

The four Sixth Army mermen—Bruce Hutchinson, Frank Chamberlain, Dave Radcliff and Rollie Bestor—thus qualified for the Olympic Games trials in Detroit, August 7 to 10.

Two soldiers from USAEUR, Thomas Blosser and Frank Grabosski, and one from Fifth Army, Charles Douglas, also nabbed Olympic trials berths.

In addition to the four Sixth Army men to place on the All Army team, Sixth Army's Donald Sonia was named as coach.

Chamberlain, Richard Elliott, Blosser and Radcliff emerged victorious in the third and final night of competition. Chamberlain gained his second blue ribbon in the meet by winning the 100 meter freestyle in 58.6. Elliott earned his gold medal in the 200 meter butterfly by stroking to a decisive victory. His time of 2:43.3 will be considered an All Army record as no previous mark is available.

Blosser, second place finisher in the three meter diving, came back strong to win the platform diving event with a total of 327.50 points, an excellent effort.

The fourth victor of the evening and also a qualifier for the trials was Radcliff, who churned a 4:50.8 clocking to win the 400 meter freestyle, edging teammate Bruce Hutchinson by a few feet at the finish. Final night results:

400 FREESTYLE—Radcliff (6A), 4:50.5; Hutchinson (6A), 4:53.4; Smith (2A), 4:57.4.

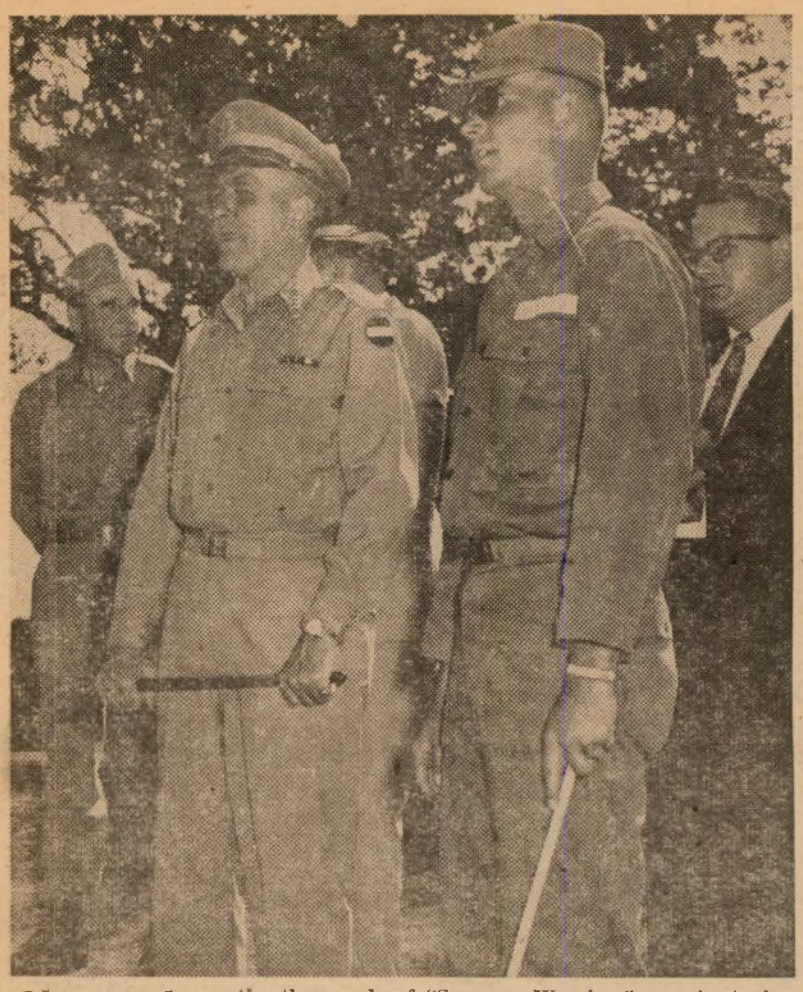
Haines Snares Top Honors In 'Ace' Tourney



Master Sergeant Richard E. Haines of the California Military District grabbed top honors in the Presidio Hole in One Tournament at the post pitch and putt golf course.

The Sergeant narrowly missed gaining the coveted ace when his shot rolled within three inches of the cup and stopped.

Sergeant First Class John P. Wyatt of Company C, 6002 SU, finished second in the male military class with a drive that fell short of the hole by six inches.

The female military winner was Sp2 Theresa Schiessel, 9956 TU Letterman Army Hospital Wac Detachment. She finished 51 feet away from the cup.

The male civilian winner was Roger D. Rowe, son of M/Sgt. and Mrs. Elbert E. Rowe. The youngster scored with a 3 foot, 2 inch tee shot. Mrs. Peg Sparrow, wife of Lieutenant Colonel John C. Sparrow, took first place in the female civilian class with a drive rolling within six feet, 2 inches of the hole.

General Lauds All Members Who Won Marksmen's Medals

Five members of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command who compiled an impressive first-time record of marksmanship during the recent Army Rifle Championships held at Fort Benning, Ga., have received personal congratulatory letters from Lieutenant General Stanley R. Mickelsen, commanding general of the Army Antiaircraft Command.

The five from the West Coast defenses were among 25 officers and enlisted men who represented the AA Command in the matches. They received a total of 17 medals, including six gold medals.

General Mickelsen, whose headquarters is at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado Springs, Colorado, in his letters to the winners, expressed pleasure that men trained in the use of such modern weapons as the supersonic Nike guided missile and antiaircraft guns which utilize complex radar systems still retain their skill and proficiency in their basic weapons.

High man for the 6th was Specialist Third Class John S. Simmerly of the 513th AAA Missile Battalion at Manchester, Washington, who won a gold medal.

Other medal winners included Private Frank R. Solis, Headquarters Detachment, 6th AA Regional Command; CWO Wayne F. Shipton, 740th AAA Missile Battalion, Fort Scott, California; and 1st Lt. Duffey E. Morgan, 501st AAA Gun Battalion, Camp Hanford, Washington, who received silver medals; and Major Charles O. May of headquarters of the 6th, who won a bronze medal.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

VA Moves to Stop Transfer of Homes For Nonvet Resale

GI home loan lenders are being requested by the Veterans Administration to report any loans coming to their attention in which the property is transferred within 90 days from the loan closing date.

VA said it is taking this step to check the illegal practice of veterans acquiring properties with GI loans for resale to nonveterans.

Cases have been uncovered in which home loans were guaranteed on behalf of veterans who had no intention of occupying the properties as their homes.

All property sales occurring within 90 days of closing reported by lenders will be investigated by VA to determine whether sales of entitlement are involved, or whether there are valid reasons to prompt the sale of the properties.

Under the law, veterans must have the intention of occupying the properties at the time of closing as well as at the time of loan application. This has been misunderstood by some, VA said.

Airborne Needs Men!

The Army has announced that maximum consideration will be given to requests by former enlisted members of the 101st Airborne Division for reassignment to their old outfit.

The 101st is being reorganized as the first truly atomic-age Army Division and is expected to be at full strength by the end of August.

Army Circular 614-6 stresses that enlisted men requesting transfer must have served with the "Screaming Eagles" during combat in World War II.

Requests for reassignment from personnel, both within the U. S. and overseas, must be sent to the Commanding General, Third Army, for consideration. However, personnel now serving overseas must complete their normal foreign service tour before making application under AR 615-200. (ANS)

The Army's aim is not merely to wreak destruction upon an enemy but actually to conquer him—which is the ultimate wartime goal of all military action.

Missile Battalion Top Unit In AAA Reenlistments Drive

Fort Barry, Calif.—The 9th AAA Missile Battalion, Fort Baker, California, was awarded a plaque for the highest reenlistment rate of all battalions in the 30th AAA Group by Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the 30th AAA Group, recently.

With a reenlistment percentage of 44.4 per cent for the quarter ending 30 June, the 9th AAA Missile Bn. topped all other units by a wide margin.

The plaque, in the shape of the Army AA Command patch, a missile flanked by two A's, is part of the AAA reenlistment awards system initiated last April. One of the most ambitious reenlistment systems in the army, it provides plaques at all levels of command from battery to Army Antiaircraft Command Headquarters.

The 9th AAA Missile Bn. will retain the plaque for the remainder of this quarter, at which time it will be rotated. Any unit, however, which wins the award three times in any 12-month period will earn permanent possession.

The 30th AAA Group also was presented a plaque recently for the highest percentage of reenlistments of any group or brigade in the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command for the same quarter. The group nosed out the 31st AAA Brigade, of the Seattle area, and the 47th AAA Brigade, of the Los Angeles area, with a reenlistment rate of 23.3 per cent.

The reenlistment awards program was designed to provide due recognition to Army AA Command units obtaining outstanding results in the reenlistment effort. It also provides a continuous incentive to improve the reenlistment rate.

From Bagdad to Baghdad!

AAA Major Wins Second Assignment As Attache

Major Harold A. Neill, former adjutant and recent Operations Detachment commander of 30th AAA Group, departed the post this week for a new assignment that will take him from "Baghdad-by-the-Bay" to Baghdad, Iraq.

Newly appointed commander of the 518th AAA Operations Detachment is Major Kenneth B. Nicholson who has served as 30th AAA group adjutant for the past year.

En route to Baghdad, where he will assume duty as military attache, Major Neill will receive a four-month briefing on the Near-Eastern situation at Strategic Intelligence School in Washington.

This will be his second tour as military attache in the Near East. From 1950 to 1953 he held the job in Damascus, Syria. Preparing for service in the Near East, Major Neill studied Arabic at the Army Language School in Monterey and then spent a year at Princeton studying the history politics and economy of the Near East. Next he traveled to the American University, Lebanon, where he studied for a year.

A 1943 graduate of the United State Military Academy, Major Neill served during World War II in both the European and Pacific theaters. His wife and two daughters will accompany him on his new assignment.

Prior to his service as adjutant of the 30th AAA Group, Major Nicholson, who has taken over as company commander of the 518th, served with AAA units in Korea. During World War II he had 25 months in the Pacific area; then from 1946 to 1949 he served in Germany. He has been in the Army 15 years next month.

Dog Battery Takes Best Mess Plaque In 752nd AAA Test

Battery D won the plaque by amassing more points on all phases of food preparation and dining room appearance than any other battery in the San Francisco AA defense.

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 11 | PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA | Friday 10 August, 1956

New Law Will Give Better Career Break

The President has signed the bill passed by Congress on 26 July amending the Civil Service Retirement Act, which will make some important changes in the Federal retirement system. Because of the great interest of Federal employees, the Civil Service Commission has prepared the following questions and answers explaining the highlights of the amendments. These changes become effective on 1 October.

AER Drive At New High In Early Tally

A $755.25 donation from the 136th Engineer Aviation Brigade at Camp Beal and the unprecedented response that has sent a number of staff sections over the 100 per cent mark showed a mid-drive tally of some $3,916.67 for the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

Though this is a far cry from the nearly $10,000 issued in loans and grants by the local chapter last year, drive officials feel that this fine early response is a good indication that the local campaign will surpass its self-imposed quota.

Both General Young, post commander, and Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, have urged top support for the annual drive.

The local campaign is slated to run through 31 August.

Advisory Group Will Assist DOD In Medicare Plan

Washington—A Health Plan Advisory Committee will be formed as the first move toward putting the Dependents' Medical Care Act of 1956 into effect, the Defense Department has announced.

The Act, which will provide better medical and dental service for military families, was signed into law last June 7 by President Eisenhower.

The committee, to be chosen from members of leading medical and health associations, will assist Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson in setting up insurance, medical service and health plans for dependents of servicemen.

The Act gives the DOD authority to contract for such services to assure the availability of medical and dental care to dependents because of their location and circumstances.

General Tarrant

Key Command!

New AAA Regional Commander Will Arrive Here Today

Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant arrives here today to assume command of the U.S. Army's 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command. He replaces Major General Hobart Hewett, who has been reassigned to U.S. Army, Europe, and who left for Germany in July.

General Tarrant's new command is made up of the Antiaircraft Artillery and Nike guided missile units guarding strategic defense areas in the Pacific Coast region. Units of the 6th AAA Regional Command ring the Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles areas, the Hanford Atomic Works, and several Strategic Air Command bases on the West Coast.

His headquarters will be at Fort Baker. Major units under his command include the 31st Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade with headquarters at McChord Air Force Base, near Tacoma, Washington; the 47th AAA Brigade with headquarters at Fort MacArthur, California, in San Pedro; and the 30th AAA Group at nearby Fort Barry, California, in the San Francisco Bay Region. (Continued on page 2)

Atom Test Troops Back Home; MPs Arrive Via Transport

By Sp3 Walter Heil

Star Presidian Associate Editor

Deeply sun-tanned and heavily laden, troops of Company C, 505th Military Police Battalion, returned to the Presidio one foggy, misty day this week after six months TDY at Pacific Proving Grounds, Marshall Islands.

Exactly 134 officers and enlisted men, shivering slightly in their summer khaki uniforms, marched down the gangplank, debarking from the big, gray transport, U.S.N.S. Fred C. Ainsworth, to the jazzy strains of the Fort Mason band.

They were met by Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Sixth Army Provost Marshal Colonel Shaffer Jarrell, Battalion Commander Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, as well as assorted officers, non-coms and dependents.

First down the ramp was Company Commander Captain Leaman C. Harvey, who was given an enthusiastic welcome by wife Frances, dressed in her finest, and daughter Nancy.

Four junior officers followed Captain Harvey down the gangplank and each was given a warm welcome by fellow officers in the Battalion and from non-commissioned officers accompanying them.

Each of the three high ranking officers addressed the assembled troops in formation after they had struggled down the steep gangplank, bearing duffle bags, grips, packages and whatever else the U.S. soldier is wont to carry.

The DPC gave high praise to the unit for carrying out its duties in the highest of Military Police traditions.

"I want to welcome you back to the Presidio," he said, raising his voice so all could hear in the cavernous shed. "I've heard excellent things about you, nothing but the finest of reports has come to my ears and across my desk."

The troops, 129 strong, but minus their fellows who returned to the U.S. by aircraft earlier this summer, then boarded Army buses for the Presidio —and pay call, leaves and passes.

Although the Ainsworth was a few minutes behind her 0815 arrival time, the troops crowding the ship's starboard rail didn't seem to mind. Nor, for that matter, did the small knots of dependents who had arrived early and had stood—first on one leg and then the other—patiently on the dockside.

The scene was almost joyous for all concerned.

As the transport turned into the slip, the Fort Mason band broke into a jazzed-up rendition of "California, Here I Come," and the music brought a deep-throated roar from the troops.

Then, as the pilot nuzzled the transport to the dock, impatience began to manifest itself, both on the dock and aboard ship. Each number in the band's repertoire was greeted with excited waving, cheers and general restlessness.

But at last the Ainsworth was made fast, the gangplanks hoisted into position, and the happy order given to debark. (More pictures and story on page 4.)

Home Is The Warrior and he gets a tender embrace from wife and daughter. Here Mrs. Francis Harvey and daughter Nancy welcome Captain Leaman C. Harvey home from TDY at the Pacific Atomic Proving Grounds in the Marshall Islands. The captain was commander of the 505th MP Battalion's Company C at Eniwetok.

Commission Moves To Aid Some

The Civil Service Commission took swift action recently to make it possible for Federal employees whose mandatory retirement is imminent to defer their retirement until they can be covered by the more favorable terms of the amendments to the Civil Service Retirement Act approved by the final session of Congress.

Acting under authority delegated by the President, the Commission temporarily exempted from automatic separation from the service until October 31, 1956, all officers and employees, except Presidential appointees, who are due to retire July 31, August 31, and September 30. Employees reaching mandatory retirement age on or after October 1, 1956, would be automatically eligible for the new rates, since the President has signed the retirement liberalization bill to be effective October 1. The earliest commencing date for annuities computed under the new rates will be November 1, 1956.

Is KP In Air Force Just A Memory?

Washington — KP may become just a haunting memory for airmen at some stateside bases through a new Air Force regulation soon to go into effect.

The regulation, which will give commanders of bases in the U. S. the go-ahead to plan for civilian help in dining-halls, follows a two-year test of contract feeding at Vance AFB, Okla.

Contracts with local companies to furnish cooks, dishwashers and waiters will be made only where deemed "economically feasible" by commanders and must be reviewed and approved by Hq., USAF.

According to the AF, the Vance experiment proved profitable in that airmen freed from KP chores provided additional man-hours for more technical tasks in normal base operations.

Contractors providing dining-hall service will be paid on a sliding scale determined by the number of meals served monthly.

The fees paid by the command range from some 20 cents apiece for the first 70,000 down to five cents apiece over 100,000 meals, with the AF furnishing the food. (AFPS)

Congress Gives GI Housing Bill A New Lease On Life

The World War II GI Loan Program ending date has been extended for one more year to 25 July, 1958, under an omnibus GI loan law signed by the President 1 August, 1956.

The GI Loan Program previously was scheduled to end 25 July, 1957, and, under the wording of the original law, all GI loans would have had to be closed by that date.

Under this new law, any GI loan for which VA receives an application by 25 July, 1958, may be guaranteed or insured by VA if it is completed by 25 July, 1959.

VA emphasized that the new law affects only World War II veterans. Korean conflict period veterans have until 31 January, 1965, to obtain GI loans for homes, farms and businesses. To date, more than 345,000 Korean conflict period veterans have borrowed $3.6 billion in GI loans for homes, farms and businesses. Of that amount VA has guaranteed or insured $2 billion.

In addition, this new law will permit any veteran who sells residential property purchased with a GI loan to be relieved from liability to the Government under certain circumstances.

Previously, the veteran who sold his property and allowed the purchaser to assume his GI loan still remained liable to the Government in the event of subsequent foreclosure and the payment of a guaranty claim by the VA.

Now the veteran may be relieved of liability if the purchaser assumes full liability on the loan, the VA approves him from a credit standpoint, and the loan is current.

The new law also permits World War II veterans to have their GI loan entitlement restored up to 31 January, 1965, if their property:

(1) Was taken by a Governmental Agency for public use; (2) was destroyed by a natural hazard, or (3) was otherwise disposed of for compelling reasons without fault on the part of the veteran.

New Regional Commander

He was born and raised in Newberry, South Carolina, attending Newberry College there for two years prior to his appointment to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1924.

He was graduated and appointed a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps in 1928, and served with the 12th Coast Artillery Regiment at Fort Monroe, Virginia, the 65th CA Regiment at Fort Amador in Panama, and then again at Fort Monroe with the 52d CA Regiment.

In 1932, he was appointed aide-de-camp to the commander of the Third Coast Artillery District at Fort Monroe, and in 1935 entered the Coast Artillery School there. Upon graduation, he was assigned to the 51st CA Regiment there.

After two years with the 60th CA Regiment at Fort Mills in the Philippines, he attended the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, from 1939 to 1940 and following graduation was assigned to duty at West Point. In May, 1942, General Tarrant became Antiaircraft Artillery officer for the First Fighter Command at Mitchel Field, New York, and went on to the China-Burma-India Theater with that command in 1944.

After his return to the United States in 1945, the general served as Commandant of Cadets at West Point. In 1946, he entered the National War College, graduating in June, 1947. He was assigned to the Strategic Plans Branch of the Army General Staff, then from 1948 to 1949, to the Joint Strategic Plans Group in the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and later to the Policy Planning Branch of the Army General Staff.

In July, 1950, General Tarrant became Antiaircraft Artillery officer of the Alaskan Command with headquarters at Fort Richardson, Anchorage, and in April, 1952, was assigned to command the 102d Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade, later redesignated the 52d, at Fort Wadsworth, New York. General Tarrant was appointed Deputy Chief of the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project in Washington, D.C., in June, 1953.

He has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal and the Army Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant. General Tarrant was promoted to brigadier general July 5, 1952.

Higher Learning!

U. S. To Finance War Orphans Through College

Washington — Legislation enacted late in the second session of the 84th Congress will help veterans' children orphaned through either WWI, II, or the Korean War get a college education.

The War Orphans Educational Assistance Act of 1956 provides up to 36 months of financial aid to college-age children if the death of a serviceman-father was due to disease or disability incurred in the line of duty as determined by the Veterans Administration.

Eligible students between the ages of 18 and 23 attending accredited colleges or universities full-time may receive $110 a month for three years.

When school attendance is on a part time basis, $80 will be paid for three-quarter time, $50 for half time, and where studies are alternated with practical training, $90 a month.

Known as Public Law 634, the act also allows $110 a month or more for "special restorative training" of physically or mentally handicapped eligible children of deceased veterans not able to follow a normal educational program.

Courses of study must lead to a standard college degree, although specialized vocational training beyond high school level may be approved. (AFPS)

Alert Youth Pulls Child From Bay

Story and photos
By SP3 R. A. LEWIS
Star Presidian Associate Editor

When 19-year-old Frank Smith, Jr., son of Colonel Franklin Smith, Sixth Army G-3, returned to his summer job at the Post Commissary last Monday, he was dripping wet.

This might have been the end of a story never told had not Carl Lundquist quizzed his friend about his wetness. From Frank, unable to speak or hear since birth, came a fragmented story of a near-drowning and a rescue.

The story passed from Carl to his father, Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, who alerted the Star Presidian and the Sixth Army Public Information Office. The facts of the rescue came to light when Msgt. Merrill Harrison, Sixth Army P.I.O., conducted with Frank what he calls "the most unique interview of my life."

The interview — without a spoken word — was entirely carried out in writing. Sergeant Harrison would write a question. And Frank, who last June completed post-graduate studies at the Kendall School for the Deaf in Washington, D. C., would answer in clear, flowing handwriting.

Exerpts of the unfolding drama follow:

"Tell me what happened this noon . . . tell me the time . . . what were you doing . . .?"

"At 11:30 I went to the Marina beach for lunch. I watched two children playing and trying to swim while I ate my sandwiches . . ."

"Did the child go under water?"

"He almost drowned."

"Where was the mother?"

"I think off with a friend."

"How did you get all wet?"

"I dove."

"What did she do after you saved her child?"

"She got awfully scared and took her baby off the beach. She did not say any words to me."

After the interview the reporter and photographer accompanied the boy to the rescue scene. The beach was thick with frisking children and sunning mothers. Tots romped in the shallow water oblivious of the adjacent drop-off.

The rescue situation was easy to reconstruct. A two-year-old strays beyond his depth. Amid the happy confusion the floundering child, out of his mother's watchful eye, struggles unnoticed. Young Smith spots the child but cannot sound an alarm. So he plunges into the water himself, performing the rescue.

A search was made for witnesses. But the mother—frightened or embarrassed—had left no clue. One elderly lady remembered the incident but not the principals. She had loaned a towel to dry the screaming child. She would not volunteer her name.

Without witnesses or names the story must end here—incompletely. Following release of the story in newspapers and on the radio, calls came to Sixth Army Public Information office suggesting some recognition award for young Smith. But before such action can begin, someone must volunteer additional information. Perhaps it will come from a mother—more grateful than ashamed.

That's it gestures Frank Smith, Jr., at the completiion of a unique silent interview with M/Sgt. Merrill Harrisson, Sixth Army P.I.O. Young Smith, who has been unable to speak or hear since birth, told Sergeant Harrison by means of written questions and answers how he saved a drowning child at Marina Green beach last Monday.

Rescue Scene is revisited by Frank Smith, Jr. Earlier in the day, 6 June, young Smith, son of Colonel Franklin G. Smith, Sixth Army G-3, had spotted a young child floundering in deep water off the Marina Green beach and had plunged into the water making the rescue.

Personal Report!

O'Hagan Details Routine Of Pentagon NCO Conference

Special to The Star Presidian

Excerpts of a letter from Sixth Army non-com representative M/Sgt. Patrick L. O'Hagan attending the Army-level symposium at Fort Belvoir, Va., give Star-Presidian readers first hand information on the structure and intent of this meeting—called to uncover the real detriments of reenlistment. Sergeant O'Hagan writes:

"We normally go into committee about 0800 until 1200 and then to 1700. Most of the work is done in sub committee . . . groups of three or four.

"The sub committees hash it out and write up a report. It is then put in front of the entire committee, and, of course, added to and subtracted from.

"I am chairman for the duty assignment topic. The chairman functions primarily to keep the discussion in line and is responsible for the report.

"We have civilian educators at each meeting to assist when asked. Mostly they help prepare the report.

"Surprising how serious all these representatives are taking this."

The meetings are tentatively scheduled to end today. Tomorrow the conference is scheduled to present its final report and some members will be available the following day to meet with members of the Cordiner Committee.

Comrats Drops "Jitney A Day" Starting First Of September

The commuted ration paid to enlisted personnel who live off base, or on leave drops a nickel a day starting 1 September.

The latest cut follows a two-year downward trend of the ration. In 1955 the ration was $1.10. It was dropped to $1.05 in fiscal year 1956 and now will be an even $1.00.

Defense officials explain the reduction is the result of a lessening of the cost of raw food purchased by the armed forces. A new cost-per-meal scale has not yet been worked out. It is expected, however, that the cost will be taken from the evening meal.

Presently the $1.05 commuted ration is broken down as follows: breakfast — 25 cents; dinner — 40 cents; supper—40 cents.

SP Check Shows Carnegie Medal Difficult To Garner

An incident of child rescue near the Presidio this week brought inquiries concerning the Carnegie Hero award. Investigation by the Star Presidian reveals the extremely high standards required for a Carnegie Award.

According to the Blue Book of Awards, Carnegie medals may go to persons who: "voluntarily risk their own lives to an extraordinary degree in saving or attempting to save the life of a fellow being or who voluntarily sacrifice themselves in a heroic manner for the benefit of others."

Three medals — gold, silver, bronze—are awarded. But the gold medals which go "only to those who display extreme courage in the face of gravest and prolonged danger," are so restrictive that (as of June, 1955), only 19 have been awarded in Carnegie's history and none in the past 30 years.

Silver medals go to heros "who recognize the odds against them, put up sustained fights of a somewhat lesser degree, to save lives." This degree of medal has been awarded 561 times in recent years.

Most often — 3,312 times — the bronze medal is awarded. It goes to persons who impulsively risk their lives to save another.

The public is invited to submit information to the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, Oliver Building, Pittsburgh, Penn., on an incident of heroism. The commission, consisting of 21 businessmen, meet three times a year.

First Q & A Series On Retirement Act

Star Presidian will make an effort to keep employees posted on every important aspect of this new legislation. Space limitation will prevent publication of complete annuities' charts. However, the editorial staff will be glad to answer any other queries.

Q. What are the major changes made by the Civil Service Retirement Act amendments of 1956?

A. The major changes are (1) an increase in employees' retirement deductions, (2) a more liberal formula for computing annuities, which will result in higher annuities for retiring employees and widows, (3) a lower reduction rate in annuities for retirement before age 60, (4) a minimum disability annuity, (5) higher children's annuities, (6) survivor annuities for dependent widowers, (7) refunds payable to separated employees with 20 or more years' service, and (8) no interest to accrue after December 31, 1956, on refunds to separated employees who have 5 or more years' civilian service.

Q. To whom does the law apply?

A. It applies to all employees subject to the Retirement Act who are in the service on and after its effective date. This covers most civilian employees of the Federal Government and the District of Columbia Government.

Q. How much will be deducted from my salary for the retirement fund?

A. Six and one-half per cent of an employee's basic salary will be deducted.

Q. When does this increased deduction from my salary begin?

A. Salary deduction at 6½ per cent begin with the first pay period after September 30, 1956.

Q. Will I also have social security deductions taken from my pay?

A. No. The 6½ per cent is the only deduction for retirement purposes.

Q. Is my agency required to contribute to the retirement fund?

A. Yes. Beginning in July, 1957, each agency will match the amount paid by the employee.

Q. Does the amount contributed by my agency get credited to my retirement account?

A. No. Agency contributions go into the general retirement fund to help pay for benefits and will not be credited to any employee's account.

Q. What are the various conditions under which an employee may retire?

A. An employee "must" retire at age 70 after 15 or more years' service.

An employee "may" retire at the age and with at least the amount of service shown:

Earliest Age	Years of service	Remarks
62	5	——
60	30	——
55	30	Annuity reduced for age.
50	20	Annuity reduced if under age 60; must be involuntarily separated.
any	25	Annuity reduced if under age 60; must be involuntarily separated.
any	5	Must be totally disabled.

To be eligible to retire under any of the above provisions, an employee must have had at least 5 years' civilian service.

Q. How much annuity will I get?

A. The amount of an employee's annuity depends on various things, the most important of which are length of service and the "high-five" average salary (the highest average basic salary earned during any five consecutive years of service). There is a new formula based on years of service and "high-five" average salary which is used to compute the basic annuity. The basic annuity is subject to reduction for such special conditions as retirement before age 60 (except disability retirement) and election of a survivor annuity benefit.

Q. How will I figure my annuity under the new formula?

A. An employee's yearly annuity will be (a) 1½ per cent of the "high-five" average salary multiplied by 5 years of service, plus (b) 1¾ per cent of the "high-five" average salary multiplied by years of service over 5 and up to 10, plus (c) 2 per cent of the "high-five" average salary multiplied by years of service over 10.

A substitute formula of 1 per cent of the "high-five" average salary plus $25 for each year of service will produce a higher annuity rate in the lower salary ranges. This substitute formula will be used instead of any part of the other formula ((a), (b), or (c)) if a higher annuity rate would result.

Q. After figuring my annuity under the new formula, am I also entitled to the percentage increases granted last year?

A. No.

Q. Is there a minimum annuity?

A. No, except for retirement for disability. An employee retiring under the disability provision of the law is guaranteed the lesser of (a) 40 per cent of his "high-five" average salary, or (b) the amount obtained under the new formula explained above, after increasing his service from the date of his separation to age 60.

Of course, if his average salary and length of service entitle him to a larger annuity than the minimum guaranteed amount, he will receive the larger annuity.

Q. Is there a limit on the amount of annuity I may receive?

A. Yes. Annuity may not exceed 80 per cent of the "high-five" average salary.

Q. If an annuitant retired for disability has not recovered from the disability for which he was retired but is earning some money, will his annuity be stopped?

A. It may be. If, before he reaches age 60, his income from wages or self employment or both for each of two successive calendar years is at least 80 per cent of the current salary rate of the position from which he was retired, then his annuity will be stopped one year after determination is made that his earning capacity is restored. It also stops if medical evidence shows that he has recovered from his disability or if he is reemployed in the Government service.

Q. What annuity is payable to my wife if I should die while in service?

A. If an employee has 5 or more years of civilian service, his widow will get an annuity of 50 per cent of an annuity based on the employee's "high-five" average salary and years of service.

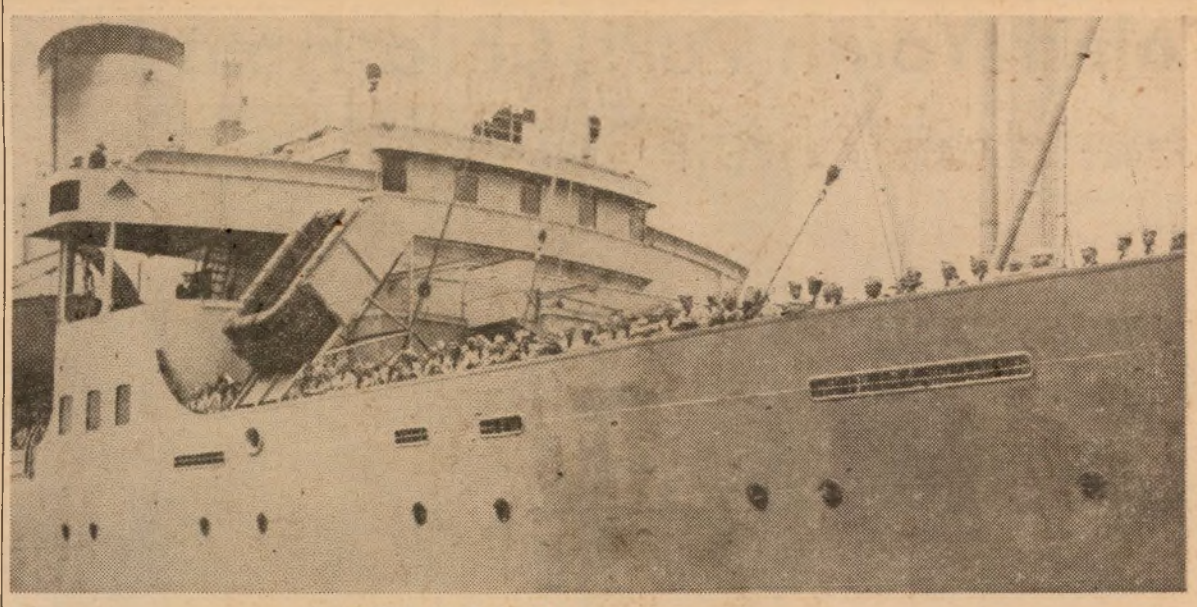
Q. How old must my widow be before she can begin to draw a widow's annuity?

A. A widow's annuity begins immediately upon death of the employee. There is no waiting until the widow reaches a certain age.

(Q & A Series will continue next week.)

441st Missile Battalion Celebrates First Birthday

The first birthday of the reactivated 441st AAA Missile Battalion (NIKE) was celebrated August 1st, at battalion headquarters, Fort Cronkhite, and the battery sites throughout the area.



Lt. Col. Griest, commanding officer of the battalion, was host for battalion personnel, their families and friends.

The Fort Cronkhite Service Club was host to the smaller children during the afternoon with movies, games and refreshments for all who attended.

The day's activities began at Fort Cronkhite at 1000 hours with the showing of NIKE motion pictures and conducted tours of control and launching areas of Batteries A and D. After lunch in the battery mess halls, a softball tournament was held between the Fort Cronkhite batteries. Battery A was the winner after a hard-fought game with Battery D, Hq. Battery having been eliminated in an earlier contest.

Battery B at Parks Air Force Base, California, celebrated the day with various battery activities, climaxed in an old fashioned picnic at the Berry Farm in Pleasanton, California.

The Service Club was again the location for the day's final activities, a battalion dance and presentation of awards. Lt. Col. Griest spoke of the many problems successfully overcome by the men of the 441st during the first year of its existence as a guided missile battalion. After the presentation of awards, and a few words by Col. Dallas F. Haynes, commanding officer of the 30th AAA Group, the battalion birthday cake was cut by SFC and Mrs. Gilbert G. Whaite, the Sergeant Major of the battalion.

Nuzzling Home, the USNS Fred C. Ainsworth approaches the Fort Mason dock as troops of Company C, 505th MP Battalion, line the railing, waving and cheering personnel below. A total of 134 officers and enlisted men debarked from the vessel and returned home.

Greetings And Salutations were offered M/Sgt. Robert W. Smith (center) as he led troops of Company C, 505th Military Police Battalion, off naval transport at Fort Mason pier. Greeting Smith on return from Eniwetok, Marshall Islands, are M/Sgt. Charles Mahon (left) of Co. A, and M/Sgt. Robert Ekin of Co. B.

Don't Write—Yet!

VA Will Process Restored 5-Year Term GI Insurance

Thousands of World War II and post Korea veterans who lost their 5-year Term GI Insurance since 23 July, 1953, because they had failed to pay either or both of the last two monthly premiums will be given an opportunity to reinstate their policies under a new law just signed by the President.

VA said it is searching its records for these cases, so it soon may send each former policy holder a reinstatement application with instructions on how to proceed.

The Agency "strongly" requested the affected veterans not to write or otherwise make inquiries about their cases for at least a month so as not to delay the checking process to the detriment of all veterans involved.

The law which permits these veterans to reinstate such term policies is the Survivor Benefits Act, signed by the President, 1 August, 1956. The GI Insurance affected by the law are the 5-Year Term Policies of National Service Life Insurance, whether of the convertible World War II type or of the non-convertible post Korea type.

Under the old law, which became effective 23 July, 1953, these term policies could not be in a state of lapse at the end of the 5-year period to qualify them for automatic renewal.

Under the new law, this requirement is relaxed to the extent that the 5-year Term of any policy which has lapsed because of the failure to pay either or both of the last two monthly premiums is automatically renewed for another 5-year Term and the policy then may be reinstated by meeting certain requirements.

Because of the magnitude of the checking job and the importance of getting it done as quickly as possible for the protection of the affected veterans, the Agency said any delays caused by veterans' inquiries will affect not only those cases of the inquiring veterans, but those of all others who are equally entitled to the fastest service possible.

Company 'C' Happy To Be Back Home

Honored with several letters of commendation and appreciation from high ranking military and civilian authorities, the 505th Military Police Battalion's Company C can look back on its atomic test maneuvers in the South Pacific with the feeling of a job well done.

Commanded by Captain Leaman C. Harvey, a peppery, veteran MP officer, Company C spent six months TDY on a security mission in the Marshall Islands' proving grounds.

And the eight officers and 250 enlisted men who made up the original party of MPs destined for duty with the until-now secret "Operation Redwing," can look back on their accomplishments with pride.

"This unit received several letters of commendation and appreciation on our performance in the islands.

"It has been a wonderful experience for all our people. We suffered no accidents and I'm proud to say everyone in the unit performed his duties with efficiency and good bearing."

Although the duty was on barren, sandy Pacific Ocean atolls, the peronnel of the unit enjoyed benefits not usually given U. S. stationed troops.

"The food was excellent throughout our stay and we were able to enjoy free movies nightly," the captain grinned.

He also pointed out that many of the troops returned to the States richer in pay and rank. A total of 62 enlisted men were promoted during the six months the unit was on TDY basis.

Smiles And Sighs were part of the greeting given men from Company C, 505th Military Police Battalion, when they returned to the Presidio after long months at the Marshall Islands atomic proving grounds. Here two members of the company chat with an admirer. Many of the troops were given leaves and passes on return to their regular station.

On arrival, Company C set up a regular MP desk operation, with security patrols and guard mounts scheduled in the same manner as performed on the Presidio.

And as a reward after six months of drab living on the atolls, the unit was rewarded with five days leave in Hawaii before leaving for the mainland.

561st Claims Title As Top Blood Donors

"We'll spot 'em 10 pints and still match them pint for pint," was the blanket challenge issued to all units in the Presidio area by Captain Charles F. McCurdy, CO of the 561st Engineer Company at Fort Baker.

Captain McCurdy, who was referring to blood donations, has reason to crow. In the past fiscal year his company has donated 174 pints or 21½ gallons and has been "consistently far above the quota."

Boasting the best donation record in the Presidio area, Captain McCurdy challenges any and all units to try to best the 561st Engineers—"and they can have a ten pint lead."

"There is no arm twisting in our program," says Captain McCurdy. "The men give because most of them have been where blood has been needed and have seen the job it does."

Three-day passes for each pint donated give postitive encouragement to the engineers for their donations. Individuals may compare their donation records on a large chart displayed in the barracks.

Since the inception of the blood donning program a year and a half ago, the 561st Engineers have donated 219 pints. "And this doesn't include the large number of our men who have recently returned from the Far East and can't give," says Captain McCurdy.

Top Soldier Variety Due Here This Month

An All Army variety show, complete with top winners in the world-wide U.S. Army talent contest of 1956, comes to the Presidio for a three-day series of performances beginning 26 August.

Sponsored by Special Services Division, Department of the Army, "Rolling Along" is a production marking the second consecutive year that the same show has played to military audiences across the Nation and beyond the continental limits. It is anticipated that its 76 performances played for the entertainment of over 100,000 servicemen and women last year will be doubled in content and in popularity this season.

Carrying 19 enlisted men on its program and Major Albert B. Cassidy of the First Army as its escort officer, "Rolling Along" has as its stage manager, Private George Snowden, of the Iceland Command. It was produced at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, by Miss Margaret Lynn, staff entertainment director for the Second Army.

The all-soldier show features enlisted ranks from Private to M/Sergeant. A variety type of performance, its prize-winning players include singers, dancers, trumpet players, pianists, vocalists and comedians, who travel with the show across the United States, Alaska, Far East, Hawaii and the Carribean military areas, as the schedule dictates.

Further information on the times and places of the show's presentations during its entertainment tour of the Presidio areas will be announced in next week's issue of the Star Presidian.

Little Theater Still Seeking New Members For First Production

An even dozen potential thespians from the Presidio showed up to offer their services as members of the newly-launched Little Theater Club during the initial meeting late last week.

Military and civilian men and women answered the call for trained and prospective actors and actresses to take part in a series of dramatic stage offerings slated for production by the Presidio Little Theater Group during the coming months.

The Little Theater Group at the Presidio is still in the market for actors, directors, playwrights, set designers, stage hands and electricians.

Further information on the dramatic club may be secured by calling M/Sgt. Allen J. Larkin at Ext. 2858 or 2002, Post Special Services.

Set New Designation For Deployable Active Reserve Units

The term "Strategic Reserve" will be used to designate deployable active units in the United States and Hawaii rather than "General Reserve," the Army has announced.

The change in terminology is intended to provide a name more accurately identifying an active force capable of strategic employment and the mission for which it is intended, the Army said.

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education and the State governments have combined in an effort to help servicemen, Federal employes and their dependents who will be absent from their states to vote in November's election.

To guide you in your state's particular absentee voting laws, AFPS has prepared a three-part voting series. This article is the sixth in a series dealing with registering to vote by absentee ballot.

NEW MEXICO

Registration is permanent unless a voter changed his residence or failed to vote in the last two general elections.

Any absent person may apply for registration at any time by absentee process. Request a "Registration Affidavit" from the County Clerk, county of residence. It should be returned before Oct. 7, however, to vote this year.

A serviceman may execute a "Registration Information Form" and in it designate any qualified voter of the State to register him by proxy in the county of his residence. These forms may be obtained from the County Clerk by the serviceman or the prospective registrant in his behalf.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Members of the Armed Forces, civilian employes serving with the Armed Forces overseas and their dependents may apply for absentee registration by requesting a "Registration Card" from the Board of Registration, county of residence, at any time.

All others must register in person at the Board of Registration, county of residence, once every 10 years.

Anyone who registered after Jan. 1, 1948, is registered for this election. The registration books are closed from Oct. 7 through election day.

DELAWARE

Everyone, without exception, must register to vote this year.

Members of the Armed Forces and civilian employes serving with the Armed Forces outside the state do not have to register in advance, however. They are registered when the "Absentee Registration Affidavit" that accompanies their absentee ballots is accepted by election officials.

ILLINOIS

Registration is permanent unless a person failed to vote at least once during the past four years.

Members of the Armed Forces may vote without registering.

All other persons must register in person before the City Election Commissioner or the County Clerk of the county of residence before Oct. 9.

INDIANA

Registration is permanent unless the voter is notified that his name has been removed from the registration list.

Unregistered members of the Armed Forces are registered automatically when a properly executed Federal Post Card application for an absentee ballot has been accepted by election officials.

Because of a Constitutional doubt, unregistered servicemen are advised to request an "Absentee Registration" form from the Clerk of the Circuit Court. county of residence. (Residents of Allen, Delaware, Elkhart, Lake, Madison, Marion, St. Joseph, Vigo or Vanderburgh counties should request the form from the Board of Registration, county of residence.) The completed forms should be returned to the proper official before Oct. 8.

For further information, see your voting officer.

Presidio Softballers Rap Oakland, 8-1 In 6 Army Games

Special to The Star Presidian

Los Angeles—Behind the neat and effective pitching of Pat Doering, the Presidio Wac softballers snared their first victory in the Sixth Army Wac Softball Tournament here this week.

The Presidio, going for its third consecutive Sixth Army championship, took the measure of the Oakland Army Terminal club, 8-1.

Doering, the Presidio's mound mainstay, scattered four Oakland hits so effectively that onlookers were astounded that the losing team could be beaten so badly.

Reason for their astonishment was that the defeat came after Oakland had mauled Fort MacArthur, 19-0, in its first round contest. The drop from the heights was surprising.

Against Fort Mac, Oaklander Joyce Cully reached softball's hall of fame when she checked the Southlanders with no hits.

Fort Ord, which lost to the Presidio in last year's finals, was hard pressed to maintain its position as second choice team in the tournament.

In a see-saw, loosely played game, Fort Ord barely managed to whip Fort Lawton, 18-13, in 11 innings.

Dorene Tuggle came on the mound in the second inning after Fort Lawton threatened with a three-run scoring spree and went on to win the opener. Fort Lawton had the game tied 8-8 until the eleventh inning of the contest when Ord scored six runs to down the far Northwest team.

Second round games scheduled: Fort MacArthur v. Fort Lawton and Oakland Army Terminal v. Presidio of San Francisco.

Hamilton Rips Post Nine, 8-1

The Presidio Toreros, soundly whacked in their second battle with Hamilton Air Force Base, get their last chance to stay in the Atwater Armed Forces Invitational baseball tournament Sunday.

The Toreros tangle with the 52d AAA Battalion from Merced in their third round battle in the double - elimination tourney. Should they lose to the antiaircraftmen, the Toreros, like Arabs, will fold their tents and steal silently away.

A victory, however, sends them into action against the winner of the Travis vs. Castle Air Force Base contest. That would put the Presidio club back into the winner's bracket and force a showdown with either Hamilton or Parks.

Hamilton spoiled the Presidio's chances for remaining in the winner category when it mounted an 11-hit attack for an effortless 8-1 triumph.

The Toreros, usually a potent hitting club, suddenly found they could do little against the effective Air Force pitching, mustering but three meager hits.

Al Casino supplied the Presidio with its only moment of cheer. The husky first baseman slammed out a two-on double in the opening inning to send John Blackwell home with the only Torero run of the contest.

The defeat gave the Presidio a 1-1 record in tournament play. The club will be idle this week, with activities limited to practice sessions.

Ord Troops Aid In Deer Hunting Test

California hunters, at least, soon may be wearing yellow instead of the traditional red protective garb.

Results of what probably were the first methodical tests of their kind in the United States show an overwhelming score in favor of yellow as the best color for deer hunters to wear under California coastal conditions to avoid being shot by other nimrods. The recent tests were conducted jointly by the California Optometric Association, the National Rifle Association and the Department of Fish and Game with the cooperation of Army personnel at Fort Ord.

Last year there were 103 hunters shot by other hunters in the State; nearly one-third of these were wearing red clothing. In an effort to reduce such casualties, the optometric, rifle and game representatives developed a series of tests designed to provide a scientific basis for determining what protective color is most readily recognized.

Using 20 Fort Ord soldiers, half of them with normal vision and half of them color blind, the researchers set up a series of colored panels against brushy and scrub oak backgrounds such as coastal deer hunters are most likely to encounter. The tests were made under varying light conditions at distances of 50 to 200 yards at 50-yard intervals. The testers arbitrarily established a "safe zone" for accuracy and speed of identification of the various colors, consisting of correct naming of the panels within two seconds at least 90 per cent of the time.

This was on the theory that if a hunter could not recognize his target within those time and accuracy limits, the deer would have fled out of sight or the hunter would have shot another person before realizing his error.

In three types of tests, either plain yellow or fluorescent yellow panels were spotted fastest and most accurately identified by the soldiers taking part, including the color blind group. The over-all score gave those two colors almost a perfect score, closely followed by white.

Responsible for the Fort Ord project were Major General Gilman Mudgett, post commander, and Brigadier General Cyrus P. Dolph III, deputy post commander; Arthur C. Heinsen, Jr., president-elect of the California Optometric Association; Colonel E. F. Sloan, western representative of the National Rifle Association; Major Weldon McBee, Fort Ord project officer, and Lahr.

Navy's Campbell Gains Olympic Decathlon Berth

Crawfordsville, Ind. — Navy's Milt Campbell, who failed to win a berth on the U.S. Olympic track squad as a hurdler, qualified for the Olympic decathlon by placing second to UCLA's Rafer Johnson in the National Amateur Athletic Union decathlon championships.

The San Diego NTC, Calif., seaman apprentice, runner-up to champion Bob Mathias in the 1952 Olympics, finished with a total of 7,555 points. He earned 1,086 points for winning the 110-meter hurdle event in 14.1 seconds.

CMD Lead Is Threatened

The California Military District remained in first place in the Special Services Mixed Bowling League, but under threat of a surging Kingpin team.

The hot bowling of H. McInturff dipped this week to a 187 average as E. Johnson took the lead with 188.

I. Balcombe was the sensation of the women's division, coming home with a high game of 199. V. Esh still leads in that department with 201, however.

Ord Gridders To Test Rams

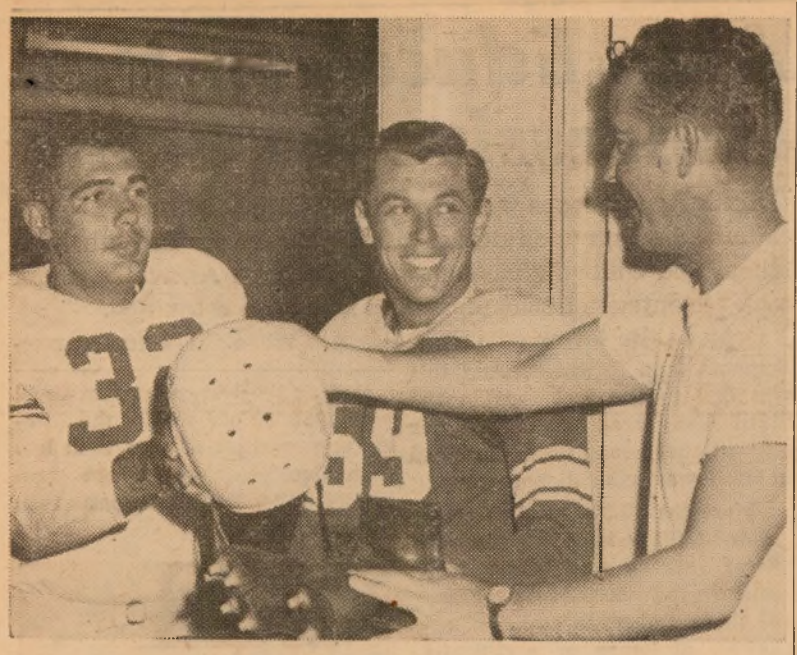
Three service football teams kickoff the 1956 season tomorrow night in Long Beach when they go against the best.

The Fort Ord Warriors, San Diego Naval Training Center and Camp Pendleton Marine gridders participate in a unique football exhibition when they clash with the Los Angeles Rams.

Fort Ord is scheduled to play the second and fourth quarters against the professionals, while San Diego plays the third and Camp Pendleton the first periods.

Li'l Leaguers Lose Playoff

The Presidio's hopes of climbing upward in Little League national competition were rudely snuffed out last week.



The Hayward Americans came up with two runs in the fifth inning to nab a see-saw, 9-7, triumph over the Presidio on the San Rafael diamond.

The defeat knocked the local baseballers out of competition for the state championship.

The Presidio's Ken McIntire came up with the big blow of the day when he homered to supply his teammates with a reprieve from the loss.

More Help Wanted, Presidio Grid Cry

Although his roster was bolstered by the appearance of five additional men during the past week, Presidio football coach Larry McInerney still is plagued by a lack of capable linemen today.

Three forwards were among the five grid candidates who answered his anguished plea for additional help. The appearance of these worthies swelled McInerney's roster to 22.

Despite the fact that three more linemen turned up for the Toreros, McInerney can only claim five forwards among the athletic bodies conditioning themselves on the Fort Scott gridiron daily.

The youthful grid coach is in dire need of at least ten more players—and the majority, if not all, should be linemen.

So far McInerney has been unable to hold a full scale scrimmage limiting his charges to backfield patterns, wind sprints, and general conditioning exercises.

"Our backfield," says McInerney "is shaping up pretty well. We're slowly getting ready and in many ways would be ready for contact work if we had some linemen."

Of the 22 men now on the Presidio roster, only three can claim experience on last year's crack Bay Area champion team.

"I strongly urge men with football experience — college, high school or service brand—to come out for the team. They'll be more than welcome and will fit into the scheme of things easily," McInerney said.

Footballers who can meet the qualifications set forth by McInerney should call at the Sports Office of Special Services, Bldg. 122, for application blanks.

In addition to playing help, the Toreros also need assistant coaches and managers. They, like the gridders, should call at Special Services for information.

The Toreros will hold a camera day Monday and then buckle down to serious training for their full dress scrimmage with San Quentin at, of course, the Prison, Saturday 25 August.

Lewis Edges Ft. Mac For Net Crown

The Fort Lewis Chieftans snared the Sixth Army Tennis tournament this week with a narrow victory over challenging Fort MacArthur.

Fort Lewis compiled an aggregate total of 13 points in the tournament played at Dugway Proving Grounds, Utah. Fort Mac, whose open singles champion, Jim Perley, was picked for the All-Army team, finished in second place with 11 points.

Dugway picked up 7 points, followed by Pfesidio, 5; Fort Ord, 4; Fort Huachuca and Fort Lawton 3.

The Presidio's representatives, Lieutenant Colonel Willett Ware and Captain John E. Fleming, were awarded the senior doubles title when it developed there was no opposing team.

Pin Loop Led By Hq Unit

Bob Schultz and Charlie Mahon paced the Keystone Kops to victory over the Dispensary and the Bullets soundly whipped the Rascals, 4-0, in the Summer National Bowling League, but to no avail, as Headquarters Company continued to hold its lead.

Schultz rolled a 551-199 game and Mahon turned in the high individual series with 626 as they led the Kops to a 3-1 win over the Medics. The Bullets, with Hoskins in the van (558-204), continued to chase Headquarters Company for first place.

As usual, Bob Alexander led the leaders with a 621 high individual series and a 236 high individual game. Headquarters was thus able to dispose of the Kingpins, 3-1.

Presidio Ace Triumphs In 1500-Meters

Berlin (Germany) —Lowell Zellers, Presidio of San Francisco Military Police lieutenant stands in the limelight today following his triumph in the 1500-meter run in the finals of the international military track and field meet in West Berlin's Olympic Stadium.

The thin-shanked, baby-faced one-time Company A, 505th MP Battalion mess officer, chugged to victory in his favorite event in a meet that was highlighted by three record breaking performances in the 100-meter dash.

Pvt. William Williams ran the event in 10.1 twice in three days, while Pfc. Ira Murchison zipped to an identical clocking once during the meet.

In the finals, the finish between the two was so close, the result was in doubt until the official times were announced. Most fans believed the event to be a dead heat and there was some surprise when Williams was announced the winner.

The two soldiers are the only sprinters to beat Owens' 20-year-old mark of 10.2 for the event.

Pvt. Tom Courtney, former Fordham University star who along with Murchison will represent the U.S. at the Olympics in Melbourne, Australia, won the 800-meter run in 1.54.1.

Other winners for the U.S. team were Pfc. Al Griffith, 47.1, 400-meters; Sp3 Mel Riggins, high jump, 6-3; Pvt. Martin Engel, hammer throw, 185', 10¾; Pvt. Joseph Culbreath, 100-meter hurdles, 51.1; Lt. Anthony Cantello, javelin, 234', 8⅛.

Pfc. Charlie Pratt took two events, the 110-meter hurdles in 14 seconds flat, and the 200-meter dash in 21.1.

The U.S. team also won the 1600-meter relay in 3:12.8.

The St. Louis Hawks, still collecting rookies, have bought Cliff Hagan, the Kentucky All-American, from the Boston Celtics. Hagan currently is serving as a 2nd Lieutenant at Andrews AFB, Washington, D. C., but will be released from service before the next N.B.A. season opens.

Fort Lewis Captures 6th Army Golf Title

In a tense, three-hole playoff, Pfc. Ed Myerson nabbed the Sixth Army Golf Tournament individual championship and paced his Fort Lewis Chiefs to the team triumph on Fort Ord's rolling course.

Myerson earned his title when he parred the third hole as his opponent, Pfc. Pat Symons, also of Fort Lewis, landed in a sand trap. The two were tied with 297 strokes at the end of the 72 holes.

A Fort Lewis golfer completed the sweep by finishing third. Pfc. Paul Ranson carded a 307. Fourth place went to Pfc. Stanley Samples of Fort Huachuca, 308.

Fort Lewis won the team competition with an aggregate of 1841. Fort Ord was second with 1942; followed by Fort MacArthur, 2041; Fort Huachuca, 2046, and Camp Hanford, 2047.

The top four medalists will represent the Sixth Army area in the All-Army tournament scheduled for Fort Bragg, N. C., later this summer.

Sign-Ups Due For Ring Club

Presidio officers and enlisted men interested in seeking a possible berth on the United States Olympic Games boxing team were urged to turn out for the post team as the first step on the ladder to fistic success.

Personnel interested were urged today to apply for applications as soon as possible since the Sixth Army tournament is scheduled for 11-15 September at the Oakland Army Terminal.

'56 Rifle Shoot Set Tuesday

Camp Perry (Ohio)—Service rifle and pistol men lay their titles on the line here Tuesday as the 1956 National Matches begin with more than 3,000 civilian and service competitors firing away for National championships and Olympic Games berths.

Master Sergeant Joe Benner, West Point noncom who is probably the Army's most famous shot, makes another bid for the Olympic team as the free pistol match starts Tuesday.

Benner won an Olympic Golf medal for the United States in Helsinki in 1952 and placed second in the '48 Games at London.

Shooters will fire against top civilians in pistol matches which finish August 25, with the National Trophy individual and team pistol events.

During this period selections will be made for the Olympic International rapid fire pistol squad.

Smallbore rifle events which gain the greatest civilian interest will be fired August 20 to 25. This year more service personnel will be entered due to the Olympic 50-meter free rifle competition.

Carroll Hardy, former University of Colorado gridder and star rookie of the San Francisco 49ers, is now taking basic training at Fort Bliss, Texas.

'Coptor Plan Proves Big Hit

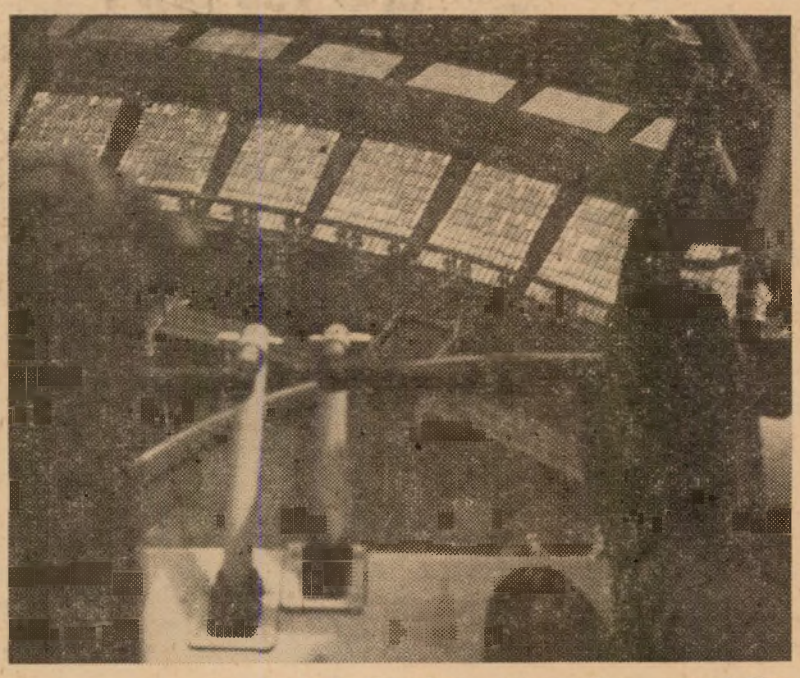
Presidio officers and enlisted personnel will be literally "up in the air" next week when they turn out—400 strong—for helicopter orientation flights at Crissy field.

More than twice the expected number responded to the invitation by Sixth Army Aviation Section to sign up for a helicopter brieling and ride. The 400 names submitted represent an average of 10 per section at Sixth Army and Post headquarters.

The invitation was extended last week to officers and upper two grade NCOs for the purpose of satisfying their curiosity displayed toward this modern unique form of transportation.

Rides and orientations will take place next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, starting at 0900 hours on 14 August and terminating at 1530 hours on 17 August. Participants will report to the Sixth Army flight detachment operations office at the west end of Crissy field in accordance with an announced schedule.

Army reconnaissance-type helicopters will be used for the rides and will carry two passengers and the pilot. If two persons wish to take the ride together they tell the operations officer of their desires.



From Crissy Field the passengers will be lifted to the south pier of the Golden Gate Bridge, then flown over the south side of the Presidio to the Marina district, then turnabout over the Palace of Fine Arts and back to Crissy Field.

The passengers will receive helicopter orientation from their pilot. This will be accomplished before, during and after the flight. Those interested in taking photos during the flight are invited to bring their cameras—still or movie.

The H-23 type helicopters to be used in "operation curiosity-lift" are manufactured by the Hiller Aircraft Corporation of Palo Alto, Calif. Weighing 1500 pounds, the aircraft are able to lift an 800 pound payload. The craft cruises at 60 m.p.h. with a top speed of 90 m.p.h.

"And what would happen to this wingless craft if the power suddenly failed?" is a question some of the scheduled passengers might ask. "In that case the prop would go into auto rotation and you would float down like a locust leaf," is the reassuring answered offered by Major Jack W. Ruby, chief of the Sixth Army Aviation section.

Either four or five helicopters will take part in the operation. Besides Sixth Army flight detachment, the aircraft will come from the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command and the 30th Engineer Group.

Close Enough to count the pigeon eggs on the Palace of Fine Arts roof is a sensation awaiting the 400 officers and non-coms who are scheduled for helicopter rides next week. Passengers will be flown from Crissy field to the south pier of the Golden Gate bridge, then across the Presidio to Marina and, finally, back to Crissy field by way of the Palace of Fine Arts.

Flying Fishbowls. . . Four or five Army reconnaisance type (H-23) helicopters, such as the one above, piloted by Captain Jack H. Gerber, Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command, will be used in "operation curiosity lift" Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. During this time 400 officers and non-coms are scheduled for orientation flights in the H-23 helicopters.

Area Education Has Impressive 56 Gains

Sixth Army troops were hard to work improving their educational backgrounds during fiscal year 1956. In both high school and college areas considerably more Army personnel took advantage of schooling than had been estimated.

Only in the lower educational areas were there fewer participants than expected. And this was due to the fact that in the Sixth Army area less than 1 per cent of the troops were classified in the lowest educational group.

More than 3,500 soldiers completed GED tests during the past fiscal year to qualify for high school graduation credit. Many of this number, in addition, received diplomas or certificates from civilian high schools. College level GED tests were taken and passed by 592 military personnel.

"It is gratifying," said Colonel R. M. Connolly, Sixth Army Troop Information and Education Chief, "to see the fine response engendered by our program during the past year."

The Department of the Army granted 80 Sixth Army officers and warrant officers two-year college equivalences. Baccalaureate degrees were awarded to 14 officers and warrant officers. One officer was awarded a M. A. degree.

During the last quarter of fiscal year 1956, 30 per cent of the officers and warrant officers with less than two years of college were reported to be participating in college courses.

'Soldier Savvy'

"To impress upon the soldier the real meaning of his individual and unit awards as symbols of honor and recognition; to represent a picture of each soldier's service and skills, and to advise that they be worn correctly and with pride," is the purpose of the coming week's Troop Information discussion.

The soldier's job often tests his courage, endurance and skill to the utmost. It assigns him to places which sometimes he wishes had never been put on a map, and frequently makes him look back on his civilian life as one of comparative ease and comfort

New History Book Explains Problems Of Gen. Stilwell

Washington — A new historical work dealing with the Army's role in WWII—"The China-Burma-India Theater: Stilwell's Command Problems"— has been published.

Latest volume in a series entitled "The United States Army in WWII," the book describes in detail problems encountered by Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilweli, his staff and troops in a situation unprecedented in Army history.

Besides the colorful Gen. Stilwell, such diverse figures as Adm. Mountbatten, Generals Chennault, Hurley, Merrill and Wingate, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek as well as Madame Chiang make their appearance in the book.

Big Army Artillery Shell Packs Punch

Washington — A 280-mm artillery shell with an atomic warhead will cause almost 50 per cent total destruction within the radius of one mile from the point of detonation.

This was revealed in a recent discussion of the comparative destructive power of conventional and atomic-armed shells by Rep. Craig Hosmer (R-Calif.) on the floor of the House.

Equivalent to 20,000 tons of high explosives, an 11" atomic artillery shell under normal conditions would have enough thermal heat to produce 50 per cent fatalities to those exposed "at ranges up to slightly more than a mile from the point of burst" the legislator disclosed.

In contrast, a typical 8" howitzer used in WWII had a destruction area of 20 to 80 yards and caused about 50 per cent casualties but not necessarily fatalities to those unprotected from its blast.

On this basis, it would take 2,000 155-mm artillery shells of the type effective from 18 to 60 yards during the Korean War to inflict half the damage in terms of casualties that one 280-mm atomic shell could produce, Mr Hosmer said. (AFPS)

Furling Battalion colors are Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith (left) and Major Wilfred J. Curley as they prepare for deactivation of the 505th Military Police Battalion next month. The deactivation order was made public today. The 505th, long a fixture at the Presidio, will strike its colors 25 September and be returned to Department of the Army control.

Combat-Ready MPs Have Been Sharp, Versatile Unit

By Pfc. Walter Heil
Star Presidian Associate Editor

The 505th Military Police Battalion—long a fixture at the Presidio of San Francisco—has been ordered deactivated, it was announced today.

The unit, in accordance with Presidio Headquarters General Orders Number 8, will be inactivated effective 25 September, 1956, and transferred to the control of Department of the Army.

The announcement came from Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist and battalion commander Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith after receipt of DA Letter of 5 June, 1956, subject, "Inactivation of Certain Military Police Units."

The move was directed by DA to effect economy and to provide more efficient utilization of manpower.

In place of the 505th, Colonel Smith today indicated a military police company will be formed to carry out strictly normal post duties and not render outside support, a function which the battalion has performed since its reactivation in 1951.

The Provost Marshal Office and Confinement Section, heretofore part of the 505th's duties, will probably be a post function, with many of the personnel assigned those sections continuing duty there, Colonel Smith said.

Colonel Smith, who was assigned as battalion commander and post Provost Marshal in September, 1955, will continue as Presidio PM. Major Wilfred J. Curley, the 505th's executive officer, has been assigned as assistant provost marshal.

The new Military Police unit will number less than half of the 505th's strength, which is authorized 21 officers, 4 warrant officers, 91 noncoms and 401 enlisted men.

Probable commander of the anticipated MP company will be Captain Robert N. Anderson, presently C.O. of the 505th's Company A, while Captain Leaman C. Harvey, whose Company C troops have been absorbed into the Battalion, will most likely function as PM operations officer.

First E-6s In 2 Years

Sixth Army for August received its first E-6 promotion quota in more than two years . . . and its first E-7 quota since February, 1956.

Prevented by DA from promoting in overage MOS areas, Sixth Army has gone one step further and restricted top two grade promotions to the critical MOS areas. Only those in combat and signal areas have received E-6 and E-7 promotions—mostly at Fort Lewis and Fort Ord.

The Presidio Post Headquarters received two E-6 and two E-5 allocations. Sixth Army Headquarters were alloted two E-5 slots.

Good news came for men with 10 months' service as of 1 August) who may now be promoted to Pfc. regardless of quota.

Prospects were the brightest in over a year at the Presidio for E-4 promotions. Post was allocated 344 E-4 promotions. Sixth Army Headquarters received eight slots but could use only 6. It is doubtful that Post will be able to use all its allocated E-4 slots.

All told Sixth Army received allocations for 13 E-7's, 39 E-6's, 47 E-5's, and 2403 E-4's. Sixth Army-wide E-7 promotions were as follows: Fort Lewis: 6, Fort Ord: 6 and Camp Irwin: 1. Distribution of E-6 promotions were: Fort Lewis, 17: Fort Ord, 17: Camp Irwin, 2: Camp Hanford, 1: and Presidio, 2.

Sixth Army did not restrict E-5 promotions to shortage

End Separate Allowance For Overseas Offs., EM

Washington — Family separation allowances for overseas personnel living apart from dependents have been suspended pending consideration of a ruling by the Comptroller General.

The allowance, established last March, ranges from $1.70 for any enlisted man to $4.55 a day for officers, depending upon their grade.

The Comptroller has declared that the present rates are not based on actual increased living costs and has ordered the services to stop payments and to take steps to recover all separation allowances paid.

The Defense Department has asked the Comptroller General to reconsider the decision, citing the Career Compensation Act of 1949 as justification for the allowance.

However, the services, while ordering disbursing officers to halt payments, have directed suspension of any collection action until the ruling can be studied further.

Political parties, although not mentioned in the Constitution, are basic to our government. They provide the means of nominating candidates and publicize what they stand for. They serve as rallying points for Americans with similar political interests.

Traditionally, ours has been a two-party system. Throughout our history, there have been a number of small parties. They rarely wield much influence, however, although the two major parties often adopt some of their principles.

The political parties fulfill their responsibility. This summer, delegates from Maine to California, from Washington to Florida, will assemble at San Francisco and Chicago to nominate the Republican and Democratic candidates for President. In so doing, they will try to reflect the interests of their regions and of the nation as a whole.

We servicemen have our responsibility, too. We can make use of the opportunity the parties give us and study what the candidates stand for. Once we know, we should make our selections and then vote.

Unless we vote, the very purpose of political parties—perpetuation of the democratic system—will not be served. (AFPS)

Remember World War II? When you couldn't enter a bar or a restaurant without meeting head-on a sign that read, "A Slip of the Lip—Might Sink a Ship?"

Well, those signs, more or less, have gone the way of the one-horse shay. But, the need for security has not.

Security is a personal affair as well as a collective operation. Each man, no matter what his job, must realize the need for continuing security consciousness—personally, professionally and socially.

Security consciousness means locking the safe at the end of the day. It means not confusing shop talk with small talk. It is not impressing someone with the importance of your job by detailing all the "hush hush" stuff you handle.

In this age of complex war machines, it is difficult to distinguish between classified items and those that are not. The best "rule of thumb" is to leave your job at the office.

Security consciousness must be with us always. There is no middle ground. We in the service either live with the responsibilities of our job uppermost in mind—all the time—or the nation which has charged us with our special trust will be short-changed. (AFPS)

Army Mourns As Last GAR Passes

Duluth, Minn. (AFPS) — The last survivor of the Union Army died recently and the Grand Army of the Republic died with him.

Albert Woolson, 109, was the last of a 2,675,000-man Union Army of the Civil War. His death brought expressions of sorrow from Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker and Army Chief Maxwell D. Taylor.

Army To Convert Two Helicopters To Gas Turbines

Washington — An Army contract to modify and equip two standard H-21 Workhorse helicopters with gas turbine engines developed by the Navy has been awarded to the Vertol Aircraft Corp., Morton, Pa.

Modification will be a forerunner to using the gas engine in new aircraft and to conversion of several hundred piston-powered H-21s now in service, the Army said.

The T-58 turbine engine was developed by the Navy for general use in helicopters. The H-21C, now in large-scale production, is a 17-place tandem rotored transport using a reciprocating engine.

Installation of the twin turbine power plants, instead of the single Wright engine, will give the 'copter advantages of multi engine reliability and improved all-weather flying capabilities in addition to greater air safety, the Army said. (AFPS)

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

Armed Forces Press Service is issuing state-by-state information on absentee voting. Five states are covered this week as part of the continuing series.

WASHINGTON

Any qualified person who will be absent from his polling place on election day may use an absentee ballot.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians serving with the Armed Forces outside the U. S., and their spouses may send a Federal Post Card application to the Secretary of State, Olympia. Ballots will be mailed approximately Oct. 12. They must be voted on by Nov. 6 and received by officials before Nov. 22.

Other qualified voters must request an absentee ballot in writing from the City Clerk or County Auditor place of residence after Sept. 22, stating that the applicant cannot reach the polls voting day. Ballots will be mailed about Oct. 12, and must be returned postmarked Nov. 6 or earlier.

MASSACHUSETTS

Servicemen, civilians serving the Armed Forces outside the U. S. and their accompanying spouses and dependents, may send a Federal Post Card application to the City or Town Clerk place of residence. Ballots will be mailed far enough ahead to allow their return to officials by the close of voting Nov. 6.

Other persons may obtain absentee ballots by the same procedure, using a written request instead of the Federal Post Card.

MICHIGAN

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians serving the Armed Forces outside the U. S., and members of religious groups or agencies assisting the Armed Forces, may send a Federal Post Card application to the City, Township or Village Clerk, place of residence, after Aug. 23.

Other qualified voters, including former residents now living in the District of Columbia, may request an "Application for Absent Voter's Ballot" from the City or Township Clerk as early as Aug. 23. All ballots will be mailed after Sept. 22. They must be returned by Nov. 6.

NEVADA

Any qualified voter unable to appear in person may use an absentee ballot.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians serving the Armed Forces outside the U. S., their spouses and dependents, may send a Federal Post Card application to the County Clerk by Oct. 27 (Nov. 1 for applicants within the U. S.). Ballots will be mailed upon receipt of application, or as soon as printed. They must be returned to officials by Nov. 6.

Other qualified voters may use the same procedure, substituting a written request for the Federal Post Card application.

NEW MEXICO

The state makes no provision for absentee voting. (AFPS)

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education and the state governments have joined efforts in helping servicemen, Federal employes and dependents of both groups, who will be absent from their states, to vote in November.

AFPS has prepared a three-part voting series to guide you in your state's particular voting laws. This is the eighth in a series dealing with registering to vote by absentee ballot.

NORTH CAROLINA

Registration is permanent for all voters except for members of the Armed Forces who have been discharged.

Servicemen, their wives and civilians serving with the Armed Forces outside the U. S., who are qualified, become registered automatically when an application for an absentee ballot has been accepted by the appropriate election officials.

All other persons must register in person at the office of the Registrar, county of residence. Applicants may apply for registration between Oct. 13-27.

OKLAHOMA

Registration is permanent unless a voter moved from one county to another, failed to vote in three consecutive state-wide elections or failed to re-register since March 1, 1954, in all counties except Beckham, Canadian, Greer, Harper, Jackson, Kingfisher, Lincoln, Maior, Pontotoc, Pottawatomie, Seminole, Stephens, Texas, Wagoner, Wood and Woodward.

Members of the Armed Forces and civilians serving with the Armed Forces outside the U.S., and their spouses may vote by absentee process without being registered. Others may register or re-register either in person or by mail.

Those registering by mail who are not residents of Muskogee, Tulsa and Oklahoma counties, should have a "Request for Registration by Mail" at the County Registrar, county of residence, between Oct. 6-27. In Muskogee, Oklahoma and Tulsa counties, registration may be accomplished in the same way any time before Oct. 27.

UTAH

Registration is permanent unless the person did not vote in the last general election or moved.

Servicemen and civilians serving the Armed Forces outside the U.S. are registered automatically when the affidavit on the reverse side of the absentee ballot envelope has been executed and accepted by election officials.

Everyone else must register in person any time before Oct. 27.

WEST VIRGINIA

Registration is permanent unless the person failed to vote at least once during a period covering two primary and general elections or changed his residence without requesting a transfer of registration.

Members of the Armed Forces may apply for absentee registration by requesting a "Temporary Registration Form" from the Clerk of the County Court, county of residence. The completed form must be received by the Clerk before Oct. 27.

All other qualified persons may apply for absentee registration by requesting an "Application for Absentee Registration" from the Clerk. The completed form must be returned to reach him before Oct. 6.

WISCONSIN

Registration is required in towns having a population of 5,000 or more, in all of Milwaukee county and in certain other municipalities. It is permanent where required unless the person did not vote at least once every two years.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians assisting the Armed Forces overseas, their spouses and dependents residing with them are exempted from all registration requirements. In addition, the same applies to veterans of less than six months' standing.

All qualified persons located more than 50 miles from their legal residence may register by absentee process by requesting an "Affidavit of Registration" from the City, Town or Village Clerk (from the Board of Election Commissioners if a resident of Milwaukee). Registration closes on Oct. 24.

Final Q & A Series On Civilian Retirement Act

This is the second of a two part question and answer series on the recently amended Civil Service Retirement Act.

Q. What annuity is payable to my children if I die?

A. If a husband or wife survives, each child who received more than half his support from the deceased employee will receive an annuity of 40 per cent of the employee's "high-five" average salary divided by the number of children. Annuity to any one child is limited to $600 a year and the total to all children cannot exceed $1,800 a year.

If no parent survives, each child will receive an annuity of 50 per cent of the employee's "high-five" average salary divided by the number of children. Annuity to any one child is limited to $720 a year and the total to all children cannot exceed $2,160 a year.

Q. I am an employed married woman. If I should die, will my husband receive an annuity?

A. A widower of an employee will receive an annuity only if he is dependent, that is, incapable of self-support because of mental or physical disability and was receiving more than one-half of his support from his wife.

Q. Is there any reduction in my annuity if I retire before I am 60 years old?

A. Except in disability retirement cases, an employee who retires between age 55 and 60 will have his annuity reduced 1/12 per cent for each month (1 per cent a year) he is under age 60. If he is involuntarily separated and is younger than 55, there will be a reduction of 5 per cent plus 1/6 per cent for each month (2 per cent a year) he is under age 55. There is no age reduction for an employee who retires under the disability provision.

Q. What reduction is there if, at time of retirement, I elect a survivor benefit naming my wife or husband to receive an annuity at my death?

A. The annuity will be reduced by 2½ per cent of the first $2,400 of annuity, plus 10 per cent of annuity over $2,400. The survivor annuity will be 50 per cent of the employee's unreduced annuity.

Q. If I retire and receive the guaranteed minimum disability annuity, with provision for a survivor annuity, how will the reduction apply to me and how much will my survivor's annuity be?

A. The guaranteed minimum disability annuity is paid only when the employee's "earned" annuity is lower than that minimum. In such a case, the reductions are applicable only to the annuity "earned" by the employee's "high-five" average salary and actual length of service, and not to the amount added to bring the annuity up to the guaranteed minimum. The survivor annuity will be 50 per cent of the employee's "earned" annuity rather than 50 per cent of his guaranteed minimum disability annuity.

Q. At retirement, may I name my wife or husband to receive only a partial survivor annuity?

A. Yes. For example, a retiring employee who is entitled to an annuity of $3,200 a year can name the wife or husband to receive a survivor annuity based on only $2,000 of the employee's annuity. Then the employee's annuity will be reduced by only 2½ per cent of the $2,000 and there will be no reduction on the difference between $2,000 and $3,200 of the employee's annuity. Of course, the survivor annuity in such a case would be 50 per cent of the $2,000 rather than 50 per cent of the $3,200.

Q. If I elect a reduced annuity in order to provide a survivor benefit to my wife or husband and my wife or husband dies before I do, will my annuity then be increased?

A. No.

Q. If I then remarry, may I name a new survivor?

A. No.

Q. If I decide at retirement not to elect a reduced annuity with a survivor benefit, will any annuity be payable to my wife or husband?

A. No.

Q. Will any annuity be payable to my children in such event?

A. Yes. Children will be entitled to annuity as explained above, regardless of whether or not the employee took a reduced annuity with survivor benefit.

Q. I have more than 5 years' civilian service. If I resign before I am eligible to retire, what happens to my retirement deductions?

A. An employee who has at least 5 years' civilian service, and is separated before he is eligible to retire, may receive a refund of all his retirement deductions, or he may leave them in the fund until he is age 62, when he will receive a "deferred" annuity.

Q. If I leave my deductions in the fund and am eligible to receive a deferred annuity, may I, when I reach age 62, name my wife or husband to receive survivor benefits at my death?

A. Yes, at the time the employee files for his annuity. If death occurs before the claim is filed at age 62, no survivor annuity is payable. Instead, the amount of the deductions is paid as a lump sum.

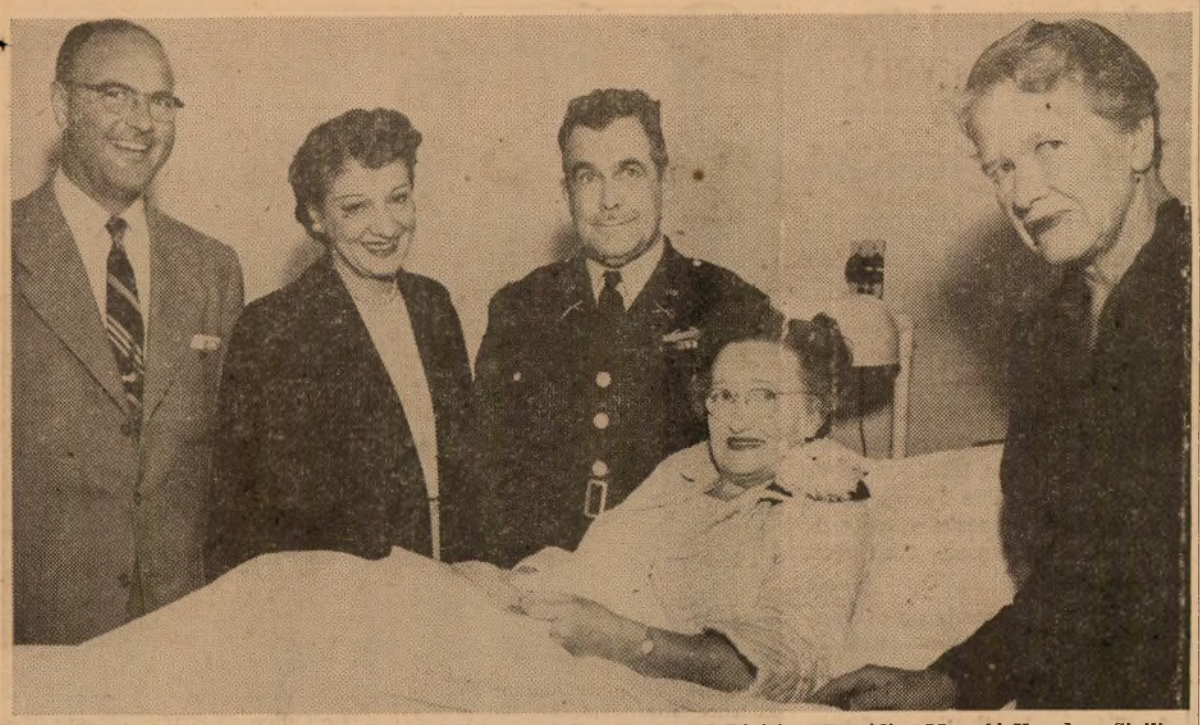
Q. If I leave the service, and leave my money in the fund, may I draw it out at some future time?

A. Yes. Refund is payable, regardless of length of service, unless the applicant is, at the time of separation or at the time he files his claim (or within 31 days thereafter) eligible for annuity payments.

Q. I am leaving the service before the effective date of the new law, and have over 20 years' service. Will I be eligible to draw my money out of the fund?

A. Yes. The new law permits a refund of deductions even though the employee may not have been eligible for it under the previous law because his service totals 20 years or more.

Q. What interest is payable if I draw my money out of the fund?



A. No interest is payable if deductions cover one year or less of service. If total civilian service is more than 1 but less than 5 years, interest is payable to date of separation. If total civilian service is 5 or more years, interest accrual stops on December 31, 1956. Interest rates are 4 per cent to December 31, 1947, and 3 per cent thereafter.

Q. I retired before the effective date of the new law. Will my annuity be increased?

A. No.

Q. I retired before the effective date of the new law. I was reemployed in the Government after having reached age 60 and my salary is now being reduced by the annuity I receive. Does this new law affect me?

A. Yes. If your reemployment is full-time and extends at least one year, your annuity will be increased upon your separation. The increase will be computed under the new formula on the basis of the length of service performed and average salary earned during the reemployment. It will be added to the annuity you are now receiving. Your previous annuity computation and election may not be changed, however, nor will the annuity to any survivor be increased.

New Gimmick!

Paper "Shells" Save Expense In Cannon Tests

Washington—The Army has found a way to make one dollar go as far as 10 with a paper and water artillery projectile.

Made to test-fire only the 105mm howitzer at present, the new shell provides an inexpensive means of checking the weapon's recoil mechanism.

Costing about $1, the paper projectile has the same weight and resistance to the expansion of propellant gasses as conventional metal shells which run $10 apiece.

Developed at an arsenal in Rock Island, Ill., the money-saving test-device consists of double wax-impregnated heavy paper tubes four inches in diameter and 42 inches long.

Each end of the cylinder is sealed with three one-eighth inch cardboard disks. The water is added to the projectile through a small hole at the front which is sealed with a cork.

Loaded through the gun's muzzle, instead of the breech, as are standard rounds, the shell is filled with water just before firing.

According to the Army, the blast of water and cardboard fired from the howitzer is harmless beyond 125 feet. (AFPS)

Those Eligible!

Presidians Who Would Vote Should Register Right Away

Personnel stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco or living in San Francisco County are eligible to register and vote in the November elections, according to Harold O'Donnell, Deputy Registrar of Voters, San Francisco City and County.

Mr. O'Donnell said that the requirements for registration are one year's residence in California and 90 days' residence in San Francisco County, which also includes, for registration and voting purposes, the Presidio.

He also said that the date of the election, this year on 6 November, governs the residence requirements, so that an aspiring voter who has a year's residence in California on 6 November, 1956, and has lived in the county or at the Presidio for 90 days by that date, will be eligible to register and vote.

Registration can be accomplished Mondays through Fridays, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., at the San Francisco City Hall until Sept. 13, or at any of approximately 30 temporary registration stations to be announced next week, according to Mr. O'Donnell.

Signal Section Trio Completes Top Tech Course At Institute

Utilizing their spare time, three officers of the Signal Section, Headquarters, 6th Army, have successfully completed a special 9 months' course in technical TV operations at the O'Connell Technical Institute in San Francisco. Operating television station equipment during actual programming over the Educational Station KQED (Channel 9) in conjunction with classroom theory instruction, these officers learned how to use all equipment used in the telecasting of TV programs.

The officers who finished the course are: Lt. Col. Charles J. Schauers and Majors Robert L. Pierce and Francis D. Ivey.

QM Book Sets Sked For New 'Green Style'

Tentative schedules for replacing the present OD uniform with the new Army Green uniform have been announced in a booklet put out by the office of the Quartermaster General last month.

The uniform goes on sale through all Quartermaster sales outlets on 1 September of this year. One month later the uniform is authorized for off duty wear. Not until winter season of 1957 does it become duty uniform.

From the period 1 September, 1957, to 31 August, 1959, inductees and enlistees will be issued one Green and one OD uniform. The Green will be authorized for optional duty and as the off duty winter uniform. The prescribed uniform for wear in formations during this period is the OD uniform.

Starting 1 September, 1959, two Green uniforms will be issued to enlistees and inductees and the Green will be optional duty and off duty for enlisted personnel except that it will be required for formations.

Enlisted personnel in the service on 31 August, 1957, and still in the service on 1 September, 1959, will be required to buy one Army Green uniform by September, 1959. These same personnel will be required to buy one additional Army Green uniform by 1 September, 1961, if still in the service on that date.

Enlisted personnel entering the service between 1 September, 1957, and 31 August, 1959, will be required to buy one additional Army Green uniform by the latter date if still in the service on that date.

Military history throughout the ages is replete with the swinging of a pendulum between the initial success of new offensive weapons and the development of adequate counter agents. The use of airplanes as weapons of war and the development of protection against air attacks illustrates this cycle.

Pipe Band Adds Pair To Trophy Case

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

With a skirling of bagpipes and an extra wig-waggle to their kilts, men of the Sixth Army Pipe Band came home to the Presidio this week from competition in the famous Portland Highland Games in Oregon and the equally famous Seattle Highland Games in Washington from which they marched off with two first-place trophies for superiority in pipe band presentation.

In Seattle, the 15 colorful Kilties from the Presidio outdid seven other professional bands, three from the Washington area, one from Oregon and three from Vancouver. In Oregon, they outmatched five other professional competitors, three from the Washington and Oregon areas and two from British Columbia.

Competing with the Sixth Army Pipe Band in the Oregon games were the Crawford Pipe Band, Vancouver, the Vancouver Ladies Pipe Band, the Portland Scottish Pipe Band, the Clan MacLeary Pipe Band, Oregon, and the Washington Scottish Pipe Band, Seattle.

In Seattle, the Presidio pipers met competition from the Third Seaforth Highlanders, the Tenth Canadian Scottish (both of the Canadian Army Territorials), the Vancouver Ladies Pipe Band, Seattle Pipe Band, Crawford Pipe Band, Vancouver, Washington Scottish Pipe Band, Keith Pipe Band, Seattle, and the Portland Pipe Band.

The Seattle trophy, the Stuart Cup, was won by the Kilties for superiority in Class B Pipe music.

During the last week in August and the first week in September, the Sixth Army Pipe Band will compete further in the Highland Games slated for Los Angeles and San Francisco, close-out events in the annual series.

Nationally known as one of the United States Army's most distinctive units, the Presidio pipers present their classical performances under supervision of CWO Louis Ferraro, musical director of the Sixth Army Band. Although connected with the parent headquarters military band for administrative and training purposes, the pipers are called on to work almost as a separate entity because of the unusual nature of their numerous assignments locally and throughout the Western areas.

During the Portland Highland Games tournament, the Sixth Army Pipe Band achieved individual honors in its drum section through the work of Sp3 William McErlean (drum sergeant), Pvt. Charles Capperauld and Pvt. Mike Stebela (snare drummers), Pvt. Kenneth L. Adcock (tenor drum), and Pvt. Terry P. Hahn (bass drummer).

The Scotties' pipe section came into its own through the talents of Sp3 Victor Biswell (pipe major), Sp3 Edward Rowbottom, Sp3 John W. Taylor, Pfc. John Stewart, Sp3 John Donaldson, Sp3 Kermit E. Bolstad, Pfc. Brian Miller and Sp3 George Knutson.

The Portland Highland Games originated in 1950 and have since then drawn band, dancing, individual piping and Highland sports competitors from within and beyond the continental limits of the United States.

Formal presentation of the Portland Highland Games top trophy will be made to the Sixth Army Pipe Band in ceremonies at the Presidio next week.

6th Regional Wins Big Slice Welfare Fund; Program Set

An estimated $328,000 of a two million dollar grant from the Army Central Welfare Fund of the Department of the Army has been allocated to units of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command for the construction of athletic courts and improvement of dayroom facilities on the Pacific Coast. The remainder of the two million goes to other Army Antiaircraft defense regions in the United States.

The grant is made up of non-appropriated funds—that is funds that were declared as dividends from post exchange facilities and activities profits on sales made to soldiers and their dependents.

The funds will be used to construct 82 multi-purpose athletic courts for Antiaircraft Artillery and Nike guided missile batteries on the West Coast and to buy furnishings both to supplement existing dayrooms and for future dayrooms of batteries located in isolated areas.

Deuce Party Proves Popular Success; Over 200 On Hand

"Do I have to take my pie now, too?" questioned the lady whose overladen plate couldn't even hold another radish. . . . "How 'bout if I take two plates?" suggested a hefty master sergeant who couldn't stand to pass by a single goodie.

These gourmandic exclamations—and many others—were heard at the buffet table during the Headquarters Company (6002) party last Friday night, where the food, at least according to one veteran party attender, "was as good as I've ever tasted."

Nearly 200 people, members of Headquarters Company and guests, attended the gala affair which celebrated the grand opening of the company's new day room and dining room.

Among the guests were ranking officers from Post Headquarters, most of whom have Headquarters Company personnel working for them.

The spacious dining room and the cool, green day room—complete with growing plants—were the result of a renovation job that had taken more than two months. The man most responsible for the striking results, according to Company Commander Captain Charles Monges, was CWO Richard Sears, who directed the project.

CWO Sears, who has had 20 years' experience working with officers' clubs, did the planning and much of the work. His chief assistant was the company carpenter, Sp2 Teodolfo Quijano. Mess Steward Sp2 William Gass received compliments from all on party night for the marvelous food. Day room curtains were hand made by Mrs. Richard Sears.

The project started when company officers decided the existing dining room was too small and inadequate. So the dining room was expanded into the old day room, which was then relocated in the other wing. After plans were approved by the DPC and IG, money was appropriated from the company fund.

More work, including the installation of a permanent buffet, is to be done in the dining room, according to CWO Sears.

'Old West' Backdrop For Ft. Baker Series

A "Frontier Days" theme including the election of a mayor and a sheriff and a variety of other Old West atmosphere is being introduced at the Fort Baker Service Club on 21 August, in preparation for a series of gold rush programs launched by the club directors during the latter part of the month.

A night in Reno party, hosted by ladies of the Jewish Welfare Board, marks the evening of 22 August at the club. Roulette, chuck-a-luck and other games of chance will be played with house script. Prizes are to be sold to the highest bidder.

On 24 August, a real, old-fashioned Western hoedown and box lunch supper will be held in the club's Last Chance Saloon. Lonnie Dean and his all-Western band are providing the music for this one. Servicemen and their families and friends are cordially invited to attend it. Hoedown clothes are in order and the dancing will also include square and ballroom styles.

A dance is planned for the Last Chance Saloon on the evening of 26 August when special entertainment and refreshments are the order of the evening. Guests are urged to dress appropriately in the manner of "dance hall darlings" and "dapper Dans."

The highlight of the Fort Baker Club's week of Western activities comes on the evening of the 29th, when an old-time melodrama will be presented.

On the 30th of August there will be a birthday party and a wild West program during which men and women born in August will be honored.

A former teacher in the Fresno Public Schools, Miss Bedford is a native of Fresno. Her present assignment is her first as military club director.

Small Army!

Librarians That Pass On Their Way To Like Army Duty

The overworked gremlin who engineers coincidences arranged one for the 6221st ARSU, Sacramento USAR School, when the Army Reserve unit went on Annual Unit Field Training here recently.

When Major Irving Lieberman, in civilian life Director of the University of Washington's School of Librarianship, arrived at unit headquarters to fulfill his assignment as Duty Officer for the day, he was met by the Charge of Quarters, WAC Sfc. Amelia White, in private life a librarian at the California State Library in Sacramento. Pure chance had given concurrent duty to the only two librarians among hundreds of Reservists in training at the Presidio.

Sfc. White is regularly assigned to the Sacramento School's headquarters. Major Lieberman is an instructor in the intensive course in techniques and procedures of the Adjutant Generals Department which the 6221st ARSU is conducting here.

Although the two librarians had never met before, on comparing notes they discovered they had both served in the European Theater of Operations, where Major Lieberman was awarded the Army Commendation Ribbon and the Bronze Star. Before assuming his position at the University of Washington he taught at Columbia University and at the University of California, besides making a special two-year study for the Carnegie Corporation on audio-visual instruction in library education.

New Books At Your Post Library

I'd Rather Be President: A Handbook For Expectant Candidates, by Charles Ellis, Jr., and Frank Weir. Sound advice in this election year and times of pre-convention jockeying and political hanky-panky on how to campaign for the presidency—a process that is not a mystery but a connected series of operations conducted, according to well-established traditions, customs and usages.

A Walk On The Wild Side, by Nelson Algren. A blanket rejection of conventional society and a hymn of praise for those who cannot or will not fit into it. An attempt at moral judgment which turns out to be as pointless as all such judgments that condemn or praise vast categories of people.

Tragic Life Of Toulouse-Lautrec, by Lawrence and Elizabeth Hanson. A tribute to the gallantry with which this disfigured dwarf made of himself a gay, broken blade of Paris. He never developed the cripple's defense mechanism of a sweet nature but swaggered through the world on a toddler's legs.

A Capital Offense, by Jocelyn Davey. A witty, light-hearted spoof of the diplomatic set spiced with a couple of murders and the setting being the British Embassy in Washington does not prevent the British author from lampooning the latter as well as the Americans, French, Russians and South Americans.

An International Economy, by Gunner Myrdal. The pre-World War II integrated economic community took no account of backward and colonial lands, whose present drive for independence has accentuated the conflict between national and international integration. The author concludes that large-scale investment from all industrially developed countries, and not just the U. S. alone, to the underdeveloped ones is now the prime need to promote world-wide solvency and prosperity.

Party Highlights Honor Guard's Fourth Birthday

A floor show, dancing and a buffet dinner with all the trimmings marked the fourth anniversary of the Sixth Army Honor Guard, Tuesday.

Since its inception the Honor Guard has had no radical change in its mission which was originally to supply tactical security for Army Headquarters, to provide riot control, and—its most noted function—to engage in parades and ceremonies.

This unit which emphasizes "sharpness" follows the simple motto of "Perfection."

Captain Eugene J. Gasior (1945 graduate of West Point) has been company commander of the Honor Guard since August, 1954. The company, officially designated Company A, detachment 1, (6002), consists of three rifle platoons and a company headquarters.

"The Presidians" (the Sixth Army Honor Guard Precision Drill Team) make up one of the three rifle companys. All told the Honor Guard consists of four officers and 148 enlisted men.

The Sixth Army Honor Guard was first set up at the Presidio 2 August, 1952, under the direction of Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, former commanding general, Sixth Army. First Honor Guard commanding officer was Captain Malcom E. MacDonald (1946 graduate of West Point), who established his headquarters at Fort Scott.

Fort Baker Club Plans Angel Island Outing For Next Sunday

The Fort Baker Service Club has planned a picnic on Angel Island, Sunday 26 August. Servicemen from Fort Baker and dance hostesses from San Francisco are to join the men of Dog Battery in a day of outdoor festivities.

The picnic will be held at the State Park near Hospital Cove. On the calendar of events are volleyball and relay games, swimming, singing, and touring the island.

After dinner the picnic group may attend a record dance in the Battery recreation hall.

Climaxing the all-day outdoor event will be the presentation of the widely-heralded all-Army stage show, "Rolling Along," which is to be presented at the Fort Baker Service Club that evening.

Varsity Softballers Capture Central Area Title From Ord Unit

Their sights set on the Sixth Army championship, Presidio of San Francisco's Central Area softball titleholders leave for Tacoma's Madigan Army Hospital tomorrow.

The local softballers, who won four of five contests to capture the Central Area title, leave for the Sixth Army tournament as one of the top favorites. And with good reason, too.

Paced by hard-hitting Gary Blanshan and sweet pitching Ed Johnson and Johnnie Broughton, the Presidio nine nabbed everything in sight in the Central Area tourney on the Fifth Infantry Division's Fort Ord diamond.

Blanshan contributed three clutch hits in three games to send the Presidio winging, while Johnson twirled a pair of victories and Broughton two more.

The Presidio snared the victory in the opener against the 84th Engineers, 3-2, with Johnson on the mound and Blanshan bashing home the go-ahead run single in the ninth. Earlier Bob Moran walloped a two-run homer to start the local softballers on their way.

Johnson returned to the hillock in the second day of the tourney and fired a one-hitter against Letterman Army Hospital. All Presidio batters were on their hitting sticks as the post softballers won easily, 6-1.

Broughton hurled a nifty three-hitter as the Presidio edged Oakland Army Terminal, 1-0, in the third round contest. Blanshan — again — cracked a three bagger and scored on a sacrifice to spark the locals to triumph.

In the final round, the Presidio faced the 84th Engineer Group again. Johnson's luck ran out in the first game as the Fort Ord sappers came up with a 5-2 victory. But Broughton got things under control again—and won the title for the locals—in the second game of the twin bill.

He blanked the Engineers, 1-0, as Blanshan—again—walloped the game-winning home run.

Teams from the Southern Area, Central, Northern and Mountain areas will assemble at Tacoma Monday for the draw and action leading to the new Army champs.

'Most Dramatic'

Chicago, Ill. — The Dempsey-Firpo fight of 1923 was adjudged the "most dramatic event" of the sports world in a vote held by the Associated Press.

Torero Nine To Seek Atwater Title

The Presidio baseballers, almost counted out of the Atwater Armed Forces Invitational Tournament a week ago, are back in the thick of things today.

Coach Hal Fischer's hustling crew of roundballers tackles Hamilton Air Force Base Sunday in the semifinal round of the tourney and hopes—by hook or crook—to snare the championship.

Soundly trounced by Hamilton in the second round game, the Toreros came back strong last week to rack up a pair of victories against the 52nd Anti-aircraft Artillery Battalion of Merced and the Castle Air Force Base Flyers.

Good pitching, an item the Toreros have been getting in abundance most of the season, supplied the spark that enabled the Presidians to capture the twin bill.

Roger Collins, a Presidio 20-game winner last year, hurled air-tight pitching to provide the locals with a 13-2 triumph over the Ack-Ack men.

That triumph got the Toreros back into the winners' bracket and set the stage for Lee Walker, who once had a cup of coffee in the Pacific Coast League, to meet the Castle Airmen.

Walker lived up to his advance notices when he twirled the Presidio to a 5-0 triumph.

The Presidio nine now meets arch-foe Hamilton Air Force Base in the semifinals Sunday. The winner—and Fischer fervently hopes it'll be the Presidio — will face Parks Air Force Base for the title.

The Toreros gained a measure of vengeance from Hamilton in a game played this week in the Northern California Armed Forces League. Behind the dandy pitching of right-hander Lee Matzen, the Toreros picked up a 3-2 victory.

Hq. Company Surges Ahead

Headquarters Company Sixth Army widened its lead in the Summer National Bowling League last week, but the Keystone Kops kept right on the pace.

The Headquarters unit keglers crushed the Hardnoses, 4-0, as Sakurada turned in a 495-178 game. Bob Alexander turned in the high individual game with a rousing 236 for Hq. Co.

The Keystone Kops, behind the neat bowling of Bob Thorne, who rolled a 543-209 game, dusted the Rascals, 3-1. Bob Mahon took individual high series with a 626 effort.

The Koppers also downed the Hardnoses, 3-1, in a makeup game as Ed Johnson starred with 564-214.

Jones' 'Grand Slam'

Atlanta, Ga.—Golfdom's Bobby Jones completed his "grand slam" by winning the British Amateur, British Open, USGA Open and USGA Amateur in 1930.

Post Wacs Beaten In Try For 3rd Crown

The Fort Ord Wac softball team put a dramatic end to Presidio of San Francisco's domination of the Sixth Army Area's women's softball championship.

Expected to supply the toughest opposition, the Fort Ord girls rudely snuffed out the Presidio's hopes of a third straight title when they scored two convincing victories in the final round at Fort MacArthur.

The Fifth Infantry Division's Wac complement whipped the two-time defending champions, 9-1 and 6-5, to grab the Sixth Army championship and avenge last year's defeat to the Presidio in the finals here.

And the Ord softballers did it the hard way, too.

Definite underdogs to the Presidio and Oakland Army Terminal, Fort Ord lost 8-1 to the Presidio in the first round, but came back strong to win four in a row and go on to the title.

Ord whipped Fort Lawton, 20-3, and OAT, 18-11, in third round contests, thus setting the stage for its climactic battle with the Presidio in the final round of action.

Winning pitcher was Sheila Grant in the first game. She allowed the Presidio one run in the first inning and then held the Bay City softballers scoreless.

She pulled an "iron man" stunt in the second game by limiting the Presidio to eight hits while her teammates collected 11.

The losing pitcher, Pat Doering, who was on the mound in both games for the Presidio, checked Ord without a run in the last two innings of the final game, but her mates couldn't muster the requisite number of runs to pull the game out of the fire.

The Presidio opened the tournament looking every bit a champion and giving rise to speculation it would repeat as titleholders. The locals crushed Ord, 8-1, in the opener as Doering scattered four hits.

Doering kept the Presidio in the running during the second contest when she twirled an eight hitter as the locals downed OAT, 10-7. The Presidio collected only four hits against Oakland, but made them count.

30th AAA Group To Open Tourney Monday

Softball teams from all battalions of the 30th AAA Group will compete in a tournament to be held at Fort Baker, August 20 to September 1.

The tournament, a double elimination type, is being held to determine a team to represent the 30th AAA Group in the new athletic competitions recently initiated by the Army Antiaircraft Command.

Battalion teams will be made up from battery level teams which have been competing for the past several months. Each squad will be limited to 15 players, 1 coach and 1 officer.

The first and second place teams of the San Francisco Bay area defense will receive trophies, and the first place team will travel to Fort Lawton, Wash., to play in the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command tournament to be held 9-15 September, where they will compete with championship teams from the Seattle area, Hanford area and Los Angeles area conferences.

The 30th AAA Group will also be represented at the 1956 Army Antiaircraft Command softball championship games, to be held at Fort Baker between September 20th and 29th, where there will be competition on a nationwide basis with the 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th and 6th Antiaircraft Regional Commands participating.

This is the first time since the Army Antiaircraft Command was established that units have been given the chance to compete in athletic contests with all other units of the command.

4 Sparkle In Torero Grid Drill

Strengthened by the appearance of six linemen, Presidio of San Francisco footballers engaged in their first scrimmage work this week and came through with flying colors.

Although they are far from ready, both in manpower and condition, the Toreros looked stronger in their first contact drill than anytime previous.

Coach Larry McInerney, still hard pressed for additional help in the line, sung the praises of two forwards and one back following the scrum on the Fort Scott Field.

McInerney liked the fashion in which quarterback Lee Schroeder handled the position and also that of guard Joe DeLucca and tackle Pat Cox. He also singled out halfback Gene Eubanks as a runner of promise.

All in all, McInerney was feeling a wee bit better about the Presidio's prospects for the 1956 season. This, despite the fact that the team hasn't jelled and that its future hangs in the balance.

The Toreros ran plays off the straight T, although once the season progresses he plans to install a number of split-T plays.

The Presidio is scheduled to hold a full dress scrimmage against San Quentin Prison next week. This will give the locals their last chance to iron out the kinks before embarking on the season's schedule the following week against the Santa Cruz Seahawks, one of northern California's strongest semi-professional teams.

Modern Games Outstrip Grecian Olympics In Size

New York (AFPS)—The United States expects to send some 325 athletes to the 16th Olympiad in Melbourne, Australia, later this year—and when the contestants of more than 70 countries are counted the total may well reach into the thousands.

But, says the National Geographic Society, in spite of the fabulous spectacles of modern times, officials may find it hard to match the drama of the Greek extravaganzas.

While exact figures are unknown, it is probable that at their height the old games never had more then a few hundred competitors. Yet dynasties fell and rulers were deposed as a result of the scoring.

The first Olympics in recorded history were held in 776 B. C., when one Coroebus was victorious in the equivalent of a 200-yard dash. Earlier contests are shrouded in myth and legend.

There are many stories of the origin of the games. One of the most provocative says that King Oenomaus, who ruled the Greek city of Elis near Olympia devised a grisly pastime.

He ordered that his beautiful daughter Hippodamia could be won as a bride by anyone who could escape with her in a chariot. Her father would pursue the abductor in another chariot. If the suitor was caught he would be killed by the monarch's spear.

Thirteen young men attempted and all 13 failed. A 14th aspirant was a youthful warrior named Pelops. Legend says that the sly Pelops hired someone to sabotage the king's vehicle. During the race, the wheel fell off of Oenomaus' chariot and he was killed in the crash.

In celebration, Pelops is supposed to have founded the games as a thanksgiving ceremony to Zeus for his triumph. Whatever their origin, the games lasted for more than 10 centuries.

After 450 B. C. the games reached their peak. It was the ambition of every city in Greece to have an Olympic champion.

But after the Roman invasion the games gradually deteriorated.

The athletes, instead of being satisfied with a simple olive wreath and municipal honors, began receiving money and other valuable prizes. The games were abolished as a public nuisance in 394 A. D. by Emperor Theodosius I of Rome.

The games were revived in Athens in 1896, with athletes from nine nations competing.

Navy CWO Nabs Win In National Rifle Shoot

Camp Perry, Ohio—Chief Warrant Officer Offutt Pinion, U.S. Navy, took the first individual championship in the 1956 National Rifle and Pistol matches opened here this week.

Mr. Pinion fired a 539 score out of a possible 600 points to win the international free pistol event.

Ft. Benning, Ga.—With four U.S. Army pistol shooters firing aggregates of 2600 or better, the first time this been accomplished, Army marksmen completely dominated the 1956 Southeastern Regional Pistol championships.

The Army sweep in virtually every match was headed by Master Sergeant Joe Benner, last year's regional champ, whose 2630 grand aggregate gave him the individual open title.

Other U.S. Army shooters who broke 2600 were Major Ben C. Curtis, Ft. Leonard Wood, 2606; Lieutenant Colonel William A. Hancock, Ft. Benning, 2603, and Sergeant William B. Blankenship, Ft. Jay, 2601.

Master Sergeant James L. Wade of the Presidio finished second in Match No. 16, the National Match course, with 290. He was second behind Major Floyd C. Hummert who fired 291 of a possible 300 points.

Wade fired a 295 to pace the Army Red team to a second place finish in the .22 caliber team championship. The Army Blue racked up 1176 to the Red's 1164.

Cagers Seek Players For 1957 Season

Although basketball season is still far off in the minds of most sports fans, Presidio athletic director Hal Fischer today sent out a call for players to make up the 1956-57 post team.

Fischer, whose charges enjoyed an excellent season last year, has only two returning veterans —Bob Harbertson and Norm Ellenberger — returning to the fold for the upcoming season.

As a result, Fischer said all berths on the team are "wide open." He hopes for a large turnout from Presidio basketball-minded troops.

The Northern California and Bay Area Armed Forces champs will play a 30-game schedule next season against top-flight AAU, college and service teams.

The Toreros will also enter the Sixth Army Tournament, the Las Vegas Invitational and the Pacific AAU tournaments.

The Presidio finished second in the Las Vegas and Sixth Army tournaments last season.

Players interested in turning out for the squad are urged to get applications in the Special Services Sports Office, Building 122. They may phone for further information by calling 3968.

Free Tickets For Ram Games Set

Los Angeles—The Los Angeles Rams pro football team will admit members of the Armed Forces, in uniform, to all home games free of charge this season.

The announcement came from the Rams' front office and the offer is good for nine home games, including six NFL contests. Only at one charity game will service personnel not be admitted without charge.

Special Armed Forces windows have been set up for handling the complimentary tickets on game days.

Interest Soars In Archery Hunting

A growing interest in archery deer hunting is indicated by the increased take during the ten-day coastal archery season, the Department of Fish and Game reports.

Tag returns received by the Department up to August 6 showed 51 deer taken by bowmen as compared to 40 at the same time last year. During the combined 1955 archery season, a total of 189 deer were taken by bow and arrow.

Tag returns from opening weekend hunting in the coastal season have been slow in coming in, with less than 400 received at the same time.

Last year 30 per cent of the entire coastal kill was made on opening weekend.

Ice Hockey

Montreal, Canada—The game of ice hockey originated in Eastern Canada.

Rams Score Win Over Servicemen

A one-yard smash at the line by Paul Cameron in the fourth period supplied three service teams with their only touchdown as the Los Angeles Rams opened their 1956 season with an exhibition against Fort Ord, San Diego Navy and the Camp Pendleton Marines at Long Beach last week.

Cameron, recently discharged from Fort Ord, cracked over from the one to climax a 75-yard TD drive engineered by ex-California star Paul Larson. Gerry Perry, another former Bear, converted.

The Rams, however, heavily outscored the three service clubs, 62-7. Ord permited only two L. A. touchdowns during the second and fourth periods it was in action. The Marines played the first quarter and the Navy the third.

Fort Ord administered a 5-3 licking to the Toreros in their second NCAFL contest of the week at Golden Gate Park's Big Rec diamond.

George Hanes started on the mound for the Presidio, but Ord touched him for all five runs.

Pitch, Putt Course Fixes New Rule

Golfers using the Presidio pitch and putt course must furnish their own golf balls, post Special Services announced this week.

The discontinuance of the service is due to the reduction in the funding program for the fiscal year 1957. The program went into effect Tuesday.

Canadians Sign Cameron

Vancouver, B. C.—Paul Cameron, one-time UCLA All-American tailback, has arrived here to sign with the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League after receiving his Army discharge.

The ex-Bruin passed up opportunities to play in the National Football League. Last season he played with the Fort Ord Warriors, one of the Army's top grid teams.

Ladies Grab Pin League Spotlight

The ladies, God bless 'em, grabbed the spotlight in the Special Services Mixed Bowling League last week.

Dorothy Crook, returning to the form that brought her a measure of fame in Germany, helped pull the Rascals back into the race for the championship.

After a somewhat shoddy showing in the past weeks, she bowled two games of more than 180 and a third for 145.

V. Esh of the King Pins turned in three games of 144 in a row to win a special WIBC award. L. Nightingale of the CMD took the high games for the week with a 208, a big improvement since her average has been 134.

time commander of Company B, has been ordered to duty with American Forces Far East, Colonel Smith said. It is also expected that Captain George J. Reuss, confinement officer, will continue at that post once the inactivation orders are carried out.

This will be the second inactivation the battalion has been ordered to carry out since 1948. In that year the unit was inactivated while on occupation duty in Vienna, Austria.

The battalion was recalled to duty 13 months after the outbreak of the Korean War and ordered to Camp Roberts, California. In June, 1952, orders were received for assignment to Sixth Army Headquarters here.

During its four-year active duty tour, the battalion, a General Reserve unit, prided itself on maintaining a combat-ready state. For three years hand-running, it rendered security support of the Atomic Energy Commission atom tests at Camp Desert Rock, Nevada,

Last week, Company C returned from the 1956 nuclear test at Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands. The battalion also provided Military Police support during last year's Exercise Sagebrush at Camp Polk, La., and has supplied National Guard troops with MP support at Camp Roberts yearly since 1952.

In addition to these functions, the 505th also conducted company and battalion-wide tests at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation.

During World War II, the 505th was activated at Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky, landed in France in September, 1944, crossed the Rhine with elements of the British Second Army in March, 1945, and assigned to occupation duty in Vienna during the summer of 1945.

They are: 518, 542, 553, 631, 643, 714, 715, 716, 762, 763, 765, 767, 942, 943, 951, 719, 321, 524, 768. In addition these overage MOS's cannot be promoted to E-6 or E-7: 635, 717, 764, 912.

It was felt at Sixth Army that the top grade promotions this month should go to the combat and signal areas as an "encouragement factor." The policy would reward people in the more difficult duty fields and might encourage others to return to these MOS areas.

The sergeant was one of 400 officers and enlisted men who earlier this week took advantage of the Sixth Army Aviation Section's invitation to go for a ride and receive helicopter orientation.

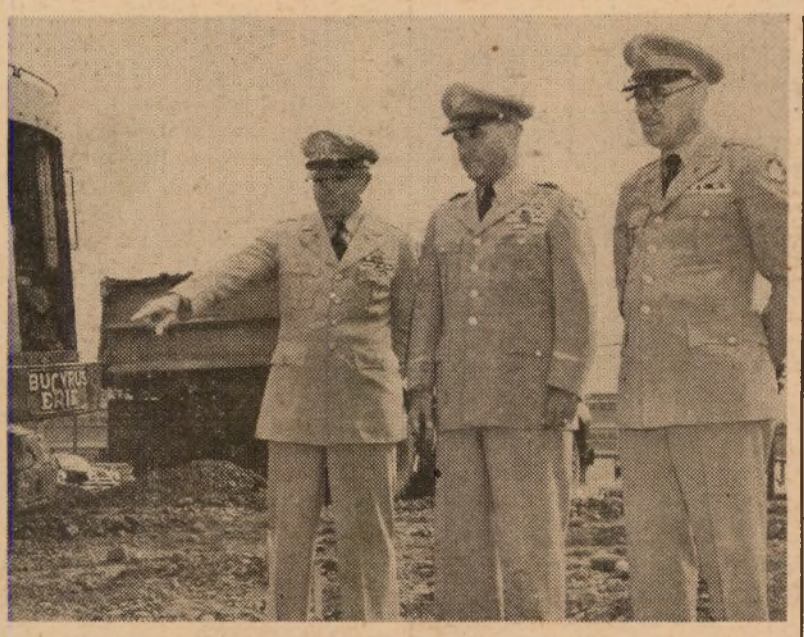
'Curiosity Lift' Plays To Riding Room Only

If you want to generate enthusiasm at the Presidio, invite the personnel to go for a helicopter ride and orientation.

When Sixth Army aviation offered the invitation, they expected around 200 to turn out. But 400 signed up, and at 1000 hours on Thursday, with better than a half day to go, 380 had made trips, so the total number participating in "operation curiosity lift" would go well over 400.

And did they like it? The response was a unanimous "yes!" "That's what I want, I'm going to buy me one of those," drawled a tall Texas Warrant Officer as he hopped out of the machine after his ride. Many young lieutenants up for their first ride "really caught the bug," reports Lt. Colonel Jack W. Ruby, chief, Sixth Army Aviation. Many of them inquired about entry into the program.



Admittedly more than a few of the riders were a little on the apprehensive side as the ride started. But as Master Sergeant Thomas A. Nordstrom, detachment 5 (6002) explains it:

"I was a bit uneasy at first—no doors on the helicopter—to be taken off the security of the ground. But after we were aloft and I could feel the maneuverability of the machine and the complete control of the pilot, I relaxed and enjoyed the ride."

"Just a little air bubble and an engine—and he made it do tangos," squealed a WAC who went up twice.

Everyone was amazed at the extreme maneuverability of the machine as the pilots—hovering but feet off the ground—would make their "choppers" go forward, backward, sideways and then 'round in circles.

These were not just joy rides. Besides the general helicopter orientation, many officers were able to acquire information for the possible adaptation of the helicopter for their field. Such an example was the visit of Major C. B. Wiley and Captain Duane Pederson, Sixth Army Chemical, who were checking on the possibility of using helicopters for radiological surveys.

Job Training Course Set

The 1800 field maintenance service calls that pour through the switchboard at Presidio's Post Engineer at the cost of some $36,000 per year are due for about a 70 per cent reduction following the successful establishment of a six weeks on the job training course at the Engineer Field Maintenance Shop in Sausalito.

One class has already completed the course and a second class will complete its second week today. Both instructors and students are enthusiastic about the course which covers every phase of preventive maintenance and minor upkeep and overhaul of antiaircraft site power equipment.

As Sp3 Jerry Pruett put it, "I've been working with this same equipment for nearly two years, without really knowing it. After two weeks here, and a chance to really participate with the experts in major and minor overhaul, I'm confident that what used to mean a call for help to a local field maintenance man has been reduced to a little trouble shooting on my own."

Local Effort In Effect

With high hopes that some of the national do-it-yourself craze will rub off on householders of every rank and circumstance, budget-minded staff and engineer officers at the Presidio have launched an all-out campaign for self-service minor maintenance in home, barracks and BOQ.

Facing a reduction in already sadly depleted R&U (repair and utilities) funds, a quarter million dollar backlog in work requests and a shortage of skilled technicians, Post Engineer has moved with considerable alacrity to put into effect "Operation Do It Yourself."

Following recommendations by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker for an extended effort to improve the condition and appearance of living quarters for troops and military families, and Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young's suggestion that the quickest way to achieve this end would be to utilize the inherit fix-it abilities of the average American soldier, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, has ordered

Brucker Plan Would Raise Troop Elan

Two programs, both of which are aimed at saving the taxpayer millions of dollars annually in general maintenance costs, have been launched simultaneously throughout the Sixth Army area.

Following a letter from Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker in which he expressed special concern for the condition and appearance of "barracks, BOQs and family housing," Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, has ordered commanders in the field to give special attention to improving these conditions by utilizing "do it yourself techniques" to accomplish minor repairs and improvements.

At the same time a program directed at improved preventive maintenance and a resultant reduction in heavy backlogs of equipment now piling up at field maintenance activities was launched following Army Chief of Staff General Maxwell Taylor's expressed concern that these backlogs, unless reduced, would seriously "impair the striking power and mobility of the Army."

Both programs are aimed at giving the Army the most for a "reduced budget" dollar and are so geared that they will use the

Overseas Billets Open Under New Army Plan

Civilian employees who would like a change of scenery—say Germany, Japan, Okinawa, or even Korea—can now hope for fullfillment of what was once just a armchair adventurer's dream.

As a result of the Army's recently implemented Interchange Program, civilian employees will be recruited to work in Germany, France, Alaska, Panama, Japan and other Far East countries.

Les Scanlon, civilian personnel officer for the Presidio, has announced five overseas vacancies that the Civilian Personnel Section is currently seeking to fill. They include:

Supervisory Fiscal Accountant, GS-501-9, Germany.

Radio News Writer, GS-010-7, Japan.

Accountant, GS-510-11, Japan.

Information Specialist, GS-010-10, Okinawa.

Time Leave & Payroll Officer, GS-544-6, Korea.

"Only those individuals with skills and professional backgrounds that qualify to fill vacant positions will be recruited," Mr. Scanlon said. "Most of the appointments are for a 24-month tour, with paid transportation to and from the foreign duty station."

Chief aim of the Interchange Program is to retain above average employees in the Army's civilian service and to promote their career development. The United States Civil Service Commission has indorsed the program.

Those employees possessing competitive status will be accorded reemployment rights with the releasing command after

Army Copter Pilots Shatter 3 World Speed Records

Washington—Army helicopter pilots, in shattering three world speed records, have chalked up a top mark of 141.9 miles an hour.

Flying an H-34 Sikorsky copter over a closed course in Connecticut last 12 July, the Army aviators set new records for 100, 500 and 1,000 kilometers.

The H-34, assigned to the Continental Army Command at Ft. Rucker, Ala., made the top speed in the 100 km. distance, beating the old record by almost 20 miles an hour.

The pilots, Capts. Claude E. Hargett and Ellis D. Hill, both of Rucker, covered the other courses at 136 mph for 500 km and 132.6 mph for 1,000 km. (AFPS)

Troop Quarters At LAH Slated For "New Look"

Letterman Army Hospital personnel won't know the old homestead once current plans for rejuvenating enlisted men and women's quarters, BOQs and family quarters are completed.

Following a request by LAH Commander Major General Paul I. Robinson, MC, the Post Engineer recently completed a survey aimed at bringing troop and family housing up to the high standards requested by the Secretary of the Army in recent correspondence with military commanders throughout the ZI.

The Surgeon General, Major General Silas B. Hays, has stressed the importance of "immediate and continuing action" in the matter of improving quarters for military personnel in accordance with Secretary Brucker's "increasing concern."

General Robinson stated, "Members of Letterman Army Hospital Staff have been appraised of the importance I place on attaining and maintaining the standard expressed by Secretary Brucker. My staff has been instructed to cooperate fully in the development of this program."

The survey by Post Engineer had the following recommendations to make:

1) That all dayrooms that have not been painted within the past five years be painted and all woodwork refinished. Present lights to be replaced with fluorescent fixtures and additional convenience outlets installed. All furniture be renovated or replaced as needed.

2) That all latrines, including those in the WAC billets, be repaired, painted and half tiled (quarry) to five feet. That all shower stalls be completely tiled (quarry).

3) Cubicles were recommended for all WAC billets, as was a complete painting in authorized colors. An exhaust fan for the laundry room. A consolidation of all laundry facilities in Bldg. 212. That the existing kitchen be modernized and kitchens installed in Bldgs. 213, 213x, and 214x where present laundry rooms are located.

4) It was further recommended that one of the barracks at Crissy Field be converted for use as quarters for single, senior NCOs.

Presidio Group Takes United Crusade's Unique 'Come-See' Tour

Three key members on the executive staff of the upcoming United Bay Area Crusade campaign at the Presidio were given a chance to see Crusade dollars in action during a visit to local charitable institutions this week.

Invited to take one of the Crusade's "Come-See Tours" were Colonel Charles G. Rau, post executive officer and this year's chairman of the Presidio portion of the campaign; Major Florence B. Boush, post funds custodian and assistant chairman and secretary-treasurer for the local campaign, and Captain Ralph J. Schaller, press chief of Sixth Army Information and campaign publicity chairman.

Post Sergeant Major Ferdinand Johnson and Star Presidian editor Ken Erwin also made the tour.

Touring Presidians were given a first hand look at facilities of the Jewish Family Service Agency, Community Children's Day Nursery and Garden Hospital, all supported in part by the United Crusade.

To Honor and obey is the military principle being sworn to by Sfc. Virginia Chaffee, Post Provost Marshal Section, as she takes the reenlistment oath from Lieutenant Dorothy L. Crook, her Company Commander. Sergeant Chaffee's was the first reenlistment oath administered at the Presidio by Lieutenant Cook who recently took command of D Company, 6002nd SU, and the third re-up for the veteran enlisted woman.

Popular WAC Germany Bound

The Presidio Girl Scouts are suffering the "Rotation Blues," due to the approaching loss of their enlisted leader, Sfc. Virginia Chaffee, who is soon outward bound for an assignment in Germany. She has been active in Girl Scout activities for the past two years.

On the Post Provost Marshal staff for three years, Sergeant Chaffee, or "Ginny," will also be missed by the Registration section there and by the Wacs of Company D.

Provost Marshal traffic section reports such as DRs and faulty driving tickets frequently had a myserious way of disappearing from the scene after they hit Ginny's desk. It has even been hinted that, through an unofficial and unpolitical "platform," the Wac "party" voted Sergeant Chaffee into one of the Post's most important spots because of her faculty of soothing the feelings of the Provost Marshal's boys after their harried encounters with uniformed women drivers.

Soldiers' Own Fund!

AER Drive Nearing Goal, Will Run Through Pay Day

The sum of $4,075.77 has to date been realized in the kick-off of a dual payday collection from military personnel of the Presidio and its sub-Posts, for the annual Army Emergency Relief fund drive. This sum falls short by $1,500 of the self-imposed goal set by Sixth Army and Post Headquarters in sharing the Army-wide responsibility of maintaining a self-sustaining fund from which to draw financial assistance for military personnel and their families in time of emergency.

According to Major Florence B. Boush, local AER officer, it is anticipated that the established goal will be reached through the coming pay day collection which marks the final phase of the AER Fund drive at the Presidio and its outlying military units.

The initial mission of the Army Emergency Relief Fund is to establish a reserve bank from which money can be drawn either through loan or outright grant by the active duty soldier in time of personal or family financial emergency.

A close ally to AER is the Army Relief Society Fund which provides for needy widows and orphans of the regular Army in times of distress or disaster.

Both emergency financial units are maintained through voluntary contributions made by men and women in the military service in the interests of coming to the aid of their own during family or national disaster.

Military personnel of the Presidio and its sub-Posts who have not already contributed are urged to bring the 1956 AER Fund drive over the top either by presenting their contributions to the fund officer at the pay table on 31 August or submitting the money to the Post Funds Custodian office, Building 220, at the Presidio.

Recognition Check to the extent of $200.00 and an award certificate for sustained superior performance of duty was won recently by Mary C. McLaughlin, a Sixth Army Ordnance administrative assistant. Shown with Miss McLaughlin is Colonel Bruce D. Mooring, Ordnance officer, who presented the check and citation.

Ord Employee Wins Cash, Certificate For Top Efforts

Outstanding performance of her duties with the Sixth Army Ordnance Section as administrative assistant paid-off in dollars to Miss Mary C. McLaughlin recently.

A check for $200 and a Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate for Sustained Superior Performance of Duty, was presented Miss McLaughlin by Col. Bruce D. Mooring, Sixth Army Ordnance officer, at an informal ceremony attended by Section personnel and Mr. Harry Leyh, Civilian Personnel representative.

Miss McLaughlin began her Civil Service career in 1941 with the Ordnance Section when it was under the Ninth Corps Area Command. In January, 1942, she was transferred to Fort Douglas, Utah, where she worked for Ordnance until her return to Sixth Army Headquarters in June, 1946.

Numbered among her awards are the Army Commendation for Meritorious Civilian Service, second highest civilian award, and several letters of commendation. The Meritorious Award was granted by Gen. Mark W. Clark, USA (Ret.), then Sixth Army Commander.

Operation Do It Yourself

"Operation Do It Yourself" put into immediate effect.

"The Engineer gets some 50 calls a day for minor repairs such as leaky faucets, plugged drains and toilets, blown fuses, broken windows, loose boards, etc.," said Colonel Lundquist. "About 20 per cent or some $5,000 a year could be saved if units and householders would accomplish these minor repairs for themselves. Beyond that a saving in engineer manhours would represent an even larger economy."

Under the new plan Post Engineer has listed 16 items that can be made available to each unit under "Operation Do It Yourself." It is emphasized, however, that only such tools and equipment which the unit commander feels his personnel are capable of properly utilizing will be drawn.

In the light of current regulations, the Post Engineer, Colonel James R. Rundell, has listed most of the wills and wonts under the new plan.

Fuses will be replaced in lighting circuits only. If fuse blows again the PE Work Order Section, Ex. 2104, will be called. Blown fuses for equipment circuits will not be replaced by the unit.

Window shades will be given a new dress when brought to the Carpenter Shop, Bldg. 288. Window or door screens will be repaired or replaced at the same location.

New glass for broken panes can be obtained by furnishing dimension to the Paint Shop at Ex. 2118. Light bulbs are available at the Engineer Warehouse, Bldg. 283, from 0745 to 1145 and 1230 to 1630 hours daily, Monday through Friday. Ladders required for light bulb replacement or other R&U maintenance may be drawn from the warehouse on a temporary hand receipt.

Requests for painting will be evaluated by the Paint Shop to determine whether they meet the requirements of AR 420-70 (interior painting is limited to minimum of every four years) and to estimate and issue the amount required and provide any technical assistance needed.

Small quantities of lumber will be issued upon request for repair to existing structure. It is emphasized, however, that because of a limitation of funds and the restriction on new construction that these materials must not be used for new construction without the written approval of the Post Engineer on DA AGO Form 5-27.

Summing up, the Deputy Post Commander stated, "Effective this date all units will initiate this 'Do It Yourself' program as recommended by the Secretary of the Army and the Commanding General consistent with the capabilities of the personnel contained in the individual units. All assistance available under existing regulations will be offered by the Post Engineer organization to implement this program.

"Unit commanders are urged to offer any additional suggestions in the implementation of this program, these to be submitted to the Post Engineer Operations Office, Ext. 3769."

So the next time that cute Wac tells you her bulb has burned out don't tell her your MOS or Job Description doesn't qualify you as a bulb snatcher. Just tell her to —Do It Yourself!—the Post Engineer will be glad to furnish the bulb.

New Training Program

Pruett is an engineer equipment mechanic with the A Battery of the 9th AAA and has completed the Deisel Engineering Course at Ft. Belvoir, Virginia.

Melvin Forslund, one of the course instructors, was equally enthusiastic. He paused long enough from his "quick course" in how to operate, maintain, trouble shoot and correct the 400 cycle AC 30 kw generator to say, "I think it's a good course. They get a little theory, but mostly a chance to dig in and find out what really makes one of these big babies tick. Of course we can show them a few short cuts to trouble shooting and repairs, but mostly we stress the preventive maintenance that reduces most minor overhaul."

Currently some nine men representing missile and conventional antiaircraft sites throughout the Bay Area are taking the 240-hour training course. There were five in the first class which graduated on 10 August. According to Egill Addson, civilian officer in charge of the Field Maintenance Shop, the ideal class is about six men, "a class this size makes for more personal instruction and allows for the coverage of a greater area in maintenance and overhaul."

Shop Chief Sveng Evans thinks it is an exceptionally good course because "it is short on theory and long on do." "Sure we give them some theory, mostly about an hour a day, but I think they benefit the most from being able to dive in and work right on the job with one of our trained technicians."

Post Engineer Colonel James R. Rundell is extremely proud of the training course's success to date and thinks that it is in this type of on the job training "which enables the units to effect a great deal more of their minor repairs" that the answer will be found to the field maintenance problem which is currently plaguing the Army.

"We are already beginning to note the effects from our first small class to finish the course," said the colonel. "Those units to which these men belong are showing an increased independence in the case of minor repairs on site power equipment."

Since each of the 1800 calls for field maintenance each year averages about $20 per call for a total cost of some $36,000 per year, a 70 per cent reduction would result in an ultimate saving of some $25,000 annually.

- - reason enough!

The antiaircraft defense of targets in the United States is a major responsibility of the Army under operational control of the Air Force. The Army Antiaircraft Command, whose troops are on duty seven days a week, 24 hours a day, prepared to meet attack at any time, provides the final protective fires against any enemy aircraft that might get past the fighter interceptor screen. For this purpose, Army's arsenal includes NIKE—the 20-foot-long missiles that are guided to their targets by means of radar; the extremely accurate, rapid-firing "Skysweeper" 75mm cannon, which tracks its target automatically, and the old standbys of antiaircraft artillery, the 90 and 120mm guns. NIKE batteries provide protection for many major cities and other important areas, and their installation continues at a steady pace.

Here's How says instructor Melvin Forslund as he gives a few tips on the maintenance of the 400-cycle 30 kw AC generator to students (l. to r.) Sp3 Floyd Ball, B Battery, 436th AAA; Pvt. Leon Johnson, A Battery, 436th AAA, and Pvt. John Geiger, B Battery, 752nd. Instruction is part of a 240-hour on the job training course aimed at improved maintenance within the individual units.

Nothing To It! says Jackie Hoyt, last year's Brownie (left), as she introduces Michele Flickinger, first Brownie of this year, to registration procedure, under guidance of Mrs. Benjamin I. Hoyt, NCOIC of the Teenage Club. Mrs. LaFlare is the wife of Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin I. LaFlare of the Bay Area Transportation Terminal Command.

Girl Scout Signup To Start On Wednesday

The heartache of school opening next week has been softened considerably for Presidio junior graders with the prospect of the autumn Girl Scout program which is, on a limited scale, the Open Sesame to group participation in further outdoor activities cut short by the advent of the Fall school semester.

Mrs. John G. Ondrick, the Girl Scout publicity chairman, announced to the Star Presidian this week that registration for membership in the Presidio Girl Scouts will take place at the Girl Scout House, at the Lombard Gate, from 29 August to 4 September.

Meanwhile, girls who were registered at the Presidio last year will be contacted when the troop is ready for scouting activities.

Because of the outstanding leadership and guidance given by the Girl Scout program directors, the unit activities now hold a record of outstanding achievement for which national as well as local recognition has been given.

During the present summer the Girl Scouts attended camp in Marin County and the High Sierra. Highlight of the season was the Brownie Day Camp at the Presidio which was attended by 55 girls from the area.

There is a vital need at present for adults to assist and direct the Girl Scout program during 1956-1957. It is not necessary for volunteers to have experience in Scouting, since training courses will be presented mornings and evenings during the Fall months.

Nursery facilities are also offered, without charge, for women workers who have small children.

movie previews

PILLARS TO THE SKY is a drama of the Christianized redskins of the old Oregon country who are led into a senseless war against the U.S. Cavalry by their ruthless leader.

A CRY IN THE NIGHT is a drama of juvenile terror portrayed through the experiences of a teenage girl who is too young and too grown-up all at the same time, but one fateful night she falls victim to a night of terror.

PRIVATE'S PROGRESS describes the trials and tribulations of Stanley, a British recruit, who is inducted into the Army. After many a hilarious experience he learns that the Army doesn't always do everything the hard way.

SEVEN LITTLE FOYS is the portrayal of a nostalgic-provoking family, well-remembered by older show-goers, who tour the country as vaudeville headliners starred in many hits. The trials of the father of the family, Eddie Foy himself, through his romance and marriage to an Italian ballerina, and the attempt to rear his seven youngsters into the only business he knew, make fine movie fare. The integration of high points in Foy's career have been entertainingly written into this screenplay.

GUN BROTHERS is a drama of two brothers who live in two different worlds—one a gunslinging killer and the other a respectable rancher. The climax comes as the two brothers face each other in a gun duel to the death.

'C' Battery Wins 9th AAA Reup Plaque

Recently in a ceremony held at its Nike Site, Battery C, 9th AAA Missile Battalion, San Pablo, California, was awarded a plaque for having the highest reenlistment rate of any battery in the 9th AAA Missile Battalion.

The plaque, representing the reenlistment achievement, was presented by Lt. Col. Frank A. Bates, Jr., the battalion commander, to Captain Johnnie T. Smith, the unit commander, with the battery proudly standing by.

With a reenlistment percentage of 60% for the quarter ending 30 June, Battery C nosed out its nearest competitior, Battery B, which attained a reenlistment percentage of 50% during the same period.

The plaque, in the shape of the Army AA Command patch, a missile flanked by two "A's," is part of the AAA reenlistment awards initiated last April. The AAA reenlistment program provides plaques at all levels of command from battery to Army Antiaircraft Command Headquarters.

Battery C will retain the plaque for the remainder of this quarter, at which time it will be rotated. Any unit, however, which wins the award three times in any 12 month period will earn permanent possession.

The 9th AAA Missile Battalion itself was presented a plaque recently for the highest percentage of reenlistments of any of the six battalions in the 30th AAA Group, having a percentage of 44.4% during the same quarter.

New CO, Executive Officer For 9th AAA Missile Battalion

Recent officer arrivals to the 30th AAA Group, Fort Barry, California, are Lieutenant Colonel Frank A. Bates, Jr., and Major John E. Doane. Colonel Bates arrived to assume command of the 9th AAA Missile Battalion, with headquarters at Fort Baker, California, and Major Doane took over duties as the battalion's Executive Officer.

Colonel Bates brings to the 9th Battalion a background well grounded in atomic energy and related weapons. From June, 1948, until January, 1952, he saw duty at Sandia Base, Albuquerque, New Mexico. He served first in special weapons units and later as military liaison engineer with the Sandia Corporation, a research and engineering agency of the Atomic Energy Commission.

With duty in the office of G3, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C., from June, 1952, until July, 1955, Colonel Bates continued work in the field of Atomic Energy and Combat Developments.

The Colonel holds a Master's Degree in Engineering from the University of Michigan, and prior to assuming command of the 9th AAA Missile Battalion, attended the Air Command and Staff School, Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Alabama.

Colonel and Mrs. Bates and their two daughters are living at quarters 607B, Fort Baker, California.

Major Doane returned to the United States earlier this year after serving over two years as Plans and Policy Officer with the 40th AAA Brigade in Japan, and one year as Radar Officer with Headquarters Eighth Army in Korea.

Upon return from the Far Eastern Command, and before assignment to the 9th AAA Missile Battalion, Major Doane attended and completed the Associate Advance Surface to Air Missile Officers Course at the Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile School, Fort Bliss, Texas.

Major Doane resides with his wife, young son, and newborn daughter, in San Rafael, California.

Star Injured As Toreros Lose Final Tourney Tilt; Softballers Near Crown

Presidio Club Belts 2 Foes At Tacoma

Tacoma (Madigan Army Hospital)—With big Ed Johnson spinning five-hit ball in two games and getting plenty of hitting support, Presidio of San Francisco's varsity softball team reached the Sixth Army Tournament finals yesterday.

Overwhelming pre-tourney favorites, the Toreros proved every bit as good as their advance notices as they walloped Fort Lawton and Fort MacArthur in opening round games.

The Presidio took the measure of Fort Lawton, 11-2, in the opener Tuesday afternoon and then walloped Fort MacArthur, 11-4, Wednesday. The Toreros were scheduled to play Fort MacArthur for the title yesterday.

Johnson, who has been the Presidio's pitching mainstay all season, gave up five hits in each game, getting all the batting support he could possibly use.

Presidio hitters—Ray Holyman, Johnnie Broughton, Harry Matthews and Gary Blanshan—contributed hits when they counted most—with runners on base.

Against Fort Mac, Holyman bagged three for four and drove home five of the Presidio's 11 runs. Matthews added 2 for 4 to the attack and accounted for four runs.

In other first day action, Fort Mac defeated Fort Lewis, 3-0. Lawton then knocked Lewis out of the double elimination tournament, 1-0, in eleven innings.

Deadline Near For Boxing Tourney

Officers and enlisted men interested in participating in the Sixth Army boxing tournament have one week remaining to submit entries, it was announced today.

Entries are 31 August 1956 with the Commanding Officer Station Complement, Oakland Army Terminal, site of the championship tournament 10 September through 13 September.

Amateur Athletic Union rules will prevail for the three-day tournament and boxers must present AAU cards prior to the initial weighin.

All installations in the Sixth Army Area have been urged to participate in the tourney. Each station may submit up to ten entries, plus a coach and trainer.

Interested parties must submit their entries to Presidio Special Services, Building 122, as soon as possible.

A squad of ten champions will be selected to represent the Sixth Army at the All-Army meet, Fort Myer, Va., 24-29 September.

Kingpins Near Pin League Leadership

The California Military District bowling team's lead in the Special Services Mixed League was cut this week.

The Kingpins surged to within one and one-half games of the CMD lead, threatening to knock them off that perch. The third place Strugglers are nine full games behind.

COFFEE 'N CAKE Ralph Scanlin, master of the Presidio pitch and putt golf course, prepares to cut his 70th birthday cake ably abetted by Mrs. Scanlin in a ceremony in the Presidio Service Club. Post Special Services gave a surprise coffee and cake party for Scanlin on his reaching three score and ten years and completing 19 years as pitch and putt golf pro.

Ceremony Honors Golf Pro Scanlin

In appreciation for 19 years' devoted service and to celebrate his 70th birthday, Post Special Services this week gave a surprise birthday party for Ralph Scanlin—beaming, gentle golf master of the pitch and putt course.

Scanlin, who has instructed thousands of Presidio duffers in the "do's" and "don'ts" of the ancient and dignified game of golf, was caught entirely unawares — as happy tears rolled down his cheeks while listening to the plaudits of friends, co-workers and high ranking Presidio officers.

The Presidio golf pro was tendered this honor in a ceremony attended by 25 persons in the Enlisted Service Club.

Special Services Captain John Hoover acted as master of ceremonies in the birthday cake and coffee party. Hoover traced Scanlin's arrival on the Presidio back to 1937 when the driving range and putting green were located near Crissy Field.

He called attention to the start of construction of the pitch and putt course in June 1939. Through the cooperation of the Post Engineers and the WPA, it was completed in May 1941.

And since that happy date, Scanlin has presided over the course with a kindly eye and a gentle hand for beginners.

Accompanied by Mrs. Scanlin, the golf pro accepted the Certificate of Appreciation from Hoover and a set of steak knives from Mrs. A. W. Gustafson of the Presidio Women's Golf Club.

The couple then posed for a photographer, blowing out the candles on the cake and cutting into it with a ceremonial sword.

Afterwards, Scanlin said, "I don't know what to say. I'm so surprised. So thanks so much, all of you."

In attendance at the fete were DPC Colonel Carl E. Lundquist and Presidio executive officer Colonel Charles G. Rau.

Ft. Bliss Pvt. Links Winner

A Fort Bliss private shot a one over par 73 in the final round to capture the All-Army golf tournament championship at Fort Bragg, N. C., last week.

He was Pvt. Ray M. Moore, Fourth Army's top divot ace, who turned back Lieutenant Joseph Kryla, Schofield Barracks, in the final round. Moore carded a 286 for the 72-hole tournament, two strokes under par. Kryla finished three strokes behind.

Both linksmen will play for the Army and Interservice tournament at Elgin Air Force Base, Florida, starting next Tuesday.

Three other Army golfers also made the open golf team. They are Roy Schneider, Fort Sam Houston; Wally Bradly, Fort Bliss, and Dave M. Lowe. Schneider and Bradly finished with 296.

Lowe won a playoff for fifth in a sudden death match.

Williams Out For Season; In Collision

The Presidio of San Francisco baseballers gave it the old college try in the final round of the Atwater Invitational Tournament last week—but to no avail.

Gunning for the tournament championship against Parks Air Force Base in the finals, Coach Hal Fischer's Toreros dropped a 2-1 decision, but not before they pressed their luck to the breaking point.

Behind, 2-0, in the bottom of the ninth inning, the Toreros filled the bases and stood on the threshold of victory and the title when tragedy struck. Charlie Matzen, pinch hitting for George Mulligan, slashed a single to center.

One runner scored easily from third, but Harry Williams, perched on second, rounded third base and headed for home as the throw came in from the outfield.

The 22-year-old former pro was out by the proverbial mile, but he continued his mad dash for home, attempting to jar the ball loose from the catcher's fist with a shoulder block.

The gambit failed and both Williams and receiver toppled to the ground in a heap. When the dust settled, Williams writhed on the ground, holding an injured shoulder. Later, X-rays showed Williams having suffered a broken shoulder and was declared out for the remainder of the season by Fischer.

The Presidio gained the finals with two stirring victories in the semi-final round Saturday.

The Toreros, behind the six-hit hurling of Lee Walker, crushed Hamilton Air Force Base, 8-2. Norm Ellenberger, who won the tournament's Most Valuable Player award, batted home three runs.

In their first battle with Parks, the Toreros won easily, 9-3. Matzen turned in a five hitter for the Presidio and got plenty of hitting support, mostly from Williams, who contributed three hits.

With Williams declared out, the Toreros received another body blow on the eve of the Sixth Army Tournament, when star shortstop Bill Selsor departs for civilian life.

The small (5-9) sparkplug from Humboldt State College in Eureka will be released from active duty 31 August, extending the Presidio another jolt just when hopes were riding high of winning the Sixth Army tourney.

The Toreros leave for Fort Ord —scene of the tournament—2 September.

Post Cage Turnout Termed Excellent

The Presidio's hopes of repeating its successful 1955-56 basketball season, appeared excellent today.

Coach Hal Fischer, who led the Toreros to one of their best ever seasons a year ago, greeted a goodly turnout in the Special Services sports office this week and immediately began plans for the 1956-57 year.

Although a number of good prospects appeared on the scene, Fischer urged any other Presidio and sub-post stationed men with basketball on their minds, to apply at once. He'll receive calls on Extension 3968 or in person in Building 122.

Fischer has scheduled a team meeting for 10 September in the sports office when he'll outline plans, organization, eligibility problems and training to team candidates.

Post Champs Leading AAA Softball Race

The 441st AAA Missile Battalion softballers came from behind to down the 436th AAA Battalion "Skymasters," 6-4, Monday, to open the 30th AAA Group softball tournament at the Fort Baker ball field.

The tournament, in which all six battalions of the 30th AAA Group are participating, will last until 28 or 29 August, depending on the results of each game as the tournament progresses. The championship team will represent the 30th AAA Group at the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command tournament, to be held at Fort Lawton, Washington, 9-15 September.

Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the 30th AAA Group, threw out the first ball to open the tournament.

He remarked that "never before since the establishment of the Army Antiaircraft Command, have units been given a chance to compete in athletic contests with other units throughout the United States."

He added that he is sure that the team which will represent the 30th AAA Group will display "good ball-handling, good sportsmanship and pride in their organization."

Although the 436th AAA Bn. lost its first game right off the bat, the team isn't out of the tournament. Being a double elimination type of contest, each team has to lose twice before it's eliminated.

The 752nd AAA Battalion team is expected to offer tough competition to the other battalion teams entered. Some members of this team have never been defeated and boast the Presidio Intramural Softball League championship.

Monday afternoon they defeated the 52nd AAA Bn., 6-5, and Tuesday afternoon they racked up their second win at the expense of the 9th AAA Missile Bn. behind hurler Griffin's one-hit pitching, by a score of 5-3.

Tuesday morning the 740th AAA Missile Bn. trounced the 441st AAA Missile Bn., 8-7.

Presidio Drops Football From Autumn '56 Sports Calendar

Beset by a host of problems—notably lack of manpower—Presidio of San Francisco military and Special Services authorities this week dropped football from the 1956 Fall sports calendar.

Lack of sufficient players for the squad was the chief reason given for discontinuance of the sport, although several other factors also entered the decision favoring action.

Tops among these was a waning interest among troops on the Presidio's grid fortunes. Since the end of World War II, spectator interest and crowds at home games has been on the downgrade, it was noted.

ACTION AT HOME Presidio catcher Jerry Steinlauf tags out Henry DeLano, 84th Engineer Battalion leftfielder, at home plate, during the Central Area softball championships at Fort Ord. Ed Johnson (22), Presidio hurler, watches the action. The Presidio won the title, 1-0, in the second game of the playoff between the two squads.

In addition, a shortage of funds necessary to equip, transport the team to out of town contests and to pay game officials also influenced the decision.

In place of regulation varsity football, the Presidio hopes to establish and boost a strong intramural program among various units and sections. This, it is felt, will provide greater interest among the troops and encourage their active participation in athletic activities.

As a starter, the intramural flag (touch) football program will be given every encouragement. The schedule of games started Monday.

As a result of the discontinuance of varsity football, Special Services sports office cancelled the 11-game schedule drawn up earlier this year. The Toreros were to play their first game against the Santa Cruz Seahawks semi-pro team 31 August. They also had a full dress scrimmage arranged with San Quentin prison tomorrow.

Shaky from the start, the footballers at their strongest could muster only 20 to 25 players, most of them backfield men. At the last count, Coach Larry McInerney had only nine linemen among his charges.

The big stumbling block in the drive for players came when potential players couldn't be released from their units because of military commitments.

Many of the possible candidates for position were from AAA units in the area. Since these units are on a 24-hour alert, commanders felt the men should be utilized for military duties only.

It was also pointed out that the Presidio's duty strength this year is almost 1,000 men less than last year when the Toreros racked up a 10-2 record. This cut down the number of candidates eligible to participate in the varsity program.

Paratrooper Likes Doing Pushups

Fort Bragg, N. C.—Pfc. Early S. Lam, assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division here, has an unusual—and active—hobby.

He LIKES to do pushups.

Lam likes to take pride in going beyond the requirements set forth for physical standards for soldiers under 40 years of age.

Not satisfied with doing 54 pushups as required for the perfect fitness test, Lam does 450 pushups two nights a week in his barracks before fascinated—and awed — buddies. It takes him about an hour and a half. And he has gone as high as 560.

Lam only weighs 145 pounds and stands 5-6.

3 Servicemen Gain Olympic Swim Berths

Detroit—Three servicemen—Army Pvt. David Radcliff, Navy Seaman Reid Patterson and AF Lt. Yoshi Oyakawa—stroked their way to places on the U.S. Olympic swimming team during the four-day final tryouts here.

Four swimmers from the Walter Reed Swim Club of the Army Medical Center at Washington, D. C., made the women's squad. The Melbourne-bound quartet includes Shelley Mann, Mary Jane Sears, Susan (Dougie) Gray and Mrs. Betty Mullen Brey.

Radcliff, the Army's 400-meter freestyle champ from Ft. McArthur, Calif., placed third in the 1,500-meter final in 19:17.5. Patterson, a former University of Georgia All-American from the Naval Station at Long Beach, Calif., was third in the 100-meter freestyle at 57.4. Patterson is the Navy's 100-meter freestyle champ.

In the qualifying heat of the 100-meter backstroke, Oyakawa bettered his Olympic record of 1:05.4 with a 1:04.7 clocking. He won the backstroke final in 1:05.2. Oyakawa, stationed at Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, will be the only defending champion from the U.S. in the Olympic swimming events.

Hawaii's Ford Konno, inducted into the Army, following the trials, copped the 200-meter freestyle tryout and will also compete in the Olympic 800-meter relay.

Walter Reed's aqua-lovely Shelley Mann, 18, shattered the American women's 100-meter freestyle record in the tryouts with a 1:04.6, slicing a full second from the previous mark. She will also compete in the 400-meter freestyle relay.

Mary Jane Sears, 17, won the 200-meter breaststroke in 2:58.6 and will be the only woman swimmer competing in this event at the Olympics.

The Misses Mann and Sears also will vie for an Olympic medal in the 100-meter butterfly, having placed first and second respectively in the final tryout.

Sixteen-year-old Dougie Gray placed third in the 400-meter freestyle event with the time of 5:15.0.

Some 400 swimmers and divers—including 30 Armed Forces hopefuls—competed for the 46 places on the U.S. team. (AFPS)

Army's Benner Nabs Olympic Games Spot

Camp Perry, Ohio—Master Sergeant Huelet L. (Joe) Benner, one of the Army's top marksmen, last week fired his way to an Olympic Games berth in the National Rifle and Pistol matches here.

Benner, along with Navy CWO Offutt Pinion, was named the two free (slowfire) pistol shooters to represent the United States at the Olympics in Melbourne, Australia, in November.

Benner and Pinion won their places over a three-day gruelling test in which they fired the 60-shot Olympic course three times. Three hours and 15 minutes are required to fire the Games course.

This will mark Benner's third appearance in the international sports event.

He captured a Gold Medal for the United States in the 1952 Games at Helsinki, Finland, and tied for second place in the '48 Olympics in London.

Benner averaged 530 points out of a possible 600, while Pinion did somewhat better with a 539 mark.

Six Army men in all captured finalist berths. In fact, seven of the 10 finalists were servicemen, with Pinion being the lone Navy man to win.

Included among the six is Sergeant Merriweather Jones, the lone Sixth Army winner, from Fort Lewis.

Meanwhile, at Fort Benning, Ga., Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge of Sixth Army Headquarters at the Presidio, was mentioned in a dispatch from the recent Southeastern Regional Pistol championships.

Rouge was noted—as were several other officers and EM—for one of the most encouraging performances by a group of "new shooters."

Teaming together as the U.S. Army "Silver" team in the .45 caliber competition, they shot an aggregate of 1131. This score, however, was made with service weapons and issue ammunition. Though the combination didn't win the match it did well as compared with the winning team's total of 1146.

Benning Lieutenant Gains .22 Crown

Camp Perry, Ohio—Two U. S. Army soldiers placed first and second at the end of the first day of competition in the 1956 National Pistol championships here.

Lieutenant David Cartes, All-Army Team from Fort Benning, fired 880 out of a possible 900 to win the .22 caliber championship and take the lead in the three-day event.

Master Sergeant Huelet L. Benner, West Point non-com who has already gained a U. S. team Olympic Games berth, finished with 879. He was the old champion in the event.

Four other Army shooters, including Captain Arthur S. Manchester of Fort Lewis, tied for third with 878.

Tahoe Stocked With Fingerlings

Department of Fish and Game airplane planting crews have stocked 3,235,000 trout fingerlings in Lake Tahoe this year as an experimental program for increasing the fishery in the popular lake.

Surplus eggs, both rainbow and cutthroat, were available last winter at San Joaquin, Darrah Springs, and Moccasin Creek hatcheries, making possible the Tahoe plants.

Studies are in progress to determine whether the program at Tahoe can be repeated another year.

Ex-Cal Netter Mayne Gains Army Crown

Clif Mayne, former University of California, tennis star now an Army second lieutenant stationed at Fort Monmouth, is the All-Army net champion today.

The former Berkeley netter defeated First Lieutenant Stephen Potts of the Pentagon JAG section, 6-2, 7-5 and 6-4 for the men's singles crown at the tournament at Fort Bragg. He thus won the right to represent the Army in the Interservice tennis championship next week.

In the men's doubles, Juan Hernandez, Fort Sam Houston, and Charles W. Hickok, Fort Sill, defeated Potts and Frank Sample, Fort Knox, in a grueling match, 12-10, 11-13, 6-3 and 6-4.

The women's single championship went to Rachael Adams, Brooke General Hospital, as she easily whipped Alice M. Davis, Fort Jay, 6-1, 6-0.

DA Says RFA Plan Is "A Going Concern"

Washington, D. C.—Army Reserve enlistments totalled 57,861 during the first year of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, the Department of the Army announced recently.

The anniversary total includes all programs, with 60,972 enlistments in the eight-year, six-month active duty program. There are approximately 13,900 from this group now undergoing six months active duty training.

At the same time, the Army announced the number of graduates of the six-month active duty program at the end of June, 1956, as 2233. These young men who enlisted between the ages of 17-18½ began their six-month ac-active duty during the first four months of the Reserve Program's operation, graduating in March through June, 1956. The number of graduates for the six-month program will total more than 13,000 by this December. This puts the Army Reserve into a going concern category because these men are trained and will continue to participate in Reserve units for another seven and one-half years.

Reserve enlistments during the week of 3-10 August numbered 1921.

Enlistments for the first year of RFA were divided among the three available programs as follows:

(1) 17,158—six year enlistments —two years active duty.

(2) 9731—one year enlistments prior service—one year participation.

(3) 30,972 — eight year enlistments (age 17 to 18½)—six months active duty.

Forward Looking

The Army strives to get the most defense for the money from the resources provided to it. It spends its money prudently for the essentials of defense in accord with good business practices. It is constantly self-critical, trying on its own initiative to uncover inefficiency and malpractice.

Foreign Duty

satisfactorily completing their overseas tour.

The Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel at Department of the Army coordinates the recruiting of employees for overseas assignments and the interchange of employees between foreign assignment and the ZI. Sixth Army administrates the program within this area and disseminates information to installations for recruiting qualified employees who now or can in the future qualify for competitive status.

Mr. Scanlon said that the list of vacancies is subject to change, but that it would be unwise to contact the Personnel Section at this time unless you qualify for one of the above listed jobs. "It is planned to keep employees informed through vacancy lists when recruits are sought for future jobs," he said.

Included in the Interchange Program is the locating of positions to offer those employees who are eligible and planning to return to the ZI. Filling of vacancies in Sixth Army area may, at times, be restricted to permit priority placement of these qualified employees.

"It is believed that proper accomplishment of this Interchange Program will eventually result in the Army having the opportunity to employ the services of their best skilled and qualified employees on special projects in foreign countries," said Mr. Scanlon. "At the same time this will enable the Army to offer top employees the incentive of gaining valuable additional experience in unusual overseas assignments."

Going Ahead!

Medicare Group Plans First Meet Early Next Month

Washington — The advisory committee formed to help shape insurance and health plans for dependents under the Medical Care Act will hold its first meeting at the Pentagon 8 September.

Established by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, the committee is composed of 16 representatives from medical groups and health insurance organizations.

Dr. Frank B. Berry, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical), will chairman the panel which will advise the Secretary on plans authorized by the act.

Brucker Plan

maximum mechanical skills inherent in the modern soldier.

Secretary Brucker has stressed the continuing need to provide "adequately maintained" living quarters the lack of which "must inevitably lead to lowering of morale and efficiency."

"Much minor repair and maintenance work can and should be accomplished within organization without reliance on other organizations or agencies for assistance," the Secretary said. "Each commander must have pride in providing and maintaining comfortable and attractive living conditions and instill this same pride in the officers and men under him."

Secretary Brucker has asked the Comptroller General to set aside $25 million for the barracks improvement program in the ZI. Details of the program will be published shortly.

In his message calling for improved preventive maintenance, General Taylor stated that "senior commanders must give priority and personal attention to this important program. Proper care of equipment by the user and command supervision of preventive maintenance at all echelons are two principles which . . . contribute significantly to keeping repair requirements to a minimum. . . . A ten-day backlog should be adequate for efficient shop operations and is the maximum acceptable standard."

In his letter to the field, General Young scored poor user maintenance as a major factor in increased backlogs and urged their reduction by "constant training and command supervision of all echelons of maintenance by users."

Space Bottlers!

Scientists Trap Samples of Air In Outer Space

Washington — Army Signal Corps scientists have trapped samples of air from the borderlines of outer space which may open new fields of study in the performance of guided missiles.

The samples were collected in six steel bottles fitted to two 20-foot long Aerobee rockets launched by the Navy at White Sands, N. M.

The special space bottles, developed by signalmen at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., popped open as the rockets reached peak altitudes of 75 miles, then snapped shut, each trapping eight quarts of air.

Tests being conducted on the rarefied air may help unravel some of the mysteries of the behavior of rockets and missiles in the upper atmosphere and guide the way for future flights, the Army said. (AFPS)

Staff Planning

When the Continental Army was organized in 1775, George Washington was appointed to command the newly formed Army. He was chosen Commander-in-Chief because of his military experience, but he had never commanded any unit higher than a regiment of Virginia volunteers.

Don't Dye On Your Feet!

Follow QM's Blueprint For Blacks

Post Quartermaster has suggested the following procedure for the dyeing of russet shoes to conform with the new uniform regulation:

First wash shoes (uppers and tongue) with a cloth, using tepid water. Do not submerge the shoes in water. Add a mild commercial soap or saddle soap, but avoid using soap with an alkaline base since it is harmful to the leather.

While the shoes are still damp, apply a good grade of commercial black dye and allow to dry and set. The dye should be applied evenly with a dauber or a brush.

After the shoes are thoroughly dry they should be polished with a black wax-base polish.

It is recommended that dyeing operations should be conducted outdoors or in a well-ventilated area. Do not apply dye while the shoes are on the feet.

The Army commissary carries a fine grade commercial black dye, and black shoe polish in popular name brands is available at the Army commissary store and Post Exchange outlets.

Because of the popularity of the last outdoor food and fun marathon at the island, another Bay cruise and picnic are being launched by the club hostesses on Sunday, 26 August. Fort Baker servicemen and their friends, with dance hostesses from San Francisco, are joining forces with the men of Dog Battery to vanquish gloom on that day. Climaxing the event will be presentation of the big All-Army stage show, "Rolling Along," at the Fort Baker Service Club on the night of the 18th of September.

Civil Defense Plans Big Week for 9-15 Sept.

Washington—Federal Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson has requested Armed Forces participation in the first National Civil Defense Week, 9 through 15 September.

Military band, troop, equipment and exhibits participation is appropriate and desirable on a local command basis, it was announced.

The observation is being held to pay tribute to the Civil Defense workers and organizations for their efforts in behalf of the country.

Quick Action Contains Dangerous Grass Fire

Hosing Down the hot brush fire that broke out above the Wherry housing units last Wednesday, personnel of the 21st Engineer Company give an assist to both Post and City firemen. The fire, which roared up the hill, fanned by a brisk bay wind, was stopped at Washington Blvd. It burned over an acre.

Soldiers Aid In Fighting

Flames 10 feet high — whipped to frenzy by the strong bay wind, clouds of churning smoke and the snap, crackle and roar of burning brush gave Presidio residents a scare Wednesday afternoon when a fire broke out just above the Wherry units and raced up the hill to Washington Blvd.

Calls came fast by telephone and alarm box both to the Post Fire Department and the Military Police. But it was two small boys who were credited with first sounding the alarm.

Post Fire Chief George Geller and two of his crew were the first to arrive on the scene. The fire was burning hot and bright so Chief Geller sent out a call to the San Francisco fire department. The 21st Engineers were called in to beef up the manpower supply.

The fire, which had reached Washington Blvd. and threatened

Top POW Will Speak On 'Code' Next Week

One of the nation's top military heroes, Major General William F. Dean, Ret., will address officers of the Presidio, AAA and subposts on the military services newly instituted "Code of Conduct" at the monthly officers call in the Post Theater at 1100 hours on Thursday, 6 September.

A Congressional Medal of Honor winner and the highest ranking prisoner of war during the Korean conflict, General Dean was one of the key consultants to the Department of Defense during a committee study that resulted in the framing of the "Code of Conduct."

A former deputy commanding general of Sixth Army, General Dean retired last year and has since spent a great deal of time working for defense and charitable causes.

The new "Code" stresses six key points:

1) I am an American fighting man. I serve the forces which guard my country and our way of life. I am prepared to give my life in their defense.

2) I will never surrender of my own free will. If in command I will never surrender my men while they still have the means to resist.

3) If I am captured I will continue to resist with all means available.

DA Revamps Regs Covering Early Outs

Regulations governing early outs for school have been altered by a DA message received at the Presidio this week.

Now the letter from the school, in addition to showing that the student will be admitted at a specific time, must state reasons why delay in enrollment to normal ETS will cause "undue handicap."

Previously, it was the responsibility of the applicant himself to show "undue handicap." However, this change in the regulation does not effect those applications that are presently being processed.

Another part of the message, however, eases one requirement for early school release. The clause in the regulation defining "undue handicap" as "delay of enrollment for one calendar year" has been deleted.

The latter change is effective immediately. Authority has been granted to reconsider applications heretofore turned down because they did not show a one year delay.

Thursday Parade Honors Two With Retirement Ceremonies

Presidio troops marched yesterday to honor the retirement of Colonel Samuel A. Lewis and Master Sergeant Charles R. Mathew.

The 47-year-old Colonel Lewis, one of the Army's first parachute troops, enlisted in the Army at Fort Benning in 1930 and served with units at The Infantry School until 1940 when he was assigned to the 501st Parachute Battalion organized at Fort Benning.

Commissioned a first lieutenant in 1942, he served as Adjutant General of both the Airborne Command and Parachute School at Benning and Bragg. During World War II he also served with the 13th Airborne Division serving as Adjutant General.

Post-war assignments include service in Korea and most recently as Senior Army Advisor to the Army Reserve in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Sergeant Mathew, a native of Oakland, enlisted in the Army at Fort MacArthur in 1934 and spent his first tour of duty in Hawaii. He reenlisted at the Presidio in 1938, and during World War II served in England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany with the 357th Antiaircraft Artillery Searchlight Battalion.

His subsequent service included tours of duty in the United States, Alaska, Japan and Korea. For the past 13 months he has been a noncommissioned officer advisor with the 114th Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade of the California National Guard, San Diego.

ROTC Officers May Ask 18-Months' Additional Duty

Washington—Qualified ROTC officers scheduled to perform six months' active duty training may volunteer for 18 months more with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics upon completion of their six months' tour, the Army announced.

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics desires to utilize the services of technically trained ROTC officers with degrees in engineering or physical science to perform research in aircraft, rockets and missiles fields.

The Secretary of the Army has authorized representatives from NACA to visit Army Service Schools and interview officers interested in the program.

The program is considered to be directly serving the interest of the Department of the Army and NACA. It is designed to provide professionally trained college graduates for NACA during a period when the normal supply is low and the need for aeronautical research for the military services and aircraft industry is high.

This DA-NACA program will provide valuable training to commissioned officers usable in their later careers and will enrich the nation's pool of trained and experienced scientific manpower. (ANS)

Army 'Copter Pilots Set Non-Stop Mark, Fly 1,199 Miles

Washington—Army aviators, piloting a Vertol H21-C helicopter, have set a new world's non-stop distance record, flying almost 1,200 miles at an average speed of 100 miles per hour.

The pilots, Lt. Col. Harry L. Bush and Maj. William C. Dycinger, both of Ft. Rucker, Ala., recently bested the old long-distance mark of 778.3 miles chalked up by a French helicopter in June 1953.

Flying on an 85.6-mile closed course near Trenton, N. J., the H21-C covered 1,199.07 miles in 11 hours, 58 minutes.

Carrying three extra 300-gallon fuel tanks in the cargo compartment, the standard Vertol 'copter took off with 1,016 gallons of fuel aboard, and landed with 50 gallons left in reserve.

Nerve Gas won't phase this soldier as he carries the new automatic detector alarm developed by the Army Chemical Corps and the RCA Laboratories at Camden, N. J. The detector for the colorless, odorless gases weighs about 25 pounds. It is in a metal carrying case about 15" high, 17" long and 8" wide. It will run continuously for 12 hours on a 110-volt AC or 24-volt power source. When the alarm detects very small traces of nerve gas a red warning light goes on and a loud buzzer sounds. It will work under heavy dust or smoke conditions.

AER Drive Nears Goal; Final Today

Soldiers of the Presidio and its sub-posts were in hot pursuit of the magic $5,000 goal in the annual Army Emergency Relief Drive that is slated to end today. At press time contributions to the fund totaled $4,485.64 with many pledges not yet added to the swelling total.

Drive officials were confident that today's paytable collections would send the local drive over the top.

A purely military effort, AER solicits no funds from civilian employees. Its aim is to provide emergency funding in the form of grants and loans to military personnel in critical financial need.

Last year, AER disbursed nearly $10,000 in loans and grants to troubled Presidio military personnel.

One answer to the Army's problem of tactical mobility is a new assault transport, the C-123, which can take off from, and land on, ordinary unimproved fields with 60 men and their individual equipment.

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education and the State governments have combined in an effort to help servicemen and other Federal employees who will be absent from their states, and their dependents, to vote in November's election.

VIRGINIA

Registration is permanent. Members of the Armed Forces may vote without being registered. All other persons must register in person with the Registrar, place of residence. Such registration should be accomplished before 7 October.

WASHINGTON

Registration is permanent unless the person failed to vote at least once since 1953 or moved from the city or county where he was registered.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians serving the Armed Forces outside the U.S. and their spouses are considered to be temporarily registered when a signed registration certificate, which is included with the ballot, is accepted by election officials.

Because this does not establish permanent registration, these persons are advised to appear before local registration officials—City Clerk or County Auditor—if they go home before 7 October.

All other persons must be permanently registered before voting. This must be accomplished in person at the above offices before 7 October.

MASSACHUSETTS

Registration is permanent.

Review Honors New AAA CG At Fort Baker

Fort Baker — West Coast Army Antiaircraft troops, the Sixth Army Band and airmen from the Western Air Defense Command paraded Saturday in honor of Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant, new commanding general of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command here.

After the parade a reception was given General and Mrs. Tarrant at the Presidio Officers' Club. The new commander assumed command of the 6th Region early in the month, and this was the first command parade for him.

Defense areas in the command were represented by standards and flags from the 31st AAA Brigade protecting the Seattle and Hanford areas, the 47th AAA Brigade guarding the Los Angeles area, and the 30th AAA Group from the San Francisco area.

The latter command also furnished most of the marching troops. All three are parts of the 6th and control the Nike guided missile and AAA gun units defending strategic Pacific Coast areas from possible enemy attack.

General Tarrant presented the Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant to Sergeant First Class John B. Scott, Mount Pleasant, Texas, during the parade.

The sergeant, a member of the 436th AAA Battalion protecting Travis Air Force Base, received the decoration for meritorious service while sergeant major for the S-4 (logistics) Section of the 65th AAA Group at Fort Clayton, Panama, from March, 1954, to April, 1956. The sergeant served 67 months in the Canal Zone.

Presidio Sets New Record In Monthly Safety Statistics

The Presidio's July safety record constitutes a "record achievement" with the absence of disabling injuries to civilian personnel, states CWO Theodore J. Roberts, Post Assistant Adjutant.

Statistics showed a reduction in Army motor vehicle accidents. This achievement is attributed to the aggressive-action taken by commanders, and the training and retraining of drivers presently conducted by the Transportation Corps and Military Police Motor Officers.

Crusade Campaign Starts Tomorrow

A detailed plan that leaves nothing to chance and will give every soldier or civilian on the Presidio the privilege of donating his or her fair share to the United Bay Area Crusade's annual "one big give" campaign was announced by Colonel Charles G. Rau, post executive officer and local campaign chairman, at a kickoff meeting on Tuesday, this week.

Dates for the Presidio portion of the campaign have been set as 1 September through 31 October.

Quota for the Presidio has been set at $36,015 this year, some 10 per cent higher than last year's $30,000.

Colonel Rau has named Major Florence B. Boush, post funds custodian, as co-chairman and secretary treasurer and Captain Ralph J. Schaller, Sixth Army Information, as publicity chairman. Chiefs of staff sections, both Post and Sixth Army, and commanding officers of units or detachments have been named as committee members.

Committee members will designate military and civilian solicitors within their respective sections, units or activities to carry out a "personal contact" campaign aimed at reaching every individual in their specific assignment area. Both pledges and donations will be solicited and "one day's pay" has been determined as "your fair share" in the annual drive.

A day's pay for military personnel will range from $2 for privates E-1 (or a dollar on each pay day covered by the drive) to $35 for major generals and above (or $17.50 over two pay days).

Campaign Materials for the upcoming United Bay Area Crusade on the Presidio are distributed by (l. to r.) Colonel Charles G. Rau, post executive officer and campaign chairman, Clarita Robinson, military affairs staff director for UBAC, and Major Florence B. Boush, post funds custodian and co-chairman of the local drive. On the receiving end are (l. to r.) M/Sgt. M. Pradivico, C Company, 6002; 1st Lt. Dorothy L. Crook, CO D Company, WAC Det 6002; Sfc. J. T. Silva, CMD; Major Neal Cramer, G-1, and Major William Gavin, Sixth Army Public Information Section.

Civilian personnel can pledge and make their contributions over a four pay day period and donations should range from $28.66 for a GS-14 (or $7.17 per pay day) to $7.47 for a GS-1 (or $1.87 per pay day).

Both the commanding general and the deputy post commander have urged members of the command to make every effort to contribute their "fair share" in the campaign.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young has applauded "the fine motivations of this outstanding organization of community charities" and has approved "the joint effort that takes solicitation of military and government personnel off a year around hit or miss, accredited or non-accredited, basis and concentrates on 'on big give' to all needy community activities."

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist felt much the same way when he said, "The Army has always endeavored to carry its fair share of community responsibility. However, in the case of charitable solicitation, the soldier sometimes feels that there is no end to the claim on his time and his money. By putting all these requests under one tent, the United Crusade provides a purposeful 'one give' that makes it a lot easier for the soldier to do his part."

This year's contributions will go to support 76 agencies in five counties including San Francisco, Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin and San Mateo and will defray expenses of the Red Cross, Cancer Society, Heart Association, Multiple Sclerosis, Cerebral Palsy, Arthritis & Rheumatism Foundation and the USO.

Last year members of the armed forces in the Bay Area contributed $327,790 of the nearly $10,000,000 collected in the five county Crusade. Presidio contributed $30,790 of this amount. This year's total goal is $11,017,000.

In launching the drive, Colonel Rau told committee members, "To me, and I'm sure to you, too—the idea of one big give makes sense. With one contribution we help the vast majority of recognized, legitimate, charitable health, welfare and youth organizations in this, our community, instead of contributing throughout the year in response to many separate appeals."

New Law !

Flight Training Now Offered In ROTC Units

Washington — Senior ROTC students will be eligible for flight training at colleges and universities this fall under Public Law 879 passed by the 84th Congress.

The law eventually will provide flight programs at 180 Air Force and 40 Army schools.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration will direct the "air-safety" features of the program, which will be conducted cost-free to cadets at approved civilian flying schools.

The flight training will be in addition to the regular fourth-year courses with AF students taking 35 hours of light plane training and Army candidates receiving an extra 35 hours of ground and flight instruction.

The AF course will be given first at some 38 colleges and universities and at an additional 142 during the next two years.

The Army will select institutions on a "best qualified" basis. It is also considering contracting for flying time at many joint ROTC installations.

The legislation was enacted by Congress to increase participation in ROTC courses and to stimulate interest in flying careers in both services. Heretofore, such training only was available after commissioning.

Medical and survivor benefits also are authorized by the law for ROTC members who may be injured while taking flight instruction. (AFPS)

The Army's ROTC program has been producing an average of 14,000 new junior officers annually.

Grass Fire

to turn south, was in check by the time reinforcements arrived. All told there were 2 Post fire trucks, 2 city fire trucks and about 30 members of the 21st Engineers and numerous MP's at the fire before it stopped smoking.

Despite all the smoke and flame there was no real danger, reports Chief Geller. The bay wind blew the flame away from the Wherry housing units and Washington Blvd. served to check the fire at the top of the hill. The fire, which burned a little over an acre, was the largest at the Presidio this year.

"No question about it," comments Chief Geller, "the fire was started by children playing."

All the professional firemen at the scene had praise for the 21st engineers, who handled most of the mopping up operation. This group had assembled, drawn equipment, ordered transportation and arrived at the fire—all in 20 minutes.

Most enthusiasm at the fire was generated by the youngsters. Many gleefully lined up behind the firemen and helped with the hoses.

It was the largest brush fire at the Presidio in many years, Chief Geller says, explaining that the flames broke out at about the only spot on the Presidio where a brush fire could get started. The danger of brush fire is much greater at installations across the bay, he said. (Story and photo by Sp3 R. A. Lewis.)

New System (POPP) Will Aid Officer Promotions

Washington — Sixty "truly outstanding" lieutenant colonels may be included in the next recommended list for promotion to colonel under the Army's new progressive officer promotion program, POPP.

Selection boards have been meeting for this auxiliary promotion procedure here at the Pentagon since 26 June to evaluate and screen the records of 5,260 lieutenant colonels who are in the zone of consideration for outstanding promotion selection.

Lieutenant colonels with five years in grade and below the primary zone of consideration are eligible for early advancement in keeping with the atomic age Army's new concept on the future. Normal waiting period for promotion from lieutenant colonel to colonel has been 10 years.

Boards convened for promotion to major on 17 July and of the 13,000 captains being considered, some 300 may be recommended. It is expected that the selection boards for major to lieutenant colonel will convene in March of 1957. Of approximately 14,000 majors considered, 350 may be recommended for lieutenant colonel.

To be considered for promotion, captains must have a minimum of three years in grade; majors, four years and lieutenant colonels, five years. There is no POPP program at this time for promotion from 2nd lieutenant to 1st lieutenant to captain.

This new, accelerated promotion program has been set up to get the best talent in the higher grades sooner. It has been geared to select officers on their over-all value, potentialities and ability. The program is covered in Change 2, AR 624-115.

This program is in addition to regular temporary officer promotion procedures and there will be no change in the method by which the selection board selects officers in primary zones. To be considered and not selected does not count as a passover in any way.

Officers will be selected by Army Selection Boards solely from records available at the Department of the Army. Recommendations are neither required nor desired and if forwarded will not be referred to the boards.

With its eye cocked on the future the Army has come up with a promotion program which appeals career-wise to outstanding young men. Just as its name implies, POPP provides a faster route to the top. (ANS)

30th Engineer Group Celebrates 17th Birthday

Finishing Touches are applied to a terrain model of the Presidio by members of the 171st Engineer Detachment, 30th Engineer Group. This is only one phase of the highly technical operations of one of the Army's skilled map-making units. The Group will celebrate their 17th anniversary today.

Open House Will Highlight Unit's Colorful Program

To the men of the 30th Engineer Group — celebrating their Organization Day this 31st of August—strange places and tough assignments are taken in stride.

Activated seventeen years ago, on 1 September, 1939, the day Hitler unleashed his blitzkrieg against Poland, the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey) can claim service in both hemispheres.

Following is a thumbnail sketch of the unit's history, starting after its activation at Portland, Oregon.

Sailed from Portland to New York, 30 September, 1939.

Arrived at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, 7 December, 1941, after maneuvers in Louisiana and North Carolina.

Shipped to Casablanca late November, 1943. Produced countless maps to support the push to Rome, invasion of the Dalmatian coast, landing southern France, and offensive to the borders of the Reich.

Awarded Meritorious Service Award.

Ordered to Boston early November, 1944. Thence to the Pacific, arriving in Honolulu, early 1945.

Awarded Meritorious Service Plaque second time for duty in preparation of naval and approach bombardment charts, target and air strip maps and countless special studies. In all, about eight million prints of over 600 different maps were produced in less than five years.

Returned to U. S. 7 December, 1949, established at Presidio of San Francisco's Fort Scott billets.

Survey operations in Alaska each summer from 1950 to 1955, with training operations in southern California-Arizona during the winter. More than 313,000 square miles were surveyed in the Alaskan operation, providing maps of the entire western and northern coastal regions of the territory.

In a move that definitely established top community relations, the Group rendered invaluable aid to communities in northern California when the December, 1955, floods struck.

Many lives were saved as results of the radio communication system and use of air and ground support. Two enlisted men from the Group received the Soldier's Medal for their life-saving rescues.

High praise came to the Group from California's Governor Knight, civic and Army personnel and just plain thankful average citizens.

On this seventeenth anniversary celebration the men of the 30th Engineer Group can, indeed, look back over their history and say that they have lived up to their motto in every way "Imprimis"—"In First Place."

Today, the 30th Group is commanded by Colonel Lawrence Robert St. John. Col. St. John is a graduate of the Military Academy and holds a master's degree in Civil Engineering from Iowa State.

30th Engineer Group Organization Day Program

For the 30th Engineer Group's Organization Day celebrations, a full program of events has been scheduled.

At 0930 a review and decoration Ceremony will be held on the Fort Scott Parade Ground followed by company competitions. Dinner will be served beginning at 1230 hours. Color films of the 1955 Alaskan Survey Operations will be shown at 1030 and 1330 hours in the photomapping plant. The day's activities will be concluded wtih a softball game between the enlisted men and officers starting at 1430 hours.

Throughout the day displays will be open at Fort Scott. The displays include open house at the 99th Engineer Company (Reproduction, Base) plant and at the 21st Engineer Company (Photomapping, Base) plant, helicopters from the 521st Engineer Company, and a field survey site by the 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Survey).

The public is invited to attend the celebrations.

Education Readies Fall Sked

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

With the return to school of millions of young people throughout the nation, the Presidio's Troop Education program is also getting under way with fall semester offerings in intermediate, high school, and college classes.

The Post TI&E Division is especially proud of its on-post college program which enables military personnel stationed at the Presidio and nearby to acquire a bachelor of arts degree in the social sciences from San Francisco State College.

Of the twelve officers in the Sixth Army area who received bachelor's degrees in June, 1956, through Troop Education, eight of them obtained their degrees through the Presidio's Army Education Center.

Among those who are earning their college degrees through the Presidio's Troop Education plan, several have established outstanding records of achievement. While attending classes and taking courses on an off-duty basis, several officers and men have earned more credits than they would going to college full time.

M/Sgt. John A. Lunde, RA677-9541, Detachment 6, 6400 SU, came to the Presidio in November, 1954, with 77 college credits. Since that time he has completed 36 units in the on-post college program. By November this year M/Sgt. Lunde will have completed all requirements for his bachelor's degree.

M/Sp. Kenneth D. Hayse, RA 39132170, 60th MP CI Detachment, entered the Post's college program in August, 1955, with 44 units of college credit. Since that time he has completed 18 units by taking USAFI subject examinations, 13 units by completing four USAFI courses, and 18 units with the on-post college classes. He is now in his senior year. Specialist Hayse has the added distinction of being a straight A student.

CWO Frank M. Shimamoto, W 2136039, 60th MP CI Detachment, began his college program at the Presidio in April, 1954, with 49 units. He completed all the requirements for a degree at San Francisco State at the end of August. In twenty months Shimamoto earned 75 hours of college credit through USAFI and on-post classes.

First Lieutenant Allen C. Troutman, O193527, 6700 SU, had 40 hours of college credit when he enrolled in his first on-post college course in November, 1954. He will meet all requirements for his degree when he completes one more USAFI subject examination, which has already been sent for, and one more course at San Francisco State. In twenty-two months he will have acquired 48 units by attending on-post college classes and 36 college credits through USAFI.

Captain Sterling R. Thompson, O990044, 6400 SU, began his college program at the Presidio in February, 1955, with 15 units. He has increased his college standing since that time to 100 college credits. By enrolling in six more on-post college classes and two more USAFI courses he will meet requirements for a bachelor's degree by 1 April, 1957. At that time he will have earned 109 units in twenty-six months.

Captain Robert J. Lewis, O155-4422, 46th Ordnance Group, will meet all his degree requirements this month. He is ready to take his last USAFI subject examination and complete one more USAFI self-study course. Since February, 1953, Captain Lewis has completed 42 units with the on-post college program and 22 units with USAFI.

Captain Louis A. Vendola, O969269, Adjutant General Section, Sixth Army Headquarters, started his on-post college program with 18 units in April, 1954. Since then he has enrolled in two courses at each session of the on-post college series. He has completed 27 units with USAFI and has 13 units scheduled for completion. By the end of September Captain Vendola will have a total credit standing at San Francisco State College of 115 units. (EKS)

New Books At Your Post Library

THE STRAIGHT AND NARROW, by Honor Tracy. Highly recommended as the most promising novel of the season. A London journalist in an Irish village creates a furor with a piece about a local convent, and immediately finds himself involved in a lawsuit. A witty novel based upon actual experience.

TO THE GREAT SOUTHERN SEA, by William Albert Robinson. This beautiful book details the 11-month, 15,000-mile voyage of the 70-foot brigantine, "Varua," in this exciting account of storms, contrary winds and tides, and a valiant ship. Good writing by an American author with a "Nordhoff, Hall" ability to interpret his feeling for the South Seas.

OMNIBUS, by William March. The success of "The Band Seed" as a novel and a Broadway play has sparked a revival of interest in the late author and his fiction. This book contains his first full-length novel "Company K," and a sampling of his sardonic fables and short stories.

MONTMARTE and VENICE—The two first books in the new Skira series of beautiful little books of fine art reproductions—"Famous Places as Seen by Great Painters." The original Skira series "The Taste of Our Time," which began with monographs on Manet, Goya, and El Greco, has been broadened to include this new theme—also superior in format, text and illustrations.

TOLLBECKEN, by Samuel Shellabarger. This last novel of this popular writer of historical novels is a story of character and reason and a departure from his usual capsule history in palatable form. Five generations of this family—reminiscent of the Forsytes of Galsworthy and Whiteoaks of Jalna—manage to grow with dignity and purpose in the democratic American way and nourish their neighborhood as well.

A carnival and dance is slated to take place at the Embarcadero 22 September in aid of YMCA World Services. (One cent a dance.)

A wiener roast with games and dancing takes place at Stern Grove from 1800 to 2200 on the evening of 25 September.

Winding up the month's activities at the Embarcadero YWCA will be a "Come as You Like" dance on Sunday, 30 September, from 2000 to 2200 hours.

WATCH-OUT WARRIORS Presidio of San Francisco baseballers, shooting for the Sixth Army Tournament title, sit for a team picture here prior to leaving for Fort Ord, site of the tourney. The Toreros will be one of the favorites, along with the Fort Ord Warriors and the Fort Lewis Rangers.

Sixth Army Crown Hopes Soar As Post Nine Strengthened

Strengthened by the addition of three newcomers to the club, Presidio's baseballing Toreros enter the annual Sixth Army tournament at Fort Ord, Monday, with increased confidence—and renewed hope—in their ability to win the championship.

Their spirits, which drooped noticeably when outfielder Harry Williams was declared out for the remainder of the season with a broken shoulder, and shortstop George Selsor announced his discharge was set for today, soared when the levy of new men arrived.

Coach Hal Fischer obtained the services of catcher Ronnie Dacko, shortstop Ralph Smith and outfielder Bill Jambois, all from the 9th AAA Missile Battalion, in time for the tourney.

Dacko, who reportedly has had professional experience in the Texas League, supplies much needed strength behind the plate, while Smith is slated to replace Selsor at short. Jambois is evidently scheduled to open the tournament in center in place of the ailing Williams.

Williams gave it the old college in the finals of the Atwater Tournament. The heavy hitting centerfielder sprinted from second to home with the tying run against Parks Air Force Base. But luck and the gods were against him as he broke his shoulder attempting to knock the ball from the catcher's grasp.

Educated opinion has it that the Presidio, Fort Ord and Fort Lewis will be the teams to beat in the Sixth Army games. Ord, of course, is always a formidable foe and is the tournament defending champion.

Even so, the Toreros hold a one-game bulge in their series with the Warriors. The Presidio holds 6-3 and 13-11 triumphs over the Warriors, while they can claim only a 5-3 win over the Toreros.

Lewis is something of a dark horse. Its team is selected after regimental level schedules are concluded. But the Washington State infantrymen, a hand picked group of Fort Lewis all-stars, figure to make matters difficult to all comers.

Camp Hanford and Fort Huachuca are also rated as possible champions, although most experts point to a winner from among the "big three" of the Sixth Army baseball world.

The Toreros leave for the tournament well rested and with visions of the All Army Tournament dancing in their heads. Should they grab the championship they'll probably participate in the Army-wide games at Fort Dix, N. J., 16 to 22 September.

But Fischer and his baseballers won't worry about that bridge till they come to it.

752nd's B Battery, Post Softball Champs, Roll To 30th Group Title

Bravo Battery of the 752nd AAA Gun Battalion, Presidio intramural softball champions, added another trophy to its showcase this week when it won the 30th AAA Group Softball tournament at Fort Baker.

The club, which proved its mastery over all Presidio teams, repeated the act, with an easy 7-2 triumph over the 52nd AAA Missile Battalion in the final game Wednesday.

The Gunners thus won the right to represent the 30th Group in the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command tournament at Fort Lawton, Wash., 9 to 15 September.

And Coach Dick Campione's fired-up gunners now have high hopes of landing a berth in the nationwide ack-ack softball tournament scheduled for Fort Baker late next month.

The 752nd, behind the pitching magic of Marion Mattox, rolled to its victory in breezy fashion, though the team had an uneasy moment in the late inning of the game when Ron George, unawed by Mattox' hurling prowess, found the range for a homer.

But Mattox got the next batter to pop out harmlessly and end the threat.

In the semifinal game Tuesday, the 52nd AAA Battalion walloped the 752nd, 9-2, behind the one-hit pitching of Ron George to regain their spot in the winner's bracket.

They had been beaten earlier by the 752nd, 6-5, in an extra inning contest.

But the 52nd came back strong in the semifinal, knocking Pitcher Bill Griffin from the box with a six run uprising in the third inning.

The 752nd made a valiant effort to recapture the lead in the sixth frame when they were issued a couple of free passes by George. Grady Overcash then looped a Texas leaguer for the first hit off George in the contest to chase home both runners.

But George was equal to the task and fanned the remaining batsmen to squash the 752nd's hopes for a fast victory.

In early week games, the 52nd eliminated the 441st with a 9-7 triumph; the 9th knocked the 436th from the tourney, 8-4; the 752nd trimmed the 740th, 8-1; the 52nd eliminated the 9th, 3-2, and dumped the 740th, 14-4.

USF Cager Jones Called To Colors

K. C. Jones, star playmaker for the NCAA basketball champion USF Dons for the past two years, was called to the Colors yesterday and inducted into the Army at the Induction Center, 30 Van Ness Avenue.

Jones, whose floor game helped spark the Dons to the collegiate title twice, is also a member of the U.S. Olympic Games cage team. An induction center spokesman said Jones will be allowed to take his place on the team when it leaves for Melbourne, Australia, in November.

Post Miscues Give Parks Softball Win

Capatalizing on Presidio Wac softballers' miscues, Parks Air Force Base broke a three-way tie for first in the northern California Women's Armed Forces Softball League race this week.

The Airwomen, scoring only one earned run, clipped the Presidio, 5-2, on the neutral Oakland Army Terminal field.

The local Wacs, who entertained hopes of a championship, now must face Hamilton Air Force Base in their season's finale next Thursday. A possibility exists the Presidio may yet come up with the title, but off this week's showing matters look dim indeed for the locals.

Pauline Edwards started on the mound for the Presidio and lasted until the sixth when called to the showers in favor of Pat Doering.

The Presidio nine tallied two runs in the first inning but Parks stymied the locals after that.

2 Post Boxers Enter Tourney

Two amateur fisticuffers with previous experience will represent Presidio of San Francisco in the Sixth Army Boxing Tournament at Oakland Army Terminal, 10 to 13 September, the post sports office said yesterday.

The boxers who have title aspirations are Ken Johnson of Headquarters Company, 6002 SU, and Percey J. Morgan, III, of Battery A, 740th AAA Missile Battalion.

Johnson will battle for the heavyweight title, while Morgan, who most certainly will bring the fanciest handle into the tourney, mixes it for the welterweight championship.

Eight places on the Presidio team are still open. Boxers in the flyweight, bantamweight, featherweight, lightweight, light welterweight, light middleweight, middleweight and light heavyweight classes are still needed.

Deadline for entrance to the tourney, however, is today. Applications must be submitted to the sports office.

A squad of ten champions will be selected to represent the Sixth Army in the All-Army Tournament at Fort Myer, Va., 24-29 September. A like number of boxers will be picked from that tourney to represent the Army in the Interservice championships slated for Camp Lejeune, N. C., 10-11 October.

From there boxers will be given opportunity to show their mettle in the Olympic Trials, slated for late October.

USC Bowl Win

Los Angeles—The last time the Pacific Coast Conference won a Rose Bowl game was January 1, 1953, when USC tipped Wisconsin, 7-0.

1st Silver Salmon Caught In River

Possibly the first adult silver salmon ever taken in the Sacramento River has been trapped at the Department of Fish and Game tagging station at Fremont Weir near Knights Landing.

Fisheries biologists say there is little doubt that the 16.7-inch fish was the first return from a plant of some 60,000 yearling silvers planted in Mill Creek last spring.

Some of these fish were as much as nine inches long when stocked in the creek, which is a major salmon and steelhead spawning tributary of the Sacramento.

It is not unusual for steelhead to be planted as yearlings in the spring and return upriver from the ocean in the fall. The silver salmon trapped and examined by the biologists was mature and probably would have spawned later this fall.

The experimental plant of silvers was made in the hope that a run of silvers could be established in the Sacramento system. They enter coastal streams both north and south of the Golden Gate, but never have entered the Sacramento River system before.

Providing pitcher Johnnie Broughton with effective hitting support, Presidio of San Francisco's energetic softballers climaxed their greatest season late last week by winning the Sixth Army championship.

The Toreros, overwhelming pre-tournament favorites, captured the coveted honor at Tacoma's Madigan Army Hospital field with a stirring 9-0 triumph over Fort MacArthur.

Broughton, the Presidio's top pitcher after player-manager Ed Johnson, scattered three hits in racking up the victory and was accorded the usual heavy hitting support that has made the Torero season so notable.

Picking up tallies in the first, third, fourth, and fifth innings, the Presidio nine clinched matters with a four-run outburst in the sixth, featuring home runs by Gary Blanshan, and Bob Moran, who clouted his with one runner on base.

Johnson and Carl Dobler each contributed two hits to the cause to spur the Toreros to the victory—their third and final in tournament play.

The Presidio was presented with the Sixth Army Commander's Perpetual Trophy after the contest and also a trophy which they can call their own. The Army Commander's trophy must go to the winning team next year. All the players were also given watches as souvenirs.

For Broughton, who had opportunity to pitch in only one game during the tournament, the victory was particularly sweet. He was at his best as he issued no free passes and struck out two.

The Presidio roared into the finals with an easy 11-4 victory over the same Fort MacArthur team. Giving a hint of things to come, the Toreros bashed base hits to all fields in taking the semifinal contest.

In their opener, the Toreros easily disposed of Fort Lawton, 11-2. The line score of the final game:

Deadline Set For Flag Grid

Post Special Services sports office has set 18 September as the deadline for entries in the intramural football league, it was announced yesterday.

Sports office officials are hopeful of enough entries to form three leagues of eight teams each, including one league made up from units stationed at Forts Baker, Barry and Cronkhite in Marin County.

Almost a dozen units have already notified the sports office that they plan to participate in the league. But unit commanders who plan on establishing a team were urged to notify the sports office up to and before the deadline.

A meeting of all coaches and commanders will be held on the 12th at 0900 hours to determine schedules, playing sites and leagues.

Further information may be obtained by calling Extension 3968 or by calling at the sports office in Building 122.

GeneralScoresAce At Presidio Club

Brigadier General Ralph E. Haines (Ret.) accomplished early this week the dream of all golfers—to score a hole in one.

The General, a divot devotee for more than 25 years, aced the Presidio Club's 138-yard 13th hole with his trusty six iron.

He played in a foursome which included Colonel C. S. Deney, Haller Belt and Tom Ryan.

Johnson Grabs Post Softball Bat Crown

Bespectacled Ed Johnson, who took over coaching the Presidio softball team in mid-season and piloted it to the Sixth Army championship, also set the pace in the field, team averages revealed today.

The husky player-coach won the team batting title with a gaudy .426; solved opposition pitching for 35 hits and drove in the most runs at 40. Johnson also bagged the most three-base hits (4) and home runs (4), although in the latter category he shared the title with Ray Holyman.

Holyman also led the Toreros with most doubles, 10, while Bob Moran scored most runs, 30.

Holyman, with a .356, and Moran, with a .347, finished behind Johnson for the batting title.

Medical Care Now A 'Right' And Not A 'Fringe Benefit'

By M/Sgt. Herb Scott, USA
(AFPS Washington Correspondent)

Washington—Medical care for service families is now a "right" instead of a "fringe benefit."

This traditional benefit for the immediate family of members of the Armed Forces was written into the statute books as a legal right of active and retired servicemen for the first time when Congress passed the Dependents' Medical Care Act.

Since the end of WWII, it had been impossible, for several reasons, for large numbers of military dependents to get medical care.

The Defense Department estimates that of 2.5 million service dependents, 500,000 of them overseas, 40 per cent, or some 800,000 in the U. S., have been unable to get adequate medical attention either because of the area they lived in or because military facilities were overtaxed.

Under the new law, which becomes effective 7 Dec., 1956, service families can get medical care regardless.

The greatest change the new legislation will make is in providing accommodations for dependent spouses and children of active duty personnel in civilian hospitals across the nation.

In most cases, service families will be able to choose between military and civilian facilities for treatment and surgical attention. But outpatient care from civilian sources is not authorized.

This means that dependents may decide to get treatment for minor ailments in outpatient clinics at Armed Forces installations because service families and retired personnel now will be permitted to receive "available care" at any medical facility of the Army, Navy, Air Force or Public Health Service.

Armed Forces dispensaries and hospitals will provide medical services that will include diagnosis, care for contagious diseases and acute medical and surgical conditions, immunizations, maternity and infant care, and emergency dental treatment in the U. S. plus regular dental care outsite the ZI.

However, in remote areas of the U. S. where adequate civilian dental care is not available, complete dental attention is authorized at posts and installations.

Dependents will continue to pay a per diem charge of $1.75 for each day of hospitalization at military facilities.

Where civilian medical institutions are used, servicemen will be charged $25 or $1.75 a day times the number of days hospitalized, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of 365 days.

As in the past, there will be no charge, annual or otherwyise, to any member of the Armed Forces except when his dependents require attention demanding fees fixed by the new law.

The Defense Department has drafted uniform regulations which now are reviewed by each of the services before the regulations go into operation on 7 Dec.

These regulations cover all phases of the program. They spell out the procedures to be followed by the individual serviceman and his family.

Defense officials also are shaping up contracts on fees and facilities with state and national medical associations, which the law says must provide "semi-private" accommodations where dependents are hospitalized.

Where confinement exceeds a year, arrangements for transfer to a military hospital will be made.

Civilian facilities will furnsh in-patient treatment for acute medical and surgical conditions and contagious diseases, as well as complete obstetrical and maternity care, necessary medical supplies and normal nursing attention but not home calls by doctors.

Present plans call for a special medical care card as a primary means of identifying eligible dependents at either military or civilian facilities.

The improved medical service for military families will cost the government an estimated $78 million a year.

WWII Medical History Now Available to Public

Washington — The latest work in the Army historical series, which recounts the expansion of the Medical Service during WWII, is now available to the public.

Titled "The Medical Department: Hospitalization and Evacuation, Zone of Interior," the new volume was written by Clarence McK. Smith, once in the Office of the Surgeon General.

The Army established its Command Management School when it was determined that there are more than 8000 men in Army positions which warrant training in modern business management concepts.

Incentive Awards in the amount of $535.00 were awarded Headquarters Sixth Army Civil Service personnel here, last week.

Top award winner was Mrs. Arthur Morgan, a legal clerk with the Judge Advocate Section. The presentation of a Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate and check for $200 was made by Col. J. H. Derrick, Sixth Army Staff Judge Advocate.

Mrs. Morgan, a former member of the Women's Army Corps, has a total of 11 years' Civil Service. Her husband, M/Sgt. Arthur Morgan, is assigned to the AG Personnel Section at Fort Mason.

Mrs. Joseph Cacallori, Miss Margaret Thomson, Miss Marian LaShure and Miss Patricia Harty each received a Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate for superior performance of duties, and divided a check for $315.00 for their duties as a "Typing Teams," Special Projects Branch, Sixth Army G-3 Plans, Training and Operations Section.

The award was granted the team for expediency in preparing the necessary Department of the Army detailed directives, plans, orders, budget estimates and reports for Department of the Army directed field exercises, maneuvers and command post exercises in the Sixth Army area. These duties are in addition to the individual's stenographic responsibilities to the Section.

Presenting the award and offering congratulations were Col. F. G. Smith, G-3 Section Chief, and other staff section personnel.

Mr. Edwin West, Supply Clerk with the Sixth Army Adjutant's General Section and a retired Master Seregant with 22 years' military service, received a Department of the Army Suggestion Award Certificate and check for $25.00 from Col. Lawton Butler, Sixth Army AG Chief.

Mr. West's suggestion was in connection with the maintenance of offset duplication machines by printing plant personnel at the Presidio.

All awards are granted through the Army Incentives Award Committee.

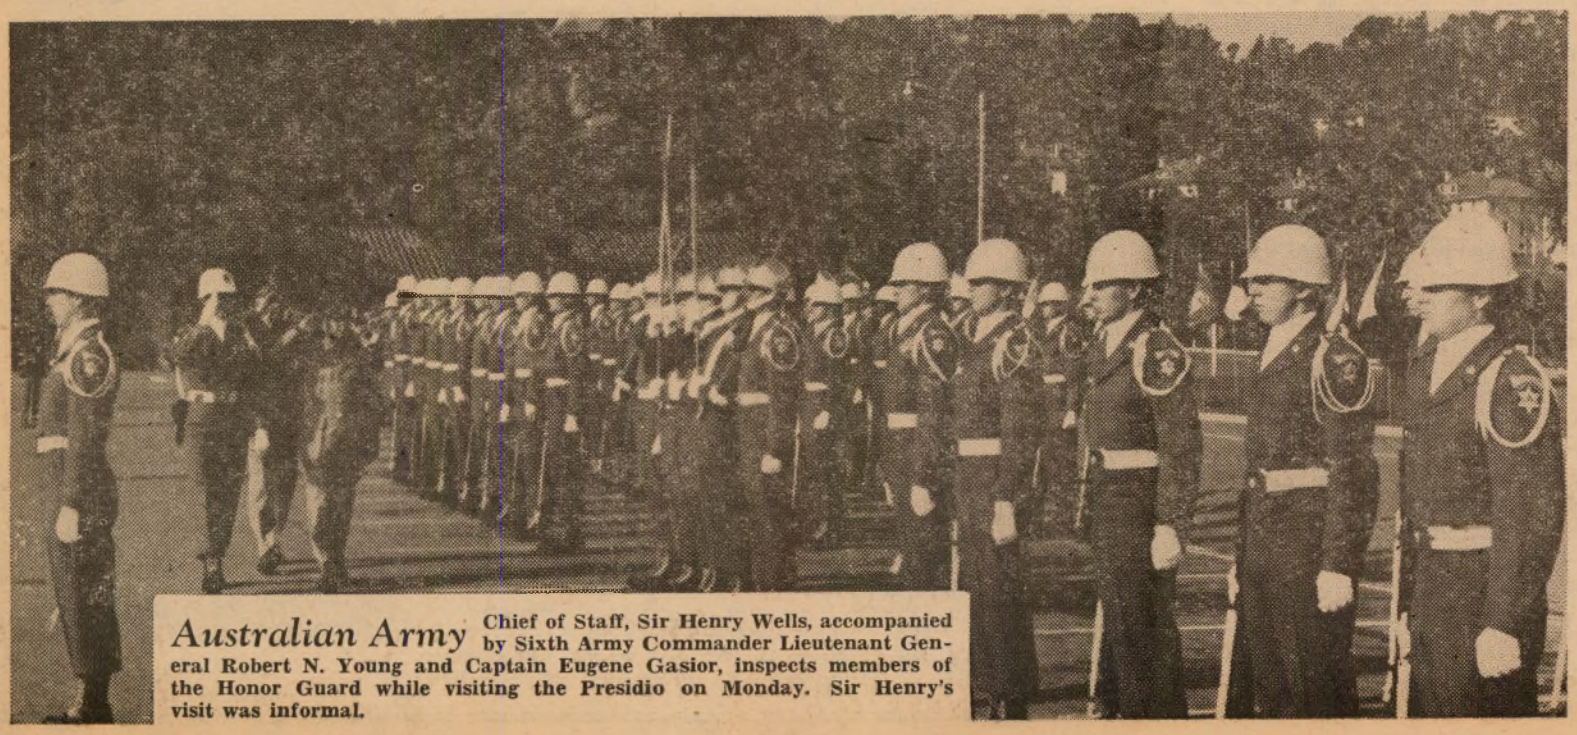
Cordiner Group Set Up for Top Program Push

The Cordiner Pay Committee, which has requested meetings of top non-coms of each service to meet and "set down what they consider to be the 'facts of life' that make a man want to stay in or get out" of the service, has been hard at work on its own checking in to the need for a military pay boost.



In the field late last month the committee met successively with General Curtis E. LeMay at SAC Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Neb.; General Earle E. Partridge, commander-in-chief of the Continental Air Defense Command, and Maj. General Thomas M. Watlington, commanding general of the Germany-bound 8th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo.

Specific information on "how our national defense efforts are being hampered by the shortage of highly skilled personnel," was the goal of the group in the field.

The full title of the investigating committee is the "Defense Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation."

Chairman Ralph J. Army Prevents City Bomb Disaster!

British Dud Removed By Local EOD

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

Army demolition experts moved rapidly last Saturday to squelch two bomb threats that periled the Bay Area.

In Oakland a bomb was discovered in the City Hall. Three floors of the building were evacuated, traffic was halted for two blocks around, and an SOS went out for the Presidio's Explosive Ordnance Disposal team. Army EOD men arrived, investigated and pronounced the bomb to be "an elaborate fake."

Before the Oakland job was completed, San Francisco police called for help on a bomb discovered at a dump near the Hunters Point Naval establishment.

The EOD team arrived to find this bomb "very much alive." It was identified as a 25-pound, British aerial type, which, if exploded, could have a killing range of 50 yards and scatter fragments for a quarter of a mile. The bomb was dismantled and was exploded Tuesday at the EOD bomb cemetery located at Tennessee Point north of Fort Cronkhite.

Saturday was a busy, but routine, day for the 22 men and three officers who man the three Explo-

CONARC CG Reveals New Site Planning

The Department of the Army has approved the establishment of an Army Combat Development Test and Experimentation Center at Fort Ord, California, it was announced this week by General Willard G. Wyman, Commanding General of the Continental Army Command. It is expected that the new center will be in operation by 1 November.

General Wyman, who formerly commanded the Sixth Army, said troops of the 10th Regimental Combat Team of the 5th Infantry Division stationed at Fort Ord will be used in the combat testing. One or two battalions from the unit will spend short periods of time in field work at nearby Camp Roberts and Hunter Liggett Military Reservation. No change in the status of the three military installations is contemplated.

Personnel at Fort Ord will be increased by approximately 169. It is expected that there will be 96 persons—58 civilians and 38 military—assigned to handle the increased work load at the post, with 16 civilian scientists and 57 military personnel assigned to the test center headquarters.

In making the announcement General Wyman said that the action will meet a long-time Army requirement for centralizing the development and testing of new organization equipment and tactics. In the past the Army has utilized various areas for this purpose.

The Army's Combat Development Program got under way on an extensive basis in 1952 when it was formally established as a function of the Office of the Chief, Army Field Forces, which

Top Civilians Tour Sixth Army Defense Programs

A group of 12 prominent Californians, leaders in business and education, began a two-day orientation tour of Fort Ord and Camp Irwin, as guests of Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, this week.

The tour was initiated by Don Belding of Los Angeles, Civilian Aide to Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker for Southern California.

Purpose of the orientation is to acquaint the group with the latest Army developments in weapons, tactics, training, techniques and utilization of manpower.

Upon their arrival at Fort Ord the visitors were briefed by Major General Gilman C. Mudgett, Fort Ord and 5th Infantry Division commander.

The itinerary at Ord then calls for inspections of barracks, a visit with a company training under the provisions of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, a briefing of the operations and a tour of the Army Language School at the Presidio of Monterey, demonstrations of weapons firing and class and field training, a discussion of the operations of the Human Resources Research Organization, and a visit to the Transitional Training Unit which has the responsibility for raising the literacy level of sol-

17,000 Face Draft In October Call; 15,300 To Army

Washington — The Defense Department has asked Selective Service to induct 17,000 men into the Army in October—an increase of 3,000 over September.

Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve, commented:

"The October call is indicative of the continuing need for the draft to maintain the approved strengths of our Armed Forces.

"It points up again the advisability for each young American to choose, at an early date, which of the several methods of discharging his own military obligation is best suited to his needs."

The October call will compensate for a shortage of 15,300 men in the Army as of June 30, 1956, the Defense Department said.

Dean Talk Delayed

The special address by Major General William F. Dean, Ret., on the officer call topic "Code of Conduct" that was slated for the Post Theater yesterday, has been delayed for one week. The address has been rescheduled for 1100 hours 13 September. Officers from Bay Area military installations are invited to attend and are requested to be in the theater and seated by 1055 hours.

Viet Namese Officers Here En Route To Army's Infantry School In Georgia

San Francisco was host last week to 87 Viet Namese Army officers en route to the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia, and other service schools. They will be trained in this country for approximately eight months under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

The first 21 Viet Namese officers to arrive were under the supervision of a group leader, Major Mai Bac Dau, and were met upon their arrival at the San Francisco International Airport by Lieutenant Pable Perez, Chief of the Foreign Students Section, Bay Area Army Terminal Command, Fort Mason. Three more groups arrived later in the week.

AER Drive Sets New Record High: $6500

Giving cash substance to the old adage "the Army takes care of its own" military personnel on the Presidio have rung up a record total of $6500 for the annual Army Emergency Relief drive.

This tops last year's contributions by $1400 and represents an even bigger success when considered in the light of a sizable reduction in the number of military personnel currently assigned to the Presidio.

Commenting on the drive's success, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, stated: "I should like to congratulate each and every one of you on the outstanding success of our annual Army Emergency Relief Campaign. Your personal generosity and the fine organization and hard work of our campaign chairman and committee members are to be commended."

Outstanding unit records were compiled by Headquarters Company Detachments E and I who gave an average of two dollars per man; 8921st Courier Transfer Unit which gave two fifty per man; 16th Base Post Office Unit which averaged a dollar per man, and 11 other Post units which gave at the rate of from one to three dollars each man.

Post and Sixth Army sections averaged from one to ten dollars per person.

A purely military effort, AER solicits no funds from civilian employees. Its aim is to provide emergency funding in the form of grants and loans to military personnel in critical financial need. Last year the AER disbursed some $10,000 in loans and grants locally.

This year's campaign goal had been set at $5,000.

Stop Please

Flashing red lights on a school bus mean one thing—STOP!

With schools again open Presidio vehicle drivers are reminded of paragraph 24b(1), Post regulations, and section 533, California Vehicle Code, concerning meeting or passing a school bus. Anytime a school bus stops on highway, street or road, drivers must stop whether they are traveling in the same or opposite direction of the bus. They must remain stopped as long as the bus displays flashing red lights.

Former Pow, Silver Star Winner, Named Army JAG

A Silver Star winner and veteran of 42 months in a Japanese prison camp has been named by Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young to become Sixth Army Judge Advocate General on 1 November.

Colonel Carlos Edmond McAfee will succeed Colonel John H. Derrick when he retires on 31 October.

Coming here from an assignment as Judge Advocate General for 7th Army in Stutgart, Germany, Colonel McAfee has been on active duty since 1940. He holds a doctorate of law from the University of Oklahoma.

His previous assignments service as deputy JAG with EUSAR Hq. in Europe; JAG at Ft. Bragg, N. C.; four years in the Office of the Judge Advocate General in Washington, D. C.

Colonel McAfee was one of eight judge advocates on duty in the Philippines at the outbreak of World War II. Only three of these law officers survived the bitter fighting and subsequent imprisonment. Colonel McAfee is the only one of these on active duty today.

Colonel and Mrs. McAfee now make their home in Mill Valley. They have no children.

Like To Get Ahead?

A first-rate opportunty to acquire on-the-job training as dental specialists is now being presented at the Post Dispensary. Working under supervision of professional dental officers, enlisted men and women students interested in the course and having the necessary qualifications, are enabled to enter a career field which is vital to the military service and uncommonly lucrative in civilian life.

Enlisted men and women applying for the dental specialist training at the Post Dental Clinic must be qualified as corpsmen and women. They must also have normal color perception and hold a standard score of 90 or over in the GT area.

Interviews with the Post Dental Surgeon or his representative must be preceded by a clearance or release from the applicant's unit commander or section chief.

Further information on the dental course may be secured by calling Post Classification and Assignment Section, Bldg. 220, Extension 3412.

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education and the state governments have joined hands in helping servicemen, Federal employees and their dependents, who will be absent from their states, to vote in November's election.

To guide you in your state's particular absentee voting laws, AFPS has prepared a three-part voting series. This is the seventh in a series dealing with registering to vote by absentee ballot.

HAWAII

Registration is permanent unless a person failed to vote in 1952.

Military personnel do not have to register in person.

All qualified persons may register by absentee process. An "Affidavit on Application for Registration" form should be requested from the County Clerk, county of residence in Hawaii. (Residents of Honolulu should request them from their City Clerk.)

It is recommended that such requests be made at once. The executed form and the affidavits of at least three qualified voters stating that they know the applicant must be received by the County or City clerk not later than 10 October.

MINNESOTA

Registration is required in all cities and towns with populations of 10,000 or more and in some cities and towns with populations between 5,000 and 10,000. Registration is permanent in Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis unless a person failed to vote at least once during two consecutive election years. In other cities and towns where registration is required, it is permanent unless a person failed to vote at least once since 1952.

Members of the Armed Forces, all persons connected with the Armed Forces, their spouses and dependents accompanying them are permanently registered when a Federal Post Card application for an absentee ballot is accepted by the County Auditor, county of residence. Registration in advance, therefore, is not required.

All other qualified persons may register by absentee process by requesting a "Registration Application Form" from the Commissioner of Registration, place of residence. The executed form should be returned before 17 October.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Registration is permanent unless a person failed to vote in 1952, changed his residence to another voting precinct or changed his political affiliation.

All persons may accomplish registration by absentee process.

Servicemen, civilian employees assisting the Armed Forces and their spouses who are absent from South Dakota, or a registered voter of the same precinct acting on the absent person's behalf may apply for registration by requesting a "Registration Affidavit Form" from the County Auditor, county of residence, at any time.

The completed form must be received by appropriate officials before 17 October.

All other persons may register by absentee process by requesting a "Registration Affidavit Form" from the County Auditor, county of residence. This should be received by appropriate officials before 30 October.

TENNESSEE

Registration is permanent unless a person failed to vote at least once in the four previous statewide elections, changed his name or moved to another precinct.

Unregistered members of the Armed Forces and civilian employees assisting the Armed Forces become registered when they vote by absentee Armed Forces ballot.

Any other person absent from home because of his occupation may register by explaining this in a sworn statement sent by registered mail to the appropriate registration official. This statement should be received before 17 October except in counties with populations below 25,000. In those cases, the statement will be accepted up to 27 October.

COLORADO

Registration is permanent unless the person failed to vote in the state's last general election.

Members of the Armed Forces may register by requesting an "Application to Register by Mail" from the County Clerk, county of residence (Election Commission in the case of Denver) at once and returning the completed form before 22 October.

All other persons must register before 23 October either in person or through a member of their immediate family who already is registered and resides at the same address.

For further information, see your voting officer. (AFPS)

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

Good Ole Days in a modern setting might be an apt description of George B. Drash's recent visit to the Presidio. The retired Army sergeant returned to the scenes of an early assignment (1920), when he visited here on his way to the American Legion Convention, last week. Shown with his host, Lt. Col. Halbert J. Presidio Revisited: Ex-Sergeant Returns To Former Duty Station

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

An old horse cavalry soldier and bugler of note returned to the scenes of his youth at the Presidio this week, reliving a time of dawn serenades by trumpet, the smell of horse barns, of flower gardens, and the wild, sweet days when soldiering was an adventure as much as it was a profession.

En route from his home in Lock Haven, Pennsylvania, to the American Legion Convention in Los Angeles, the former Sergeant, George Basyl Drash, stopped off to take a reading on present-day military life at the Presidio.

Missing were the puttees and campaign hat, the rythmic clanging of horses' iron-clad hooves on ancient cobble stones and guard duty at the old Army prison on Alcatraz.

"It is not the same," said the old sarge, "but I wish now that I had never gotten out of the service."

During his term at the Presidio, Sergeant Drash was assigned to Troop C, of the 11th Cavalry.

The Public Information office rolled out the red carpet for the old campaigner. He had lunch in the ancient brick barracks with the non-coms and even had a Wac sergeant assigned to him on a conducted tour of the area.

Spotting the colorful gardens around the officers' quarters on Fort Scott, he was reminded of a woeful day when he took a detail of men to Colonel Smith's quarters to weed the flower beds. "Which are the weeds," asked one of the men. "They all look like weeds to me," replied Sergeant Drash. So they pulled up the flowers and the weeds, and, he recollects, "I was never asked to do garden detail any more."

Learning of the retired soldier's visit here, Lieutenant Colonel Halbert Slagle, the Signal Sections Plan and Operations officer, extended an invitation for him to visit the Sixth Army Communications Center as part of the itinerary planned for him by the Public Information office.

Other stops made by the visiting soldier were at Crissy Field, where he was taken on a helicopter ride by Captain Lee Perdelwitz, over the Post and the island of Alcatraz.

"You better believe I was scared," he says of this event; "I sat at attention for some time after we took off!"

At Fort Scott, Lieutenant Robert W. Foster, acting commander of B Battery, 740 AAA Missile Battalion introduced the sarge to the workings of a NIKE installation.

When he was last here, the Golden Gate Bridge wasn't even a dream. In crossing the bridge to a scenic point above Fort Baker, he recalled that it was from Fort McDowell on Angel Island that he sailed for Siberia, in 1918, as a private who had entered the Army as a means of gaining early citizenship. (Sergeant Drash was at that time a newly arrived immigrant from Poland.)

After he left the Presidio, in 1920, Sergeant Drash was assigned to duty at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii. At one time in his career he was bugler with a Field Artillery unit attached to General Patton's Army. "The General busted me from corporal to private one day, he grinned ruefully, "because I missed reveille."

When he left military service in 1922, Sergeant Drash became a telegrapher for the New York Central Railroad. The job came his way through his training at a vocational school which operated at the Presidio while he soldiered here. He has continued as a civilian in that capacity.

Careermen Hear Advantages Under Survivor Benefits Act

Washington—The Defense Department has directed that career members of the Armed Forces planning voluntary retirement be informed of the possible advantages the Survivor Benefits Act (PL-881) might bring them after Jan. 1, 1957.

The directive also permits all individuals, upon request, to extend the date of their retirement after Aug. 1, 1956, when the act became law, to Jan. 1, 1957, when it goes into effect, in order to qualify for the greater Social Security coverage provided by the new legislation.

Through this change in DOD policy, 640 officers and enlisted men in all the services who otherwise would be involuntarily retired between August 1 and the end of the year will be given the opportunity to remain on active duty to preserve their rights.

Until the new law goes into effect, an individual retiring cannot use his gratuitous $160 Social Security wage credits unless he:

(1) Retired for physical disability under certain conditions;

(2) Was a veteran of WWI;

(3) Remained on active duty for six or more quarters after completion of 30 years' service.

PL-881 provides that any serviceman who contributes to Social Security for one or more months after the first of the year will be entitled to the $160 wage credits granted while in the service.

Most career servicemen who ordinarily would be retired before the new law becomes effective would have been deprived of the advantage of continued Social Security coverage under the old setup.

The new directive prevents discrimination against many officers and men who had given "long and faithful" service, the DOD said. (AFPS)

EOD Units Lead Explosive Existence

Sixth Army Unit On Call Every Hour

Standing in downtown San Francisco while holding the handle down on a pinless, live grenade is a rather unique experience—even for a major in the bomb disposal business.

Major Forrest R. Spiva, Sixth Army Explosive Ordnance Disposal staff officer, found himself in just this situation some months ago. Someone had spotted a grenade in a downtown street and the Army had been called in.

Arriving on the scene, Major Spiva picked up the grenade after noticing that the pin was only partially in place. When the major attempted to reinsert the pin, it came out all the way. "It was the only time in my life I ever picked something up that I couldn't put down again," says Major Spiva.

The EOD officer coolly stepped into his automobile and gently drove back to the Presidio. From Crissy Field he threw the missile into the bay.

The above is but one example of how the men of the 548th, 49th and 87th EOD detachments at the Presidio earn their hazardous duty pay ($55 for EM; $110 for officers).

On 24 hours alert, these units which average 11 calls a month stand ready to handle any explosive situation from the "fakes" planted by cranks, to nuclear bombs or sabotage devices. When not busy with this type of work, they clear all the Sixth Army ranges of duds.

In wartime the EOD detachment's biggest job is the disposal of dud bombs. It is estimated that 10% of the bombs dropped in any air raid do not go off. Presently the Sixth Army EOD units are also operating schools to train civilians in the techniques of bomb disposal. It is the only school of its type in the United States.

EOD assignments in the Bay Area have ranged from removing bombs from churches to rendering safe incendiary bombs planted by college students to burn opposition college Homecoming bonfires. Many calls come from the Post Office when suspicious ticking is heard.

A recent call from the Post Office involved a mechanical train that had started running. "But real or fake, you sweat just as much," comments M/Sgt. Caleb Putnam, operations NCO of the 548th EOD detachment. Presidio units have had two particularly nasty assignments in recent years involving the mopping up of ammo trucks that have crashed and burned.

The fact that even the grimmest assignment can have an element of humor is illustrated in a case involving a depth charge at Half Moon Bay. When Major Spiva and men of the 548th arrived at the scene it was dark. The charge, containing 130 pounds of explosive, was partially floating at the foot of some steep rocks.

To reach the depth charge, Major Spiva had to snake over and down the rock on his stomach. A trusty sergeant held his feet so the Major could work with both hands.

It was a tense moment in the dark night; Major Spiva suspended head down above the water working quietly on the high explosive. At this point a rock crab ran over the hand of the sergeant who was holding the Major. The sergeant jumped, dropping his commander in the ocean. No damage, except a dunked major. (RAL)

Explosive Ordnance Disposal is the job assigned to the 548th, 49th and 87th ordnance detachments located at the Presidio. On a 24-hour alert, the unit assists law enforcement agencies in northern California, Utah and Arizona. In the top picture M/Sgt. Caleb F. Putman, 548th operations NCO and first sergeant, examines some of the many types of explosive ordnance that the detachment has been called upon to render safe. Lower left, Captain Corwin T. Walton, 548th operations officer, supervises the placing of TNT next to an English fragmentation bomb discovered near Hunter's Point last week end. Lower right is the subsequent explosion of the dangerour bomb at the EOD Bomb Cemetery at Tennessee Point, two miles north of Fort Cronkhite.

Law Officers Offered Unique Army Training

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Civilian law enforcement personnel in the Sixth Army have an opportunity offered no one else in the United States. They can go to an Army instructed school for detailed training in the method of recognizing and dismantling explosive sabotage devices.

Until a few months ago, the discovery of anything of explosive nature meant an automatic call to the Army for assistance. Then a directive came out defining the Army's responsibility as restricted to military explosive devices. Any non-military explosive device was the responsibility of the community.

Sixth Army reacted to this information by establishing the first school of its kind in the country, a school to train civilian personnel from local law enforcement agencies in the techniques required for bomb disposal.

Since the program's inception, 1 April, '56, more than 100 civilians have been trained in the Sixth Army area. The three-day courses have been held at Fort Lewis, Camp Hanford, the Presidio, Fort Mason, and Fort Rosecrans.

Believing that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing" in the bomb disposal business, the Army has been careful to make the training all-inclusive. Trainees are instructed in identification of military and commercial explosive, safety precautions and disposal techniques. They see demonstrations of the power of explosives and are shown in detail the construction of military and home-made firing devices.

"There is no such thing as a safe method of bomb disposal," says M/Sgt. Caleb Putnam, operations NCO of the 548th. "We teach them the recommended method, but no hard and fast rules . . . after all, it's their necks."

The San Francisco police force has already had eight men trained in the program and the Oakland force has sent five men to the school. Leonard Wiebe, chief criminologist for the San Francisco police department, was one of those trained at the Presidio.

Instruction is provided by the 10 Explosive Ordnance Disposal detachments in the Sixth Army area. Colonel Bruce D. Mooring, Sixth Army Ordnance Officer, has overall control of the EOD units and the training. In direct charge is Major Forrest R. Spiva, Sixth Army EOD staff officer.

It is Sixth Army's goal to train civilian agencies so "they can perform their own services." However, "in cases beyond their capabilities, the Army will still provide technical assistance," states Major Spiva.

Details of the Army training program have been explained to civilian agencies through regional police chief meetings. "Response to the plan has been extremely enthusiastic," Major Spiva reports.

FancyInformationBoardWins High Praise For Originality

It would be difficult to determine which troops at the Presidio are the best informed. But it's easy to know who has the newest and fanciest TI & E board. It's Company C (6002).

This eye-stopping, mahogany stained masterpiece is the creation of Master Sergeant Andrew McKay, a master carpenter. He designed and built the board after lengthy discussion and consideration of TI & E boards with C Company Commander Captain Eugene V. Williams.

The task of keeping the board supplied, each day, with up-to-date news belongs to Sp3 Joseph Colello, C Company's troop information NCO. Besides news, the board contains troop education opportunities, photographs of the line of command, pamphlets and information on troop information topics and religious information.

"I've seen lots of TI & E boards, but none nicer or more elaborate than ours," says Captain Williams, who credits his duty NCO, Sergeant McKay, for doing a job that reflected pride in his unit.

This showpiece of information boards has been the object of careful scrutiny by many of the first sergeants on post, reports Captain Williams.

The action involves a curious period for Boone, who, in order to establish a settlement, must not only fight the Indians but also the British Red Coats and the renegade French.

PORT AFRIQUE shows Phil Carey as an ex-army flier who returns home from the war to find his wife lying dead in their villa, which she has been sharing with a mysterious songstress. Refusing to believe the police report of suicide, he suspects murder and eventually he catches up with the killer in the desolate and dangerous Rif Mountains, only to discover he has nearly made a fatal mistake.

BACK FROM ETERNITY centers around a transport plane that has crash-landed in the Amazon jungle. In the area is a tribe of Jivaro Indian Head Hunters and the group is constantly threatened with annihilation. Zacha Named Post Crafts Director

Mr. William Zacha, a foreign-trained artist and instructor in American Arts and Crafts schools, is newly-assigned Arts and Crafts director for the Presidio. He replaces Miss Rippon, who leaves the Presidio to resume her career in teaching.

On the official re-opening of the Crafts Shop, 4 September, Mr. Zacha plans to launch a beginning class in the art of making mosaic-decorated furniture such as tables and dressers.

A World War II veteran, Mr. Zacha studied for nearly two years at the Hinna Art Studio in Rome, Italy. He was graduated from George Washington University in Washington, D. C., and is currently working for his master's degree at San Francisco State College.

A former art instructor in the New Orleans schools, Mr. Zacha also taught at the Arts and Garden Center for the Marin Society of Artists, later at the Marin Junior College and the San Rafael Arts and Crafts Recreation Center.

In the near future, Mr. Zacha plans to launch tours for his Presidio students, leading off with a group visit to the Arts and Graphic show in Ross, California.

New Books At Your Post Library

YOU CALL THAT A HOUSE, by William Manners. Prejudice against the unfamiliar is the theme developed in the story of a family that builds a contemporary house in a neighborhood which prides itself on its traditional architecture. The narration acquires suspense from the introduction of a lawsuit over the new style house.

THE AIR FORCE, by Arnold Brophy. A readable report on the past, present, and future of the U.S. Air Force. Among the many areas explored are: The development of the aircraft industry, current offensive and defensive abilities, and an up-to-date view of accomplishments and potentialities. Data on finances and types of planes are appended.

AFTERNOON OF AN AUTOCRAT, by Norah Lofts. A fascinating period novel which brings vividly to life an 18th-century English village and its colorful inhabitants, from the lord of the manor to the simple shoemaker and his daughter, a proud girl who falls victim to Devil worshippers.

ZANZABUKU, by Lewis N. Cotlow. Three safaris in Equatorial and East Africa are described by the author of "Amazon Headhunters." Mr. Cotlow casts a cursory glance at the recent Mau Mau uprisings and native-white relationships. Adventurous, fast-paced reading.

A THING OF BEAUTY, by Archibald Joseph Cronin. An excellent picture of an artist and a man obsessed. Forsaking the religious calling of his forebears, Stephen Desmondes continues to paint through the hardships of starvation and even tuberculosis. He reacts to the furore created by his paintings by refusing to sell or exhibit them and is supported by his wife—a former servant.

MR. SEWARD FOR THE DEFENSE, by Earl Conrad. An episode in the life of a former Secretary of State supplies the basis for this story of an 1846 murder trial in which Mr. Seward was the lawyer for the accused. Pleading the murderer's case on the grounds of insanity, Seward was defeated by the ignorance and prejudice of the townspeople.

6 Soldiers To Enter Games Cycle Trials

With visions of Melbourne, Australia, dancing in their heads, six Sixth Army Olympic Games cycling hopefuls conclude training schedules next week for the U.S. trials at San Francisco's Lake Merced course.

Stationed at the Oakland Army Terminal, the six-man squad of cyclists this week put the wraps on their extensive training schedule and oiled their bikes for the trials September 14 to 17.

Off past performances, their chances of landing a berth on the U.S. team are exceptionally bright. All six cyclists survived the northern California Olympic Bicycle 125-mile elimination race last month.

One of the cyclists, Pfc. Bernard Dodd, broke the U.S. 125-mile record with a time of 5 hours, 41 minutes, 50 seconds, bettering the old standard by more than 30 minutes. He has also won a 125-mile scratch race and a 50-mile handicap affair.

Team leader, Second Lieutenant George Van Meter, also won a 125-mile race and took third place in the International Bicycle Derby in Redmond, Washington, recently.

Two other OAT soldiers placed well in the Redmond race. Pvt. Erhart Newman finished second, while Pfc. William Olsen finished sixth.

Pfc. Richard Olsen qualified for the Olympic quarter-mile banked track elimination race scheduled for San Jose September 15 and 16.

The sixth member of the team, Pvt. Richard Bing, boasts victories in a 75-mile handicap race and a 50-mile scratch race.

Waterfowl Hit Cal. in Droves

The annual migration of waterfowl has reached California and the birds are arriving in increasing numbers. To keep crop depredations to a minimum, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the California Department of Fish and Game advised ranchers to begin herding the waterfowl immediately to federal and state game management areas where food and water impoundments are available to attract the birds.

The two agencies stressed the need for early action to keep the birds out of rice and clover fields to avoid possible extensive crop losses as the birds forage for food. If the birds are allowed to settle on the fields in great numbers before herding begins, it is more difficult to control them.

Herding operations require a federal permit. Applications for these may be obtained from local federal game management agents or state game wardens.

A limited supply of flares and other devices for frightening birds away from fields is available to ranchers in depredation areas. Information on such equipment may be obtained from the agents or wardens.

To assist central valley ranchers in meeting the waterfowl crop depredation problem, some 10,400 acres of cereal crops have been planted on state and federal waterfowl management areas in the heart of rice growing districts. Crops of rice, millet (watergrass), barley and milo are grown and left unharvested for waterfowl feeding on these areas.

Matzen, Casino Pace Toreros To 6-3 Win Over Fort Ord

Locals Belt Lawton, 16-1, In 1st Game

Special to the Star Presidian

Fort Ord—A dazzling pitching performance by Charlie Matzen and the booming bat of big Al Casino sparked the Presidio Toreros to a 6-3 victory over defending champion Fort Ord in the Sixth Army tournament yesterday.

The victory, Presidio's second straight in the week long tournament, set the stage for a probable showdown with Fort Huachuca in the semi-final round this afternoon.

Huachuca clipped Camp Irwin Wednesday, 18-5, to remain in the winner's bracket.

The Toreros were forced to overcome an early 3-0 lead by Fort Ord. Casino's hitting and the clutch pitching performance by Matzen—plus a couple of lucky breaks — overcame the margin, however.

Casino got the Presidio started toward the win with a towering 375 foot home run, the first in the tournament, in the sixth and drilled a single through the box in the eighth to drive home another tally.

Matzen, touched for one run in the first and a brace in the second, settled down thereafter and limited the Warriors to three well-scattered hits.

Fort Ord began to fall apart at the seams in the eighth. The Presidio opened the frame with a single by John Blackwell.

Ed Sage hit a blooper toward the mound, but Ord third baseman Chuck Stacey and pitcher Don Ferranti, looking for a bunt, charged in permitting the ball to fall safe.

Third sacker Norm Ellenberger drove Blackwell in from second with a single to center. Casino then lashed his single through the box to bring home Sage, as Ellenberger halted at third.

Two costly errors in the ninth by Fort Ord proved to be the undoing of the 1955 Sixth Army champs and gave the Presidio the triumph.

Ord shortstop, Joe Giddings, bobbled Ralph Smith's grounder, Blackwell drew a pass and Matzen grounded out.

But Sage kept the rally going with a single to center to score Smith and send Blackwell to second. Ord relieved Ferranti and Ellenberger greeted new pitcher, Bob Huffnagel, with a hit over third to drive in Blackwell. Sage, who took third on the play, scored moments later on a wild pitch.

Fort Lewis climbed back on the winning trail when John Lucia hurled the Chiefs to a one-hit, 7-0, triumph over Yuma Test Station, and Fort Lawton walloped Camp Hanford, 13-4, in other games Wednesday.

The Presidio breezed to victory in its opener over the hard-luck Lawton club in a game called because of darkness after five and one-half innings of play.

Three Lawton hurlers had trouble, which is putting it mildly, in finding the plate in the first inning as the Presidio scored 12 runs. Nine of the Torero's tallies came across the plate as the result of walks permitted with the bases loaded and seven errors in the field.

Catcher Ronnie Dacko, a recent addition to the squad from the 9th AAA Missile Battalion, collected three of the Presidio's six hits in the abbreviated contest.

Camp Irwin parlayed 13 hits and eight Yuma Test Station miscues to capture an easy 15-5 triumph in its opener.

Defending champion Fort Ord downed Camp Hanford, 12-8, in a wild scoring contest. Ord's Charles Stacey and Hanford's Clarence Orr each fattened batting averages with three hits in five trips.

Fort Huachuca downed the stubborn Fort Lewis Chiefs on a tenth inning throwing error by Pitcher George Barvinchak. He hurled the ball over the first baseman's head, permitting Joe Greene to score the clincher.

Service Aces Boost US Olympic Hopes

By Sp3 Walter Heil
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Before evidence to the contrary was presented at the track and field trials in Los Angeles in late June, the prophets of doom forecast that, sure as shootin,' the United States was in for a licking in the 1956 Olympics at Melbourne, Australia.

But much to the cynics' surprise—and to the delight of the fans—the U.S., thanks in great part to service athletes, came up with what has been hailed as its greatest team.

And when you come right down to it, service athletes supplied some of the biggest thrills at the meet and helped chase the crapehangers from the Coliseum premises.

PVT. TOM COURTNEY
Sparks U. S. Hopes

Altogether 19 servicemen won places on the U.S. Olympic squad, including seven from the Army, a more than excellent performance.

Tops among these, of course, are Pfc. Ira Murchison in the 100-meter run; Pfc. Lou Jones, 400 meters; Pvt. Tom Courtney, 800 meters, and Sp3 John Bennett in the broad jump.

The three sprinters won first place berths, while Bennett settled for a tie with Greg Bell. And while they were about it, the Army men came up with a couple of record-shattering performances.

Jones bettered his won international mark in the 400 meters by zipping to a 45.2 clocking, while Courtney set a new American mark of 1:46.4 in the 800, beating Army ROTC student Arne Sowell of Pitt with a tremendous finishing kick.

To heap further glory on the Army striders, Murchison blazed to a world record—along with Pvt. Willie Williams—in a military meet in Berlin last month. Both topped Jesse Owens' 10.2 mark in the 100 meters with 10.1 performances.

So, as we were saying, the U.S., with its servicemen in the lead, should do a bit of all right come Games time next November.

A story by Sp3 Mike Lynch out of Fort Bragg, N. C., has it that Pvt. Georgie Araujo, the onetime lightweight boxing flash, now a Special Services athletic instructor, dabbles in oil during his spare time.

Araujo, according to scribe Lynch, put on a one-man show of his oil paintings in Providence recently and received "good notices" from art critics in eastern papers.

The lightweight, who lost to Jimmy Carter for the title in the 13th round, was drafted in early December 1955 as he was starting a comeback.

752nd Seeks 3-A Regional Softball Title

Hopeful of returning to their Bay Area gun bases with another glittering trophy, the 752nd AAA Gun Battalion softball team leaves today for Fort Lawton, Wash., and the Sixth Regional AAA Command tournament.

Already boasting the Presidio and 30th Group championships, the 752nd has its sights set on winning the regional title and thus gaining a spot in the nationwide ack-ack tourney scheduled for Fort Baker later this month.

Team members would like nothing better than to host the big tourney as Far Western winners.

But that depends on how the Gunners fare against their West Coast brethren at Fort Lawton September 9 to 15.

Information received here indicates the 752nd will vie with the 47th AAA Brigade from Seattle, the 31st AAA Brigade from Los Angeles and possibly the 5th Group from the Pacific Northwest.

If anything, the Gunners can claim possession of two sparking pitchers in Marion Mattox and Bill Griffin, who should, if past performances mean anything, whip their Sixth Regional counterparts.

Marion hurled the Gunners to the 30th Group title last week as he checked the 52nd AAA Battalion, 7-2. Griffin, though he had his troubles last week, has been the club's mainstay all season.

SWINGING STYLIST Pitcher Ron George of the 52nd AAA Battalion displays classic batting form as he wallops a home run in the final game of the 30th Group softball tournament at Fort Baker last week. George's blast came against the winning 752nd AAA Gun Battalion team in the last inning.

Boundaries Differ For Deer Hunting

Hunters planning to participate in the three-day, either-sex deer period of the early season, September 14, 15 and 16, are urged by the Department of Fish and Game to check pages 4, 5 and 6 of the 1956 Digest of Hunting Regulations. In some cases, the boundaries differ from those established for the regular early season.

Antlerless deer may be taken in a strip of counties starting with Napa and Yolo on the north and extending down the coast as far as San Diego during the September 14-16 period.

OAT Captain Sets New Rifle Record

Camp Perry (Ohio)—An Oakland Army Terminal captain won the 1956 rifle rapid fire championship in the National Rifle and Pistol meet here and set a new record while he was doing it.

Captain Joseph B. Berry, a University of Nevada graduate from Reno, shattered the 1955 mark of 100 v 15 set by Sergeant Kenneth Robinson when he fired a perfect 100 v 18.

The "v" is a small circle located in the center of the bullseye for breaking ties. As he pumped his 20 shots into the center of the target, Berry put 18 slugs through the "v".

The competition consists of 20 shots, ten from 200 yards, standing to kneeling, and ten more from 300 yards, standing to prone position.

Berry thus defeated Sergeant First Class Loyd G. Crow, 511th Signal Airborne, 11th Airborne Division, who finished second with 100 v 15.

Crow, however, was named the 1956 open sporting rifle champion, as he not only broke the match record but also became the first person ever to win the championship twice.

The 26-year-old sergeant posted a six-match aggregate of 643-82V for his victory, eclipsing the old mark of 643-69V, which he set last year earning the same number of points but lacking in the V Ring.

Second place went to S/Sgt. Emmett Duncan, USMC, who fired a 643-74V score. M/Sgt. Francis B. Conway, Jr., Fort Benning, nabbed the show position with a 640-point total.

Winner of the 1956 service rifle championship was S/Sgt. James E. Hill, USMC, who amassed 634 points for his title. He broke the National match record of 633 points set last year by Captain John Kolb, Fort Benning.

Captain Richard H. Conley, Fort Bragg, and Sp2 Jasper O. Kleinjan, Fort Lewis, both members of the All-Army team, took second and third spots with 627 and 625-53V.

US Team 4th In Pentathlon

Stockholm — The United States modern pentathlon team finished fourth in international competition held here recently.

Final team totals gave Hungary first place with 13,805 points. Sweden was second with 13,737, Finland third with 13,400 and the U.S. fourth with 12,976.

The finest individual American performance was by Lt. (jg) William J. Andre, a 24-year-old Navy star from Annapolis, Md. The former Dartmouth College athlete finished eighth in the over-all standing with 4,515 points. He placed second in the 4,000 meter run to Sweden's Bertil Haase.

Army Sp2 Robert K. Miller wound up 14th with 4,400 points. Sp3 Hector Poventud was 16th with 4,187 and Sp3 John Holland 23rd with 3,809.

The pentathlon is a five-event meet. The events are the 4,000-meter cross-country run, 5,000-meter cross-country on horseback, the 25-meter timed fire pistol shoot, the 300-meter freestyle swim and epee fencing. (AFPS)

The Marine Corps team finished third with 1202 and the Navy fourth with a 1220 count.

Marine Lieutenant Don Albert from Camp Lejeune, N. C., was the individual low scorer with a four-round total of 290. Defending champion, Air Force Lieutenant Ray Terry, Patrick AFB, Fla., finished second with 291.

Air Force Major Don Saunders of Elmendorf AFB, Alaska, took top honors in the senior division with a 72-hole total of 322. Master Sergeant Rand Carroll, of Fort Shafter, Hawaii, and Lieutenant Colonel Ming Ross, of Fort Ord, tied for second in the senior division with 330.

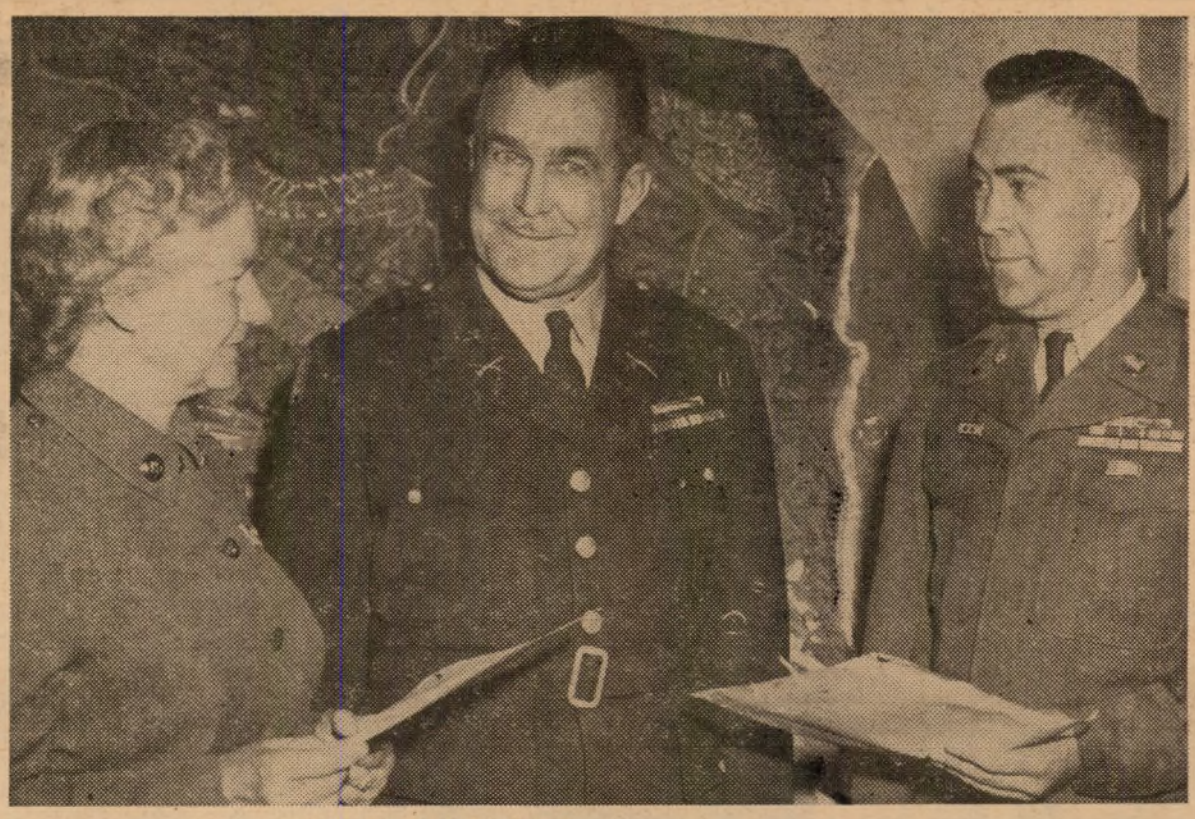
Ring Tourney Starts Tuesday

Ken Johnson and Percy Morgan III, a couple of Presidio fisticuffers with championship aspirations, enter the Sixth Army Boxing Tournament Tuesday, hoping to battle their way into the All-Army bouts.



Johnson, a heavyweight, and Morgan, a welterweight, seek two of the ten Sixth Army berths in the All-Army tournament.

Because the number of entries failed to come to expectations, Oakland Army Terminal authorities—site of the Sixth Army bouts—switched the semi-final bouts to Tuesday and the finals to Wednesday at 0800 hours.

The finalists will represent the Sixth Army at the All-Army bouths at Fort Myer, Va., September 24-29.

Crusade Drive In Full Swing

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Kick-off for the Bay Area Crusade was sparked at the Presidio this week with officer, enlisted and civilian "crusaders" contacting individuals in all staff sections for the purpose of securing advance pledges to be honored at the pay tables or otherwise, from the present date through 31 October. Actual donations are also being accepted at this time.

In line with increased expenditures incurred by the Bay Area Crusade in its efforts to carry on the tradition of aiding the afflicted in all walks of life, the Presidio goal for this annual appeal has been set at $36,015, a 10 per cent increase of last year's quota of $30,000.

The all-out single collection at the Presidio and elsewhere in the Bay Area will cover 76 charitable agencies in five counties including San Francisco, Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin and San Mateo, and defraying the expenses of the American Red Cross, the Cancer Society, Heart Association, Multiple Sclerosis, Cerebral Palsy, Arthritis, the Rheumatism Foundation and the United Service Organization.

Both the Sixth Army Commanding General and the Deputy Post Commander have appealed to members of the command to make a concentrated effort to uphold the already established record set by the Presidio in contributing to civic enterprise in the interests of human health and welfare.

The extent of contributions by Post personnel members is expected to meet the required goal through donations amounting to one day's pay from each soldier and civilian. Thus, a soldier holding the rank of Private would commit himself to donating two dollars, or a dollar on each pay day covering drive, while a Major General or officer of higher grade would give $17.50 in one or two payments as desired. Commensurate amounts for all enlisted and officer ranks are posted on area bulletin boards.

As far as can be determined at the present time, no further appeals for charitable purposes sponsored by municipal organizations are being launched at the Presidio during the next year.

'Hump' Answer?

RA Augmentation Program Deadline Set For Jan. '57

Washington—The Army has set a deadline of 31 January 1957 to make application for Regular Army commissions under the new Regular Officer Augmentation Program.

According to DA Circular 601-26, qualified Reserve Officers, including National Guardsmen, and certain civilians may apply for Regular Army Commissions from 1 October, 1956, through 31 January, 1957.

Signed into law recently by the President, this program increases the authorization for Regular Army officers from 30,600 to 49,500 and is expected to ease the so-called "hump" problem in the Army.

The augmentation program provides: (a) A direct long-range career incentive. (b) Increases stability by increasing proportion of regulars to 50 per cent. (c) Provides a broad base for the development of future leaders. (d) Minimizes the "hump" problem. (e) Creates career opportunities for thousands of reserve officers. (f) Aids in filling in "valleys" in regular officer structure. (g) Preserves needed skills and experience. (ANS)

Closed for Repairs The Baker-Barry tunnel is undergoing a complete renovation, the first major overhaul since its construction in 1918. The job, which started 6 August 56, is scheduled to end early in October. When again open the tunnel will be patched, painted and equipped with fluorescent lighting.

Old Friend Gets New Dress

That dark, dank and drippy hole known as the Baker-Barry Tunnel will emerge from its first major renovation since construction in 1918, a showpiece—dry and clean, lighted and lime green, reports the Post Engineer's office.

The job, which started on 6 August, is slated for completion early in October.

A San Francisco firm which specializes in tunnel-proofing was awarded the contract after making the low bid of $40,621. Besides sand blasting and chipping the crews will plug all holes and cracks, paint the tunnel and install modern fluorescent lighting.

In the meantime traffic moving to Fort Barry and Fort Cronkhite must take the "high road" which curves up over the steep hills facing the San Francisco bay entrance. From the road, which has recently been improved, drivers and passengers are afforded a fine view of San Francisco—through the pillars of the Golden Gate Bridge.

The tunnel, nearly a mile long, was lengthened in 1954 by the California State Highway Department when it re-worked the north entranceway to the Golden Gate Bridge.

IGs Will Check Quality Versus Quantity Regs

Washington — The Army says it is putting special emphasis on its program of reenlisting only highly qualified enlisted personnel and is stressing quality over quantity.

Department of the Army has designated "Quality of Personnel Being Reenlisted" as a special subject for Inspectors General's inspections during the 1957 fiscal year. Inspectors General will determine the effectiveness of the program to select high quality personnel for reenlistment and whether DA instructions on maintaining this type personnel are being implemented.

In accordance with the new Army "look," only soldiers who are distinct assets to the service will be afforded the privilege of reenlisting. The program, according to DA Circular 20-6, must include a screening process to insure reenlistment only of those individuals who can clearly contribute to the mission of the Army. (ANS)

Safe Driving Program Pays Top Dividend

An all time record of no automobile or general traffic accidents involving Presidio military and civilian personnel over the Labor Day weekend was announced by the Post Safety officer this week. As yet, no accident reports have been received here from outlying Sixth Army areas.

Credited with implementing the safe driving record was a published message from Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, urging drivers to observe the rules and courtesies of the road, to depart on planned trips as early as possible, and to curtail driving generally to a minimum during the Labor Day weekend.

Colonel Lundquist's safety letter to personnel of the Presidio was posted on all bulletin boards and distributed to staff officers on the last duty day of the annual long weekend.

Forts and garrisons were first established for the U.S. Army in Alaska during the gold rush days of 1896 and 1898 in order to maintain law and order.

Special Issue Fetes Local Anniversary

The Presidio of San Francisco is 180 years old on Monday. It has grown from the tiny Spanish outpost of 1776 to a vast military complex involving 10,000 men, three independent commands and thousands of acres of defense land.

Of first importance is Sixth Army Headquarters, nerve center and brain of 70 Army installations located in eight Western states. At the apex of this organization stands Major General Robert N. Young who is both Commanding General of Sixth Army and Post commander.

Other separate commands located in the Presidio area are Letterman Hospital, commanded by Major General Paul I. Robinson, and the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command at Fort Baker, commanded by Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant.

The 30th Engineer Group (topographic survey), commanded by Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, is the only group size unit of this

Set Special Emphasis For POW Code

Unit commanders at the Presidio were informed this week that they will be responsible for the Code of Conduct instruction of their enlisted men which must be completed by 31 Dec. 56.

Officers received initial instruction on the program at the Post theater yesterday. A make up period will be announced later.

Object of the Code of Conduct instruction is to increase unit fighting strength and individual will to resist. It is stressed that the training does not merely instruct the soldiers on how to behave as prisoners of war.

Training should emphasize to the soldier that each fighting man is a special concern to the United States; he will not be forgotten as a prisoner of war.

Laws of the United States provide for the support of dependents of prisoners of war. Every available means will be used by the United States to establish contact with, to support and to gain release of prisoners of war.

Military personnel and their families of the Presidio proper and Fort Cronkhite are invited to attend the Open Houses and to avail themselves of the fine facilities being offered at both shops during the Fall and through the coming Spring and Summer seasons.

Senator John Stennis (Dem-Miss) of the Senate Armed Services committee is greeted on his arrival in San Francisco by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander. Accompanied by Assistant Defense Secretary Floyd S. Bryan, the Senator will tour several key defense sites in California and Utah.

Senator Stennis Here; Visits Major Sites

Senator John C. Stennis, of Mississippi, Chairman of the Military Construction Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and Assistant Secretary of Defense (Properties and Installations) Floyd S. Bryant, today visited the Presidio of San Francisco, to begin a tour that will take them to defense installations in California and Utah for a first-hand look at military construction programs.

Accompanied by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, the party visited a Nike site of the 740 AAA Missile Battalion at Fort Scott, where they were briefed on Nike operations and witnessed a demonstration of the missile being placed in operation.

They also visited dependent housing sites located on the grounds of Letterman Army Hospital, where Major General Paul I. Robinson, hospital commender, briefed the Senator and his party.

The group later departed by Army plane for a visit to the Army Language School at the Presidio of Monterey and a tour of Fort Ord, Calif.

During the Western portion of their tour, the party will also visit nearby Navy installations, the San Diego area for visits to Navy and Marine Corps facilities, and the Salt Lake City, Utah, area.

The party will return to Washington about 19 September.

The Army strives to get the most defense for the money from the resources provided to it. It spends its money prudently for the essentials of defense in accord with good business practices. It is constantly self-critical, trying on its own initiative to uncover inefficiency and malpractice.

Sixth Army Clarifies Area Uniform Regs

A consolidation of information on the wearing of Army uniforms has come down from Sixth Army headquarters clarifying present and future uniform requirements.

Presently the winter uniform for officers is pinks and greens and for EM, OD shade 33. The service cap is appropriate for officers during all seasons. It is also authorized for EM wear except when otherwise prescribed by local commanders.

The garrison cap, summer and winter, is appropriate for EM general duty wear. Officers may wear the cap only when their shirt is worn as an outer garment or they are in a travel status away from home station.

The garrison cap properly worn is "placed upon the head so that the front vertical crease is at the center of the forehead, 1 to 1½ inches above eyebrow level, tilted slightly to the right so that side of cap is above, but not resting upon, the right ear. Front and rear vertical creases and top edge of crown will form an unbroken line in silhouette. The crown will not be crushed or shaped to form peaks at the front and rear."

The service, semidress or dress uniform, winter or summer, is authorized for general off duty wear at the discretion of the individual.

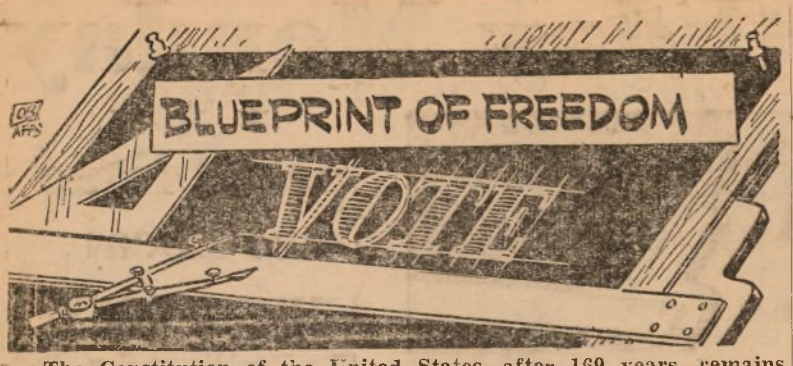
The work uniform, summer garrison uniform, white duty uniform (enlisted men), and field uniform are authorized for off-post wear only when personnel are engaged in an assigned military mission, or when traveling in private or government conveyance between place of residence and place of duty.

Officers are encouraged, as soon as possible, to provide themselves with the Army blue uniform which will become required on 1 October, 1957.

The new Army green shade 44 uniform becomes optional for off-duty wear on 1 October of this year. Then in 12 months, 1 October, 1957, the green uniform, officer and EM, is authorized for optional general duty and off-duty wear.

Officer's pinks and greens are to go completely out of sight on 1 October, 1957, replaced by the greens for on-duty wear and the blues for off-duty wear.

6th Regional AA Adds New Nike Station



Still another unit will be added to the growing roster of 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command soon, when the 441st AA Battalion moves into its permanent Nike Guided Missile positions guarding the Bay Area.

Encircling San Francisco as one component in several forming a steel bastion within and beyond the city limits, the 441st is slated to start its housekeeping and maintenance of one Nike site at Coyote Hill, near Newark, and another overlooking Berkeley, Oakland and the Bay.

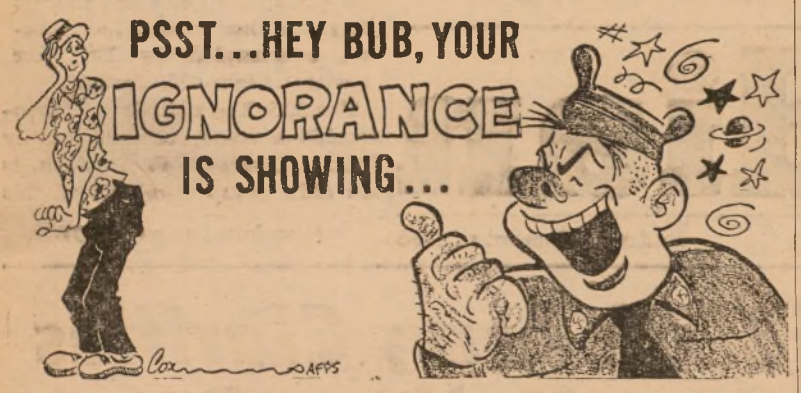
The Grizzly Peak area installation will be the first double Nike site in this area with almost twice the manpower and guided missiles installed in the usual sites.

Personnel of the new battalion have already begun to move into their new housing area.

Commanding the 441st is Lieutenant Colonel Oliver E. Griest. Captain William B. Chick, commanding Battery B, has been one of a group of officers introducing their newest manpower and steel neighbor to civic groups in the cities of Berkeley, Oakland, Mountain View, Alameda, Hayward, San Leandro, Los Gatos, Livermore and Menlo Park.

The Constitution of the United States, after 169 years, remains a delicately constructed document, resplendent with fine points among its clear and sweeping principles.

Lawyers today still examine it, much like a doctor examines the body, to get a full understanding of its operation.



The Constitution provides for a balance of power between the federal and the state governments. There is provision, too, for a system of "checks" and "balances" among the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the federal government.

Clearly, the men who wrote the Constitution gave us a remarkable blueprint of government. They gave us what we needed—a technical, finely drawn plan as the basic document of a growing country.

But, like any blueprint, no matter how exact and finely drawn, it will serve little purpose without tools. The tools of the Constitution are the people. The document depends on their actions.

We give the Constitution meaning when we exercise our duties as citizens. Voting is one such duty.

The Defense Department has made it relatively easy for service personnel to vote. We must cast our ballots if this document is to continue to serve as the blueprint of a growing, democratic government. (AFPS)

Color is fine for your new automobile, the wife's summer bonnet and the silks of your favorite race horse. Blue language, especially in places where service persons rub elbows with civilians, is as wrong as wearing a derby with swimming trunks.

Cuss words are the sign of a lazy man, soon to be an ignorant one. They creep into our speech when we are too tired to search our minds for the correct phrase to express our thoughts. Soon, they become second nature.

At this point, the brain has shrunk through lack of exercise. It won't supply the correct word, even when we want it. We are marked by one and all as stupid.

Besides this disservice to ourselves, getting into the cussing habit hurts our boss, Uncle Sam. Civilians hold us in low esteem when they hear a serviceman sound off in blue. They mark off the Armed Forces as a catch-all for older juvenile delinquents and begin to distrust all who wear the uniform.

Let's think twice before speaking once. And let's shape up that comrade-in-arms who is causing the welcome mat to be hauled indoors both in the states and abroad. (AFPS)

Write Right Now!

AFPS has prepared a three-part voting series to explain your state's voting laws. This is the ninth in a series on registering to vote by absentee ballot.

ALABAMA

Registration is permanent. It is required for voting and must be accomplished in person at the office of the Board of Registrars, county of residence, on either the first or the third Monday of the month until 27 October.

Special information is necessary in the following counties and may be obtained from the County Probate Judge: Calhoun, Etowah, Jefferson, Mobile, Montgomery and Tuscaloosa.

IDAHO

Registration is permanent unless a voter did not vote in the last general election or moved from one precinct to another.

Servicemen, civilians serving with the Armed Forces outside the U.S. and dependents are registered automatically when their marked ballots are accepted by election officials.

Any qualified voter temporarily absent from his precinct may apply for registration by absentee process by requesting in writing, an "Elector's Oath" from the Clerk, Board of County Commissioners, county of residence. The executed form, sworn to before a notary public, should be returned to the Clerk before 3 November.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Once a voter's name has been entered on the checklist of the town, city or ward of residence, permanent registration is in effect.

Members of the Armed Forces, civilians who are members of agencies assisting the Armed Forces, their spouses and dependents residing with them are entered on the checklist when applications for absentee ballots are accepted by the Board of Supervisors of Checklist, town or city of residence.

All other persons must register in person with the applicable office mentioned above.

VERMONT

The voters' "Check List" system is followed and no other kind of registration is required.

Before a person can vote he must have his name entered on his town "check list" by taking the Freeman's Oath. This is usually accomplished when a person reaches 21. If he is absent from the state at that age, his name may be entered by writing to the Town or City Clerk, place of residence, and requesting proper documents for taking the Oath.

WYOMING

Registration is permanent unless a voter failed to vote in any general election.

Unregistered members of the Armed Forces, and civilian employees of agencies serving with the Armed Forces are registered if information on the absentee ballot is accepted.

Returnee

Oozlefinch is the name of this strange bird that has been recently recalled to active duty. The patron saint of cannoneers in the old Army reported for modern Army warfare equipped with a Nike guided missile under his wing. His entry into Ft. Bliss was typical—a perfect three-point landing after flying backwards all the way.

In 1954, at factories and similar private enterprises, the Army placed almost 2,000,000 contracts totaling $5,750,000,000, representing current production requirements.

Unique History!

Three Flags Have Flown Over Old Fort Point, Bay Guardian

The first plan for a fortress in San Francisco was submitted to the Spanish governor by the local military commandant in 1792. It was completed two years later, on a site which had been selected 18 years before by Anza. The $6400 fort, known as Castillo de San Joaquin, was built on a jutting promontory of hard serpentine rock called the Punta del Cantil Blanco about 100 feet above the water.

Dungeon Door, Fort Point.

The fortress was built out of adobe by Spanish soldiers and Indian laborers. It was horseshoe in shape and had 14 embrasures lined with brick for the cannons. The parapet was 10 feet thick with a barracks for the artillerymen on the inside. Six artillerymen and a corporal garrisoned the post and took care of the eight 12-pounder cannons. Four of these cannons are still on post. Two are in front of the Officers' Club and two near the flagpole.

The "Castillo," as it was called, was made more formidable during the next few years and after it was damaged by a series of earthquakes, it was rebuilt partly of brick and stone in 1816. During the Mexican rule in California the fort was virtually abandoned because of lack of funds and political unrest.

In 1846, at the beginning of the Mexican War, Colonel John C. Fremont and a small party of men sailed across the Golden Gate from Marin County, climbed up to the abandoned fort and spiked the cannons so the Mexicans would be unable to use them in the future. The following year the Castillo was occupied for a short time by U.S. troops.

After California became a state, there was agitation in Congress for the military defense of the port of San Francisco. A new modern fort on the site of the Cantil Blanco was authorized and before it was finished it had cost three million dollars.

Work was begun in 1853. The Old Castillo de San Joaquin was dismantled, the site was cut down to near the water's edge and a new fort was constructed. Some of the material from the old Spanish fort was used in building the new structure. Much of the salvaged material was used in the construction of the post hospital which is still in use today as the post dispensary.

The fort was built similar to Fort Sumter in South Carolina. One of the engineers in charge was the son of General Robert E. Lee. Some of the material used in the building was shipped all the way around Cape Horn from the East Coast of the United States. Fort Point was completed in 1861 and the granite sea wall was finished the year after. Armament consisted of 127 guns.

At the outset of the Civil War, Fort Point was garrisoned by two artillery companies. The development of iron-clad ships and improved breechloading cannons made the fort obsolete. The guns were kept in trim by the firing of salutes on special occasions. The last time a gun was fired was in salute to the first troopship that sailed for Manila in the Spanish-American War. About the turn of the century the old fort was abandoned, its guns going to a junk dealer.

The cannons of the two forts on this site, which have operated under three flags, have never fired a shot in anger.

The average account in the Army soldier's deposit is $113.

Troops Proved Easy Prey For Con Men

Thousands of volunteer troops returning from the Philippines after 1900 reported either to the Presidio or to the Discharge Depot at Fort McDowell on Angel Island for mustering out. Local confidence men found the troops easy prey. Despite the exclusion of civilians from the discharge stations, the troops continued to be victimized. Said the Department of California Paymaster in 1904:

The stupidity and imbecility of these short term men coming from the Philippines is unbelievable. . . . While sensible in the service abroad, they seem to take leave of their senses when arriving on U.S. soil. . . . Out of 200 of these men paid off and permitted to go to the city, 50 would turn up the next morning robbed of everything, many dangerously injured by blows and drugs. On one occasion, out of 31 men who stayed over in SF one night, 19 turned up next morning beaten, robbed of tickets, orders and clothes.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

Camp Merritt Was Unhappy Site Choice

During the Spanish-American War of 1898, Camp Merritt was established outside the Presidio in the vicinity of Lake and Arguello streets to accommodate the overflow from the crowded Presidio reservation.

The location was badly chosen. Camp Merritt was exposed to wind and fog; drainage was fouled by constantly drifting sand which also polluted mess and kitchen facilities.

During July and August the sick lists were swollen with typhoid and spinal meningitis cases. There was also an epidemic of measles complicated in many cases by pneumonia. In early August the camp was closed and the troops moved back within the Presidio to Camp Merriam and Tennessee Hollow.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

Presidio Once Training Camp For OCS Group

In 1917 the Presidio was used as a training camp for officer candidates. Of the first group of 2,500 candidates, 600 had been chosen to take the field artillery course. But in June, 1917, not a single piece of field artillery could be spared for training purposes. The trainees relied on makeshift and make-believe.

To represent a field piece, stakes were driven into the ground and connected by ropes to form the outline of a cannon while men represented the wheels. "I am a wheel or a caisson pole," the designated man would announce.

The artillery students probably shared a mutual chagrin with the 132-man horseless cavalry unit also in training at the Presidio.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

LAH Was Built To Aid Wounded From Philippines

In order to care for the increasing number of sick and wounded returning from the Philippines in 1898, General Order 182, 1 December, authorized construction of the United States General Hospital (renamed Letterman General Hospital in 1911). While the medical center was under construction, the overflow of patients from the station hospital was housed in the brick barracks (still used as enlisted men's barracks) along the west side of the parade ground.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

180th Year!

Shades Of Former Heroes Stalk Local Historical Scenes

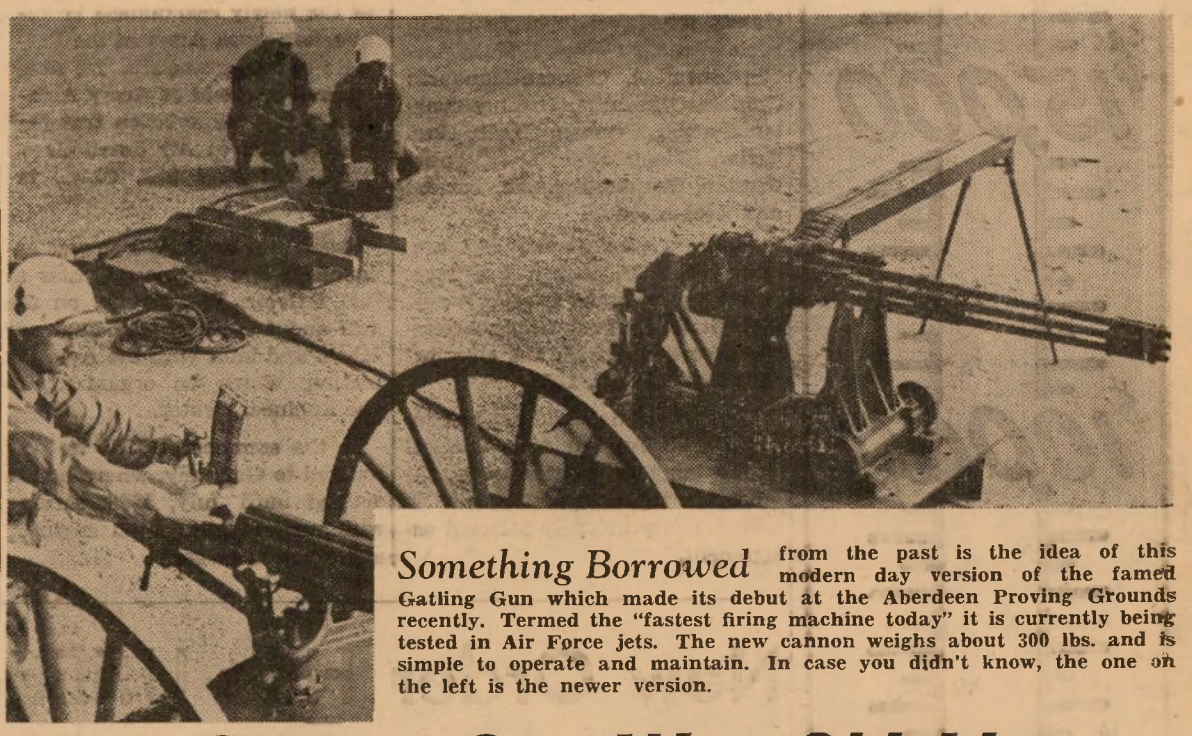
This year, the 180th since the founding of the Presidio by the Spanish, offers an unusual opportunity for guests on Armed Forces Day to recall some of the major events with which the Presidio is associated and to visit some of the monuments that commemorate them.

Primary interest should probably center around Pershing Square which was once the site of General John J. Pershing's home. A plaque marks the location of the house where his wife and children perished in the fire which destroyed it in 1915. Nearby is the marker which indicates the northwest corner of the original presidial enclosure, which in the Spanish and Mexican days was a wall of adobe and stone, twelve feet high. The Presidio Officers' Open Mess generally marks the south side of the old presidian enclosure.

Also located on Pershing Square is a Dawn Redwood tree planted by the Daughters of the American Revolution, whose organization is responsible for the erection of many markers on the Presidio. The ancient cannon on the square and also in front of the officers' club, cast over 250 years ago, are worthy of close study. Other cannon on the post were presented by General William Shafter and were brought from Cuba.

Not far from the flagpole in Pershing Square is the spot on which the American flag was raised for the first time on 9 July, 1846.

Throughout the post there are markers which recall that the Presidio was a training camp during the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, and World Wars I and II. At Inspiration Point the visitor can stand where Anza and Moraga stood while discussing the selection of the sites for the presidio and the fort which would guard the Golden Gate.



Guests may wish to visit the two oldest buildings from the American period, the Post Dispensary, Building 2, completed in 1857, and the old powder magazine, Building 95, erected in 1862.

Perhaps the most interesting relic of the past is Fort Point into which American troops entered in February, 1861, shortly after its completion. On this site once stood the Castillo de San Joaquin, built by the Spanish in 1794, to protect the entrance to the harbor and the anchorage located just off the Fort Point Coast Guard Station.

Nearby can be seen the battery emplacements that were the last word in coastal defenses when Fort Winfield Scott was completed in 1905. Not far away, guided missile batteries protect the city and harbor from air attack. In a few reflective minutes the visitor can cover 180 years in the history of military fortifications.

No visitor should leave the Presidio without entering the beautiful San Francisco National Cemetery, established in 1884, and pausing for a brief period to pay tribute to those members of the Armed Forces who in war maintained the right of the nation to have peace. (E.K.S.)

Early in 1942 a network of barbed wire, machine gun emplacements and anti-aircraft installations were established on the Presidio golf course, Baker Beach and surrounding areas. Cannon were set up on the Marina Green but their presence did not altogether allay the fears of neighborhood owners. For Sale signs appeared in the windows of more than a few Marina Boulevard homes.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

Something Borrowed from the past is the idea of this modern day version of the famed Gatling Gun which made its debut at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds recently. Termed the "fastest firing machine today" it is currently being tested in Air Force jets. The new cannon weighs about 300 lbs. and is simple to operate and maintain. In case you didn't know, the one on the left is the newer version.

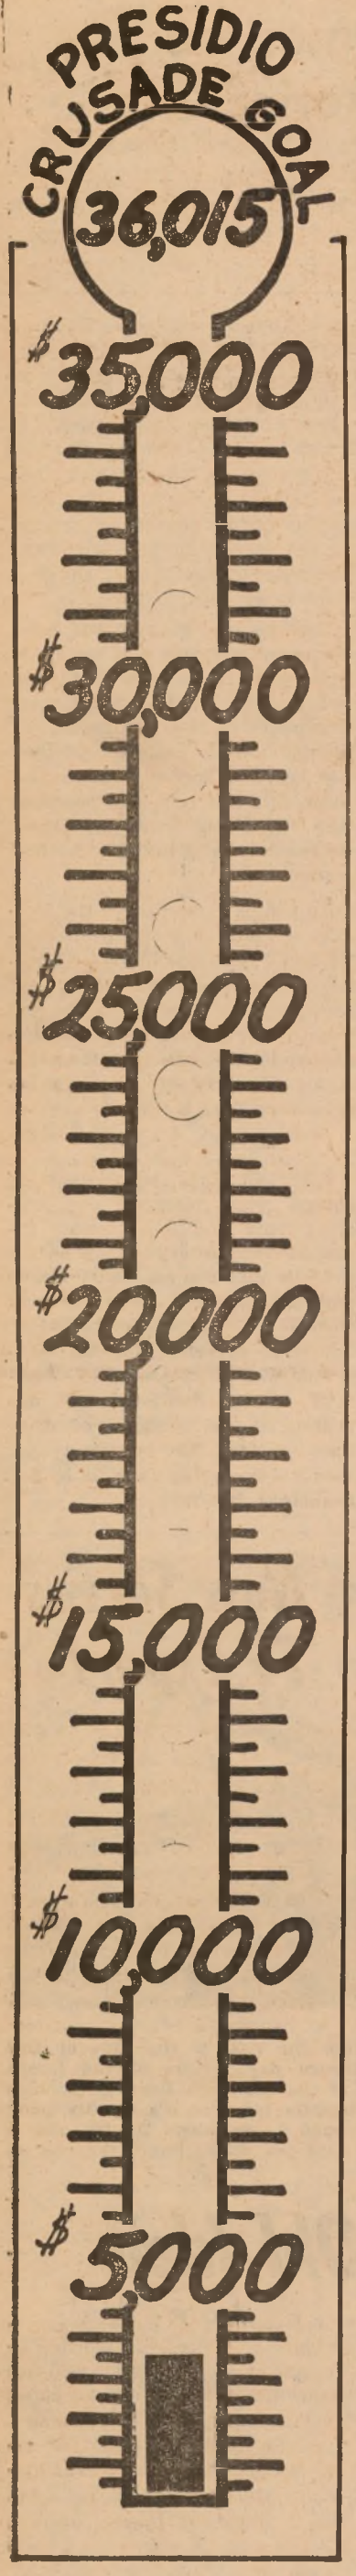
New Gatling Gun Was Old Idea

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★



Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. —The famed Gatling Gun's modern day version, which was unveiled here recently, was developed by General Electric's Aeronautic and Ordnance Department under the sponsorship of Army Ordnance.

Named after Vulcan, ancient Roman God of fire, the new 20 millimeter cannon has two of the same design features as the original Gatling Gun, patented in 1862. The two guns both have a rotating multi-barreled cluster and are externally driven. The Gatling Gun's external power came from human energy as the operator manually turned the crank. The Vulcan's external power comes from electricity or hydraulic fluid.

Army Ordnance officers and General Electric engineers studied every machine gun mechanism patented in the U. S. before selecting the Gatling Gun's design because its rotating cluster of barrels offered the best characteristics for an extremely high rate of fire.

The Gatling Gun was originally designed to defend bridges, buildings and causeways and would fire at the then fantastic rate of about 600 rounds per minute. It was first used as a machine gun by American troops commanded by Lieutenant John H. Parker at San Juan Hill, Santiago De Cuba, July 1, 1898, during the war with Spain.

This new automatic cannon, Vulcan, is easy to operate and maintain and can be field stripped and reassembled in less than 30 minutes. It is the fastest known firing machine gun today. (ANS)

Going Up is the cash temperature of the Presidio's big United Bay Area Crusade thermometer. Latest returns show an increase to almost the $4,000 mark and local committee members expect a high showing this payday.

Steady Climb

NBAC Donations Show Increase As Drive Surges

The thermometer marking financial progress of the Presidio section of Bay Area Crusade in the interests of local needy charities gained several points this week when the Post Chaplain Section and the Post Inspector General Section heated the mercury with their one hundred per cent donations toward the fund drive.

Close to the winner's tape followed the Post S-2 Section with a seventy-one per cent achieved in the charitable venture sponsored by Sixth Army Headquarters in conjunction with the present nationwide civilian and military project to alleviate the sufferings of the sick and underprivileged.

The coming two military pay days are expected to enlarge the harvest of voluntary contributions made to the Bay Area Crusade by personnel of the Presidio.

Some 256 charitable agencies in the San Francisco area are to allocate proceeds from the present financial drive toward economic betterment of orphanages, old people's institutions and for the continuance of social club facilities of the United Service Organizations catering to men and women members of the military service.

SeekNeo-Linguists To Fill Language School's Quota

If you have a hankering to sink your teeth into a good course of Thai, or feel that your background will never be complete until you have added knowledge of Serbo-Croatian (and if you are a company grade officer) then there is most likely a place for you at the Army's Monterey Language school.

Vacancies also exist for FY classes scheduled to begin during period January-June, 1957, in Arabic, Burmese, Chinese-Mandarin Chinese-Cantonese, Czechoslovakian, French, German, Greek, Hungarian, Korean, Polish, Portuguese Persian, Russian, Spanish, Turkish and Viet-Namese.

Officers who qualify and are interested in Army language training are urged to submit applications to Post headquarters in accordance with DA circular 621-19, 10 April, 1956.

This program should not be confused with Foreign Area Specialist Training or considered as the language training prerequisite to a student's previously selected assignment.

Sixth Army Aviator To Head Jet Group

Lt. Colonel Jack W. Ruby, chief of Sixth Army Aviation, is leaving the Presidio to direct the Army's pioneer entry into the jet age.

He will command the Army's first Jet Trainer Test Detachment at the Army Aviation School, Fort Rucker. Ala. The jets which will be delivered to the Army the first of next year are to be T-37 Cessna twin engine jets.

Replacing Colonel Ruby at Sixth Army will be Colonel Frank G. Forrest who has been with CONARC, G-3.

Colonel Ruby, who regrets leaving the Bay Area, says of his new job: "This could develop into a very important factor in the accomplishment of the Army Aviation mission."

One of Colonel Ruby's most exciting experiences in Army Aviation came during the Holland floods in February, 1953. In charge of 14 helicopters, he directed rescue operations which resulted in the rescue of 485 persons.

A native of Mullens, W. Va., Colonel Ruby entered the Army in August, 1941, as a second lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers. He obtained his commission following participation in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va., where he graduated in 1939 with a bachelor of science degree in mining engineering.

During World War II he served in Australia and New Guinea with the 2nd Engineer Amphibious Brigade, and in Australia, New Guinea, Biak Island, the Philippines and Japan with the 41st Infantry Division. He was a regimental plans and operations officer with the engineer brigade, and while serving with the 41st Division was assistant division plans and operations officer for amphibious operations, which included landings at Hollandia, Biak, Zamboanga and the Philippines.

In 1946 Colonel Ruby was assigned to the Engineer Section of the newly reorganized Headquarters Sixth Army at the Presidio of San Francisco. He next entered the field of Army Aviation, receiving aviation training at San Marcos Air Force Base, Tex., and Fort Sill, Okla., in 1947.

From 1948 until 1950 he was assigned to The Engineer Center at Fort Belvoir, Va., serving on the staff and faculty of The Engineer School and later with the Aviation Section, which he organized, at The Engineer Center.

In the summer of 1950 he was ordered to Germany, where he remained until July, 1953, serving with various units as an engineer and aviation officer.

Lt. Col. Jack Ruby

Colonel Ruby went to Korea in the fall of 1954 and served seven months as Senior Aviation Adviser to the Republic of Korea Army and seven months as Chief, Army Aviation Section, Headquarters Eighth Army. Upon his return from Korea in January, 1956, he was assigned to his present post at Sixth Army Headquarters.

Other post-World War II assignments included attendance at The Engineer School, where he graduated from the Officers' Advanced Course in 1948; at The Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., from which he was graduated in 1954, and at The Army Aviation School, then at Fort Sill, where he completed the Instrument and Twin-Engine Course in 1954. He is also a graduate of the Army Helicopter Pilot Training School at San Marcos Air Force Base, having completed the course there in 1948.

Following his graduation from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Colonel Ruby was employed as a mining engineer with the Koppers Coal Co. at Mount Hope, W. Va., in 1939, and with the Virginia Railway at Norfolk, Va., in 1940-1941.

New Type Barracks Slated For Signal Troops At Depot

The initial phase of construction of a $702,200 barracks for Sacramento Signal Depot troops took place Monday morning, at the depot when the first shovel of earth was turned by Congressman John E. Moss, of San Francisco Third District.

The new 263-man reinforced concrete building is expected to be open for occupancy about 1 October, 1957. A three-story barracks with partial basement, the new military unit at Sacramento Signal Depot will feature a company storage and arms room, a day room, six non-commissioned officer rooms, a mail room, commanding officers' section, company officers' room, lounge and squad room. The second and third floors will be similarly equipped, with added non-com rooms, wash rooms and showers.

The kitchen and mess hall wing will have a basement boiler room, a mess hall with 38-man tables, plus a fully-equipped modern kitchen.

The Sacramento Signal Depot has three companies of enlisted men stationed there for training in administration, supply, repair and maintenance of Army communications equipment.

Flu Shots Slated For All Military Personnel In Oct.

Washington — All personnel on active duty within the continental United States are slated to receive influenza shots during the month of October.

Personnel entering the Army from 1 November, 1956, through 15 March, 1957, including anyone coming on active duty for training periods of over 30 days, will also get the vaccine inoculation.

According to Army Circular 40-19, personnel participating in the field studies of the Commission on Influenza at Fort Dix, N. J., and Fort Ord, Calif., will not be required to take the vaccine. The extent of vaccinations at Forts Dix and Ord will be coordinated with the field study directors.(ANS)

Engineers' Nike Expert Wins 2nd Cash Award For New Leveling Device

His second award for a Nike elevator leveling device was won this week by Mr. Everett Gilbert, a ground power equipment repair leaderman for the Post Engineer Section.

Assigned to the Field Maintenance Shop in Sausalito, Mr. Gilbert's suggestion was recognized with a $65.00 check from Sixth Army headquarters, through Lieutenant Colonel D. P. Powers, deputy Post engineer.

The winning recommendation has been forwarded to the Department of the Army for possible wider application.

Mr. Gilbert's earlier suggestion for a somewhat similar device won him $25.00 and is presently under consideration for widespread military use.

Fort Scott's roads and streets were named after artillery officers who served there. In 1923, Lieutenant Colonel John P. Spurr, commanding officer of Fort Scott, selected the names.

New Order Hits Utilities Waste

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The Presidio has declared war on utilities waste, issued a battle plan and put commanders in the field to carry out the program.

Post memorandum 66 explains that "available funds for utilities are limited . . . to meet budget requirements, rigid conservation measures must be exercised."

Line of command for the operation include a Post Conservation Officer and Assistant Post Conservation Officer designated by Post headquarters. They will be assisted in the field by Unit Conservation Officers appointed by each unit commander and section chief.

The conservation officers will conduct an aggressive campaign to make all members of this command conservation-minded; make periodic inspection and keep a record of violations, take on-the-spot corrective action and report repeated violations to the DPC.

The conservation corps, during daily inspections, will be on the lookout for burning lights and heaters not necessary for efficient operation. Only bulbs of minimum required wattage are to be used.

Faucets and taps will habitually be shut off tight. And leaky faucets will be reported. Lawns will be sprinkled only in accordance to directives published in the Post Bulletin. Government-owned vehicles will be washed only at authorized unit or motor pool wash racks; no privately owned vehicles will be washed on post except those owned by persons living on the post.

Windows are to be opened only to the minimum for necessary ventilation, unoccupied buildings are not to be heated and no building will be heated above 72 degrees.

The third Monday of each month conservation officers will meet to discuss problems and pass on instructions for winning the Presidio's battle against utility waste.

Survivor's Benefits Bill and the best means of presenting pertinent information on the new bill to local troops got a thorough going over at a special meeting this week. Members of the special committee include (l. to r.) CWO Ernest W. Childers, Lt. Col. P. E. Yerkes Capt. Charles A. Wells, Capt. Harry K. Bjornberg, Car L. George, 1st Lt. Eugene L. Hudson and Capt. Webster Parker.

Local Committee Meets Here On Survivors Benefits Act

So that the officers and EM of the Presidio may be informed as to the full meaning and impact of the Servicemen's and Veteran's Survivors Benefits Act, the Deputy Post Commander called for a committee to investigate all points of the Act thoroughly.

At present, after its first meeting this week, the committee is busy gathering and evaluating all available material on the subject.

Once the information is in and evaluated it is tentatively scheduled to be disseminated to officers via the monthly officers' call. Enlisted men will receive the facts and explanation of the Survivors Bill through their TI & E topic.

Members of the committee are Lt. Colonel P. E. Yerkes, assistant Post F & AO; Captain Charles A. Wells, assistant Post TI & E officer; Captain Harry K. Bjornberg, AG section Sixth Army; Captain Webster Parker, Post military personnel officer; Carl L. George, field representative, Social Security Administration; 1st Lieutenant Eugene L. Hudson, Post insurance officer, and CWO Ernest W. Childers, Post assistant personnel officer.

The Army is the versatile member of the defense team with a flexible system of weapons at its command. While possessing atomic weapons of great power, it retains the ability to vary the application of military force to the needs of the moment, to make "measured" rather than "mass" retaliation.

Developed by a team of Columbia University biochemists, an antidote for nerve gas has been discovered which may prove useful in treating muscular nerve diseases. It may also act as an antidote for insecticide poisoning. The new chemical is called 2-pyridine aldoxime methiodide or 2-PAM.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

How To Be 'U'?

Social Conduct Class Teaches 'Pointers How To Be 'Couth'

West Point, N.Y.—Besides learning the arts of war, cadets here are getting inside tips on how to be "couth."

Translated from Academy slang, this means the future officers are cautioned against uncouth—rude and inconsiderate—habits.

An article in a recent issue of Ladies' Home Journal explains how this is done in a nine-hour Social Conduct and Military Courtesy course.

Some examples: Don't butter a whole piece of bread at one time but do eat each spoonful of ice cream at one gulp; shake hands firmly but don't use the occasion to show off your strength; don't drink water while you have food in your mouth (it leaves grease on the glass).

One instructor covers such points in a home movie that shows the right and wrong ways to act when invited out for dinner. Students get a laugh out of the fork-waving, food-gobbling bad example—and learn the right way to maneuver a finger bowl in the second part of the show.

The course covers correspondence, entertainment, dancing and other subjects calculated to turn cadets into officers and gentlemen.

Each phase of the training is given by a different officer—all combat veterans. In addition to the movies, they use "audience participation" tricks such as acting out introductions with plebes taking the parts of officers, civilians and even prom dates.

Academy officials, proud of inquiries from businessmen who want to use the course for their training programs, believe the modern officer must know everything from manners to marksmanship. (AFPS)

OAT Employee's Idea Wins Biggest Cash Award Given Locally

A woman's suggestion, submitted to the Awards committee of Oakland Army Terminal, has been honored by nationwide adoption of the idea by the Army and by payment of the largest winning cash award ever made by the Transportation Corps in the San Francisco Bay area.

Winner of the prize, a check for $375.00, was Miss Alma Soares, employed in the Pacific Personal Property Service Center, Oakland Army Terminal. Her idea, that port-call date be made an integral part of the address placed on military baggage en route to Army terminals for overseas shipment, is credited with saving the Army $30,000.00 worth of labor, time, and money.

The port call date on baggage enables shipping agencies to identify promptly the ship and sailing time involving the soldier's travel. Under the former system, it was necessary to search numerous lists with only the owner's name as a lead.

Another award of $150.00 was made jointly to Leroy Anding and Oliver Barconey, OAT employes for their recommendation that each piece of personal property coming in from overseas be stencilled on two places, side and end, as a means of expediting fast check-in at receiving warehouses.

Transmission System Links Nation's Signal Corps Depots

Key Army Signal Corps depots throughout the nation and the Army Signal Supply Agency in Philadelphia have been linked together by use of an electronic data transmission system forming a network which will speed the reporting of logistical requirements, the Department of the Army announced recently.

The Signal Depots tied into the new system are located at Sacramento, California; Decatur, Illinois; Lexington, Kentucky, and Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania.

By means of this network, information on stock levels of Army signal supplies is electronically interchanged between depots through "transceivers," using ordinary telephone circuits, that transmit and receive data on punched cards. This interchange of data provides information upon which action can be taken to assure that an adequate supply of parts and equipment for signal "customers," such as the Infantry and Artillery, can be provided. The system speeds the requisition of such supplies, and eliminates tedious paper work. It takes only a few minutes to complete work that formerly required several days.

At the close of each day, supply requirements of "shortages" are tabulated electronically on punched cards and placed on the "transceiver." At the Tobyhanna depot, for example, this data is transmitted to the Lexington depot, which fills the requisition. If the item is not available, the request is transmitted to the depot at Decatur. If neither of these depots can provide the needed items, Tobyhanna and the Supply Agency in Philadelphia are advised and a query is made, using the logistical network, to obtain the needed items at the Sacramento depot. Failing that, a procurement is initiated at Philadelphia.

Latest Word in Signal Corps efficiency is the "transceiver" key machine in Signal's new Logistical Reporting Network. Here Major General J. D. O'Connell, Chief Signal Officer, discussed the units' operation with WAC Private First Class Vivian K. Hudgins.

The entire process—interchange of requirements and stock records—is handled electronically by the transceivers during the night. During the day, the circuits are used for ordinary telephone communication.

The logistical network has been extended to the Signal Corps Stock Control Point at Orleans, France, which assists in assuring that there is an adequate stock of signal supplies in Europe.

The network is a forerunner of more advanced electronic data processing-communication network systems presently under study and development by the Army Signal Corps.

The results of Signal Corps work in the new field of electronic data processing will be useful to the entire Army as well as the Navy and Air Force.

The end product is the faster and more accurate handling of personnel and logistical data. The system has many other tactical and strategic applications for the Army of tomorrow. Utilization of these electronic data processing systems in the near future will mean more efficient operations and the release of clerical and administrative personnel for combat.

Ex-Marine Hero Now Serves Army As Raido-TV Expert

A 29-year-old veteran of 15 years' service in the Army and Marine Corps has been assigned as a radio-television noncommissioned officer in the Sixth Army's Information Section.

Sergeant First Class George Glassick joined the Marine Corps in 1941 at the age of 13, and during the next four years participated in five invasions and 10 campaigns in the Pacific Theater of Operations as a member of the 4th Raider Battalion and 8th Marine Regiment, 2nd Marine Division.

During this time he was awarded the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism in action on Okinawa, the Silver Star for gallantry in action on Tarawa, the Navy Commendation Ribbon for service on Tarawa and the Purple Heart with four oak leaf clusters for wounds received in action.

Discharged from the Marine Corps in December, 1945, he reenlisted in the Army in November, 1946, and began a five-year tour of duty in Germany. He served with the U.S. Constabulary Force and then the 1st Infantry Division until 1949 when he was assigned to the Armed Forces Network, engaging in radio work in Frankfurt, Munich and Stuttgart until October, 1951.

Upon his return to the United States at that time, Sergeant Glassick was assigned for several months to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., as a small arms instructor, then transferred to the Armed Forces Radio Service in New York City.

In November, 1952, he went to Korea where he served with the 534th Beachmaster Battalion. He returned to the United States in March, 1953, and was then sent to Panama, where he remained until August, 1954, serving with the Caribbean Forces Network.

He was then assigned to the 1st Infantry Division which had returned from Germany and was stationed at Fort Riley, Kans., and remained with that unit until he reported for duty at Sixth Army Headquarters last month.

Some Changes

The infantry division has undergone some changes since World War II. One is the inclusion of two tank battalions equipped with the M-48 medium tank mounting a 90-millimeter gun instead of the single tank battalion that was separately attached to the division in World War II.

Today's Army division can deliver about 80 per cent more fire power than its WWII counterpart.

The Army operates 77 troop information radio broadcasting stations overseas.

Info Topic Will Discuss Communist Who's, Why's

"A spectre is haunting Europe — the spectre of Communism," wrote Karl Marx and Frederick Engels in 1848. Today, little more than 100 years since the Communist Manifesto, that spectre haunts the entire world.

"Who Are the Communists and Why?" will be the subject of next week's information topic. What makes the Communist tick? What kinds of people become Communists and why are they willing to betray their own nations to the Soviet Union?

Since World War II, Communism has swept across the Eurasian land mass, luring from Prague to Peiping over 800 million people to its cause. The spectre hovers large over France and Italy. Even in the United States, a tiny core of perhaps 25,000 Communists look for faith and direction to the Kremlin.

The information topic will consider primarily the problem of Communists in non-Communist countries. In determining what kinds of people become Communists, the information topic draws a line between the hard core professional leadership and the rank and file membership.

Much the same the world over, the hard core Communists are the top brass of each party organization, the tight-knit professional elite, committed to the cause with a fanatical religious fervor. Although the initiate to the hard core may join the party out of sincerely idealistic motives, he is ultimately transformed into a callous and unquestioning defender of the faith.

The rank and file of the Communist Party everywhere are usually recruited from among the young, according to the information topic, from youth who have not yet found meaning or direction in life. The topic will deal with four major groups to whom Communism has greatest appeal.

They are: a) the weak and maladjusted, both psychologically and socially; b) idealists, seeking a cause beyond themselves and the nation; c) nationalist-minded citizens of underdeveloped nations striving to achieve the abundance which more advanced nations have long enjoyed; and d) protestors against the status quo, as represented in the large Communist parties of France and Italy.

Bi-Monthly Parade Test Is Slated For This Afternoon

Presidio troops march to the music of the Sixth Army band during the bi-weekly Retreat Parade today, 1600 hours.

Commander of Troops, Lt. Colonel Verne E. Marsden, will be assisted by first battalion commander, Major Lloyd W. Strongen, and second battalion commander, Major Robert A. Hamilton.

Companies marching in the first battalion are Co. D (6002) Hq. Co. (6000), and Co. A (6002). Second battalion troops come from Co. C (6002) Provisional Co. (20th Engr. Gp.) and 561st Engineer Co. (Port Const.).

Civilian and military personnel not required at their duties are encouraged to attend the ceremony as spectators.

New Post Adjutant Lieutenant Colonel E. K. Matson gets some first hand organizational information from Colonel Charles G. Rau, Post Executive Officer. Colonel Matson reported to his new assignment from Ft. Lawton, Washington.

Name New Adjutant For Post

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, this week announced the assignment of Lieutenant Colonel Enor Matson as Post Adjutant.

In the military service for the past 15 years, Colonel Matson came to the Presidio from Fort Lawton, Washington, where he was Executive Officer for the Reassignment Station processing overseas troops. Prior to that time, Colonel Matson was a staff member of the Adjutant General Section, AFFE Headquarters, in Camp Zama, Japan.

The newly-assigned Post adjutant served in the Southwest Pacific during World War II and was a post-war Adjutant General staff member in Hawaii. He received the Bronze Star Medal while stationed in AFFE headquarters.

A native of Helena, Montana, Colonel Matson and his wife are the parents of a son, now attending the University of Washington, in Seattle. The family is currently awaiting permanent living quarters in the Presidio.

New Greens Make Debut At Post QM

The new green Army uniforms are now on sale at the Post Quartermaster Sales Store, at a cost of $37.70 for the full uniform cut from the same bolt of cloth; or, through purchase of a separate coat and trousers cut from different bolts of cloth of the same shade and texture. The new uniform may be purchased at a cost of $24.00 for the coat and $7.55 for the trousers, a saving of slightly less than five dollars. The new uniform cap costs $4.90.

Only a small supply of matching coats and trousers at the lesser cost are on hand at QM this week but an extra supply is slated to arrive during the coming weeks.

Post Quartermaster also announced that braid is now on hand for modification of officers' uniforms.

Servicemen are reminded that the same shoes, socks, shirt and tie being utilized now with the older uniform are still authorized for wear with the new Army greens.

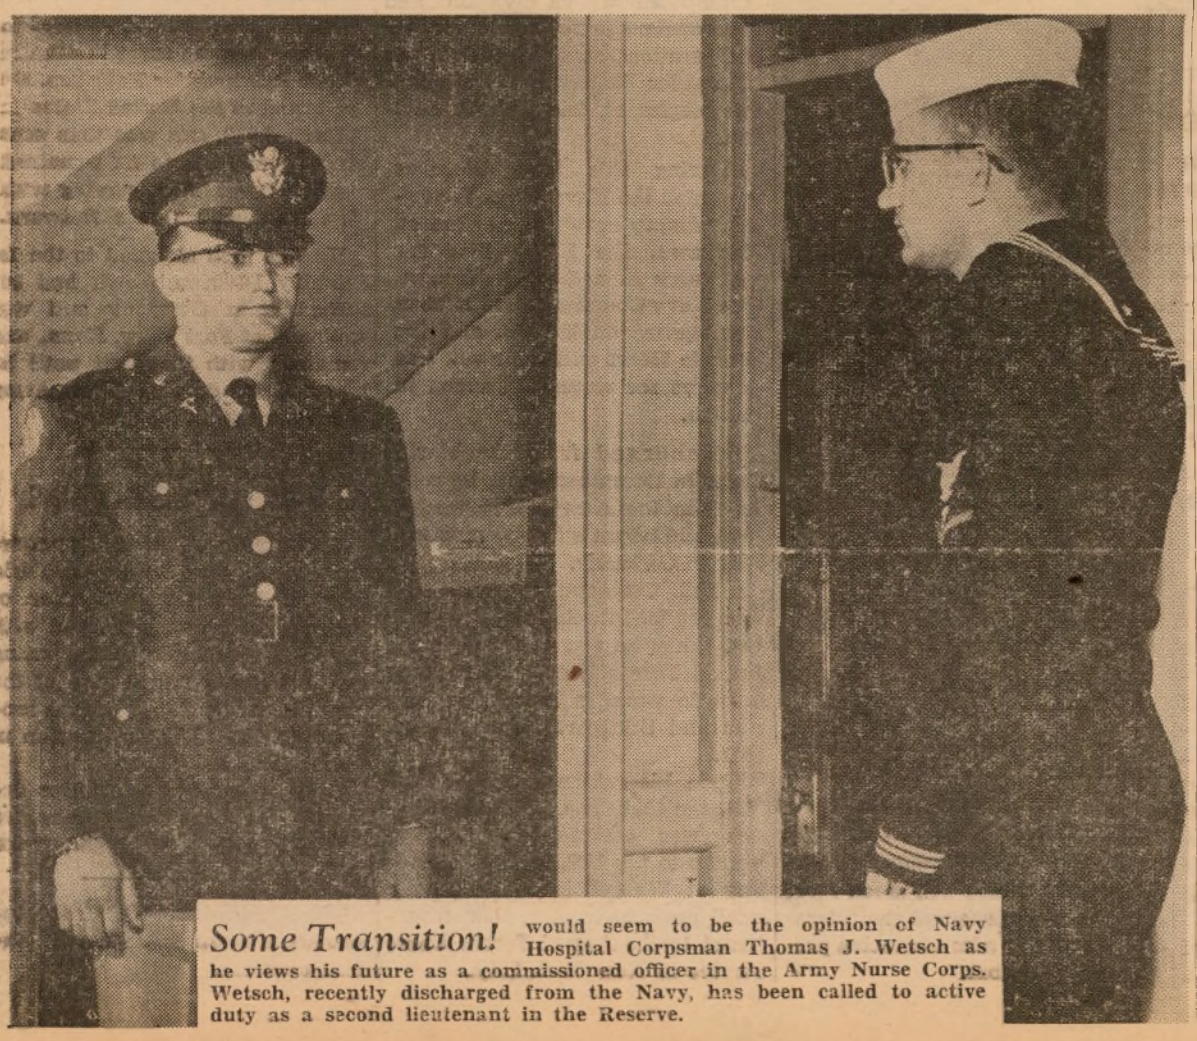
In 1859 the garrison at the Presidio consisted of two companies of 90 men each from the 6th Infantry Regiment.

Ft. Lewis: Adieu 71st; Welcome Fourth!

A complicated gyroscope movement involving three infantry divisions and the transportation of more than 15,000 troops and dependents reaches its culmination at Fort Lewis today.

In a combination welcome and retirement ceremony the 71st Infantry division will bow out from active duty and the 4th Infantry division will step in as the ranking Army unit in the Northwest.

The summer-long three-way troop exchange began when the 4th dropped to color guard strength after five years of NATO service in Germany only to reappear at Fort Lewis in the wake of the departure of the 2nd division for Alaska.



In Alaska, the 2nd took over the duties of the 71st, which retires today. Former commander of the 71st, Major General Paul L. Freeman, Jr., will assume the commanding position with the 4th at Fort Lewis.

Coaching the First Army track and field squad in the All-Army championships at Fort MacArthur, Calif., was William McCurdy, Harvard's track and field coach. He's a lieutenant colonel in the reserves.

The Army does not forget its old soldiers after they retire. It remains interested in their welfare, and wants them to serve in their civilian communities as loyal, informed. representatives of the Army.

Fanciest TI&E Board at the Presidio is the claim members of C Company (6002) commanded by Capt. Edgar Unthank, make for this new masterpiece. Duty NCO for C Company, Master Sergeant Andrew McKay, who designed and built the board is shown here pointing to the center map which has pins designating the key news spots of the world. Ribbons go from the map to news clippings below.

Some Transition! would seem to be the opinion of Navy Hospital Corpsman Thomas J. Wetsch as he views his future as a commissioned officer in the Army Nurse Corps. Wetsch, recently discharged from the Navy, has been called to active duty as a second lieutenant in the Reserve.

I LOOKED RIGHT, by Elizabeth Denham. During World War II, Miss Denham was employed by the British War Department to help English soldiers or aviators escape from their German captors. In this true account of her experiences, she has used fictitious names in order to protect people still alive. An untold epic of World War II.

THE WALTER HAGEN STORY, by "The Haig Himself," who always said "I never wanted to be a millionaire. I just wanted to live like one." During the 20 years that he ruled the golfing world as king he made a record never even approached by any other golfer—the winning of a major tournament every year.

RETURN OF LONO, by Oswald Bushnell. Much of this story of Hawaii at the time of Captain Cook's last disastrous voyage is concerned with religious differences between Cook and Bligh (of "Mutiny on the Bounty"), a strict Calvinist who disapproves of Cook's allowing the natives to deify him and of the sailors who consort with native women.

I AM FIFTEEN—AND I DON'T WANT TO DIE, by Christine Arnothy. Hungarian civilians caught in the 1944 bombardment of Budapest, Christine Arnothy, her family, the people in her apartment house shared days of terror, filth, and starvation. They managed to escape—first to their country home and later to Vienna.

THE AGE OF FIGHTING SAIL, by C. S. Forester. The story of the Naval War of 1812 and how three brilliant commanders, Rodgers, Decatur, and Hull, and the about four ships of the U. New Top Noncoms at Headquarters Company (6002) are First Sergeant M/Sgt. Frank S. Datner (right) and Field First M/Sgt. Robert W. Smith (left). These two sergeants recently assumed their new duties at the Deuce, the company which houses the enlisted personnel of Post Headquarters.

New 6002 Top Kicks Have Had Busy, Varied Careers

The two top noncoms at Headquarters Company (6002) —assigned recently—go by the title of "old soldiers" and are proud of it.

First Sergeant, M/Sgt. Frank S. Datner has 26 years of Army service behind him. And for 15 of those years he has served as a first sergeant.

Field First, M/Sgt. Robert W. Smith, who just transferred from C Company, 505th Military Police Battalion, insists that he is first—an infantryman. He has 15 years of Army service to his credit.

Sergeant Datner, who has spent the majority of his time overseas has been stationed in Hawaii, Panama, China, Philippines, France, Germany and Italy.

His favorite overseas tour was his last one—SHAPE Headquarters, Paris, France. He hastens to explain that the attraction for the Paris tour was the opportunity provided for travel to all parts of Europe.

The new Deuce First Sergeant saw Second World War action with the 5th Infantry Division in Italy. He wears the Combat Infantryman's Badge, Bronze Star, and "8 or 9" theater ribbons.

Field First Smith, who was a first sergeant before coming to Headquarters Company (6002), saw action in the South Pacific during World War II and in Korea, 1950-52. He just returned from duty with the MPs in Eniwetok, Marshall Islands atomic proving grounds.

This sergeant, who rates the Presidio as "one of the Army's most beautiful posts," says his finest tour of duty was in Austria, 1952-55. He was in the mountain troops and hiked the length of the Italian and Swiss Alps.

Sergeant Smith, who has battle stars from Korea, the Pacific and the Philippines, wears the Bronze Star with cluster, the Purple Heart with two clusters, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge with star.

Both sergeants are married and live on Post. And both are natives of San Francisco.

Our new Army is not wedded to the past. There is no rigidity in its thinking. There is no rigidity either in its ideas or in the means by which we are translating those ideas into combat effectiveness.

Congress Ups Limit On Property Claims From Armed Forces

Washington — Public Law 571, passed by the 84th Congress, raised from $2,500 to $6,500 the limit on claims for loss of personal property by members of the Armed Forces.

Any claim previously settled for $2,500 solely because of the maximum limitation can be reopened and reconsidered in accordance with the new act.

Claims submitted for an amount in excess of the old maximum which were approved for less than $2,500 payment are not included in the amended legislation.

Claimants seeking new settlement, including former servicemen and next of kin, must make a written request before 7 June, 1957, to the agency which adjusted the original claim.

Members of the Armed Forces must make similar requests through channels. (AFPS)

VA Details Survivor Benefits

Veterans Administration recently spelled out the many changes made in the GI insurance and indemnity programs by the Survivor Benefits Act recently enacted as Public Law 881.

Effective 1 January, 1957, the automatic indemnity against death in active service or within 120 days after separation (sometimes called the "$10,000 free insurance") ends under the new law.

It will be replaced by a liberalized program of death benefits for dependents of deceased servicemen. The new law revises death compensation for widows, children and dependent parents, provides Social Security coverage on a contributory basis for those in service, and revises payment of the six-month death gratuity.

Also ended effective 1 January, 1957, under the new law, will be the right to apply for the 5-year term nonconvertible GI insurance policy now available to eligible post-Korea veterans and six-month enlistees within 120 days after their discharge.

VA said it is authorized by law to accept applications for the 5-year nonconvertible term policies through 31 December, 1956, providing (1) the applications are accompanied by the proper premium; (2) the applications are received by VA on or before 31 December, 1956, or are postmarked on or before that date, or (3) the applications are delivered by that date to an authorized representative of any of the uniformed services.

Not affected by the new law, VA said, is the special non-participating term or permanent plan insurance for the service-connected disabled. Disabled veterans released from service on or after 25 April, 1951, still may apply after 1 January, 1957, for the special non-participating insurance within one year from the date VA finds their disabilities to be service-con-

Another GI insurance provision which ends effective 1 January, 1957, under the new law is that which permits certain waiver of premiums for policyholders who are in active service for 31 days or more after 25 April, 1951.

VA said applications for this in-service waiver can be accepted only through 31 December, 1956, under the new law.

All such in-service waivers in effect 31 December, 1956, may be continued thereafter, but VA said a proviso in the new law restricts the benefits that certain dependents of policyholders may get if the policyholders die on or after 1 May, 1957, and their policies are under in-service waiver at time of death.

Dependents involved in these cases are the widows, children and parents of the deceased policyholders. These dependents, in such cases, will not be entitled to the dependency and indemnity compensation of the new law; they will be entitled only to VA death compensation, which, in some cases, may be lower than the new benefits.

Policyholders who wish to protect their dependents against this eventuality may cancel their in-service waiver before 1 May, 1957. They also may continue their insurance in force thereafter by paying premiums.

VA said instructions on how servicemen may cancel their in-service waiver and keep their policies in force through premium payments will be disseminated through the Armed Forces.

Still another GI insurance provision which ends 1 January, 1957, under the new law is that which permits holders of permanent plans of GI insurance to apply for the cash surrender value of their policies while they are in active service on or after 25 April, 1951, and thereby become covered by the $10,000 free death indemnity, with the privilege of reinstating or securing new insurance after service.

Under the new law, which is effective 1 January, 1957, any person whose policy was surrendered for cash after entry into active service and who still is on active duty may obtain, either while in active service or within 120 days after separation, a new permanent plan of insurance at the premium for his attained age on the same plan and not in excess of the amount surrendered, or he may reinstate his surrendered policy by the payment of the required reserve and the premium for the current month. No medical examination is required.

VA warned these former policyholders that since they will not be covered by the $10,000 free indemnity on or after 1 January, 1957, they should consider taking out new GI insurance or reinstating their old policies effective on or after that date if they wish the extra protection of GI insurance thereafter.

Another GI insurance provision affected by the new law involves World War I or II five-year term policies which expire while the policyholders are in active service after 25 April, 1951, or within 120 days of their separation from service.

In such a case, under the old law, a new term policy could be obtained by the person within 120 days after separation.

Under the new law, this privilege applies only to those term policies which expire before 1 January, 1957, and application for a new policy may be made thereafter either while the person is in continuous active service or within 120 days of his separation.

The new law adds a new GI insurance provision covering only five-year term policies of National Service Life Insurance, whether of the convertible World War II type or of the nonconvertible post-Korea type.

Under the old law, which became effective 23 July, 1953, these term policies could not be in a state of lapse at the end of the five-year term period and qualify for automatic renewal.

Under the new law, this requirement is relaxed to the extent that the five-year term of any policy which has lapsed because of failure to pay either or both of the last monthly installments is automatically renewed for another five-year term and the policy then may be reinstated.

VA said the new provision is effective retroactively to 23 July, 1953. It thus affects any five-year term NSLI policy which was lapsed at the expiration of the five-year term since that date because either or both of the last two monthly premiums were unpaid.

VA said it will send reinstatement applications and instructions to those policyholders who lapsed their insurance in the last two months of a term period since 23 July, 1953; therefore, affected policyholders should not write or otherwise make inquiry about their policies for at least a month so VA may complete the job as quickly as possible.

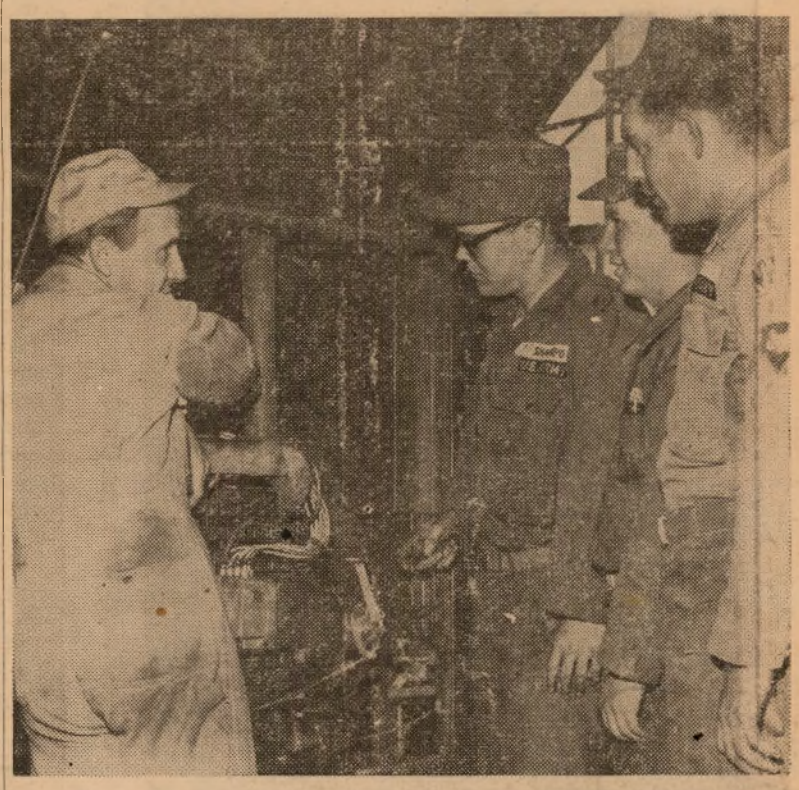
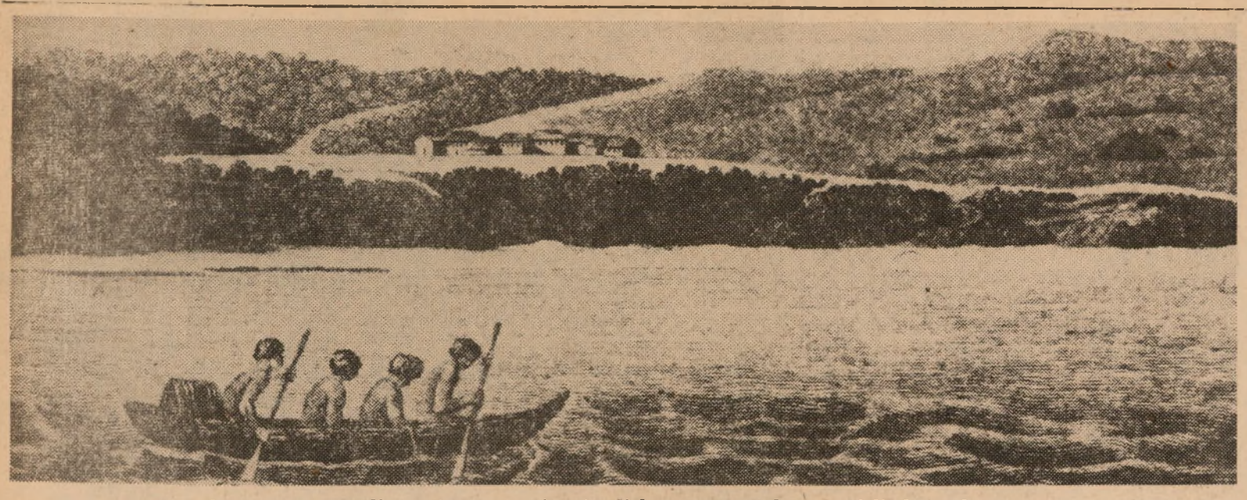
Army Helicopter Carries Airplane 345 Miles In Test



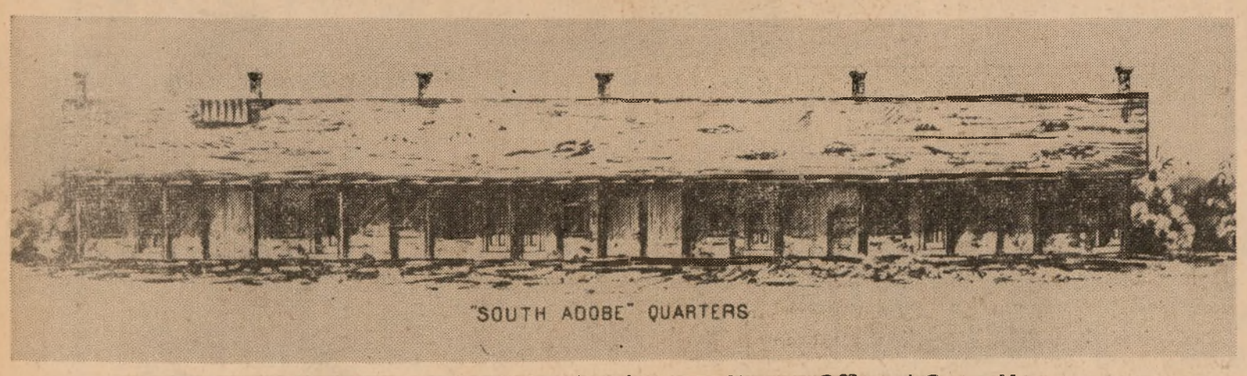
Ft. Sill, Okla.—The Army's largest transport helicopter, the Sikorsky H-34, has successfully carried a 1,600-pound 19 airplane a distance of 345 miles.

The lift from Gary AFB, San Marcos, Tex., to this base marked the first time an airplane had been carried cross-country by a 'copter. It proved the giant 'copter could salvage an entire aircraft rather than just a few parts.



Lieutenant Col. Charles Ernest, commander of the provisional aviation unit here, called the action "one of the hottest things Army aviation has done to date."

The Sikorsky was piloted by CWO Billy I. Webster. He reported no trouble during the flight.



The L-19 was carried in a sling, making the operation look much like an eagle transporting its prey. (AFPS).

Colorful Figures Have Commanded

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Famous Military Leaders Have Been Part Of Fabulous Record

In its 180 years of history, the Presidio has been the headquarters for many colorful general officers. Many of the early American commanders served heroically during the Civil War and the many Indian campaigns of the 1870's and 1880's. Most of the later commanders saw duty in World War I or World War II.

Major General William R. Shafter, who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery during the Civil War, commanded the Presidio in 1896 and 1897. Before his retirement in 1901, he served as commander of the Department of California.

Perhaps the most colorful of all the generals who served at the Presidio was John J. "Blackjack" Pershing. Pershing achieved his national reputation while serving in the Philippines against the insurrectionists. Returning to the Philippines three times, he finally defeated the rebels in 1913.

While at the Presidio in 1914 and 1915, Pershing commanded the Eighth Brigade. Units of Pershing's command participated in the expedition against Pancho Villa along the Mexican border. While on the Mexican border in 1915, his home at the Presidio burned to the ground killing his wife and three daughters. Only his son, Warren, survived. As a result of this tragedy Congress appropriated money to improve the living quarters of military personnel.

After leading the Allies to victory in World War I, Pershing was promoted to permanent general of the armies of the United States. Before he began his new job as Army chief of staff (1921-1924), Pershing revisited the Presidio in 1920.

Some of the more recent commanding generals also have impressive backgrounds. General Mark Clark, who headed the Sixth Army in 1947-1948, held a number of major commands during the Second World War. General Clark played a leading role in planning the invasion of North Africa. After the successful Italian campaign and the termination of war in Europe, Clark headed the occupation of Austria. Presently General Clark is superintendent of The Citadel, a military academy in Virginia.

Two recent Sixth Army commanding generals saw their war service in the Far East. General Joseph Stilwell was Commanding General of the China-Burma-India theatre from 1942 to 1944. After the cessation of hostilities, Stilwell returned to the United States to head the Sixth Army upon its activation in March, 1946, at the Presidio. Stilwell died at Letterman Army Hospital in October, 1946.

Another Far Eastern commander, Lieutenant General Albert C. Wedemeyer, was Comanding General of the Sixth Army from 1949 to 1951. Wedemeyer commanded United States forces in the China theatre from 1942 to 1944.

Touchy Business

The presence of British, French, and Russian naval units in San Francisco Bay during the Civil War, lent a continuous note of suspense.

When the guns on Alcatraz fired at the British admiral's vessel, approaching without identifying itself, the already cool Anglo-American relations were further strained. Relations with the French were tense, because of the support given to Maximilian in Mexico by Napoleon III.

The Russians, however, were warmly received. At that time it was widely believed that the presence of Russian warships in New York and San Francisco forestalled British intervention in the Civil War.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

Soldier's Fortune

During the California gold rush, soldiers who received furloughs and went to the mines were occasionally very fortunate. Private John K. Haggerty, 3d Artillery, returned with sixty pounds of gold worth $15,000. Another soldier on a twenty-day furlough made more money in a week at the mines than he could in a five-year enlistment.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

Three Top Historians Compile Key Record

A history of the Presidio of San Francisco, one of the Nation's most colorful military establishments for 180 years, has been completed, Major Earle K. Stewart, post T. I. and E. officer, said yesterday.

Compiled by Major Stewart, Sp3 William Cohn and Pfc. Sanders F. Rosenblum, the 25,000-word history was ordered into being by DPC Colonel Carl E. Lundquist and covers the period from 1776 to 1956.

The history, illustrated with almost 100 lithographs, photographs and maps, is titled, "The Presidio of San Francisco, 1776-1956," includes 80 to 90 pages of texts.

Beginning with the Spanish efforts to settle the San Francisco Bay Area, the history covered the Presidio's growth through the decades and is divided into three sections: (1) the Presidio under Spain and Mexico, (2) the formative years up to 1898 and (3) the station's role in the twentieth century.

Under the Spanish and Mexicans, the history of the post i ne of establishment of the military and fortification of the Bay Area against foreign encroachment.

Once California became part of the Union in 1850, the fortifications were extended to rebuff any possible Confederate attack from the sea during the Civil War. After the war, the defenses were further improved, with the physical description of the post's growth the high point of this part of the history.

The final period, the twentieth century, is, strangely enough, the period least known. The training functions and the continued coastal defense improvements, often neglected in past accounts of the Presidio's history, were extremely important to the security of the Nation and the West Coast.

In addition to the text, the history includes an appendix listing all the important Presidio events, and another listing all the more than 200 commanding officers.

Major Stewart, Cohn and Rosenblum picked up where Captain Nelson H. Holderman, who wrote a limited account of the Presidio's history from 1919 to his retirement in 1924, left off.

The three historians, moving into the Sixth Army Reference Library warehouse, set up their workshop for the four-month job. They dug materials, often difficult to find and obtain, from old ledgers, private files and long forgotten primary and secondary sources.

The most difficult problem the historians came up against was the selection of the photographs. They scanned more than 400 pictures, cutting the number down to the near 100 used.

The proposed cover for the history is one of the outstanding features of the work. It is a recent aerial view of the post taken by the Sixth Army Signal Lab. Nearly every building on the post and Fort Scott can be clearly seen and identified.

Major Dana Crissy

Crissy Field Named After Famed Pilot

The Presidio constructed its own landing field in 1919 when Major Henry (Hap) Arnold selected a site, now Crissy Field, and became its first commander.

Major Arnold was later to become commanding general of the Army Air Force and one of the nation's greatest proponents of military air power.

The field was completed in time to play a role in the Army's demonstration transcontinental flight of 1919. On the same day that a team of Army fliers left the East Coast for San Francisco, a flight of DeHavillands took off from the Presidio to fly to the East Coast.

Major Dana H. Crissy, one of the young pilots making the eastward flight, was killed when his plane crashed near Salt Lake City. In his honor Crissy Field was named and dedicated, 3 November, 1919.

Seems Like Today!

During the time of the construction of Fort Point, wages were high in keeping with the high cost of living in San Francisco. The master mason was paid $250 a month, masons, bricklayers and stone cutters received $5 a day, carpenters $4 and laborers $2. By contrast an infantry private in 1858 drew $11 a month, a corporal $13 and a 1st sergeant $20. Fuel and quarter allowances were $10 per month; rations 75 cents a day.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

kind in the Army. The 850 men of the 30th are occupied with surveying, map compilation and map reproduction, both overseas and in the states. The 30th is supported by a large air wing that lists 60 aircraft.

Also in the 30th are a geodedic unit, a model making unit and an occupation group that deals with determining exact locations of points.

The 30th Antiaircraft Defense Group, commanded by Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, with headquarters at Fort Barry, has the mission of supplying antiaircraft defense to the Bay Area plus Travis and Castle Air Force bases. The Group, whose primary weapon is the Nike rocket, encompasses sixth battalions and 30 battery size units.

Colonel Albert L. Hettrich commands the 46th Ordnance Group. It supports Sixth Army in training and inspecting activities and performs administration duties for its detachments. The 10 detachments under the 46th perform a variety of services that include fire control instrument repair, ordnance guided missile repair and explosive ordnance disposal.

The 505th Military Police battalion, which is presently undergoing deactivation, has been at the Presidio for four years. Lt. Colonel Fred C. Smith is commander of the 505th, which includes four companies. Company C just recently returned from a six-month tour at the atomic proving grounds, Eniwetok, the Marshall Islands.

Directly under Post headquarters, commanded by Deputy Post Commander Carl E. Lundquist, are the station complement units of (6002). Among these 14 units are Headquarters Company, which contains the personnel working directly in Post headquarters, Company C housing technical and transportation personnel, Company D, the Wac detachment, and Company A, the Sixth Army Honor Guard.

Officers and men of Sixth Army headquarters and personnel of Sixth Army Flight detachment are assigned to (6000) units.

Other units considered part of the Presidio family are the Sixth Army Band, 16th Base Post Office, 199th Aerial Photo Interpreter Det., Armed Forces Courier service (8921) and the California Military District.

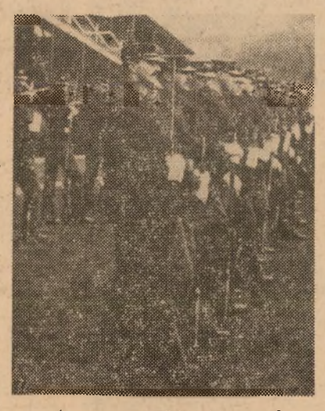
Presidio Has Played Key Role In S.F. Community

The Presidio has been an integral part of San Francisco for as long as the city has existed, but never more than today has its contribution been more vital or worthwhile.



Never has the Presidio been more alert and active as a defense agent. Today the NIKE rocket is poised like a giant sword by the 30th AAA group to sweep the skies clear of any threat. Nearly three dozen AAA battalions of the 30th dot the hills from here to San Pablo to Grizzly Peak.

comes close to $60 million. Operating expenses for Presidio units ... Certainly this large yearly output serves as a major economic stimulant to the surrounding area.

And it is important to realize that the Army pays its own way and then some, in the bay area community. Much of the assistance required for Army charity cases comes from its own Army Emergency Relief fund. At this moment the Post has pledged $36,000 as the Presidio's contribution to the United Crusade campaign.

One need only follow the arrows of San Francisco's 49-mile-drive to see the great historic and beauty contribution that the Presidio makes to the area.

From the people themselves, the service personnel and their dependents, San Francisco gains another positive element. In their free time these men, women and children actively participate in all phases of community activity—from Boy Scout troops to study groups.

Founding Was Ordered By Charles III

The first link in a chain of historical defense innovations was wrought when Charles III of Spain ordered the occupation of Northern California, in the 1760's, as a buffer against possible foreign encroachment in New Spain.

In 1769 a Spanish expedition discovered San Francisco Bay and in 1770 the viceroy of New Spain authorized the construction of a presidio on the Bay.

It was not until 1775, however, that Lieutenant Colonel Jaun Bautista de Anza's founding expedition set out from Arizona to establish a post on San Francisco Bay. Stopping numerous times along the way, the expedition finally arrived at the Bay on 28 March, 1776.

After exploring the area, Anza and his lieutenant, Jose Moraga, selected a site for the presidio. Before returning to Monterey Anza's group explored along the Contra Costa, in the vicinity of present day Berkeley and Oakland.

Colonel Anza returned to Mexico to make a report on his findings, and instructed Lieutenant Moraga to establish a presidio on San Francisco Bay. The founding party that set out from Monterey included Moraga, a sergeant, two corporals, seven families of settlers, servants ...en soldiers and their families, ...nd live-stock.

Arriving at San Francisco on 27 June, 1776, the party waited until 17 August for the arrival of the "San Carlos" which was bringing the main load of supplies. It was then that the presidial square was laid out and construction of the enclosure begun.

By mid-September building had progressed so satisfactorily that 17 September, 1776, was named as the day for the ceremonial founding. After an impressive religious ceremony, conducted by Friar Francisco Palou, muskets, guns and cannons boomed loudly. Lt. Moraga then entertained the small company as lavishly as circumstances would allow.

The sixteen room "south adobe," now the Officers' Open Mess, was being used as laundresses' quarters in 1879. In 1904 the old adobe became an assembly room.—From The Presidio of San Francisco: 1776-1956.

Tiny Helmet Radio Could Change Entire Combat Concept

Imagine a combat situation where the commander may instantly communicate with each individual member of his attacking force!

This possibility—heralding in a whole new concept of battle communications—has been yanked out of the future and into the present with the development of a two-way radio so small that it fits inside the helmet of the individual rifleman.

New Helmet Radio

Smaller than two packs of cigarets, this tiny transistor-type radio has been developed by the Signal Corps Engineering laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J. Weighing only a pound, the set snaps into an experimental helmet which looks like a football player's headgear. The battle-hat of tough synthetic material protects the head as effectively as steel.

This smallest known of two-way military radios owes its minuteness to transistors, which do the job of bulky vacuum tubes but use only a fraction of the space.

The helmet radio is preset for short range conversations between squad members. But at a moment's notice, range can be greatly increased by attaching an auxiliary antenna to the top of the helmet. At full capacity the helmet can reach radios up to a mile away and can hear powerful stations at even greater distances.

To answer a call, the soldier merely flips a switch and talks into a microphone about the size of his thumb. No warm-up time is needed as the set's transistors act instantly. When talking might give away his position, the soldier can push a second button at the side of the helmet and acknowledge a message with a short radio "beep."

The new Signal Corps radio lends itself to many civilian emergency situations. It would enable rescuers to coordinate their search; policemen could be reached instantly on their beats, or fire-fighters could warn each other of danger. Construction workers could request supplies and report difficulties and never leave the job.

There are a multitude of battle emergencies where the tiny radio would be invaluable. A soldier in a special combat unit would hear at once when plans were changed. He could warn his companions of snipers, minefields or other dangers without exposing himself. Instantly he could alert the whole unit to any situation. Scouts could do a better job of directing rifle, mortar and artillery fire.

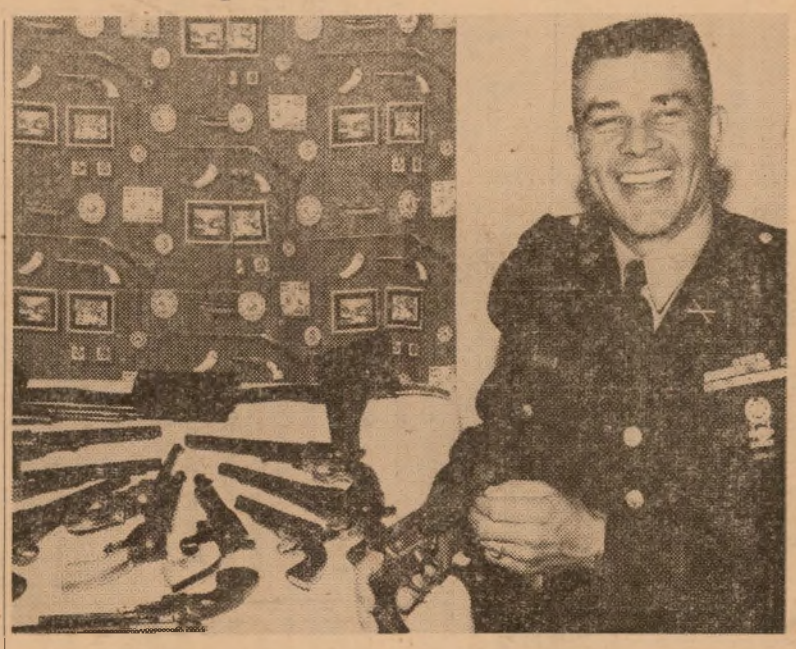
The versatile little radio can "net in" with standard Army radios. Messages from a soldier's helmet set could be picked up behind the lines and leapfrogged over long distances to any point in the battlefield network.

The new radio, developed by Signal Corps engineers Robert Johnson and Vincent Defillipo, is going through a round of exhaustive tests at Fort Monmouth and is soon to enter limited trial production. Low cost automatic assembly techniques may allow for rapid mass production.

Assembly line models are expected to be practically indestructible. The set is designed to work even after being dropped five feet onto a concrete floor, tumbled five hours in a bouncing machine and battered with an impact equal to flying shrapnel.

Air Concept

"Army aviation today is based upon the premise that aircraft can and should be included originally with Army formations," Brigadier General Carl I. Hutton, Commandant, Army Aviation School, stated recently in San Francisco at the Aviation Writers' Association convention.



The spokesman for Army aviation explained that "in this day, you do not need a superman in super organization for airplanes."

While there may be need for some Army personnel to devote their careers to the aviation program, they should have no monopoly on flying machines, said General Hutton, speaking against an exclusive-type Army aviation branch.

AAA Officer Boasts Top Collection Of Fabulous Antique Firearms

Antique Firearms and modern guided missiles go hand in hand in the life of Lieutenant Leonard F. Allen of the 441st AAA Gun Battalion, Fort Cronkhite. A collector of Civil War and other early American pistols and rifles, Lieutenant Allen can never complain of being malassigned in his military career. He is Guided Missile Officer of his Nike Battalion during his working hours and during his off-duty time he takes the equivalent of a mailman's holiday by searching for antique pistols to add to his already large collection.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

It all began when a small boy in Estancia, New Mexico, found an ancient pistol in a deserted house. The only thing the matter with the gun was that because of its great age it wouldn't hold any of the bullets he scrounged from a neighboring youngster. But being a resourceful lad, junior came up with a hot idea. He got a hammer and pounded a modern-type bullet into the breach of the antique pistol. Meanwhile, he proudly bore the trophy home to his father, a man with a healthy respect for guns of any kind but particularly for one held in the hands of his young son.

Figuratively, Papa hit the ceiling when he set eyes on the weapon. When he tried to demolish it with a dynamite charge he didn't know the gun was loaded, so Papa quite literally hit the ceiling. But he came back alive to tell the tale and to warn junior that he must never again bring firearms into the house.

Like all small boys, junior was not one to turn his back on danger, especially since the admonition came from an adult; one of a group of people notoriously lacking in good sense. So junior went out in search of another gun. This was in the Tom Mix era which launched the present "shoot from the hip" kind of markmanship. So—what good was life without a pistol? He became a miniature version of Diogenes searching for the honest man—and eventually he found his ideal in a pawnshop. It required money to make the purchase, so junior came home and raided his father's tool chest, returning to the pawnshop where he traded the best in modern steel equipment for the most ancient in firearms.

Papa came close to having a stroke, but junior played it cool. And so began a collection of antique firearms which has been assembled over the years by the once small boy of New Mexico, now Lieutenant Leonard F. Allen, Guided Missile Officer for the 441st AAA Missile Battalion at Fort Cronkhite.

A veteran of 10 years' military service, part of which he served in wartime Trieste, Italy, with the 351st Infantry Regiment, later with the 68th Triple A in Korea, the six-foot three-inch marksman estimates that he owns close to 40 Civil War type pistols and rifles, some of which, collector-wise, are almost priceless. Most of his find came from old gun shops and from people who knew him as an avid collector. One of his most treasured pistols is one credited with having been used by Billy the Kid, famous early-Western bandit. This is a surprisingly light and sleek model known as The Lighting, built obviously for the rapid dispatch of its victims and known to be the first double-action Colt of its time.

In Lieutenant Allen's gun collection are Civil War percussion pieces including Colts and Remingtons, the belt model Texas Ranger, and the famous frontier model Colt. Some of the revolver grips are made from solid ivory, some of mahogany, notched to tell their mute stories of defeat and conquest when the United States was young.

"If you have money," Lieutenant Allen says, "you can, perhaps, buy a Colt Walker model for from $3,000 up. If you are lucky and perservering, you may find one in an ash barrel."

The Colt Walker, most prized among antique firearms, was the first revolver to be used by the United States Army. The Presentation model Colt is another famous item in the officer's hobby group. Manufactured in 1851, it was the first revolver to be adopted for use by the United States Navy.

In most cases, the ammunition for such firearms is now obsolete but the modern revolver or rifle bullet can be fired from them by a process of honing down to fit the breach.

Lieutenant Allen and other gun collectors in this area pursue the varied joys of their hobby through meetings with the Northern California Arms Collection Association, a non-profit organization which convenes regularly at Lake Merritt boathouse.

"We have a great time there," Lieutenant Allen declares, "trying to cheat each other out of a gun and sharing the latest gossip."

Four-Legged varieties of the famous Army mule may be passé but trust a soldier to cling to an old tradition even if in name only, so—meet the Army's newest member, the mechanical mule. The "mule" was designed by Ordnance engineers at the Detroit Arsenal and will be produced in quantity by Willys Motors. The new "mule" weighs 750 pounds and is small enough to be carried by truck, helicopter or plane, and can be dropped by parachute. It will carry a quarter more than its own weight, crawl one mile an hour or speed at 25 and operate in all kinds of rough terrain.

Meet Army's New Mule

The first all-new lightweight tactical vehicle since the "Jeep" will soon become a part of the Army. . A four-cylinder "mechanical mule" that can climb a 72 per cent grade will be coming off the assembly line of Willys Motors, Inc., in Toledo, Ohio.

The contract, providing $3 million for production and $500,000 for engineering, calls for initial delivery of the "mobile platforms" within a year.

The first "mules" will go to the 101st Airborn Division at Fort Campbell, the Army said.

Designed for combat areas and airborne operations by Ordnance Tank-Automotive Command engineers at Detroit Arsenal, experimental models of the vehicle withstood rigid testing.

The "mule," about eight feet long and four feet wide, has the lowest silhouette of any military vehicle—27 inches.

Primarily designed as a cargo carrier, the "mule" also can be used to mount the Army's 106-mm recoilless rifle, a deadly anti-tank weapon.

Cal NG Devises Unique System For Recruiting RFA Members

The 49th Infantry Division, California National Guard, has come up with a unique method of recruiting its eligible members for six months of active duty with the Regular Army under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955

The California Division has organized "counseling teams," made up of selected officers and enlisted men, who personally contact personnel, eligible under the Act.

The teams talk to qualified individuals right at the training sites. During the first 10 days of the 49th Division's annual two week summer encampment at Camp Roberts, Calif., recently, hundreds of men signed up for the sixth month program.

The basic training program authorized by the Reserve Forces Act provides the National Guard with the means of giving this training to its young recruits. The Act allows guardsmen who enlisted between 17 and 18½ years of age to volunteer for six months of active duty for training in a Federal status.

Upon completion of active duty training under the RFA program, these men revert to their individual Guard units to complete their military obligation by attending 48 weekly drills and a two week summer encampment each year.

A special effort is being made in National Guard units in all states to obtain volunteers for the Army's six month basic training program for reservists.

Presidio's Beautiful Wooded Areas Are Part Of Famous 80-Year Old Reforestation Plan

By Major Earle K. Stewart, Ph.D.
Post T.I.&E. Officer

The extensive wooded areas of the Presidio of San Francisco are a surprising contrast to the barren slopes and ridges of the land mass that constitutes the northern share of the Golden Gate. It may be equally surprising to learn that the tree plantations of the Presidio are a part of a rather well-planned and executed reforestation project begun over 80 years ago.

It can be surmized that at the time of the coming of the European to the San Francisco peninsula the area now constituting the Presidio was not completely denuded of tree cover as it was to the first American arrivals and as it appears in the earliest sketches and photographs. The oak trees and shrubs, the grasses and the bushes that furnished acorns, grains, and berries to the Indians quickly disappeared to meet the demands for timber and firewood; the flocks and herds of sheep, goats, cattle, horses, and mules, allowed to graze unhindered and uncontrolled soon reduced the lush meadows to barren sand patches and grassy ridges to barren rock. It is known, for instance, that the fine oak trees that covered Angel Island, called Wood Island for many years, were quickly cut after 1840 to supply whaling vessels that rendezvoused at Richardson's Bay and to furnish building materials and firewood for military garrisons.

Once the original ground cover was gone it was replaced by useless "chapparals" which in turn were frequently "burned off" either accidentally but sometimes purposely. Nevertheless in many favorable locations the remaining alluvial soils were well able to support fine stands of trees and even the "sandy wastes" and "barren rocks" were not completely unsuitable for tree growth.

The first coordinated reforestation plan for the Presidio apparently was begun after 1883. On 26 March, 1883, Major W. A. Jones of the engineer office of Headquarters Department of California submitted to the departmental commander a "Plan for the Cultivation of Trees Upon the Presidio Reservation." Jones' plan was an elaborate one which he estimated would take a number of years to complete. It can be said to have been a successful plan, for in the main the present stands of trees seem to conform to his recommendations.

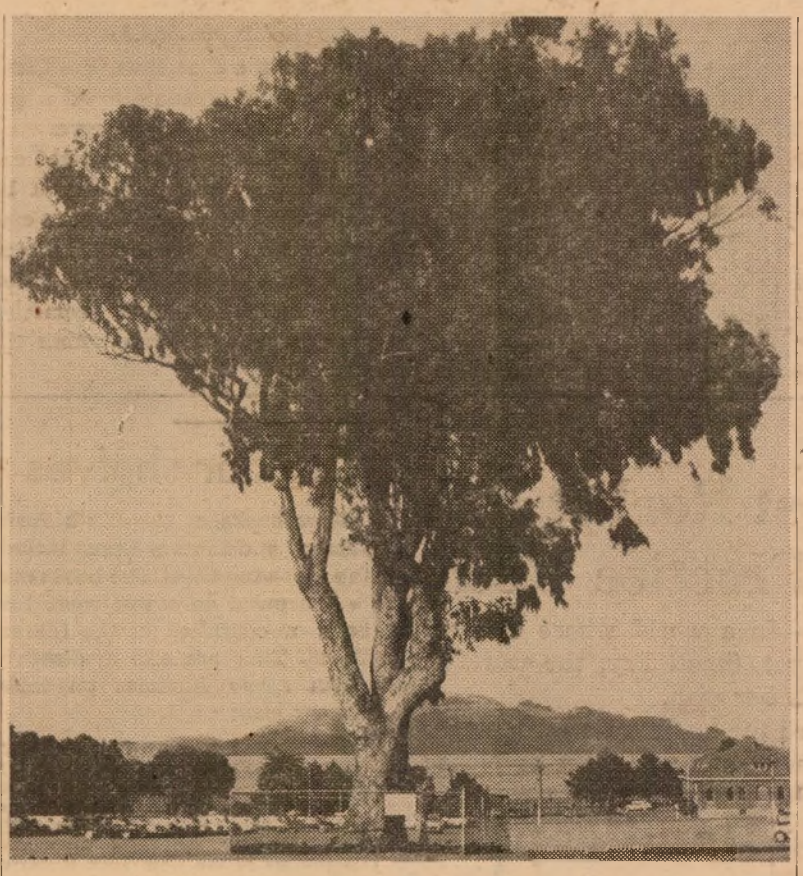
Major Jones proposed to crown the three principal ridges with trees and keep the valleys treeless, or at best with just a few, so that areas would appear to be larger than they really were and the ridges to be higher. Trees were not to be planted where they might obstruct a view but rather to be arranged to make a vista more impressive.

The main post, buildings and parade grounds were to be made to appear as a central and vital point in a composition of forest background overlooking extensive grassy stretches.

Jones intended to plant trees along the boundary lines to enhance the appearance and to emphasize the Presidio's distinctiveness as a government installation. Dense stands of trees would be planted at each entrance to the reservation except at the Lombard Gate where the relatively flat ground was suitable for troop maneuvers. Trees were not to be planted too close to dwellings lest it make them uncomfortable for living, but all ridges were to be tree-lined to provide windbreaks.

Jones listed approximately 50 types of trees and shrubs suitable for planting but recommended that the main forest trees be eucalyptus and evergreens. Deciduous trees would be avoided since they could not thrive in windswept locations.

The tree-planting program outlined by Jones in 1883 may have been prepared at the instance of Major General Irwin McDowell, departmental commander from 1876 to 1882. McDowell, who remained in San Francisco until his death in 1885, is known to have been an active supporter of reforestation and park development in San Francisco. McDowell's successors, Major General John M. Schofield, Lieutenant General Philip H. Sheridan, Major General John Pope, Major General Oliver O. Howard and Brigadier General Nelson A. Miles, supported the reforestation program.



If the Jones plan became the basis of what is now the extensive woodland groves that can be seen at the Presidio today, it still may have taken a half-dozen years to get the planting under way. It is reported in Bertha Bash, "The San Francisco Quartermaster Depot, 1847-1928," (Typescript, Bancroft Library) that in 1888 and 1889 Lieutenant Colonel R. N. Batchelder, working with more than $60,000 from two Congressional appropriations, began a program of road and wall building on the Presidio and of tree-planting.

Fifty-five thousand acacia, pine, cypress, and eucalyptus trees and five thousand native redwood, spruce, and madrone trees were planted. These plantings definitely constitute the most ambitious tree-planting program on the Presidio before and after that date.

This period of reforestation is probably the one still remembered by older San Franciscans who as children participated in one or more Arbor Day celebrations at the Presidio.

Mr. P. F. (Pat) Kane of 3052 Octavia Street, San Francisco, born in 1876, recalls that he with hundreds of other San Francisco school children from as far south as the Mission district gathered at the Presidio on Saturday mornings, bringing their lunches and prepared to stay all day.

Each child was given a bundle of seedlings, each three to six inches high, to plant. Mr. Kane says that at first all of the trees they were given to plant were eucalyptus but as the supply ran out they were given cypress and pine seedlings.

Last Survivor of famous grove of Presidio eucalyptus trees stands a lonely sentinel on the main parade ground.

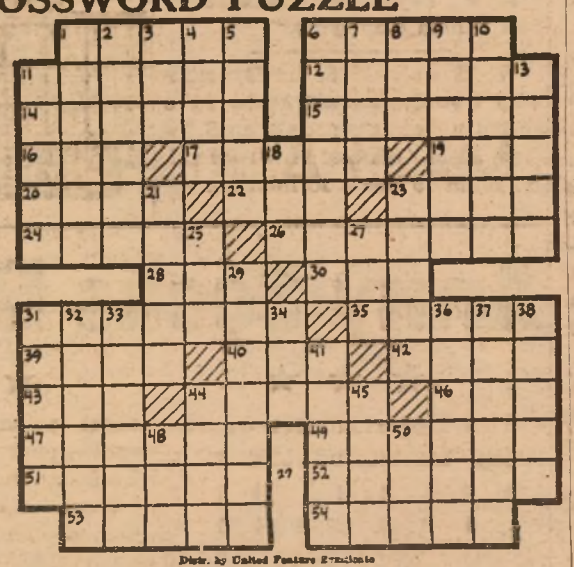
Near the middle of the main parade ground stands a great single eucalyptus tree, probably the last sruvivor of a grove of trees planted in this area long ago. The plaque placed there in 1939 reads "IN COMMEMORATION Of the One-Hundredth Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence of the United States, this tree was planted here by Angelo Bereta, Post Trader of the Presidio, San Francsco, July 4, 1876."

Although it is generally supposed that 80 years is close to the life limit of a eucalyptus, this specimen shows no signs of old age. The fact that the tree has stood in the middle of a paved area for many years has apparently had no effect on its health or growth.

There is at present no available information as to the length of time in which tree-planting was emphasized, but it may be assumed that interest and activity increased or declined with the impetus that might be given by the Presidio commander and the amounts of money available for tree purchases and planting. That an enduring interest in the trees of the Presidio and a devotion to their care and protection exists is unquestioned. This attitude is exhibited by every "old" Presidian and quickly acquired by every "new" one.



Of the Presidio's 1404 acres, 286 acres are defined as woodland. This figure can be compared with the 465 acres classified as improved grounds, with 248 acres of lawns, and with 280 acres of roads, streets, and structures.

The number of trees planted each year is not known. There is a very large amount of natural seeding, especially of the pine and cypress. About 200 eucalyptus seedlings are dug up each year and planted elsewhere. There are apparently but two species of eucalyptus represented on the Presidio; the most numerous one is usually described as the "common" type and the other as the "flowering" type. The former is probably MYRTACEAE, Eucalyptus globulus, Labill—Blue Gum.

No commercial use is made of any of the trees of the Presidio. The only use made of the wood from any of the trees which have been removed, topped, or pruned is for firewood for the few remaining fireplaces in quarters on the post.

In earlier years cuttings may have been put to other purposes. At the present time the spirit of conservation and preservation is so strong that it is difficult to get permission to remove or thin trees even in places where it would improve the appearance and growth of the others. In the residential sections of the post the eucalyptus is not popular and is slowly being replaced by other trees, particularly the cypress, which remains the handsomest of the native trees.

New Regs Offer Riffed Employee More Hope

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

New civil service regulations provide for more assistance to lead-off career employees in obtaining reemployment in the Federal service.

Approximately 9,000 career employees have already been rehired under the separated career employee program since 1953. Only a comparatively small number of employees now remain on the SCE rolls.

Affected by the changes are all separated employees with full career status who are currently on the reemployment priority lists of their former agencies or who establish their right to such placement in the future.

The specific changes are:

1. For two years, instead of one, as at present, each such employee will be entitled to priority consideration for rehiring in any position in his former agency for which he is qualified. The position must, however, provide employment in the commuting area in which he was serving at the time of separation.

2. For two years, instead of one, as at present, the Commission will retain the name of each separated career employee on the lists of eligibles for any Federal jobs for which he may be qualified. From these lists the employee will have a chance for priority certification to jobs in any agency and in any geographical location.

3. For the first time, the Commission will circulate to all agencies information on the experience and training of each separated career employee. Agencies will be required to consider each such employee for any position for which he is qualified even if the position is one normally filled by promotion or reassignment from within the agency.

Meet 'Small Fry'

World's Tiniest Rocket Fills Big Need As Practice Round

Huntsville, Ala. (AFPS)—In a world where everything leans toward the supercolossal, Small Fry, the world's littlest rocket, more than holds her own.

The midget missile cleared the last hurdle with plenty to spare at Redstone Arsenal here, and will soon be placed in the hands of the infantry for field testing.

Small Fry is actually an inexpensive practice round for a 3.5" Bazooka. Only 8¾" long, the tiny rocket can be manufactured for $2.50 in comparison to about $30 for a real-life Bazooka round.

Resembling a slightly oversized fountain pen, the mighty mite of missiledom has the same trajectory as the Bazooka rocket, and has proven to be even more accurate, according to the men who conducted the tests.

It uses a smaller amount of the same mixture that propels the regular rocket and is accurate at more than 300 yards.

Small Fry is equipped with a "spotting head" containing ordinary flash powder which explodes on contact with the target, allowing troops in training to check their accuracy.

The midget practice round was developed by the Rohm and Hass Co. and was tested by the Rocket Development laboratory.

Small Fry will make her infantry debut at Ft. Benning, Ga., in the near future.

New Army System Will Make Arctic Trails Much Safer

Washington—New electronic marking techniques developed by the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Fort Belvoir, Va., have made Arctic Region trails safer, according to the Army.

A new system, tested successfully on the Greenland Ice Cap, consists of two parallel wires and a vehicular mounted radio-type receiver. The wires, buried beneath the snow on either side of the trail, are fed by an alternating current which marks the route electrically. The receiver on a tracked vehicle, the "Weasel," is able to detect the current in the wires. Indicators inside the vehicle give the driver his position on the trail.

Electronic techniques were developed to overcome such Polar Region hazards as snow storms, summer "white outs," pitfalls and ice chasms. The electronic trail is now extended over 100 miles on the ice cap.

In more than 100 campaigns, expeditions, occupations, and wars—from the American Revolution to Korea—the U. S. Army has successfully defended our freedom against every enemy.

Handicapped Employment Week Slated

National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, 7-13 October, marks the 12th consecutive year that the Nation has observed this event.

While the Presidio has no specific program for the physically handicapped, it maintains a general policy of utilizing their services in all expedient situations, according to Leslie F. Scanlon, chief, civilian personnel.

"The new approach to this problem that we call rehabilitation," according to President Eisenhower, "is not to say what is wrong with someone, but what you can do, or what it is that you can be trained to do, or what are your capacities. Never mind the incapacities because we all have them."

At the very root of our democratic society is the individual's desire to take his proper place as a productive and self-supporting citizen, says Earl Bunting, Managing Director, National Association of Manufacturers. He goes on to comment that, "there is no longer any question as to the competence of workers who are physically handicapped, because we have seen that when placed in jobs for which they are properly trained, they become satisfactory and valued employees."

On 19 Aug., 1938, the first nonstop transcontinental flight by a B-18 bomber was made from Hamilton Field, Calif., to Mitchel Field, N. Y., in 15 hours 18 minutes.

DOD Questionnaire to Protect Rights Under New Benefits Act

Washington—Every member of the Armed Forces soon will be required to answer a brief questionnaire to protect his interest under the recently enacted Public Law 881.

The questionnaire will be distributed late in September, calling for a single check mark and signature. It will be part of a three-page special bulletin prepared by the Defense Department to explain the Survivor Benefits Act.

The new law, effective Jan. 1, 1957, is composed of four parts. They are:

(1) Death gratuity, (2) Social Security, (3) Compensation and Indemnity, (4) Insurance.

The insurance provisions are the only portions of the Act which place responsibility on individuals to initiate action in order to preserve their rights.

To make certain everyone knows his rights and acts promptly, the office of Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Personnel and Reserve), is taking the precaution of making it mandatory for each serviceman to read the short bulletin and answer one of four questions.

The bulletin concerns service members in the following three insurance categories: Those having USGLI or NSLI policies with premiums under waiver, those who have never had a service life insurance policy, those who have allowed a G.I. policy to lapse or who have surrendered permanent-plan insurance for cash. The questions concern the category in which the individual falls.

The Office of Armed Forces Information and Education of the DOD also will have a detailed pamphlet on the Survivor Benefits Act ready for distribution to the services this month.

This fact sheet, with full interpretations of the law, will be used primarily for information conferences and to guide personnel officers. (AFPS)

Salary Raise Set For Certain Types Of Civilian Jobs

The Civil Service Commission has authorized Federal agencies to pay substantially higher minimum salaries to aeronautical research engineers in approximately 30 categories and to certain types of chemists and physicists in grades GS-9 and GS-11 through GS-17.

The new salaries become effective on the first day of the first pay period after September 22. All current employees in the affected categories and grades will receive the new rate if they are not already receiving it.

The minimum rate in grade GS-9 for employees in the affected categories will advance from $6,115 a year to $6,250; in grade GS-11 from $7,035 to $7,465; in grade GS-12 from $7,570 to $8,645; in grade GS-13 from $8,990 to $10,065; in grade GS-14 from 10,320 to $11,395; in grade GS-15 from $11,610 to $12,690; in grade GS-16 from $12,900 to $13,760; and in grade GS-17 from $13,975 to $14,835.

Included are scientists and engineers in fields where acute shortages exist, such as research engineers specializing in flight systems, aerodynamics, and rotary wing, and physicists in solid state and atmosphere categories.

TYPICAL OF NUMEROUS Army chapels throughout the Sixth Army area is this, the Catholic Chapel of Our Lady, located on the Presidio of San Francisco. Said to be one of the oldest chapels in existence in the area, it was completely renovated and rededicated in ceremonies held in September, 1952. Built on the site of the first Catholic church on the Presidio, services have been conducted there since 17 September, 1776.

Army Seeks New Aircraft Engine Design

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The Department of the Army announced this week that contracts have been awarded to seven aviation and engineering corporations to analyze designs for a new 250 horsepower free shaft turbine-type aircraft engine introducing recent advancements in the engine art.

Previous work on larger gas turbines has indicated that their size might penalize performance of smaller engines, the Department of the Army announced.

Work has been completed, however, to advance the 250 horsepower class, widely used in Army Aviation piston-type engines.

The Army is currently exploring future utilization of aircraft including fixed-wing, short take-off and landing, and vertical take-off and landing, flying platforms, and helicopters. Since the shaft turbine engine is capable of delivering more horsepower per pound of engine with less drag than engines currently used, the Army considers the 250 horsepower shaft turbine more fitted to higher speed observation, reconnaissance, and command missions. In addition, the lighter weight of the new engine allows more load carrying capacity for cargo, equipment, or fuel in all types of aircraft.

Low fuel consumption, possible use of regenerators as well as simplicity of design, ruggedness, operational reliability, and ease of maintenance are considerations in the design studies. Engine operational in positions from below horizontal to vertical is also being studied, the Army stated.

"Wanted one square dance caller."

This call for assistance was issued by the Fort Baker Service Club which is looking for a "red hot" and/or enthusiastic caller for their weekly dances.

The dances, according to club director, Miss Dorothy Webb, have become so popular that they are now held weekly instead of twice a month.

Glee Club Seeks New Members as Discharge Hazard Hits Ranks

Newly-assigned men to the Presidio are invited to become members of the popular all-male Glee Club now under the direction of Post Special Services.

Members of the singing club are regularly being invited to appear at numerous civic functions in the Bay Area.

Breaks in the singing ranks, however, due to rotation and Army discharges, make it necessary for the club director to keep a sharp eye and ear out for incoming soldiers who like to express themselves through the medium of group singing at the Service Club and for concerts scheduled for civic presentation during the Fall season.

Prospective members of the Presidio Glee Club are asked to call M/Sgt. Allen Larkin, extension 4121, or to appear in person at the Post Special Services office.

VA Urges College Eligible War Orphans To Apply

Young men and women attending or planning later to attend school this fall under the new War Orphans Education Law were urged to file their applications as soon as possible, to avoid unnecessary delays in receiving their first monthly allowance check.

Application forms are available at all VA offices.

Persons eligible for schooling are those whose veteran-parent died of injuries or diseases resulting from military service during World War I, World War II or the Korean Conflict. Students generally must be between 18 and 23 years old.

Prompt action is needed, VA explained, because normally it will take about three months from the date of application to the date the initial allowance check is placed in the mail. So in the case of young men and women who apply now, the earliest that VA could mail out checks would be mid-November.

When the first checks do arrive, however, they will cover the entire period during which the students were in school after October 1—the beginning date on which the law authorizes payments to be made. Thereafter, checks will be mailed regularly to cover each month the student is in school.

The money usually will be sent to the student's parent or guardian, rather than to the student himself.

The three-month period between application and receipt of the first check is necessary because of the processes required by the law, VA said. Here's what is involved.

After the application is filed, VA must check its records to make certain that the young man or woman meets basic eligibility requirements for schooling. If so, VA will issue a "provisional approval."

Next, VA will schedule vocational counseling to help the applicant, along with his living parent or guardian, to plan a program of education best suited to his aptitudes, abilities and interests. Also, the parent or guardian, with the help of VA counselors, must work out an "educational plan" showing the student's goal, his program of education, what school or schools he plans to attend and the estimated cost.

Only after this plan is submitted may VA give its final approval for the training.

And even after the student enrolls in school, he can't expect his Government check immediately. For the law calls for payments to be made some time after the end of each month of training completed.

After the month has ended, the student and his school must submit a certification to VA stating that he has been in attendance all month. The law, then, allows VA up to 20 days after receipt of the certification to get the student's check in the mail.

The entire process, VA said, takes roughly three months. The earlier that applications are filed, the sooner VA payments begin.

For young men and women who want to begin fall terms at school before receiving VA's final approval of their courses, VA suggested that they enroll in school courses that have been State-approved for Korea veterans under the Korean GI Bill. Any VA regional office can inform a student whether the course he has chosen is GI-approved.

The law specifies that school courses approved for Korea veterans also are approved for students enrolled under the War Orphans Education program.

It's advisable, however, that they receive VA vocational counseling before they enroll. This way they will know that their course will best prepare them for their future careers.

Army Will Build 25,000 Dependent Housing Facilities

Washington—The Army has announced plans to build 25,000 dependent quarters on posts in the U.S. under the amended Capehart Housing Law.

Construction of 20,000 units will start before the end of June, 1957, in the largest housing program of any previous period.

Amendments to the Capehart legislation, which will provide better homes for service families, raised the ceiling on unit costs from $13,500 to $16,500.

Four approved projects totaling 1,395 houses, construction on which will begin shortly, are Redstone Arsenal, Ala., 270 units; Ft. Eustis, Va., 600 units; Ft. Lee, Va., 500 units, and the Richmond, Va., QM Depot, 25 units.

The Engineer Corps now is closing contracts on an additional 14,975 homes, the Army said. (AFPS)

Triple-A Opens US Tourney Thursday

752d Splits In 2 Games

Special to The Star Presidian

Fort Lawton (Wash.)—The Bay Area's entry in the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command Softball tournament took its first defeat Wednesday as the 752nd AAA Gun Battalion of Berkeley dropped a 3-1 decision to the 28th AAA Missile Battalion of Seattle.

The defeat dropped the local team into the loser's bracket of the double elimination meet, where they were scheduled to meet the 865th AAA Battalion of Los Angeles.

Sp3 William H. Griffith pitched a one-hitter for the 752nd, but lost as his mates committed three errors behind him. He struck out seven.

Bob Poteat, Seattle pitcher, picked up the win with a five hitter. He also fanned seven.

The second round defeat for the Berkeley Gunners followed a 3-0 shutout victory over the 8rd AAA Missile Battalion of Hanford, Wash., in the opening round.

Marion Mattox hurled the opening round triumph for the locals.

Softball Final Lost By Wacs

Presidio of San Francisco's Wac softball team finished third in the Northern California Women's Armed Forces Softball League play last week.

The Locals dropped an 11-4 decision to Hamilton Air Force Base in a playoff to determine the league champion. Presidio had previously lost to Parks AFB.

With the triumph, Hamilton, which went to the finals of the Air Force women's softball tournament before losing to Selfridge AFB, thus won the title. Parks finished second.

Hunters Warned On Deer Locations

Deer hunters who plan to seek game along the Nevada state line were warned today to check their location carefully to avoid possible conflict with Nevada regulations.

California and Nevada fish and game personnel recently reposted the border to aid hunters. Law enforcement officers of both states have been ordered to check closely for violations. Persons crossing the state line into Nevada to hunt must possess a valid license of that state and comply with all regulations.

Since the open seasons do not coincide in all sections and because Nevada hunting regulations differ in some respects from California's, nimrods planning trips into state-line areas are urged to familiarize themselves with these differences to avoid disappointment and possible citations for violations.

Late Deer Season Hopes Look Good

Last winter's ample precipitation has improved range forage after a preceding period of poor growth and the condition of deer for the two inland seasons appears to be good. The High Sierra season opens September 15 and the late season September 22.

Baker Field Meet's Scene

Softball champions from the five regions of the Army Antiaircraft Command will battle for the first command-wide athletic championship at Fort Baker Sept. 20-29.

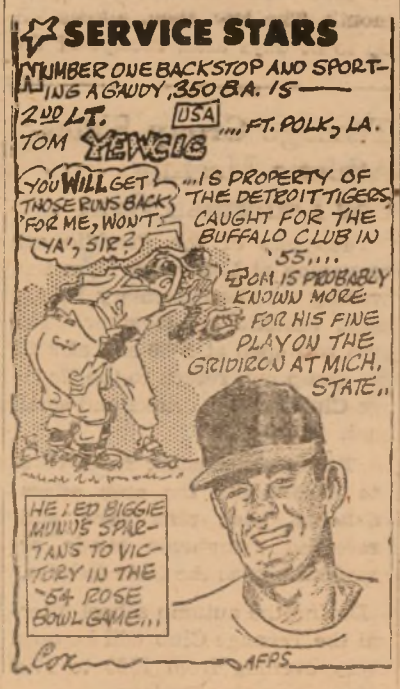
The double-elimination tourney will match the top teams of the 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th and 6th Regional Commands, in competition for the U.S. championship.

Play will be on a newly-rebuilt diamond. The 561st Engineer Company and units from the 30th AAA Group have improved the playing field and backstop. Game equipment will also be new.

The tournament will feature morning play on all days because of afternoon winds off San Francisco Bay. Sunday games will be scheduled in the afternoon to avoid conflict with church services.

Champions of the regional commands are being determined by tournaments within each region, where brigade, group and battalion representatives are playing for titles.

Teams are scheduled to have two days of practice after arriving here Thursday. Drawings for opening-round games will be at a September 21 meeting of coaches and team managers.



Play will get under way Saturday, September 22, following opening ceremonies. These will include selections by the Sixth Army Band, a welcoming address by Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant, commanding general of the 6th AAA Regional Command, and introduction of players and officials of the tournament.

Sunday play is scheduled for 1:30 and 3:30 p. m. Monday is to be an open day unless bad weather forces postponement of any Saturday or Sunday games. Tuesday's games are slated at 8:30 and 10:20 a. m., with a single game Wednesday at 8:30 a. m.

Thursday is also scheduled as an open day unless postponed games need to be made up. The Friday schedule calls for a game at 8:30 a. m., and a second game at 10:30 if necessary to decide the championship.

A banquet is scheduled for 7 p. m. Friday, at which team and individual awards will be made. Teams will leave for home stations Saturday, Sept. 29.

Nike and gun battalions in the San Francisco Bay Area will play host to the regional teams, providing them with sightseeing tours, transportation, housing and mess.

Ord Nine Nabs 6th Army Title By Clipping Presidio Twice

COLONEL LUNDQUIST Gives LT. MILLIGAN, SP3 CASINO, Trophy For Second Place in Sixth Army Tourney.

Two Toreros 'Drafted' For Dix Tourney

The Fort Ord Warriors, bolstered by the addition of two Presidio pitchers on the squad, departed for Fort Dix, N. J., and the all-Army baseball tournament this week, their sixth consecutive Sixth Army championship safely tucked away.

The Warriors, forced to play five games in three days and plagued by lack of hitting in the clutch and numerous injuries, came back strong to whip the Presidio twice, 5-1 and 3-2, in the Sixth Army tournament's final round Saturday.

With the title safely enshrined in their Fifth Division trophy room, the Warriors then "drafted" Presidio hurlers Ed Collins and Lee Walker to add substance to their sagging mound staff.

The addition of Collins and Walker to the Ord squad—permissible under the rule whereby the winning team is allowed two selections from opposing teams — was made necessary since eight Warriors are scheduled for overseas duty and discharge next week.

A two-run seventh inning rally supplied Ord with the winning margin, 3-2, in the title game. First baseman Jim Cummings whacked a ringing double off Presidio pitcher George Hane to break up a 1-1 deadlock and push Ord to the fore.

The Presidio loaded the bases in the eighth inning but managed to score one lone tally when Catcher Ronnie Dacko drove in Al Casino with a double. After that, Ord relief hurler Larry Michels chocked off any threats the Presidio may have entertained in the ninth inning.

It was Michel's third victory in the tournament and second in a relief role.

In the semifinal contest, Ord was forced to struggle 11 innings before attaining the vital triumph. Again, a relief pitcher provided the spur to fame.

Joe Ferrante, on the mound in aid of Bud Fullmar, bashed a two-run triple off Walker to score two runs and Stan Poppe sent home another brace with his two-bagger.

Presidio's lone tally came in the first inning when Norm Ellenberger, who played a bang-up game throughout the tournament, chased John Blackwell home from second. Ellenberger found Ord pitching to his liking in the semi-final with three hits in four trips.

The Presidio won its third straight in the quarter final round with a narrow, 5-4 triumph over previously unbeaten Fort Huachuca. Pitcher Charlie Matzen won his second game, checking the Arizona club with four hits.

After taking a 6-3 beating from the Toreros in the second round, Ord marched back into contention with an 8-7 win over Fort Lewis; an 18-8 victory over Fort Lawton and a 7-5 win over Huachuca.

Final round linescores:

Ord	001	000	000 01 — 5 8 3
PSF	100	000	000 00 — 1 6 3

Fullmar, Ferrante (9) and Alberts; Walker and Dacko.

'Double Life' Is Led By Benning Colonel

By Sp3 Walt Heil

Star Presidian Sports Editor

Lieutenant Colonel William Humphrey of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment at Fort Benning, Ga., lays claim to leading a double life of sorts.

When the colonel gives orders to the officers and men under his command he expects no back talk and that they should carry out their duties with efficiency and dispatch.

But when Colonel Humphrey sets foot on the football field or baseball diamond he gets—and expects—protests, arguments and plenty of back talk.

Reason is that the colonel is an athletic official in Georgia and when working games, players often dispute his rulings—and get away with it once in a while.

That is, unless he gives them the old heave-ho from the game.

But Colonel Williams maintains it's a good thing.

Says he: "You stand on your own two feet and on your knowledge of the game. You have to make accurate decisions fast—stick by them. An officer must be able to have the same ability or he's licked in combat."

Soldiers on the Presidio with an idle hour over the weekend could do worse than attend the 1956 U.S. Olympic Games cycling trials in the Lake Merced area.

Starting today, 109 Olympic candidates will vie for places on the U.S. team, according to George Thorpe, games cycling committee member and treasurer.

Among the entrants are 20 servicemen, including six Army men from Oakland Army Terminal.

They'll race 120 miles on roads and highways in suburban San Francisco and adjacent communities. In today's race, the first three men will qualify for Melbourne, while the first two men in Monday's 120-miler will also qualify.

The laps are 5.9 miles long, which means the cyclists will have to go around the course 21 times. The track races will be held tomorrow and Sunday in San Jose.

See where Master Sergeant Francis Conway of the Army won both the Wimbledon Cup Match and the Marine Corps Cup match in the national high powered rifle championships at Camp Perry, Ohio.

He won the Wimbledon Match with a perfect score of 100 at 1,000 yards for the second straight year.

But his coup d' etat came when he outshot 900 other competitors for the Marine Corps trophy. He was the only shooter to come up with a perfect score of 100.

6 Army Cyclists Bid For Olympics Today

Six U.S. Army cyclists start in hot pursuit of an American Olympic Games berth today around the edges of San Francisco's Lake Merced.

The six-man squad of Sixth Army soldiers from Oakland Army Terminal will pedal madly to gain a place on the plane carrying U.S. athletes to the Games in Melbourne, Australia, in November.

Headed by Lieutenant George Van Meter, the cycling hopefuls will compete for a place on the roster along with other servicemen and amateur civilians from all parts of the Nation.

All are given exceptionally good chances of landing on the squad, with Pfc. Bernard Dodd's hopes particularly bright. Dodd is the holder of the U.S. 125-mile record with a time of 5:41.50, better by 30 minutes than the old mark. Dodd has also won 125-mile scratch race and a 50-mile handicap race recently.

Officer-in-charge Van Meter, hurt recently when hit by several youths driving a stolen car, has recovered and hopes—from his victory in a 125-miler and second place showing in a Los Angeles 118-mile race last week—of making the team.

Rounding out the Sixth Army soldier-cyclist team are Pvt. Erhart Newman, Pfc. William Olsen, Pfc. Richard Olsen and Pvt. Richard Bing.

The six men concluded their rigorous training schedules this week and then crossed their fingers in cherished hopes of gaining a jersey emblazoned "U.S.A."

But they'll find competition plenty keen.

All told 109 cyclists, according to George Thorpe, cycling committee member and AAU official, have entered the tournament. The road race category has attracted the most entrants, 75, while 34 others have indicated a preference for the track races.

Of these, 20 will represent the Armed Services. After the Army, the Air Force has the most entered with five, while four Navymen, three Marines and two Coast Guardsmen also will compete.

Rules prevent cyclists from entering both categories in the trials.

Should they find themselves in Melbourne in November, the cyclists will find their European brethren, where cycling is a way of life, particularly tough and competitive. But first they just want to win over their friends and neighbors from the United States.

Post Heavy In Try For Ring Crown

Fort Lewis, with eight entries, retained the Sixth Army boxing championships held at Oakland Army Terminal last night.

Fifteen soldier boxers entered the tournament with five championships on the block last night.

Fort Lewis, defending champion, had eight contenders, Fort Ord and Fort MacArthur three each and the Presidio of San Francisco one. Winners will go to Fort Meyer, Va., to take part in the all-Army tourney scheduled for September 24-29.

All championships in the Sixth Army were vacant since none of last year's titleholders returned to defend their titles. Juan A. Curet, two-time Olympic winner and three-time all-Army champion in the welterweight class, accompanied the Fort Lewis team, but did not participate in the meet as a boxer.

Among the pre-tournament favorites was Kenneth Johnson, 189-pounder from the Presidio in the heavyweight division. An Oakland, Calif., boy, Johnson was light-heavyweight champion of Okinawa and runner-up in the northern California Armed Forces tournament at Hamilton Air Force Base last march.

Fort Lewis was represented by Charles Cook, also of Oakland, 175-pounder who won the 8th Army title in Korea in 1954 and '55. Fort Ord's strongest contender was Clemmie Turner, U.S. Army in Europe heavy champ in 1954 and '55.

Fred Apostoli, onetime world's middleweight champion, refereed all bouts, while Gordon Stirling and Jack Gallagher, Oakland sports writers, acted as officials.

A banquet for boxers, officials and guests was held at the OAT officer's club after the tournament.

Hq. Keglers Romp Past Keystoners

Headquarters Company Sixth Army bowlers, Summer National Bowling League leaders since late June, proved their mastery over second place Keystone Kops last week with a 4-0 victory.

The Headquarters keglers, astride the league with a sizzling 40-12 record, were paced by Olson who turned in 569-194 game.

Blue Ribbons At Camp Perry

Sixth Army Shooters Did Well

By Pfc. Bob Kircher
Sixth Army Information Specialist

Sixth Army rifle and pistol team members—back at their duty stations today—were the recipients of many awards at the just completed National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

In the National Match Course, competing in the Expert Classification, the Sixth Army pistol team garnered a first place in the .38 caliber firing. Results of competition in the .22 and .45 caliber firing in the same match gave the pistol squad two third place positions.

In the National Trophy Individual Match, 12 of the 15 men on the pistol team fired 270 out of a possible 300 points, which is considered excellent, according to Captain John F. Kallam, of Post S-3, coach of the Sixth Army squad.

M/Sgt. David A. Dewey, Hqs. Sixth Army, received a third leg in this match, which makes him a distinguished marksman, the highest award received in pistol competition.

Among other individual awards was the blue ribbon performance of Colonel Albert Hettrich, Commanding Officer 46th Ordnance Group, who copped a first place in the .45 caliber slowfire match. Competing in the sharpshooter classification, Colonel Hettrich fired a 178 out of a possible 200 points for his first place position.

The Sixth Army Rifle Team also won numerous awards during the National Matches at Camp Perry, which is located on the banks of Lake Erie. One of the many laurels shared by the team was that of winning second place in the Roumanian Trophy Team Match in the Expert Classification.

Captain Joseph Berry, Oakland Army Terminal, a member of the Army Advanced Marksman Unit, fired a perfect 100-18v score in the Match Rifle Rapid Fire Match which broke the existing record of 100-15v set in 1955 by Sergeant Kenneth Robinson. The V is a small circle inside the bullseye used for breaking ties.

More than 3000 competitors fired in the Matches at Camp Perry this year.

Games Berth Sought By Presidio 'Lifter'

By Sp3 Frank Keohane
Sixth Army Information Specialist

One of the Army's brightest hopes for representation in the ancient art of weight-lifting lies with diminutive 20-year-old Specialist Third Class Ralph M. Yoshida, assigned to Presidio Special Services sports office.

Yoshida, from the island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, packs 148 pounds of muscle solidly into his 5-6½ frame and just barely qualifies for the Lightweight Division, which ranges from 132 to 148 pounds.

But it takes more than physical qualifications to become a weightlifter, Yoshida claims.

"It takes more than power actually to become a weightlifter. While a person must have more than normal strength, speed and coordination are the most important assets," he said.

He is well endowed with what it takes, having gained recognition as the second ranking lightweight in the United States. He can now lift 780 pounds in three lifts, the result of seven years of training in the sport.

And that's more than five times his own weight.

However, he feels that he will have to reach 800 pounds to be in contention for an Olympic Games berth—his current ambition.

The Olympic tryouts will be held in San Jose late next month. Only one man from each of the seven weight divisions will be selected to represent the U.S.

And he has a pretty high goal set for himself, too, since the record lift for a lightweight is 840 pounds.

Most of Yoshida's coaching has been through a unique system of correspondence with Larry Barnholth, the great weightlifter and coach from Akron, Ohio.

This style has served the little man very well. With it he has won the all-Hawaiian championship and, while stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J., he won the Pennsylvania State championship.

While he was on duty in Alaska he qualified for the Olympic trials by defeating all comers and gaining the all-Alaskan title.

Hamilton Rips Hood Tankers

The Fort Hood Tankers, last year's Fourth Army grid champions, are back at their home station today, nursing their first defeat of the season.

Hamilton Air Force Base Flyers opened their 1956 season last week with a 20-7 triumph over the Tankers at the air base.

Ex-Ohio State back Dave Leggett passed 15 yards to former Gettysburg end Ron Jacobi for Hamilton's first TD and Henry Marshall, onetime City College of San Francisco star, tallied on a seven-yard sweep in the first quarter.

Fort Hood scored on Earl Bechtel's one-yard buck and conversion. Hamilton cinched it in the third period on a 40-yard run by Odell Holmes.

Polk Tallies Five TDs In 30 Minutes

Fort Polk (La.)—Looks like Fort Polk's football team is on its way to greater things this season.

The offensive minded gridders racked up five touchdowns in a mere 30 minutes of scrimmaging recently. And halfback, Jimmy Saunders from Delta State College, did the most damage.

He personally scored on jaunts of 60, 45 and 40 yards.

Post Touch Football Teams Ready For Opening Games

With regulation varsity football a thing of the past, the Presidio sports office this week organized a three-league, six-man touch tackle conference.

Beginning Monday, 24 September, eight teams at the Presidio, eight at Fort Scott and eight or more in Marin County will start play.

Presidio teams will play on the PX field, while Fort Scott units will play on the parade ground there. Units in Marin county will play at Fort Baker.

A double elimination tournament will be held at season's end to determine the Presidio championship team.

Trophies will be awarded top teams in each league and the eventual post titleholders.

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 17 | PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA | Friday September 21, 1956

New Air Chief for Sixth Army, Colonel Frank G. Forrest, examines air installations pinpointed on Sixth Army map. He succeeds Lt. Col. Jack Ruby as Chief of the Sixth Army Aviation Section.

New Aviation Chief Sees Healthy Future

A 41-year-old combat infantry colonel, who wears his silver pilot's wings with the air of a soldier convinced of the future, has been named Chief of the Sixth Army Aviation Section by Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

Colonel Frank G. Forrest, one of the Army's top young soldier-flyers, will head all aviation activities of the Sixth Army in eight western states.

An articulate exponent of Army Aviation and its future as an organic component of the ground combat mission, Colonel Forrest told the Star Presidian, "We've had our lean years, but they haven't been wasted. They have given us the time and opportunity to prove that modern mobility of the combat infantry unit depends on organic air support."

On tactical air support the colonel was equally candid, "TAC Air as we have known it is a passing thing. Many visionaries, and I have to number myself among them, believe the future of tactical air support lies in the realm of air-controlled guided missiles."

A native of New York City, Colonel Forrest began his military career at the age of 16 when he enlisted in the 1st Virginia Infantry of the Virginia National Guard in Norfolk. He graduated

Sick Leave Care Wins Recognition For 150 Civilians

Special recognition, in the form of a letter from local commanders, is being given civilian employees who have accumulated a 1000 or more hours of sick leave during Federal service.

At Sixth Army, Brigadier General Louis J. Rumaggi, Chief of Staff, sent personal letters to 58 employees, last week.

At Post, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, congratulated 66 employees on their "judicious use of sick leave." He also noted that this "represents a substantial savings to the Department of the Army and a saving account to you in case of illness or accident."

Letters over Major General Paul I. Robinson's, Commanding General of Letterman Army Hospital, signature will go out to 23 employees, next week.

DCG For Reserve Forces Sees Strong Service Need

Washington — Lieutenant General Ridgely Gaither declared recently that well-trained and equipped Reserve Forces are vital to the security of the nation. He emphasized the important role of reserves in an article appearing in The Information Digest.

In his article entitled, "Our Reserve Forces," General Gaither says, "During this era of cold war and international tension, when our Army must be prepared for the contingencies of conventional warfare or all-out atomic holocaust, the requirements of our national security make it imperative that the nation have powerful, organized reserve forces — trained, equipped and strong enough to meet any emergency."

The enactment of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955 (Public Law 305-84th Congress) marks an important advance toward this goal, states the general, adding, "Since then, the Army has moved ahead vigorously to realize every possible benefit from the Act. Although the initial input under the Reserve Forces Act has not gone as fast as some optimistic estimates, the program is now gaining momentum as those who have received Army training return home to influence others."

General Gaither writes that Secretary of the Army Brucker has repeatedly pointed out, as has Chief of Staff General Max-

Promotions Much Slower; Pfc Stays Up

Brightest spot in the promotion picture for September concerns E-2's who for the second month running may be promoted to Pfc. without regard to vacancies provided they have 10 months of service (as of 1 September) and are recommended by their unit commander.

After last month's exceptionally good promotion news the September quotas are comparatively thin. Sixth Army received slots for 6 new master sergeants and 13 sergeant first class. And these promotions are to go only to men working in their combat MOS.

Post, which was allocated 344 E-4 promotions in August, received only 30 this month. Detachments 1 and 2 at Sixth Army Headquarters received a total of 7 E-4 allocations.

Egad! Now It's Lizards!

Camp Schimmelpfennig, Japan—The Army has never put out a manual on how to play nursemaid to baby lizards, but that didn't prevent Pfc. Joseph Coch of the 5th Cav. RCT's Co. F from "hatching" and raising a pair of most unusual mascots for his unit.

The mascots started out as a couple of tiny grey eggs found and given to Coch when the 5th Cav. was on maneuvers on Iwo Jima.

Coch put the eggs in his fountain pen cap and forgot about them. Back in Japan, he put the cap and the still-forgotten eggs in his footlocker.

One morning he opened the locker to find two tiny lizards peering out at him. Getting right to work, he fixed them a home in a glass jar, fed them live insects and plants, and named them Iwo and Jima.

Now they're a couple of mascots of Co. F well adjusted to Army life. (AFPS)

Top Generals Will Discuss Key Issues

The sixth annual Sixth Army Reserve Components Advisory Group Conference on National Guard and Army Reserve matters will be conducted at the Presidio of San Francisco tomorrow.

Convened by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, the conference will be attended by high ranking Regular Army, National Guard and Army Reserve officers from the Sixth Army area.

Following Honor Guard ceremonies, scheduled for 0800 hours at the Presidio, the conference will be formally opened by General Young.

During the meeting the group will review the implementation of Reserve Component programs throughout the Army area and study recommendations made toward continual improvement in planning and operations.

Specific recommendations studied by this group which are deemed to warrant adoption are forwarded to Department of the Army for further consideration.

Chairman for the conference is Major General R. F. Ennis, deputy Sixth Army commander.

Honor Guard For French Deputies Due Here Today

Scheduled to be honored are seven senators, 13 deputies and one Parliament secretary. One French Embassy escort and three French newsmen, accompanying the group, will also witness the ceremony.

Augmentation Act Will Appoint 7,000 New Officers

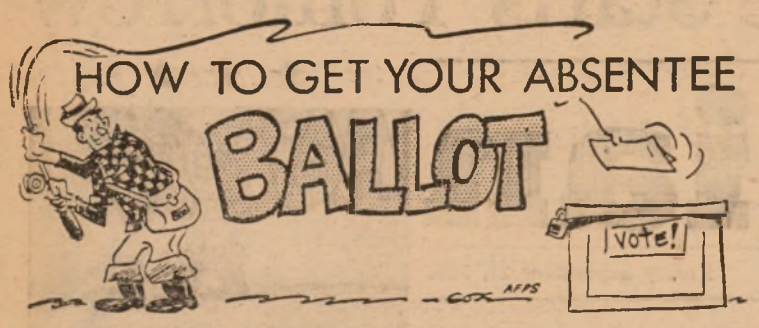
Washington — The Army, which will receive applications for Regular Army commissions during a four-month period ending 31 January, plans to appoint about 7,000 officers during the following two years under the Regular Officer Augmentation Act of 1956.

The biggest source of additions to the Regular Army's officer corps is expected to come from the approximately 40,000 Reserve officers who are now on active duty. Others eligible include Reserve and National Guard officers not currently in the active Army and qualified specialists not now holding commissions but with scientific backgrounds.

Here are the key provisions as they apply to the Army:

The maximum age at the date of appointment is 27 for most officers but differs for appointments in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, Army Medical Service and Chaplains Corps. The age may be increased according to the amount of service credited for promotion purposes at the time of appointment.



Officers appointed under the new law must be of such age that they would be able to complete 20 years active commissioned service before reaching the age of 55. This applies to commissioned service both before and after appointment as a Regular Army officer.

The ceiling on the number of Regular Army male and WAC officers is raised from 30,600 to 49,500, or about 50 per cent of the total commissioned strength. However, the goals approved by the President call for reaching 35,640 (72 per cent of the authorized total) by July 1, 1963.

This program does not apply to Medical and Dental officers, whose appointments are covered by other legislation.

Regardless of whether they were unsuccessful in previous applications, qualified personnel may apply for RA commissions under the new program. Final selections will be made by boards of senior officers convened at the Department of the Army level. (ANS) well D. Taylor, that one of the most important and most urgent tasks of the Army is the development of an adequate and well trained Reserve Force.

To insure that the program receives appropriate attention at DA level, an Assistant Secretary of the Army has been specifically designated for Manpower and Reserve Forces and devotes an appreciable part of his time to the latter function.

In addition, two special staff sections are totally involved in RFA activities—the Office of the Chief, Army Reserve and ROTC Affairs, and the National Guard Bureau. In further recognition of the importance of the Army Reserve components, a Special Assistant to the Chief of Staff for Reserve components has been designated.

General Gaither occupies the newly created post of Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, Headquarters, Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va.

The article concludes with a statement by General Willard G. Wyman, Commanding General of the Continental Army Command, to the effect that, "The importance of continuing to give top priority and maximum effort to insure the success of our reserve program cannot be emphasized too strongly." (ANS)

'Soviet Armed Forces' Set For Weekly Discussion

The Soviet Armed Forces constitute the striking arm of the total Soviet system, a society which is in a permanent state of war with the capitalist world, states this week's troop information topic, "The Soviet Armed Forces."

For the Soviets, according to the information topic, war is politics conducted by other means. All peoples under Kremlin control are considered fighters in a worldwide class struggle. From the Communist viewpoint, the soldier is a proletarian in uniform; the people, soldiers in worker's or peasant's dress.

The Soviet Armed Forces are a political instrument of Russian foreign policy and at the same time the tool of the Communist Party. Through its armed forces, particularly the Red Army, the Soviet Union has extended the Communist world and made Russia the center of a vast transcontinental empire which challenges American interests and ideals.

Any future war will bring American forces into contact with the Soviet military either directly or indirectly. No future war could reach general proportions without the engagement of the Soviet Union. Future brush wars would bring American troops up against either Soviet or Soviet-trained troops, as in Korea.

The information topic will take a brief, overall look at the Soviet military establishment, with emphasis on the Army, its size, quality, development and place in the Soviet system.

It will deal with the political administration of the armed forces and the role of the secret police which constitute a second armed force in itself. One of the functions of the secret police is to act as a political watchdog over the military.

Finally the topic will consider Ivan as a fighting man, his weaknesses and capabilities.

In 1935 Colonel Forrest entered the United States Military Academy, and following graduation in 1939 was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry. He was then assigned to the 7th Infantry Division at Fort Ord until the Spring of 1941.

During World War II Colonel Forrest served in Alaska, initially in the Aleutian Islands with the 37th Infantry Regiment and then from 1944 until 1945 as Commanding Officer, Alaskan Mountain Training School on Adak Island.

In 1946 Colonel Forrest was assigned as a U.S. Army observer-member with the Canadian Army's "Exercise Musk-Ox," a 3000-mile expedition from Fort Churchill on Hudson across the Arctic Circle, designed to test equipment for Arctic operations.

Upon his return to the United States he was assigned to the U.S. Army's Mountain Training Center at Fort Carson, where he served until February, 1947, as an instructor in mountain climbing and "over-snow movement."

Colonel Forrest entered the Army Aviation program in the spring of 1947, receiving pilot training at San Marcos Air Force Base, Tex., and Fort Sill, Okla.

Upon completion of his pilot training in October, 1947, he was ordered to the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Lewis as infantry battalion commander and participated in "Exercise Yukon," an Alaskan operation involving the air movement of troops to Alaska and their further movement by air and resupply by air in Alaska.

Colonel Forrest remained with the 2nd Division until the spring of 1948, when he was ordered to the Artillery Center at Fort Sill as supervisor of flying training for the Artillery School, a post he held until September, 1950.

His next assignment was at Sixth Army Headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco, where he remained until the winter of 1951, serving as aviation officer with the Sixth Army's G-3 (Plans, Operations and Training) Section.

From the winter of 1951 until the summer of 1952 Colonel Forrest was in Korea, where he served as Aviation Officer for the 10th Corps, winning the Air Medal for participating in 30 combat missions, and subsequently served as an infantry battalion commander with the 25th Infantry Division.

Upon his return to the United States he entered the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and upon graduation from the college was assigned to Norfolk, Va., where he served as Aviation Officer, G-3 Section, Headquarters, Continental Army Command, prior to reporting to his present assignment at Sixth Army Headquarters earlier this month.

In addition to the Air Medal, Colonel Forrest was also awarded the Legion of Merit for his performance of duty in Alaska during World War II. He is a qualified parachutist, having taken airborne training at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., in 1945.

MP Corps Celebrates 15th Anniversary

Tuesday Is Inactivation Day For 505th MPs

Slate Midweek Taps For Local Battalion

The long-time guardians of Presidio of San Francisco law and order— the 505th Military Police Battalion—will be inactivated Tuesday, bringing to an end a colorful and historic tour of active duty.

In accordance with Presidio Headquarters General Orders Number 8, the battalion will be inactivated and transferred to the Control of Department of the Army, which authorized the move in a letter received here early in June.

The 505th's inactivation will be the third such in as many months.

Earlier the 716th at Fort Dix and the 701st—the 505th's predecessor here—at Fort Knox were removed from the Army's active duty roster.

Please convey my personal greetings to all Military Police personnel on this the 15th anniversary of the Military Police Corps. This anniversary is a milestone in the progress which has been achieved. We can look back with pride on the accomplishments and advancements made in the past 15 years. The Military Police, by their untiring efforts, extreme devotion to duty, and esprit de corps have contributed much to the high reputation we enjoy in all echelons of the service and public life.

However, there can be no letup in our assigned tasks and performance of duty. The ability shown by the Military Police Corps in the past is ample proof that we will successfully meet any future tests or trials with which we may be confronted.

My staff joins me in wishing each of you a very happy and successful anniversary.

JOHN P. McKENNA
Lt. Col., MPC
6th Army Acting
Provost Marshal

To replace the 505th, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, DA has authorized the Presidio the 163rd MP Company, which will be made up of four officers and 123 enlisted men, all drawn from the battalion.

The 163rd will carry out strictly normal Post MP duties and not render outside support, a hallmark of the 505th, whose officers and men are proud of its role in Atomic Energy Commission projects and other Army commitments it was called on to perform.

The battalion's latest function, of course, was its duty in the 1956 AEC tests at the Pacific Proving Ground, Marshall Islands.

Previously, the unit rendered security support for the atom tests at Frenchman's Flat in Nevada. The 505th served three years in succession at the Camp Desert Rock, Nev., station.

The 505th also supplied Military Police support during last year's huge Army-Air Force Exercise Sage Brush at Fort Polk, La., and has frequently provided similar support for National Guard troops during summer training at Camp Roberts, California.

In addition, the 505th, a General Reserve unit required to maintain a combat-ready status, conducted its own training on battalion and company levels at sprawling Hunter Liggett Military Reservation.

During World War II the 505th saw action in Europe after activation at Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky. The unit landed in France in September, 1944, advanced with the Allied armies into Germany and crossed the Rhine River with elements of the British Second Army in March, 1945.

After the surrender of the Wehrmacht, the 505th was assigned to occupation duties in Vienna, Austria, and remained there until inactivated in 1948.

It is with deep pride and personal satisfaction that I offer you my congratulation on the 15th anniversary of the Military Police Corps.

As one of the younger members of the Army community you have consistently proven your worth—in war and peace.

Your contribution to troop discipline and orderly understanding has been immeasurable.

Your dedication to sound tradition and your deep-rooted loyalty have added high polish to modern military esprit.

It is our sincere wish that this and all future anniversaries will find you high in hope and proud in the spirit of the fine Corps you serve with.

CARL E. LUNDQUIST
Colonel, Infantry
Deputy Post Commander

On the occasion of the 15th anniversary of the Military Police Corps, I extend to it the congratulations of the entire Army.

Under conditions of peace and war, the members of the Military Police Corps have maintained military standards essential to the discharge of their important responsibilities. They have served with notable efficiency in a wide range of duties from combat MPs to scientifically trained investigators. By their professional competence they have made discipline in the Army.

I extend to the Military Police Corps my best wishes for continued success in the discharge of its important mission.

MAXWELL D. TAYLOR
General, U. S. Army
Chief of Staff

Congratulations to you as a member of the Army team on this the 15th anniversary of the Military Police Corps. I send you my sincere appreciation for the outstanding service rendered to this command. The Military Policemen's motto, "Of the Troops and For the Troops," is fitting for the task you perform.

In the 15 years of your Corps' history, you have indeed established an enviable record. The Military Policeman today is a trained specialist, whose smart appearance, loyalty and devotion to duty is gratifying. You can be justifiably proud of your outstanding record and high reputation enjoyed within the Armed Forces.

ROBERT N. YOUNG
Lieutenant General, USA
Commanding 6th Army

Meet A Typical Military Policeman

Sp3 Lloyd (Red) Davis is one of the MP's who man the Presidio's main gate information station. Proud of his job and his appearance, Red is typical of a good Military Policeman.

With a job that involves answering from 75 to 150 questions in a six-hour shift, he finds that one of the main demands of his job is patience. But the silly questions don't bother him as much as the unanswerable ones.

This happened just once. He was stumped when someone wanted to know the location of a downtown department store. About half the questions asked concern San Francisco rather than the Presidio itself.

Front gate MP's are picked because they are sharp and know the answers. To stay sharp Red spends from 1½ to two hours each night cleaning and shining his gear. Under a hot sun the wax on his ammunition pouch and first aid kit melt and must be completely redone each evening.

While Red's primary mission is to answer questions and be nice to people, he occasionally has to use some of his other MP training. He may have to flag down a speeding car or control a drunk.

The job, like many MP jobs, is not easy. During most of the daylight hours the guard is required to stand on the step of his guard house. At night he can retreat from the fog and the cold into the tiny house, but he must be always alert.

Each shift is six hours. However, the guards may call the Provost Marshal when they desire relief.

For those like Red, who feel the pride of their corps, this a good job. In his words: "I like it very much!"

Former 505th EM Wins High Praise As Missile Grad

A former enlisted member of Company B, 505th Military Police Battalion, has been cited as a "distinguished graduate" of the Artillery and Guided Missile Officers' Candidate School at Fort Sill, Okla.

In a letter to Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, the school assistant commandant, Brigadier General Paul A. Gavan, declared Second Lieutenant Kenneth L. Morrison a "distinguished graduate and one who can look forward to a successful career as an Regular Army officer."

General Gavan also said, "his selection is considered to reflect great credit on his organization and on personnel instrumental in selecting him for an officer candidate."

163rd MP Company!

DA Sets New Designation For Military Police Unit

The Department of the Army this week selected a numerical designation for the Military Police company scheduled to replace the 505th MP Battalion at the Presidio, Tuesday.

Effective with the inactivation of the 505th Tuesday, Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, Post Provost Marshal, said the new unit will be known as the 163rd Military Police Company.

The unit, as indicated by the DA communication to Presidio Headquarters, will have an authorized strength of four officers and 123 enlisted men, less than half the present size of the 505th.

Captain Robert N. Anderson, heretofore, CO of the 505th's Company A, will be commanding officer of the 163rd.

The company will be made up of a composite group of personnel presently serving with the 505th.

Although its TO & E calls for strictly Post MP duties, the 163rd will perform building guard and prisoner escort duties until overstrength, short time personnel are discharged by the end of the year.

The Confinement Section and Post Provost Marshal Section, part of the 505th's commitments, will be Presidio functions effective with the battalion's inactivation Tuesday.

Young Corps Proves Invaluable In Both War And Peace

The Military Police Corps — in peace and war "of the troops and for the troops" — celebrates its 15th anniversary Wednesday, throughout the Army.

And as in past years, the Military Police Corps continues to provide the Army with two vital services:

1—Protection of the individual soldier and all military property, and

2—Field preparation for possible combat service.

The two-fold job of the MPC was pinpointed in the message General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, sent to all Military Police units on the occasion of their 15th birthday.

"They (the Military Policemen) have served with notable efficiency in a wide range of duties from combat MP's to scientifically trained investigators," declared General Taylor.

And since the Corps' formal inception — after years of informal organization — in 1941 the vital missions of the MP's have become increasingly emphasized.

The Military Policeman today has a broad variety of specialized skills and knowledge. To perform standard MP duties, soldiers in the Corps are instructed in a wide number of subjects, such as military justice, court procedures, investigative methods, authority and jurisdiction, town patrol, traffic control, riot control, first aid, drill and ceremonies, incident handling and, of course, combat duty.

Originally called the Corps of Military Police, the MPC was given permanent status as a regular branch of the Army in 1950.

This 15th anniversary of the Military Police Corps marks not only another year of splendid accomplishments but also a marked growth in stature.

The accomplishments of the members of the Corps have been characterized by devotion to duty, professional competence, pride in service and high soldierly standards. Their stature has grown in the eyes of both the Army and public by daily demonstrations that they are soldiers first and military policemen second.

While the Corps is still a teenager in relation to other veteran members of our great Army, it has early developed a seasoned adult approach to its mission of "service and assistance."

I am confident that we will continue to forge ahead.

Please extend my personal greetings and sincere good wishes to all members of the Military Police Corps in your area.

WILLIAM H. MAGLIN
The Provost Marshal General

Pride In Calling!

"None of us looks forward to the catastrophe of war with eager anticipation, but there is no more noble profession than that of the man who dedicates his life to be ready — amply ready — when his Nation's existence depends upon his skill to meet that catastrophe, to confine it and to resolve it in victory."—Admiral Forrest P. Sherman

'Something For Everyone' Is Motto Of Expanding Crafts Program; Two New Shops Opened This Week

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Fort Chronkhite dwellers can now take their pick of activities—boat building or plastic shaping, jewelry making or picture taking—with the opening of their new craft shop Tuesday.

At the Presidio, also on Tuesday, the Auto Craft Shop, Building 623 (adjacent to the motor pool) opened providing soldiers with facilities for working on their own cars. The shop, which has working space for eight vehicles, has equipment for almost every type of repair and overhaul job.

These two craft shop openings are the forerunners to the large, fully equipped craft shop scheduled to open at the Presidio the first of November. It will be located in the gymnasium area of the Special Services building 623.

A complete selection of woodworking machinery is being installed at the Fort Cronkhite shop, building 1006. Included are a bench saw, jig saw, band saw, jointer, shaper, drill press and lathe. And there are all the needed hand tools.

The shop, which has been freshly painted a two-tone cream and light green, will have a small but complete darkroom, boasting an Omega "D" enlarger.

Director of the Fort Cronkhite craft shop, Jim O'Brien, has plans for instituting a variety of craft projects as soon as time permits. These will include leather working, jewelry making with baked enamel and a variety of plastic work with fiberglass (such as customizing cars). He hopes in the near future to acquire welding equipment.

Enthusiastic with his new job, 35-year-old O'Brien comes to Fort Cronkhite after eight years of art study in California, Mexico, New York and Massachusetts. His own art emphasis is painting but he has had considerable craft experience.

For two years he worked for the YMCA in children's craft work. He plans eventually to institute a children's craft program at Fort Cronkhite.

Jewelry Oven, one of the items of craft equipment at the Fort Cronkhite Craft Shop opened this week, is examined by shop director Jim O'Brien. Purpose of the kiln is to bake enamel onto metal jewelry. Other crafts featured at the new shop are wood working, leather craft, plastic molding and photography. The building will be available to users on nights and weekends.

Post Girl Scouts Will Meet Monday

The initial Autumn meeting of the Presidio Girl Scouts, honoring newly-appointed leaders and guests, takes place in the Scout House (adjacent to Lombard Gate), Monday, 24 September, at 1930 hours.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, has been invited to attend the Girl Scout meeting for the purpose of officially welcoming the new leaders to the Scout organization.

AA Special Services Plans VIP Treatment For Champs

Fort Baker — Softball champions from all of the Army's Regional Antiaircraft Commands, assembled here for the First Annual Army AA Command Softball Tournament, 20-29 Sept., will have a full schedule of entertainment and recreational activities open to them, according to Lt. Col. Oscar W. Burford, command special services officer.

None of the team members is from San Francisco, so scenic tours of the area are high on the list of activities for each group. Each team will have a chance to take the famous 49-mile tour, which includes many of the historical and scenic areas of the city. Another favorite will be the Marin County tour, including the giant Redwoods of Muir Woods National Monument.

Some units are planning the newly-popular three-bridge circle tour, crossing San Francisco Bay on the Golden Gate Bridge, the Oakland Bay Bridge, and the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, which has just been opened.

The men will also be given the opportunity of going on a Special Services fishing trip, either in San Francisco Bay or in the ocean outside the Golden Gate. The giant Chinook salmon are now running in these waters and catches of 30- and 40-pounders are common and almost guaranteed.

Free tickets to local legitimate theaters, musical comedies and night clubs will be available to the softball champions. The Army Service Club will sponsor a dance, with San Francisco and Marin County hostesses, in honor of the teams one night during the tournament.

For Sunday, church services will be readily available on post and civilian churches. Also, plenty of free time for shopping, touring or just loafing will be available.

Ord Blasted From All-Army Games—Presidio Hurlers Fail

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

BULLETIN

Fort Dix (N. J.) — Defending champion Fort McPherson from the Third Army continued its winning ways in the all-Army baseball tournament here by defeating the 39th Infantry Regiment (USAEUR), 7-1, in third round of play.

Fort Carson, representing the Fifth Army, eliminated the Eighth Army (AFFE), 4-0, while Fort Lee (Second Army) knocked Brooke Medical Center (Fourth Army) out of contention with a 9-1 triumph.

Fort Devens from the First Army won its second game and dealt U. S. Army Pacific its first loss, 6-1.

Special to the Star Presidian

Fort Dix (N. J.) — The Fort Ord Warriors, proud rulers of the Sixth Army baseball world, fell flat on their faces in the all-Army tournament here this week.

The Warriors — bone tired after a grueling Sixth Army area playoff and the long transcontinental plane hop to this post—were knocked out of the tournament in the second round.

My Aching Head —Down on all fours and head sagging, the Presidio's Kenneth Johnson suffers a first-round knockout defeat to Fort Ord's Clemmie Turner in the feature bout of the Sixth Army Boxing championships at Oakland Army Terminal. Turner scored his KO in 2:34 of the opening heat to gain a place on the Sixth Army team ready to battle in the all-Army tourney next week.

United States Army in Europe team delivered the first blow and the Second Army's Fort Lee club applied the coupe de grâce in the second contest.

The USAEUR club chalked up an 8-3 triumph as Jack Tarr limited the West Coast squad to eight hits.

Fort Lee, taking the measure of Warrior hurlers, racked up 11 hits to score a wild and wooly 15-7 triumph.

In both contests, Fort Ord miscues helped the victors immensely. The Warriors, usually a smooth-playing reliable crew, fell apart in the field, committing six errors and paving the way for a host of opposition runs.

Two "draftees" from the Presidio of San Francisco—Pitchers Lee Walker and Roger Collins—failed to help the hapless Warriors in the opener.

Walker started on the mound for Fort Ord but was replaced by Collins in the sixth inning after USAEUR had taken an insurmountable lead.

Walker and Collins were touched for nine hits in the game.

The two pitchers were picked up by Fort Ord after it won the Sixth Army championship. The Warriors, with eight players scheduled for overseas duty and discharge, had hoped their late acquisitions would bolster their sagging pitching staff.

But it was not to be.

The defending champion, Fort McPherson (Third Army) team started the tournament in sizzling fashion.

McPherson blanked Fort Lee, 5-0, in its opener and then dumped the Fourth Army representative, Brooke Medical Center, 7-2, in its second round game.

The First Army entry, Fort Devens, clipped the Fifth Army's Camp Carson, 5-4, in a first round clash, while the 25th Infantry Regiment Musketeers, representing U. S. Army Pacific downed American Forces Far East (Eighth Army), 7-4, taking advantage of a number of fielding lapses on the part of the losers in the eighth inning when they scored six runs on only two hits.

Post Cage Team Needs More Help

Though still in the formative stages, Presidio of San Francisco's basketball team began to take shape and substance this week.

The Toreros, one of northern California's top service teams last year, engaged in a rugged workout early this week, with the result being the separation of the boys from the men.

Coach Hal Fischer put his charges through a grueling drill and then announced a tentative first string team headed by the lone returning veteran, Norm Ellenberger from Bradley University.

Behind Ellenberger, Fischer's roster includes the names of John Blackwell from Grant Tech College in Sacramento; Ronnie Reynoir, forward from Loyola of the South; Carroll Williams, the highest scoring cager in San Jose State's history; John Daniels, Carnegie Tech, and Al Magerman.

Fischer, who plans to carry a 15-man squad this season, still needs additional players. The six players named form the nucleus of his team, and he desires that any interested Presidio and sub-post soldiers contact him in Post Special Services sports office, Building 122, Phone 3968.

Fischer also announced the Toreros will play in the northern California Army-Air Force League this season. Teams in the loop include Travis, Parks, Hamilton, McClellan, Mather, Castle and Beale Air Force bases.

In addition, Fischer plans to take his charges on a southern California training trip in December. The Toreros will play top service and college teams in the southland, should the proposed trip take place.

Three tournaments are also on the Presidio schedule. These include the Sixth Army, Las Vegas Invitational and Pacific Association of the AAU tourney.

Practice will continue almost daily in the Letterman Army Hospital Gym.

CMD Surges In Pin Loop

The California Military District's bowling team surged to a six and one-half game lead over the Kingpins in recent action in the Special Services Mixed League.

With four weeks remaining, the Kingpins still have a chance to take over the lead which has been held by CMD since early in the season.

The Strugglers and the Pickups are fighting for third place, with the Rascals and the Recruiters still threatening. Standings:

	Won	Lost
CMD	57½	14½
Kingpins	51	21
Strugglers	41	31
Pickups	39	33
Rascals	37	35

Presidio Issues Call For Matmen

With the Sixth Army tournament looming on the horizon, the Presidio sports office today sent out a call for wrestlers to join the team.

Any post soldiers interested in the grunt and groan trade are urged to contact the sports office, Building 122, Phone 3968, for applications, Hal Fischer, athletic director, said.

The Sixth Army tournament is scheduled for Fort Lewis, Washington, 19-23 November. Berths are vacant in all weight classes.

Presidio Heavy KO'd In Opening Round

The Fort Lewis Chiefs, Sixth Army Area boxing champions, set their sights on winning the all-Army tournament at Fort Myer, Va., today.

The Chiefs, loaded with ring hopefuls, captured the Sixth Army finals at Oakland Army Terminal last week by taking seven of eight championships.

The lone non-Fort Lewis winner was Fort Ord's light heavyweight, Clemmie Turner, who flattened the only Presidio of San Francisco boxer, Ken Johnson, in the tourney, in the first round of their bout.

Turner scored a knockout in 2:34 of the opening heat over Johnson to win the championship of his division.

Johnson, light heavyweight champion of Okinawa and runner-up in the northern California Armed Forces Tournament at Hamilton Air Force Base last spring, just didn't have it against Turner, U.S. Army in Europe champ in 1954 and 1955.

Fort Lewis' Charlie Cooks, an Oakland boy, decisioned John Jackson of Fort Ord in a three round light-heavy battle that was rated as the second top bout of the night.

Marvin Stevens, Ft. Lewis, bantamweight, no opponent; Jesus Gomez, Ft. MacArthur, featherweight, no opponent; Claud Jones, Ft. Lewis, tko'd Rudy Avilla, Ft. MacArthur, 2, lightweight; Frank Gomez, Ft. Lewis, no opponent, light welterweight; Frank Dunagan, Ft. Lewis, dec. Albert Wong, Ft. MacArthur, 3, welterweight; Curtis Jameson, Ft. Lewis, no opponent, light middleweight; Melvin Roy, Ft. Lewis, dec. Neil Riley, Ft. Ord, 3, middleweight.

Army Lt. Wins Pentathlon

Bern, Switzerland — First Lt. Edgar O'Hair, who last year was second in the pentathlon at the Pan-American Games and 18th in the world championships, won the international modern pentathlon title here.

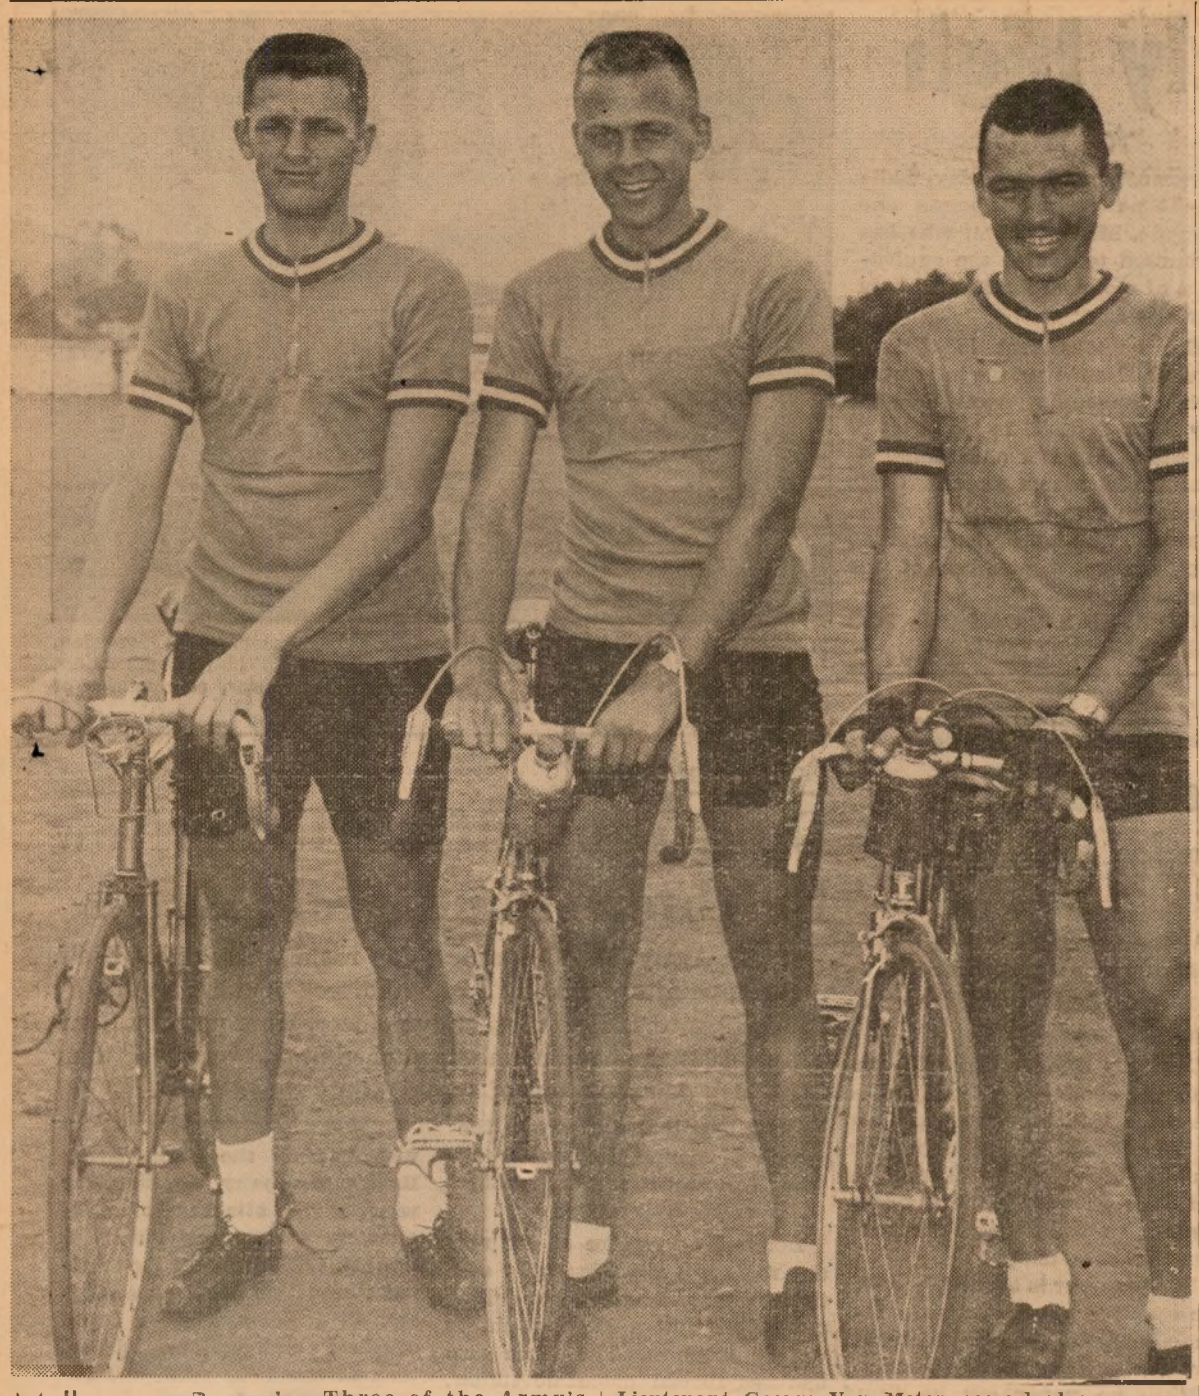
O'Hair, one of the top candidates in training at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., for the U. S. Olympic pentathlon team, piled up 4,599 points in the five-event military-style competition. Second place in the individual standings went to Bjoern Insulander of Sweden with 4,556 points.

O'Hair's teammate, 1st Lt. Harlan Johnson, finished seventh in the individual standing with 4,259 points.

In the team competition, the U. S. finished second to Sweden. The Swedes had 13,406 points to the Americans' 12,558.

The U. S. was represented by O'Hair, Johnson, Marine M/Sgt. William Knuppel and Coast Guard Lt. (jg) Bill Vendl.—AFPS

Los Angeles — The Memorial Coliseum here and the Rose Bowl at Pasadena rank as the Nation's largest stadiums with 103,000 capacity.



8,000 Fish Saved From Folsom Sump

Department of Fish and Game crews have rescued 8,000 brown bullheads, 200 white catfish and 100 smallmouth bass from a sump at the extreme lower level of Folsom Power House on the American River.

The fish apparently were trapped in the sump when a check valve from the power house afterbay failed.

Rough Fish Driven From Siskiyou Lake

Medicine Lake in western Siskiyou has been chemically treated to eradicate the tui chub, a rough fish which had driven out most of the trout population. Department of Fish and Game crews will plant the lake with catchables for the 1957 season, and fingerlings thereafter.

Melbourne Bound —Three of the Army's Olympic Games cycling hopefuls pose after winning a berth on the U.S. team in the trials at Lake Merced. From left, Pvt. Erhard Neumann, winner of the 125-mile road race; Second Lieutenant George Van Meter, second place finisher in same event; and Pvt. Bernard Dodd, alternate on the road race squad. Servicemen captured four of ten berths on the team.

2 Soldiers Capture Olympic Berths In Cycle Trials Here

Four servicemen—including two Oakland Army Terminal stationed soldiers—have returned to normal duty today, but look forward to representing the United States in the Olympic Games cycle races next November.

Lead by Private Erhard Neumann and Second Lieutenant George Van Meter, servicemen captured four of a possible ten berths on the U.S. squad which will make the trip to Melbourne, Australia, late next month.

Neumann, Van Meter and the Air Force's Joe Becker swept home in a blanket finish to nab three of the five places on the Games' road squad in the U.S. cycle trials opening race at Lake Merced.

Neumann, holder of the 1956 Missouri State championship, pedalled the 21 laps around the lake in six hours, seven minutes and 30 seconds to nail down first place. Van Meter and Becker finished right on his back in the 125-mile event.

The fourth serviceman to gain a trip to Australia was Allan Bell of the Navy. He finished the 1000 meter unpaced standing start race at San Jose Speedway in 1:13.5, to win over civilian racer Jack Disney, 1956 National senior champion. Both won places on the U.S. team.

Pfc. Bernard Dodd, of OAT, holder of the 125-mile National record, was named alternate in place of Thomas O'Rourke of Detroit who was disqualified in the second 125-mile event Monday.

Dodd finished fourth in that event, but was named alternate when O'Rourke was ruled out by officials because he touched another cyclist during the final sprint.

Altogether 47 cyclists started in the first road race, but the field was slashed as 24 fell victim to flat tires and other breakdowns.

Included among the victims was O'Rourke, who didn't have such bad luck when he was a member of the 1952 American team, and Arthur Longsjo, who made a stirring comeback by finishing second in the second road event.

George L. (Bud) Thorpe, the Olympic trials treasurer from San Francisco, described the final sprint as "one of the biggest mass drives I've ever seen, even bigger than in some national championships."

Dave Rhoads of San Jose, 1952 Olympics participant, won the second road race in 5:51, 19 minutes faster than Neumann's time in the opener.

West'rn Open Attracts Top Golfers Here

By Sp3 Walt Heil
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The Nation's top professional and amateur golfers are readying their irons and drivers today for the 53rd annual Western Open Golf tournament, scheduled this year for the Presidio of San Francisco course.

Slated for a four-day run on the spacious — but testing — Presidio links October 11 through 14, the tournament, the second oldest in the United States, is expected to draw a host of the finest golfers gracing courses in the nation today.

The tournament, sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, includes on its committee, three Army representatives, headed by Sixth Army Commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, and Colonels C. C. W. Allan and John N. Beck.

And if advance notices mean anything, the tournament, playing in a city which went mildly wild with the U.S. Open in 1955, should be a real jim-dandy.

The best names in United States golfing world will be on hand, according to entries received.

On hand for the links festivities will be old pro Lloyd Mangrum, young Turk Gene Littler, Bud Ward, Frank Stranahan, Jerry Barber, Mike Souchak, and Doug Ford.

Defending champion, Gary Middlecoff, still hasn't indicated whether he will attend. The golfing dentist from Memphis has been under doctor's orders to cut down his activities.

Three of San Francisco's top amateurs may also participate in the event. They are, of course, Harvey Ward, Ken Venturi and Bob de Roos. Their participation in the tournament would certainly assure its success. Tournament officials expect to hear shortly whether the trio will enter or remain on the sidelines.

The amateurs, naturally, are in the tournament for the prestige of a good showing and trophies, while the pros are in it for Uncle Sam's long green.

Altogether, $22,500 in cash prizes will be awarded the pros with the biggest chunk going to the winner. He'll receive a check for $5,000. The second place finisher will be in line for $2,500 and the third placer, $2,000.

Presidio military personnel will be given opportunity to attend the tournament. A number of tickets, according to Colonel Beck, will be distributed to interested enlisted men each day of the tournament.

Final arrangements are still pending, however.

In addition, it is expected a call for volunteers to act as gallery controllers will be put out by Presidio Headquarters.

752nd Title Bid Fails; Ack-Ack Units Open U. S. Play Tomorrow

The 752nd AAA Gun Battalion's dream of capturing the Sixth Antiaircraft Command softball championship came to a rude end last week at Fort Lawton, Washington.

A 5-0 whitewash at the hands of Los Angeles' powerful 865th AAA Missile Battalion ended for this year the 752nd's fond hopes of marching to the National championship.

The defeat was the second in a row for the local team which won the Presidio intermural title and the 30th Group championship before losing to the Southland crew in the third round of action.

Previously the 752nd Gunners dropped a 3-1 decision to Seattle's 28th Missile Battalion in the second round of play. The locals opened tournament play with a 3-0 triumph over the 83rd Missile Battalion of Hanford, Washington.

Marion Maddox twirled six-hit softball against the 865th, but his mates, running up against the superior slants of Pitcher Ed Martinez, couldn't find the range.

The 752nd's fate was identical to that of every other team entered in the tournament as the 865th grabbed the regional championship with startling ease.

Following the pasting job done on the 752nd, the champs blanked the 83rd twice by identical 2-0 margins.

The local team, however, did achieve some distinction in losing. It was the only losing team to score a run in the tournament. All other clubs went down to defeat without even a run to salvage some pride.

A heavy-hitting New England team and a chips-down winner from Los Angeles carry the favorites' tags among the five entrants in the Army Antiaircraft Command Softball Tournament opening at Fort Baker tomorrow.

Both sides—the 605th AAA Missile Battalion from Fort Banks (Boston), Mass., and the 865th AAA Missile Battalion from Fort MacArthur—are blessed with outstanding pitching and effective hitting.

Other regional champions entered in the double elimination meet represent the 35th AAA Brigade, Fort Meade (Baltimore); the 531st AAA Battalion from Ellsworth Air Force Base (Rapid City), South Dakota; and the 5th AA Regional Command, Fort Sheridan (Chicago), Ill.

Each team in the command-wide tourney won its own regional competition to qualify for the San Francisco trip.

The 865th bounced back from a 1-0 first round defeat in the Sixth AA tourney to take the championship with four straight shutout victories. Ed Martinez, righthander from Riverside, Calif., hurled all five games.

Drawings to determine first-round opponents will be held today. Play is to begin tomorrow at 9:15 a. m., following opening ceremonies featuring the Fort Mason Band, introduction of the teams and a welcoming address by Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant, commanding general of the Sixth AA Regional Command. It will run through Friday.

Post Intra Grid Loops Open Play

Football—touch-tackle style—gets off to a flying start Monday when Presidio of San Francisco opens its 1956 Intramural season at the Post Exchange and Fort Scott fields.

A total of 15 teams from the Presidio and Fort Scott areas have entered the Special Services leagues—and all are pointing to championship positions.

Both leagues will run until November 2, with an extra week probably set aside to play postponed games.

Action in the third league, Forts Baker, Cronkhite and Barry, will get under way once the Army Antiaircraft Command softball tournament is completed September 28.

Youth League Ends With Game, Picnic

The Presidio of San Francisco's Youth Baseball League closes its first full season with a flourish tomorrow.

The four-team league will fete its champion Pirate nine with awards and trophies and a picnic on the League's field near the 30th Engineer Motor Pool at the 25th Avenue entrance to the post at 2 p. m.

After the picnic the youngsters will form an all-league team and battle their fathers in a game. But the fathers, wise with the years—and a little out of shape—cagily didn't commit themselves on the length of the contest.

Colonel Arthur L. Bivens will be toasted for providing the Pirates with the Casey Stengel touch as manager.

Crusade Gifts Hit Early High

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A continuing and rapidly rising fever in the Star Presidian thermometer which gauges the pulse of the current Bay Area Crusade is causing optimism instead of anxiety in the minds of the fund drive sponsors.

Present temperature readings on the progress chart, despite the fact that no pay table collection has yet been made, show that the sum of $11,935.61 has been pledged, while $6,699.62 has been given in actual cash.

This sum, given in hard cash, does not include the hundreds of pledges made by unit members in the past few weeks, with the promise that they would be honored across the board during the September and October pay days.

To date, small military units, such as the Chaplain Section and the Inspector General Section, have already made one whole payday money gift to the Bay Area Crusade, with officers and enlisted personnel presenting monies commensurate to one day's salary according to specific rank.

High on the list of Presidio crusaders working in the interests of the success of the charitable fund drive as it reflects on the prestige and generosity of the Presidio at large, is the Wac Company of the 6002nd Service Unit whose cash contribution to the fund amounts already to $68.00 and an approximate 89 pay day pledges from among a possible 168 not yet contacted.

Of the Wacs contacted, several of the women holding the grade of E-6 have pledged contributions to the amount of a master sergeant's pay for one day, while the Wac company boasts one Private, Maxine Sliva, who has promised to donate the equivalent of a second lieutenant's pay for one day.

The obvious fact is that no amount of money in the interests of such a humanitarian cause as the Bay Area Crusade is too great or too little. Personal and family financial obligations are taken into account as they affect the donor in all ranks, whether he be a civilian employee or a member of the Armed Services.

NO AMOUNT CAN BE TOO GREAT OR TOO LITTLE!

Parade Champs get due recognition as Major Verne Marsden, commander of troops at last Friday's competition, presents the Award Plaque to Captain Eugene Gasior, commander of the Honor Guard.

New Rank!

Aide To General Wins Promotion

The rank of captain was conferred this week on George A. Meighen, aide to Major General Riley F. Ennis, deputy commanding general of the Presidio.

Serving his second tour of duty as General Ennis' aide, Captain Meighen came here last year from Fort Jackson, South Carolina, where he held a similar post during General Ennis' command of the 101st Airborne Infantry Division, and prior to that time was aide to Major General John A. Dabney before he was succeeded by General Ennis as Division Commander.

Captain Meighen is a West Point graduate. He served with the 3rd Infantry Division in Korea during 1952, returning on completion of his tour to Fort Benning where he was assigned as an instructor in the Ranger department.

Abandoned Cars Get Short Shift Under New Memo

Presidio policy regarding untagged and apparently abandoned automobiles has been clarified by Post memorandum number 71.

Company commanders will continually check their respective areas for vehicles that appear to be abandoned. If the automobile remains unmoved for three days and has no Post tag, the company commander will check his command for ownership.

If the owner is located, he will be required to register his automobile with the Provost Marshal or remove it from the post.

When no owner can be found the company commander will report the make of car and license number to the Provost Marshal by telephone. The vehicle will then be tagged with a traffic violation summons.

Busy Bandsmen!

Do-It-Yourself Day Room Now Brightens Band's Idle Hours

Sixth Army Band has a new day room and it did it itself.

With paint supplied by Post and direction and planning by CWO Richard L. Sears, executive officer, Headquarters Company (6002) the band members pitched in and "created" their light, airy day room out of an old, dingy squad room.

And now that they are in the mood of "doing it themselves," the bandsmen are repainting their entire living area.

Dominating feature of the new day room is a gigantic trophy case that stretches from floor to ceiling and holds half a hundred music victory trophies. The room also features special magazine stands, writing tables and an elevated TV stand.

The Band's new leisure room was officially opened Tuesday after it was examined by an inspection party from Post Headquarters, headed by Colonel Charles G. Rau, Post executive officer.

Captain Charles J. Monges, who became the Sixth Army Band's company commander when it was attached to Headquarters Company (6002), 9 August, 1956, provided the original stimulation behind the project. CWO Sears, who has years of officer's club work behind him, then designed the room and organized the work.

Much of the labor on the trophy case came from Sp-3 Jack Gifford, bandsman.

Almost every man inspected has at least a high school education; over 40 per cent had college training, with one-third of the company holding at least one college degree.

Flying Cranes!

Army Seeks 'Copters For 16-Ton Airlift

Washington — The Army has awarded contracts to five helicopter manufacturers to study design for a "flying crane" capable of airlifting 16 tons.

The builders will examine various approaches to develop a heavy-duty helicopter which can carry three to five times the cargo of present 'copters.

The Army is exploring the application of large rotary-wing type craft to provide better mobility and transportation of bulk cargo for short distances over terrain barriers.

Previous research has proved that a "heavy lift-type" 'copter is practical, though costs, mechanical and logistic support problems have delayed development.

Cash On The Barrelhead!

Local Worker Wins $110 Idea Bonus

A check of $110.00 was recently awarded to Mr. Jean P. Hare, of the Presidio, for his joint achievement in developing an alignment method for septular and final stage microwave transmitters. The award was presented by Captain A. C. Eldridge, commanding the Sixth Army Communications Station here.

An electronic installer and repair leadman with the Sixth Army Signal Section, Mr. Hare had previously been awarded a Department of the Army Certificate and cash prize for an earlier suggestion which has since been adopted for wider application at other Army Command and Administrative Network stations using specific types of microwave equipment.

Old Tune + New Lyrics = Army's Offical Song

The Department of the Army announced this week the adoption of "The Army Goes Rolling Along" as the official Army song.

The song is based on "The Caissons Go Rolling Along" by the late Brigadier General E. L. Gruber, with lyrics drawn from within the Army itself, revised and adapted by Dr. Harold W. Arberg, soldier music adviser, Special Services division of the Adjutant General's office. Copyright is held by the U.S. Army.

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker directed that the song be officially dedicated at U.S. Army installations throughout the world on Veterans' Day, 11 November.

"The Army Goes Rolling Along"

(Based upon "The Caisson Song" by Brigadier General E. L. Gruber. Revised and adapted by H. W. Arberg.)

VERSE:

March along, sing our song
With the Army of the Free.
Count the brave, count the true
Who have fought to victory.
We're the Army and proud of our name
We're the Army and proudly proclaim:

FIRST CHORUS:

First to fight for the right and to build the nation's might,
And the Army goes rolling along.
Proud of all we have done,
Fighting till the battle's won,
And the Army goes rolling along.
Then it's hi hi hey
The Army's on its way.
Count off the cadence loud and strong:
For where'er you go, you will always know
That the Army goes rolling along.

SECOND CHORUS:

Valley Forge, Custer's ranks,
San Juan hill and Patton's tanks,
And the Army went rolling along.
Minute Men from the start,
Always fighting from the heart,
And the Army keeps rolling along.

REFRAIN:

Then it's hi hi hey
The Army's on its way.
Count off the cadence loud and strong;
For where'er we go, you will always know
That the Army goes rolling along.
(Slower, more freely)

THIRD CHORUS:

Men in rags, men who froze
Still that Army met its foes,
And the Army went rolling along.
Faith in God, then we're right
And we'll fight with all our might,
As the Army keeps rolling along.
(In tempo)

REPRAIN:

Then it's hi hi hey
The Army's on its way.
Count off the cadence loud and strong;
(two, three)
For where'er we go, you will always know
That the Army goes rolling along
(keep it rolling)
And the Army goes rolling along.

Top Planner Named New Test Center Commander

Brigadier General Frederick W. Gibb, a chief planner for the Omaha Beach phase of the Normandy landing, has been named to head the new Continental Army Command Combat Development Test Center, which will be established in the Fort Ord-Hunter Liggett reservation area of California shortly.

The new installation will serve as a proving ground for the latest concepts of combat and represents the Army's newest and most modern effort to keep pace with the problems and complexities of future warfare.

During WWII, General Gibb was chief planner for the Omaha Beach phase of the 1st Infantry Division's Normandy landing, working out details of the most successful military operation.

He served with the 1st Division through combat as a battalion commander, later as the Division's plans and training officer, and finally as a regimental commander.

After World War II, General Gibb was assigned to the planning section of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the Allied command in Turkey, and was instrumental in welding the Greek and Turkish armies into a formidable fighting force.

In his previous position as Director of Organization and Training, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations, General Gibb helped with the preliminary planning which resulted in the establishment of the Test Center.

In his new mission, General Gibb will carry out a long standing Army requirement for testing of new concepts and doctrines of modern warfare development.

In the past the Army has utilized various areas for this operation. The California Test Center will permit extensive training and experimentation in one central location. Testing will be conducted from Fort Ord, with one or two battalions of the 10th Regimental Combat Team spending short periods of field work at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation. Both military and civilian evaluation personnel will be located at the Test Center.

Army Association Plans Annual Meet

The Army of the future will be on display and under discussion when the Association of the U.S. Army gets together for its second annual meeting in Washington, D. C., on 25-27 October.

There to speak on the new concepts governing Army policy will be Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker, General Maxwell D. Taylor, chief of staff, and General Willard G. Wyman, commanding general, Continental Army Command.

Industry will show off the support it provides for the Army on 16,000 feet of floor space. There the Army's most advanced "hardware" will be displayed.

New AR Stresses Army's Key Role In Missile Program

Washington — All Army personnel must acquire a sound understanding of guided and rocket missiles and their application to ground combat operations, according to a new Army Regulation.

Currently being distributed, AR 525-30 establishes the basic policy for the integration of missiles into the Army weapons system. This directive requires commanders to exploit the capabilities of missiles in training, planning, and operations.

The regulation also announces that surface-to-surface and surface-to-air units have been organized under approved tables of organization and equipment, trained, and assigned operational missions in the active Army.

The Commanding General, Continental Army Command is responsible, according to the directive, for the development of training programs, and tactical doctrine for the missile units. The artillery commander at each echelon is responsible—to his immediate commander—for command and control and basic recommendations as to use of the units.

In announcing policies, the regulation states that the ground commander must be capable of delivering the atomic punch using missiles in a wide variation of ranges.

It states also that Army forces have a primary requirement and responsibility for surface-launched missiles employed in support of combat incident to operations on land and in execution of the air defense mission assigned to the Army.

an editorial

Taking a bow--for you!

At first blush you might think we devoted a good part of this issue to blowing our own horn. And we did.

We're proud of being a key part of a prize-winning team. Glad to take a bow, but—strictly on the record—we want you to know that the bows we are taking are for you.

For it is to you—a prize-winning audience—that the lion's share of the credit should go.

Your loyalty, interest and critical readership have consistently spurred us on to greater efforts. Your contributions in news tips, diligent research on tough technical stories, and patient understanding of our deadline and space problems, have made this truly a representative media.

And yet with all our efforts we would remain impotent without that quality so vital to any successful military operation—command support and confidence.

This has been the key to the presentation of a factual and timely newspaper. This is the ingredient that makes an Army paper worth its salt.

To only say that we have enjoyed such support would be an understatement. Not only have we found interest and cooperation at every level, but a special eagerness to help us get the story first and in the best factual manner.

For the colonel who weekly exhorts his staff "if its worth reading, get it in the Star Presidian" to the staff chief who works hard to get us a first, or at least an equal break on top news stories. . . .

For the enlisted clerk, who diligently checks his records to furnish the statistics that will "make" our story, to the first sergeant who keeps us abreast of colorful unit features. . . .

We're taking a bow!

A bow for a prize-winning audience—that would settle for nothing less than the best!

PED Will Credit Reserve Officers With Added Time

Washington — The Army has established a new method of indicating the active duty service of officers in their current grade for determining promotion eligibility.

Prior to enactment of the Reserve Officers Personnel Act of 1954, active duty time was determined from date of rank.

Passage of this legislation changed the meaning of date of rank, since it allows Reserve officers going on active duty after 30 June, 1955, credit for points accumulated in Reserve activities, according to the Army.

With temporary AUS promotions based on active duty only, an "Army of the United States promotion eligibility date" (PED) will be used to indicate active commission service in grade.

The date of rank and PED for officers serving continuously since June, 1955, will be the same.

However, those who enter active duty after that date, or who have had a "break" in service and Reserve credits, will have PED differing from their respective dates of rank.

PED, which will be shown on all promotion orders, has no effect on service for pay, retirement and other purposes, the Army said. (AFPS)

Star Presidian Wins Army Award

Recognition of The Star Presidian came through a new system of evaluating publications.

The Star Presidian* won its citation in the first world-wide basis competition. Previously Army newspapers were judged on a quarterly basis, with overseas and Stateside publications receiving separate analysis.

"The Star Presidian's excellent over-all readability, typographical attractiveness, conformance to policy and general worthiness in furtherance of Troop Information objectives are the significant factors which have determined its selection for this award," said General Meloy.

Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young made the presentation to Erwin, who was accompanied by DPC Colonel Carl E. Lundquist and Post Troop Information and Education Officer Major Earle K. Stewart.

The General extended his "personal congratulations to Erwin and members of The Star Presidian staff who were responsible for publication."

The DPC also heaped praise on The Star Presidian. Said he: "The greatest credit for this outstanding achievement goes to you (Erwin) as editor. Your hard work, professional ability and leadership have made it possible for you and your small staff to publish this outstanding newspaper in spite of the strictest budgetary and personnel limitations."

A veteran of 16 years military journalism, Erwin came to the Presidio from Camp Roberts where he organized the Camp Roberts Parade newspaper following discharge from the Navy in 1950.

He enlisted in the Navy in 1941. During his service career, Erwin edited various station and shipboard newspapers and was assistant to the public information officer, ComFair, NAS, Alameda

My Vote—Freedom's Privilege

The Seeding of Democracy

"Equality and freedom, like a seed that is just planted, require constant care, not just taken for granted."

—Capt. Robert W. Steele, Third Prize Award Winner
Finance and Accounting Section
Governors Island, N. Y.

Cultivating our freedoms, Capt. Steele feels, is most important. His letter for the 1955 Freedoms Foundation awards program notes that these freedoms must be nurtured carefully.

Among these freedoms is the right to vote for the candidate of our choice. This year's theme in the Freedoms Foundation program is "My Vote—Freedom's Privilege."

The top cash award for the best letter on this subject is $1,000. Armed Forces personnel, Reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty are eligible. Top winners in each of the five services, with commanding officers' approval, will be guests in Washington, D. C., for the inauguration of the President this January.

There are two second place awards of $500. Third place prizes include eighty $100 awards. Cash winners will receive the George Washington Honor Medal. Honor Medals also will be given separately.

Send your letter of no more than 500 words to Freedom Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. All letters must be received by Nov. 11, 1956. (AFPS)

Write Right Now!

Army Life in oils surrounds the 21st Engineer's training room at Fort Scott thanks to the skill and imagination of Sp3 Perren Gerber (above) who in civilian life worked as a free lance artist in a variety of fields, including magazine cartooning and technical illustration. Parts of the three wall murals depict the special life of the engineers while other parts, as above, show the soldier's life in general.

Dig That Crazy Color Scheme!

Soldier Artists Add Murals To Brighten Barrack's Decor

Brilliant, colored murals depicting all phases of Army life—fighting, working, playing, training—cover the training room walls of the 21st Engineer Company (Base Photomapping) barracks of the 30th Engineer Group, Fort Scott, to mark this room as one of the most unique of its type.

Truly a do-it-yourself project, the room features many other innovations that reflect Company Commander Captain Milton S. Saunders' desire to create the best possible atmosphere for training.

Near rows of identical numbered (1 to 128) wooden chairs dominate the center of the room. In the front the only wall not covered by a mural contains a floor-to-ceiling map where key world news areas are spotted each week. Overhead, special metal light shades designed by men of the 21st, provide indirect lighting for the room.

Two small spotlights in the front of the room illuminate the instructor and the training aids. In the rear stands a specially built projection booth. Sound speakers are strategically located to provide balanced sound throughout the room.

Invitation!

"Come up to see the murals any weekday during duty hours," is the invitation that Captain Milton S. Saunders, company commander of the 21st Engineer Company, extends to all persons interested in viewing their unique training room. Visitors should check in to the orderly room, Building 1216, Fort Scott.

But it is the panoramic murals that make this area stand out as a room extraordinary. This project started eight months ago when Captain Saunders, the TI & E NCO, and Sp3 Perren Gerber talked over ways of dressing up the training room.

Sp3 Gerber, who as a civilian free lance artist drew everything from comic book illustrations and magazine cartoons to technical illustrations, submitted a scale drawing of the entire wall area.

After his work was checked for accuracy on such items as proper equipment, uniforms, decorations, insignia and weapons, Sp3 Gerber went to work. Under the supervision of Lt. Donald W. Anderson, unit training officer, he first scaled light pencil drawings and then added to them in charcoal and conte crayon. Now in its final stage the mural is being painted in brilliant oils.

And if you don't think this mural is a masterpiece of accurate reporting on the Army, just check the color of the shoes on the soldiers in the mural. Black!

Besides the general views of soldiers in church, eating, participating in sports, battling, there are views of the special work of the 30th Engineer Group. One elaborate panel shows the members of the 21st hard at work performing the complex processes of photo map making.

The artist, Sp3 Gerber, is a native of Chicago. He plans to move to New York City after his discharge and continue the schooling he began at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts.

9th AA Battalion Will Fete Second Birthday Monday

The 9th AAA Missile Battalion, which celebrates its second anniversary Monday, has a colorful and varied history which began when it was organized as a coast artillery regiment to guard the harbor of Boston.

Today the battalion's four NIKE firing batteries occupy permanent sites in the San Francisco Bay area. The 9th has kept pace with military advancement turning its weapons from the sea to the sky.

A variety of festivities are planned to celebrate Monday's anniversary. The four NIKE sites are open to the public, and tours of positions, including the areas in which the men live and work, will be conducted.

History of the 9th begins back in 1924 when it was organized as the 9th Coast Artillery Regiment. At that time its five batteries had originated from four states, New York, New Jersey and Maryland, besides Massachusetts.

Before World War II the 9th was again activated and guarded the eastern shoreline during World War II. In 1944 it was again disbanded and remained so until the outbreak of the Korean conflict, when it was redesignated 9th Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion and assigned to the San Francisco area.

Then, two years ago, the battalion, with headquarters at Fort Baker, was reorganized from a gun battalion to a NIKE missile battalion.

Award To AA Civilian

A military honor certificate was awarded this week to a Fort Baker employe, Mrs. Marion C. Valentine, who introduced an idea to improve daily administrative operations and the working conditions of her fellow employes.

Mrs. Valentine, a stenographer in the G-e Section, Plans and Operations, was presented with the winning certificate by Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant, commanding the 6th AA Regional Command.

How Lucky can you get, asks Chaplain Colonel John T. Kilcoyne, outgoing Sixth Army Chief Chaplain as he greets his replacement, Chaplain Colonel Edward J. DeMars. Father Kilcoyne is outbound for assignment in Germany, early in November. Father DeMars has just returned from foreign duty, also in Germany.

Chaplains Meet Again; One Coming, One Going

The paths of two military chaplains re-crossed at the Presidio this week when Colonel John T. Kilcoyne, Sixth Army's Chief of Chaplains, greeted his replacement, Colonel Edward J. DeMars, newly arrived from duty with Headquarters, Seventh Army in Germany. Father Kilcoyne is slated to fill his next chaplaincy-assignment with the Southern Area Command, Munich, Germany, early in November. He came to the Presidio 17 months ago.

During earlier foreign duty tours, Chaplain Kilcoyne and Chaplain DeMars were neighbors in the Far East, when Colonel Kilcoyne was assigned to the I Corps in Kyoto, Japan, and Colonel DeMars was on duty with the Eighth Army's 25th Infantry Division, later as Division Chaplain in Osaka.

Serving his 23rd year as a military chaplain, Colonel Kilcoyne is a native of San Francisco. He completed his studies for the priesthood at Saint Patrick's Seminary, Menlo Park, California. The family home is in Los Altos.

Colonel DeMars began his military chaplaincy over 15 years ago. He is a resident of suburban Detroit and prior to his military service he was assistant pastor for Saint Rita's and Saint Phillip Neri's Roman Catholic churches in the Detroit dioceses.

Stateside assignments formerly held by Father DeMars include duty at Fort Lewis, Washington, Fort Ord, California, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland, Camp Polk, Louisiana and Vaughan General Hospital in Chicago, Illinois. His recent chaplaincy in Germany covered three years and six months.

Few things are as hard to get as master sergeant stripes these days, so Msgt. Gilbert G. Whaite, was especially honored recently when he received his third rocker in a ceremony at the 441st AAA Missile Bn., Fort Cronkhite.

During the ceremony the stripes were presented by Lt. Colonel Oliver E. Griest, Commanding Officer, 441st AAA Missile Bn., and Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the 30th AAA Group.

Msgt. Whaite, serves as Sergeant Major of the 441st AAA Missile Bn.

Colonel Inspires New March

That catchy march you may be listening to at a reception for visiting VIPs, a retirement parade, or just any event that features members of the Women's' Army Corps, could be—"La Coronela" (The Lady Colonel).

What's so unique about that?

Well, we believe it is the first march in history to be written for and dedicated to a lady soldier.

Further, it was written by a Nicaraguan Colonel (male variety) for an American Colonel (female variety) and played for the first time anywhere by the Sixth Army Band at the Presidio under the direction of the author.

Principals in our little drama were Professor Gilberto Vega, director of the National Guard Orchestra of Nicaragua, and a guest of the State Department visiting the Presidio, last week; Lieutenant Colonel Helen Corthay, executive officer of Sixth Army Information, and the first lady colonel that our visitor ever met.

Following the meeting, the formidable professor, an internationally famed band director and composer, returned to the solace of his local suite and whipped out "La Coronela." He presented the original score to Colonel Corthay the following day when he returned to the Presidio to direct the local group in the new composition.

Latin Director Professor Gilberto Vega, director of the National Guard Orchestra of Nicaragua, takes a turn at directing the Sixth Army Band in "La Coronela" while visiting at the Presidio recently.

Near Finish are these returnees from the Far East who are literally minutes away from honorable discharge. Many of the men are returning to school; others to former jobs. The men here, about to turn in part of their clothing, are processing for discharge at the Transfer Station, Hq. Personnel (6020) Oakland Army Terminal.

Army Transfer Station Proves Tops In Busy, Difficult Job

Soldiers returning from the Far East to the Oakland Army Terminal's Personnel Center Transfer station (6020) for discharge are "eager to get," according to the unit's control sergeant, Sfc. Jose M. Pichardo.

And it is to this end that the tight little crew of 13 EM and two officers direct their effort. Although the Transfer Station was originally set up to handle only 125 discharges per month it averages over 300 and last month set an all-time record of 582 during the early out for school rush.

Not only were the men let out "without delay," but they were released after two days processing which is 24 hours under the authorized time.

Mission of the Transfer Station (6020) is to process and discharge all personnel arriving from the Far East by airplane and all personnel with dependents arriving by boat. In addition, it discharges the Army personnel in the immediate area.

Actually, the Transfer Station is but a small part of the operations of the Personnel Center (6020) located under one gigantic roof at the Oakland Army terminal. The Returning - Reassignment Station and the Overseas Replacement Station, an addition of the Transfer Station, handle thousands of men going and coming from the Far East and other areas.

But no unit is under more pressure than the Transfer Station which issues the discharges. "If we get 500 men, 498 of them have an excuse why they should have special treatment to get out in less than two days," says Sergeant Pichardo.

Cases for superquick outs have ranged from a farm boy—already getting out on an early release — who insisted a record early crop ripening necessitated his getting out immediately to a private who claimed that if he didn't get home "right now," his girl was going to marry another. Reasons like these rarely melt the hearts of the grizzled sergeants who hear them by the hundreds.

On the other hand, if a man has a legitimate reason for haste, the Transfer Station can really hustle. A man whose father was dying rocketed through processing in less than three hours.

Another soldier appeared for processing with a child in his arms, because the mother was ill and there was no one to care for the tot. He was given special service after baby sitting arrangements were made for the child.

Confusion on the part of a soldier as to what his rights are upon discharge occasionally leads to difficulty explains Major William T. Bateman, commander of the Transfer Section (6020).

Such a case concerns an enlisted man who was met at the dock by mother, father, aunt, grandfather, little brother, sister and girl friend. The family had come all the way from Maine and the soldier expected the Army to transport him and family home.

A major part of the discharge processing is devoted to orientating the individual as to his rights as a veteran and his opportunities as a civilian. The dischargee is informed of employment possibilities and receive explanation on his reserve obligation. Social security and survivor benefits are described, and he learns what to expect from finance.

Other phases of processing include signing discharge papers, taking a physical, drawing final pay and turning in clothing. Toward the end men hear a short farewell speech in which Major Bateman tells them that the Army has appreciated their service.

The (6020) Personnel Center's attitude toward its function is summed up by its commander, Colonel L. A. Ayers, who states: "The Army today is taking cognizance of the problems of the individual. . . ."

He entered primary flying school, and the following January he was assigned to the 20th Infantry Regiment at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., the first of many pre-World War II assignments in the United States, in the Philippines and in China.

During World War II, General Peploe was on duty with several armored and infantry units in the United States and also served on the War Department General Staff. In March, 1944, he was named Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations of the XIII Corps, with which unit he served in Europe from July, 1944, until June, 1945.

General Peploe commanded the 38th Regiment in combat in Korea from the early fall of 1950 until February, 1951, when he was appointed Assistant Commander, 24th Infantry Division in Korea. In March, 1951, he was named Chief of Staff of the IX Corps in Korea.

He then returned to the United States to become Assistant Commander of the 7th Armored Division at Camp Roberts, Calif., in November, 1951, and in February, 1952, was appointed to a similar post with the 44th Infantry Division at Camp Cooke, Calif.

In June, 1953, General Peploe was transferred to the Far East Command and, the following month, became Commanding General of the Southwest Command in Japan. Since returning to the United States this summer and his assignment as Deputy Commander of the Sixth Army, he has been, for the greater part of the time, supervising the training of National Guard and Army Reserve units at Camp Roberts and Hunter Liggett Military Reservation in California.

General Peploe has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star with two oak leaf clusters, the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal and Air Medal.

Warrant Officer Cunningham, of Ontario, Calif., was born in Chicago, Ill., and enlisted in the Army in Los Angeles in January, 1934.

Prior to World War II, he served in Hawaii and Alaska, then at Fort MacArthur, Calif., and spent the entire war in Alaska. Post war assignments included service at Forts Lawton and Lewis, Wash., Fort MacArthur, and in Korea.

It's A Man's Cereal—But

Even The Bigger Boy Likes To Toy With Army Missiles

Washington—A major cereal manufacturer is providing a tremendous advertising boost for the Army Guided Missile program by giving plastic missile replicas with packages of its product.

One of four missiles with launcher or one of nine different color picture trading cards, which tell the Army missile story, will be given away with each purchase of some 18 million large and small packages of the product.

Over 30,000 grocery stores throughout the U.S. will have displays emphasizing Army interest in broadening the civilian public's understanding of guided missiles.

The American youth and parents alike, will become better informed on what is probably the most important military-scientific development of this era—the Army Guided Missile. (ANS)

Say Goodbye To K-Rations--Maybe

Washington — The Army is developing a means of using nuclear radiation to preserve food, according to Colonel William D. Jackson, Chief of the Quartermaster's Research and Development Office.

In an article entitled, "Preserving Food by Radiation," which appears in the October issue of The Army Information Digest, Colonel Jackson writes that the process resembles that of taking an X-ray. Pre-wrapped food exposed to invisible rays is preserved in fresh form.

The colonel says that when the process is perfected, the Army will be able to ship fresh meats and vegetables to all theaters and battle areas without refrigeration. (ANS)

Scout Troop In Membership Drive

The Presidio Boy Scout Troop 77 is presently conducting its fall membership drive and all youths, ages 11 years to 14, are invited to join the group.

The Scouts meet each Tuesday night at Scout Hall, Bldg. 815 MacArthur Blvd. (near the Little League Baseball Field) at 1900 hours.

A call is also going out to parents and other adults who are needed to serve on the Troop Committee which guides the Scout program. The committee meets once a month.

Troop 77, which has been active for many years, is primarily manned by sons of military personnel. The Troop is sponsored by Headquarters Sixth Army and strongly supported by the adult Troop Committee.

Always at work toward new goals, eight of the scouts won merit badges in safety, firemanship, bee keeping, camping and cooking during a recent Court of Honor.

During the summer many of the scouts attended the two-week outdoor camp held in the Russian River area.

Presidio Craft Shop Offers Course In Latest Artistic Craze: Mosaic!

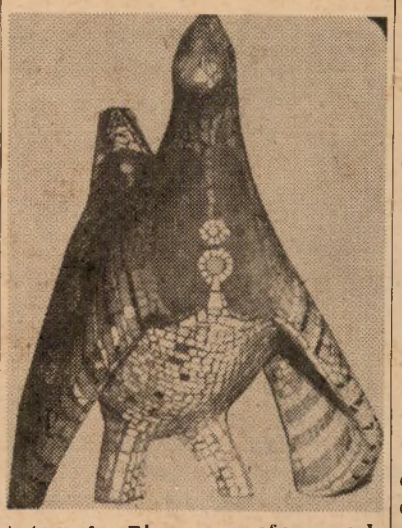
You may be one of those talented people who can write a book, yet not sew on a button without putting a few French knots in your index finger; paint a picture like Michaelangelo, yet not be able to apply a coat of varnish to a table without getting the goopy stuff in your hair, but—you can be either author or artisan, seamstress or song maker and still turn out a masterpiece in mosaic, without prolonged study of your subject.



You must take the word of a new citizen of the Presidio for this! He is the personable, and easy-going Bill Zacha, foreign-trained artist-instructor now in charge of the Crafts Shop.

Bill just launched a mosaic class here, first of its kind to be offered in the Crafts Shop curricula. It is already showing signs of becoming an entertaining and profitable way for a man or woman soldier to enjoy an evening's leisure hour.

The word mosaic seems, first-hand, to be a rather formidable one! One connects it with the fabulous art that paved the courtyards of a Byzantine mosque or now jewels the altar of an Italian cathedral. It is the same art, simplified by modern methods of preparation and streamlined by the use of proper tools to lessen the labor without sacrificing the beauty born of more primitive methods.

Currently one of the most popular of the arts, mosaic is the magic by which you can transform pieces of glass and ceramic into a surface as colorful as a California sunset and far more durable.

Here, indeed, is one artistic field in which even the rank amateur may excel! Color awareness would seem to be the outstanding requisite for the beginner. If you have it, you can create house or garden items, functional or purely decorative, in tile and cement and colored glass that are lasting, stain-proof, burn-proof and beautiful. If you haven't got a good sense of color proportion, you can still turn out some elegant heirloom pieces for your own or future generations.

Mosaic Plumage of many colors is sported by this bird figure created by Ray Rice, nationally-known professional artist, and loaned to the Presidio Crafts Shop as a means of demonstrating what can be done with a given outline and shimmering fragments of mosaic. The bird is soon to be used in illustration of a feature story on the art of mosaic, being published in Better Homes and Gardens.

Bill Zacha says that he can instruct one of his students in a single evening how to make a mosaic counter for the kitchen, a floor, picture, statue, fireplace facing, a window sill, plant shelf, bird bath, window seat or a mirror frame, practically anything that strikes the imagination of the potential student of mosaic.

Mosaic is a tailor-made art form for the apprehensive amateur! From the moment that you put the first or last piece of tile into position with adhesive or cement, you can arrange and rearrange them, change your mind, or begin from scratch.

Since there is something of the child in all of us, the shifting colors of bits of broken glass, beach pebbles, steel shavings or unstrung beads, are fascinating and a challenge to a man or woman with time to spare. As the choice of color and the design take shape, Bill Zacha assures you, you will develop a pride in your masterpiece unequalled in any other form of art. Your idea is captured forever in a durable setting and you have a wealth of mosaic material to choose from. Originally, the artistry of mosaic design began with glass and semi-precious stones. It has progressed to pieces of broken dishes, sea shells, coal, marble, mother - of - pearl, beads, buttons, or any of the dozens of items we toss carelessly into the waste barrel.

The making of a wall plaque is about the simplest of the mosaic forms. You have only to draw a pattern on plywood as a sort of fence by which to enclose the pattern and the colors. These are held down with adhesive and the spaces between filled in with cement.

Other and more intricate forms of mosaic work are begun in much the same manner, excepting statuary, for which a form or dummy is first made to establish a base on which to cement the colored material with which you cover the outline.

The field of mosaic is wide and colorful and far too large to be outlined in one small newspaper story. It is simple and not at all arduous or boring. All you need to begin are a few lessons from Bill Zacha and his supervision at the Presidio Crafts Shop. With a tile cutter, a piece of plywood, colored chips, a can of adhesive, a palette knife and some cement you can begin making home or garden items for yourself or as gifts for your family or friends. In the case of gifts, yours, if it is of mosaic, will undoubtedly be the most original and the most treasured of any received during gift-giving seasons.

for your pleasure!

Psy. Board Aide Wins Recognition

Captain Ronald F. Ellis, counselor on the Sixth Army Physical Evaluation Board for three and one-half years ending 25 June, was presented a Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement of exceptionally meritorious performance of duty recently by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Presidio Deputy Post Commander.

Captain Ellis, an expert on the complex military regulations pertaining to retirement from active duty, is frequently called on to answer queries from veterans' organizations and military agencies as well as from individuals.

He acted as counselor on more than 3,000 cases. Since June he has continued on the board as recorder.

Active at the Presidio during his off-duty time, Captain Ellis is presently serving as president of the post's Little League Baseball Assn.

Romping Home —First baseman Herm Wilkins of Los Angeles' 865th AAA Missile Battalion scores with a flying stride against the 605th AAA Battalion of Boston in the Army Antiaircraft Command Nationwide softball tournament at Fort Baker. Catcher Jim Young of the Hub City nine waits vainly for the ball. The big tournament is the first of its kind.

Baltimore AA Unit Nears Softball Title; L.A. Club Loses Out

The 531st AAA Battalion, held hitless for six innings, came to life in the final five frames Wednesday to best Los Angeles' 865th AAA Missile Battalion, 2-1, and reach the finals of the Army Antiaircraft Command tournament at Fort Baker.

Joe Patterson rapped a sharp single into right field with one out in the 11th to send Ken Wiseman across with the winning run for the Rapid City, S. D., victors.

The triumph gave the 531st the right to meet the 35th AAA Brigade Headquarters of Baltimore today for the championship.

Ed Martinez tossed no-hit ball through the first six innings, while his 865th mates were picking up an unearned run in the second. But the 531st put together two singles and an error for a run in the seventh. Patterson also knocked in the first run for the 531st after shortstop Richard Lewis got on.

Wiseman got the victory with a five-hitter. Martinez wound up with an eight-hit performance.

The 531st victory knocked the 865th from the tournament and put the unbeaten 35th Brigade solidly into the favorite's sport.

Today's finals will be followed by an awards banquet tonight, at which team and individual awards will be presented to the winners and runners up.

Lieutenant General Stanley R. Mikelsen, commanding general of the Army Antiaircraft Command, is scheduled to be present for the action and will make the awards at the banquet. The general authorized the tournament —first Nationwide competition for the command to build morale and to encourage athletic participation within the command.

In games Tuesday, Baltimore's 35th AAA Brigade Headquarters bunched four hits for three runs in the fourth inning to score a 3-1 triumph over the 865th.

The 531st bounced back from a first-round setback to edge the 516th Missile Battalion from Pontiac, Michigan, 2-1.

Dale Jackson continued his masterful pitching for the 35th, hurling no-hit ball in all but the first inning when the 865th combined a single and double for one run. Jackson, at the top of his powers, fanned 14.

Martinez, pride of the Los Angeles unit, checked the 35th with the exception of three doubles and a single which accounted for their winning margin.

Zigmund Piscotty gave the 531st its winning margin in the seventh when he unloaded a homer off Bob Bloomfield.

The 35th, pounding out 11 hits, racked up a 19-2 win over the 531st in Sunday action, while the 516th eliminated Boston's 605th from the tourney with a 3-2 victory.

Jackson came up with a one-hitter against the 531st.

The 865th scored the first win over the 605th, 4-2, in the opener Saturday. In another opening round game, the 35th blanked the 516th, 2-0, behind Jackson's two-hitter.

Los Angeles choked off a ninth-inning threat to win after the 605th had tallied one run and had runners on two bases. Martinez fanned 11 in accounting for the triumph.

Her series was 512 which is just short of the high held by J. Balcombe.

The second place Kingpins dropped nine points behind the leaders by losing three and one-half points to the Kings and Queens.

R. Koszarek of the Rascals was the high man of the evening with a 236 game. R. Steffan of the Flashbacks was second with 222.

A steelhead run has appeared in the Mokelumne River for the first time in several years. This stream has been heavily planted with both king salmon and steelhead by the Department of Fish and Game in an effort to bring the dwindling runs up to those of former years.

Sixth Army Battlers In 5 Defeats

BULLETIN

Fort Myer (Va.) — Welterweight Pearce Lane, Fourth Army, defending all-Army titleholder, came from behind with a fast finish to outpoint Frank Dunnagan, Sixth Army, in the all-Army boxing tournament here.

The defeat for Dunnagan was the fifth suffered by Sixth Army fighters in the week-long tournament.

Only Sixth Army winner so far is Lightweight Claude Jones, who scored a three-round decision over Fred Byrd of the Fifth Army.

Special to the Star Presidian

Fort Myer (Va.) — Sixth Army boxing standard bearers, who left for the Eastern Seaboard entertaining championship hopes, were jolted back to reality as the all-Army ring tournament got underway here this week.

Four Sixth Army pugilists suffered opening round defeats, including top heavyweight Clemmie Turner from Fort Ord.

Turner, who scored a sensational one round knockout over Presidio of San Francisco's Ken Johnson in the Sixth Army tourney, was on the receiving end in his battle with Third Army's Tom Rademacher.

Rademacher, 1953 AAU National heavyweight champion, scored a third round knockout over Turner in the first night's most explosive bout. The time was 2.42 of the third heat.

In a light middleweight scrap, Jose Torres, Second Army, quickly disposed of Sixth Army's Curt Jameson. With a terrific one-two combination, Torres knocked out Jameson in 2:32 of the first round. Torres' volley of punches found the range quickly and he flattened his West Coast foe with a series of smashes directly on the chin.

Other Sixth Army fighters who found the going rugged were Gilberto Dowling and Melvin Roy.

Charles Hood, USAREUR, made it a third straight knockout win over a Sixth Army foe when he finished off Dowling in 2.06 of the opening stanza of their light heavyweight bout.

Only Third Army's Gerthie Patrick failed to KO a West Coast boxer. He decisioned middleweight Roy over the three round route.

A strong second Army team took the tournament lead by racking up four victories in the first night of action witnessed by more than 1,000 Fort Myer ring fans.

Second Army moved into the lead as former champ Georgie Davis decisioned Ed Whitaker and Sam Rollins and Freddie Taylor each scored KO's.

Largest Steelhead Caught by Angler

A 15½-pound steelhead, the largest ever authenticated from the Sacramento River, was reported caught by the Department of Fish and Game at Los Molinos.

The angler was V. R. Russo of Pittsburg, who took the monster on a spinning lure.

Steelhead of this size are not unusual in north coastal streams, but anything over eight pounds is a giant for the Sacramento River, the Department reported. Microscopic examination of its scales showed its age to be five years.

Pistol Award —Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, presents Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge (right) the Distinguished Pistol Shot Badge—highest award in U. S. firing competition. The colonel gained the third leg on his badge in the all-Army championships last June.

RougeAwardedTopNational Pistol Marksmanship Badge

Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge this week received the Distinguished Pistol Shot Badge which is the highest award in United States pistol firing competition. Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Commanding General Sixth Army, presented the badge.

The award, which is open to both civilians and military competitors, has been presented only about 500 times in its history.

To be eligible for this honor, three leg medals must be earned in major firing matches.

Colonel Rouge, though a relative newcomer in pistol firing competition, gained his third and critical leg award in the All-Army Championships at Fort Benning, Ga., in June. At this contest, he was awarded the trophy for being the top new shooter and also earned membership on the first team of the All-Army squad.

Colonel Rouge earned his first leg medal in the Sixth Army area matches at Fort Lewis, Wash., in 1955. His second leg medal was gained in the 1956 Sixth Army area matches at Camp Roberts when he set a new Army record in the .45 caliber service pistol match, firing a 293 score out of a 300 possible.

Ellenberger Named Torero Cage Captain

If nothing else, Presidio of San Francisco basketballers will have one of the finest first string clubs among northern California Armed Forces teams this season.

Coach Hal Fischer, though pleased with the abilities of his first team, is still a mite unhappy about lack of capable reserves.

Fischer continued to put his charges through hard workouts at the Letterman Army Hospital Gym, but the lack of additional help was obvious. He urged basketball minded military personnel on the Presidio and subposts to try out for the club.

The Toreros' first team stacks up as one of the best the Presidio has ever boasted.

Led by Norm Ellenberger, the only returning veteran who was named honorary team captain for the 1956-57 season, the Presidio quintet boasts the services of two top former collegiate stars.

With Ellenberger, onctime Bradley University ace, leading the way, the Presidio claims Carroll Williams of San Jose State and Ronnie Reynoir among its score makers.

Williams, though small, is a topnotch playmaker and shooter who set a scoring record while performing for the Spartans. Reynoir, wiry and tall, was one of Loyola of New Orleans' top cagers.

The others, John Blackwell, Grant Tech of Sacramento, John Daniels, Carnegie Tech, and Al Magerman round out the first string.

The Toreros will open their practice slate against San Francisco's Olympic Club late next month and follow that up with a date against San Francisco State College in mid-November.

Services Lose Water Polo

Los Angeles — The Armed Forces, represented by two squads, failed in its bid to fill the U. S. slot for the water polo event at the Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia.

Ten Navy, eight Army and three Air Force athletes were among the 21 members of the Armed Forces vying for the trip "down under."

In the round-robin Olympic finals the Armed Forces "A" team lost to the San Francisco Olympic Club, 4-3.

Entries Grow For Western Open Golf Tournament Here

By Sp3 Walt Heil
Star Presidian Sports Editor

With the list of entries growing to impressive proportions, the cream of the Nation's golfers begin assembling in San Francisco next week for the 53rd annual Western Open.

Scheduled for the toughened Presidio of San Francisco course, October 10-14, the tournament will field a card of 165 top professional and amateur links stars in a 72-hole test of their golf prowess.

The $22,500 tourney, sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, has attracted nearly every big name on the Nation's golf front.

Tops among these is Dr. Gary Middlecoff, defending champion and at 36 a figure to be reckoned with for many years to come.

The golfing dentist, though slightly off his 1955 pace when he sizzled on courses all over the Nation, will fill one of the professional spots on the Bob Hope-Bing Crosby best-ball foursome exhibition match October 10, which has been thrown in as an added extra attraction.

Also slated to participate in the event, second oldest tournament in the Nation and rated third for Ryder Team Cup points, is Ed Furgol, the crook-armed divot ace who overcame his handicap to reach the heights.

Furgol gained his greatest measure of fame in the 1954 National Open when he—ranked behind Sam Snead and Ben Hogan—trimmed the field to win the most coveted championship in the United States.

In addition, a host of other big time golf stars, including Lloyd Mangrum, Jerry Barber, Art Bell, Jack Fleck, Doug Ford, Marty Furgol, Gene Littler, Mick Souchack, Bo Winninger and Arnold Palmer, have filed entries with tournament officials.

The Nation's top amateur, San Francisco's Harvie Ward, coming off his recent triumph in the U. S. Amateur, has also indicated he will compete.

Ward will be the leading amateur in the tournament, though other Bay Area stars, Ken Venturi, Bob Rocs and Bob Cardinal, expect to give the handsome automobile salesman a run for his money.

The Hope and Crosby exhibition has been added to whet the appetites of the Bay region links addicts who backed the 1955 U. S. Open with open handed glee.

Both entertainers — actually top amateur golfers themselves —will captain a foursome which will include three of the competing golfers, pro and amateur, in the tournament.

Ward, of course, will be one of the amateurs, while his friend Venturi will be the other.

Entries for the event close Monday and by October 4 tournament officials expect to make public the entire field.

Presidio course officials have been busy, too, preparing and toughening the course so it will provide a keen enough test for the links aces.

The normally wide Presidio fairways have been narrowed, the rough now two and one-half inches high.

The par 72, 6,402-yard course has been lengthened to 6,552 yards. In addition, 144 tons of sand have been dumped into the traps and the sides built up to prevent those unfortunates who hit there from putting out easily.

Pro Rookies Spark 3rd Army Win

Fort Dix (N. J.)—Fort McPherson, the Third Army entry, scored four runs in the first inning and coasted to its second consecutive All-Army baseball championship here by turning back Fort Devens, First Army, 11-2, in the tournament final.

Lefthander Chet Vincent, property of the New York Giants, hurled three-hit ball to gain the win. He was touched for two singles and a base on balls which, combined with an error, produced two runs. He hurled scoreless ball for the rest of the contest.

Fort Devens gained entry to the finals by nipping Second Army's Fort Lee, 2-1, in the semifinal round. The defeat eliminated Fort Lee from the tournament.

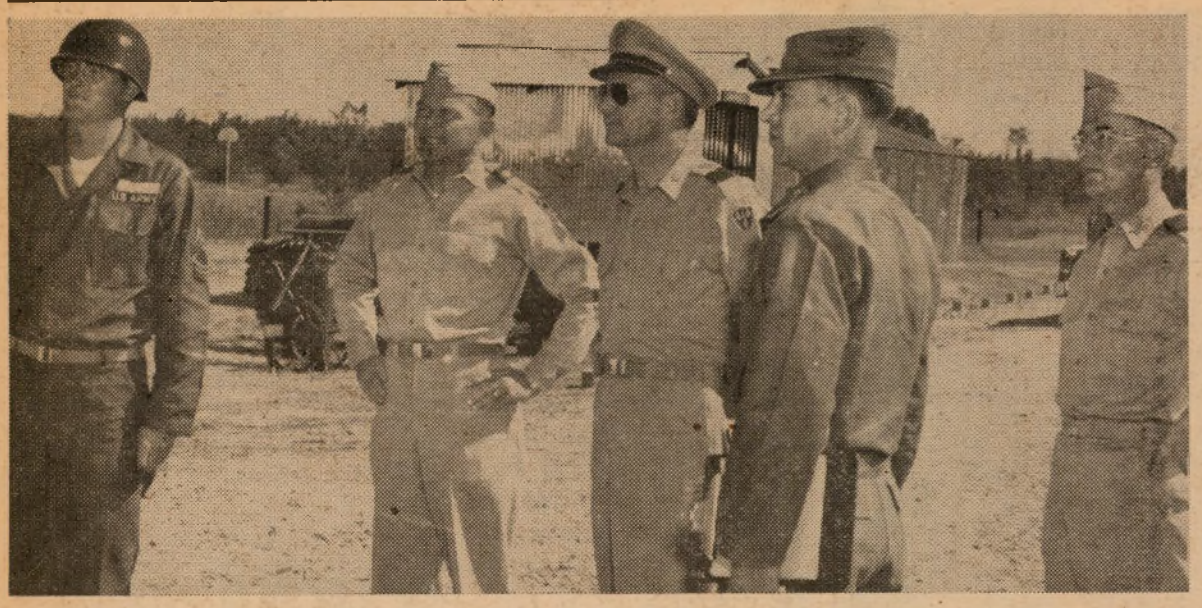
Charlie Heerlein pitched his second three-hitter of the tournament to notch the victory for Devens.

Fort McPherson gave a hint of things to come when it measured Devens in the fourth round of play, 16-1, raking four pitchers for 21 hits, including five in seven trips by Billy Morgan, $40,000 bonus baby of the Cleveland Indians.

Bill Anderson went all the way for McPherson to rack up his second win. He checked Devens with seven hits and struck out six.

Fort Lee kept its slim hopes alive in the fourth round by sending Fort Carson back to its Colorado station with a 6-2 defeat in the books.

Lee scored six runs in the ninth to nab the win. Until that point, Cleveland farmhand Wilbur Stricker had matters in control. An error followed by five straight singles, a double and a sixth onebaser contrived to send him to the showers, gloomy and long-faced.



Proof of Fort McPherson's mastery over all other Army teams is indicated by the effectiveness of its pitching staff. The Third Army team permitted opponents only five meager runs throughout the five games it participated in.

Tickets For Tourney Available To Troops

A number of enlisted personnel will get a free view of the upcoming Western Open Golf tourney, here.

Tickets will be available each day of the tournament and can be obtained through Sixth Army Special Services, according to Colonel John N. Beck, who along with Lieutenant General Robert N. Young and Colonel C. C. W. Allan, comprise the event's military committee.

Enlisted volunteers will also be used to control the expected sizeable galleries. Personnel with radio operator experience are needed to call hole-by-hole scores from the course to the clubhouse.

Crusade Drive Shows Gains; Halfway Point Is Now Passed

On the eve of the September military pay day, the sum of $9,079.11 in cold cash has been contributed by Army and civilian personnel of the Presidio to the recently launched Bay Area Crusade.

Total amount of money pledged since the fund drive was launched here in the interest of the agency's 256 dependents is the heartening figure of $15,704.24.

It is anticipated by the Presidio crusaders that what remains of the unfulfilled pledges will be honored on Monday at the pay tables with regular donations to be presented by those who made no advance promises but are still planning to give sums commensurate with their pay grades.

Prolonged over a two-month military and civilian payday system in recognition of personal and family financial obligations, the Bay Area Crusade fund drive at the Presidio was established to cover a full year's donation, normally spread over an interval of 12 months, and devoted to individual collections for separate agencies.

The sum of $36,015.00 is the figure established to cover the Presidio's share of the present fund drive which is conducted on a nation-wide basis at the present time so that each area can handle its own share of responsibility toward designated charities within its province. An approximate 256 medical, charitable and social institutions are listed on the Bay Area Crusade roster.

The Presidio civilian and military workers appointed by the command to bring the fund drive to a worthy close are optimistic that during the coming two paydays for military, and the bi-monthly paydays established for civilian employes here, the people of the Presidio will join forces to reaffirm the tradition of generosity for which this headquarters is noted.

CG Backs UBAC

The United Bay Area Crusade goal of $36,015.00 for the Presidio and Sub-Posts is a challenge to each and every man and woman (military and civilian) assigned and working on this installation. The success of this drive will depend on the willingness of each individual to accept his or her fair share of the responsibility, represented by one day's pay.

This contribution of your FAIR SHARE of one day's pay is to be paid where you work and the money will be apportioned to all the 256 participating agencies throughout the five counties comprising the Bay Area. In this manner, your community wherein you reside will be taken care of and the Presidio of San Francisco will rightfully be credited with your generous gift.

Your full cooperation is requested in support of this worthwhile combined charity drive during the months of September and October.

Look Lauds QM Corps In 2 October Edition

Washington—Look Magazine applauds the Quartermaster Corps in its 2nd October issue. Declaring the QMC is one of the least acclaimed branches of the Army, the magazine praises the Corps for making a habit of doing many jobs that no one else would attempt, and doing them well.

Lauded are such famous feats as delivering supplies by air-drop in Korea to isolated troops, serving as many as 24 million meals in a single day, and achievements in research and development in designing and testing new clothing and improving rations.

The feature article pictures the buoyancy test of a QMC-developed suit in which a soldier carrying 40 pounds of gear is shown floating on water. It portrays, also, multiple parachutes dropping QMC supplies to cut-off troops, and combat troops joyfully digging into QMC-delivered chow.

The magazine quotes the commendation of one great soldier who was generally better known for his daring deeds than for his words. "It is to the great credit of the Quartermaster Corps," wrote General George Patton on December 25, 1944, during the Battle of the Bulge, "that on this Christmas Day every soldier had turkey. . . . I know of no army in the world that would have done such a thing. . . ." (ANS)

Pleasant Tour!

French VIP's Visit Local Nike Site

A Presidio NIKE site proved especially interesting to group of French leaders who visited the Post, Friday.

The party, which included French deputies, senators, military officers and newsmen, visited the Presidio while on a State Department sponsored tour of the United States.

They also heard the Sixth Army Band and Pipe Band. The Sixth Army Honor Guard put on a demonstration drill in their honor.

Ideas, Performance Garner Big Cash!

There's money to be had for good ideas and superior performance and if you don't believe it ask any of the five Presidio civilians who this month walked off with a combined sum of $1,035.

Most money, $300, to be awarded for a suggestion in Sixth Army this year went to William E. Nichols, Chief Engineer, Sixth Army Signal Section for his suggestion of a system which automatically screens telephone subscribers dialing into wide range and toll areas from military posts.

Nichols, a graduate of Iowa State, began his Civil Service career in the Panama Canal Zone, 1925, as a telephone equipment engineer. He came to the Presidio in 1944.

Another $300 check, this one for sustained superior performance, went to Harold W. Weddell, who serves as chief of the operations branch. He began his Civil Service career in 1942 with the Signal Section here.

An Army Suggestion Award Certificate and $35 went to Anthony P. Breglia for his suggestion of a form to be used for statement of message re-fill charges. Breglia was with the Veteran's Administration in Oakland before coming to the Sixth Army Signal Section in 1952.

In the Sixth Army Engineer Section Miss Jean C. Clements was cited for outstanding efficiency and initiative in her duties as records administrator during the past year. With her Department of the Army certificate she received a check for $200. She has been continuously employed by the Army Engineers at the Presidio and at Fort Douglas, Utah, for the past 17 years.

Miss Laura Marshall, for sustained superior performance of duties in the administrative section of the Presidio Provost Marshal Office, received a certificate and a check for $200. She has been employed at the Presidio for three years.

DA Hits Sale Of Salacious, Immoral Mags

Department of the Army has slapped a firm ban on the sale of "salacious and morally offensive literature" on its posts, camps and stations.

In AR 210-10, DA states that "the Army Establishment has as its continuing objective the maintaining of high moral standards of its troops." And that "one of the methods of accomplishing this is to prohibit the sale of or the introduction of objectionable magazines and books on Army installations."

DA fixes responsibility to installation commanders for "insuring that the books and periodicals offered to service personnel through military and quasi-military sources reflect the standards of decency and morality which characterize our military forces."

Great Progress!

Gen. Ryan Here; Cites Religion Rise

"The Army's religious program is in a stronger position than at any time I can remember in my 28 years in the service," Major General Patrick Ryan, Chief of Army Chaplains, told a press conference at the Presidio on Friday.

Meeting with religious editors and reporters from Bay Area dailies and weeklies, General Ryan underlined the Army's progress in providing high calibre clergy and facilities to meet the growing interest in religion by the modern soldier.

He stressed the high quality of facilities at home and abroad and cited command support as the key contributing factor in the "better than ever" attendance at service churches.

DA Due Time Change

Department of the Army agencies in Washington, D. C., and vicinity will revert to Eastern Standard Time at 0200 hours, Sunday, 28 October.

Presidio Soldiers Rally To Donate Blood To Stricken Bay Area Child

By M/Sgt. Merrill Harrison
Sixth Army Information

"Hello, Colonel, this is Sergeant Horne at the Army Recruiting Station over in Pleasant Hill in Contra Costa County. I heard something on the radio and thought perhaps you people at the Presidio might be able to help out."

"Yes, Sergeant, what's the problem and what can we do?"

And with that question at 1545 hours on Monday, began a series of events that may well mean the life or death of 10-month-old Jimmy Peebles of Pittsburg, Calif.

Jimmy was born with a defective heart — two holes in the heart itself — and only delicate surgery, including the use of an artificial heart—could save him. The doctors at Stanford Hospital were all set to go ahead and operate but one thing held them up—blood.

To insure the success of the surgery, 16 pints of Type A blood, RH positive, were needed. On the surface, this wouldn't be much of a problem since the people of the San Francisco Bay Area have long been noted for their generosity in matters of this type. And Type A, RH positive, is not too uncommon, they say.

But the doctors insisted that because of Jimmy's condition the blood must match perfectly down to the sub-groups. A lot of people were willing to help but their type wasn't exactly right.

Mrs. Katherine Peebles, the child's mother, went to the Moose Lodge in Pittsburg and the story was picked up by Station KECC there. That's where Master Sergeant Gerald P. Horne came into the picture. He heard the broadcast and began to think about how the military services have traditionally come up with volunteers when help of this kind was needed.

Volunteers with type A, RH factor positive blood, are urged to call Extensions 3757, 3660 or 2470 for appointments for typing at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank for Jimmy Peebles.

So he called Sixth Army Headquarters at the Presidio of San

Further information can be obtained by calling WEst 1-6111, extensions 2349 or 4233.

Flexibility

Army Air Needs Higher Says Howse

The atomic-age battle area will demand greater use of Army air transportation, Major General Hamilton H. Howse, Army Aviation Chief, declared recently in a statement prepared specially for publication during the National Aircraft Show at Oklahoma City.

The general said, "Superior mobility and firepower required in the battle area of the future, places a concurrent requirement to feed, supply, and transport widely dispersed, fast-moving units. The supply and transportation system of the Army must be capable of flexible and rapid operation; it demands greater utilization of aerial transport.

"The Army's goal is to have battlefield air mobility, provided by its own aircraft to compensate for the dispersion on the battlefield caused by the atomic threat, and to permit combat forces to concentrate rapidly at a tactically decisive time and place." (ANS)

Deadline Nears For Vets In Insurance Applications

Deadline date for purchase of five-year-term life insurance by men leaving the service is getting closer.

Men due for release between now and the first of the year have less than the normal "120 days after separation" left to purchase this insurance.

Only those disabled will be able to purchase the policies at all after 1 Jan., since the new Survivor Law puts an end to it.

Applications to the VA must be postmarked by 31 Dec. or in the hands of a duly designated officer by this time.

The application must be accompanied by check or money order to pay the premium.

Maximum policy is $10,000 less the amount of NSLI or USGI that the vet has.

Policies are straight life, nonconvertible to other forms. Premiums are based on age and remain so for five years. It continues to rise every five years or until vet dies or drops out.

DA Seek Nominees For Ninth Annual Flemming Award

Nominations for the Ninth Annual Arthur S. Flemming Award honoring outstanding young men serving in the Federal Government are being solicited by Department of the Army.

Eligible are any civilian, male officer or employee of the Executive Branch of the U.S. Government who will not reach his fortieth birthday before 1 January, 1957.

Awards will be made for unusual or outstanding work during the fiscal year which ended 30 June, 1956.

Set New System For Eucom Duty

The Army has announced an experimental plan to assign certain Europe-bound, pipeline personnel to specific USAREUR units prior to their departure from the United States.

Unaccompanied enlisted male personnel processing through the Overseas Replacement Station, 1264 SU, Fort Dix, N. J., will be given their assignment orders by a USAREUR Team at Fort Dix.

Under this system personnel will not pass through a replacement depot in Europe, but will go directly to their new units from the port or airfield of debarkation.

This experimental plan will not affect enlisted personnel accompanied by dependents, or members of carrier companies, platoons, and packets, or persons involved in Gyroscope Operations. (ANS)

New Tech Programs Cause Critical Officer Shortages

Washington—The guided missile program has caused a large-scale expansion of the Artillery branch and has created a shortage of artillery officers, according to the new issue of Officers' Call.

More artillery officers are needed in the grades of captain through lieutenant colonel, states this DA pamphlet titled "Officer Grade and Branch Imbalance."

Similar technological and military requirements are said to have also boosted officer requirements in Armor, Signal Corps, and Corps of Engineers. Meantime, other types of developments have created overages of officers in many branches.

Reported as overages are captains in the Infantry, and in the Military Police Corps, as well as several different grades in the Adjutant General's, Quartermaster and Transportation Corps.

This latest issue of "Officers' Call" reviews the entire grade and branch imbalance problem. It emphasizes that officers who take action under current policies designed to correct the condition can benefit both the Army and themselves.

To alleviate the imbalance, the pamphlet recommends that officers volunteer for transfers from overstrength to understrength branches. More drastic solutions to the problem discussed are involuntary transfers and details of officers to understrength branches, and involuntary releases from active duty. Also considered is a more stringent category denial policy in overstrength branches. (ANS)

Field Strip and Survive!

That Cigarette You Drop Could Cause Fire, Death

The cigarette appears to be harmless but it is a potential danger to life and property. Why do cigarettes cause more fires than any other cause?

- Do certain conditions make the cigarette more dangerous?
- What materials will a cigarette ignite most easily?
- What precautionary measures can be taken to eliminate the hazards of smoking?

To find the answers to these questions, the Presidio Fire Department conducted a series of tests and completed a study and analysis of fire records.

"The results of these efforts reveal that most fires from cigarettes start very simply and can as simply be avoided with the exercise of a little knowledge and care," says Fire Chief George Geller. "Here are the answers."

- Lighted cigarettes dropped into waste baskets and boxes filled with ordinary combustible material create favorable conditions for burning. A smoldering cigarette tossed by some careless person from a moving vehicle will readily ignite dry grass and brush.
- Old newspapers, discarded clothing and unused furniture also provide fuel for a fire started by a cigarette.
- Flammable draperies, curtains, upholstery, padding and cushioning invite the danger of a fire from a carelessly discarded burning cigarette.
- The lighted flame of a cigarette in contact with flammable and volatile liquids will result in spontaneous combustion.

"The cigarette is the number one fire hazard," said the Fire Chief, "mainly by their habitual use by so many people and very often by the carelessness of smokers.

"Records reveal that last year 400 billion cigarettes were smoked—about 760,000 a minute. At that rate, it would take only one cigarette in two million to cause 200,000 fires a year!"

If you are a cigarette user, the Fire Chief urges every smoker to consider each cigarette he lights as one in two million that may cause a fire—and take the following precautions to avoid its potential dangers:

- Don't toss lighted cigarettes away. A carelessly discarded cigarette will burn ten minutes and in that interval it constitutes a tiny firebrand capable of igniting any ordinary material.
- Keep plenty of ash trays available—large, noncombustible ones and USE THEM!
- Be especially careful of such flammable materials, as clothing, upholstery and draperies and curtains when smoking.
- Don't leave rooms without first checking to determine that no burning smoking material has been left behind.
- DON'T SMOKE IN BED. Smoking in bed is a leading cause of fatalities in fires.
- During the holiday season avoid smoking in the presence of gift-wrappings, flammable Christmas trees and combustible decorative material.
- Never use cigarettes or matches or lighters in the presence of any volatile liquids.

"Remember," warns Chief Geller, "a cigarette can be a source of pleasure or the cause of disaster. It is up to the individual to eliminate careless smoking habits."

Of Undetermined Origin?

"Undetermined origin," they say.

It's a common phrase in news reports of a fire. In the charred and gutted shell of what used to be someone's home, it is sometimes difficult to figure out immediately where the first wisp of smoke curled up—where the first tiny flame licked out—and what caused this disaster of fire.

But given a little time, trained and experienced men can usually reconstruct the situation. A late party—people smoking—a cigarette that fell unnoticed among the sofa cushions and smoldered there. An open fire left burning—sparks that jumped out on the rug or a piece of furniture. Oversized fuses in the fuse box—overloaded electrical wiring that burst into flame.

Whatever happened, it's past remedying. It matters only as a guide to the future. But to a fire victim, what matters most is the present.

Everything is gone: family heirlooms—cherished possessions, clothing, furnishings, valuable papers—all things that went to make up one family's daily life.

The tragic history of most fires is that they never should have happened in the first place, because it is much easier to prevent a fire from starting than it is to put one out.

A simple precautionary measure to take is eliminate careless acts and careless conditions, the cause of most fires. By being careful you not only increase YOUR safety but the safety of others. No nation no matter how strong and prosperous can afford to squander its human and economic wealth in the reckless manner we are, by permitting fires to increase year after year. Everyone is urged to increase their fire consciousness. SAFETY IS EVERYONE'S BUSINESS!

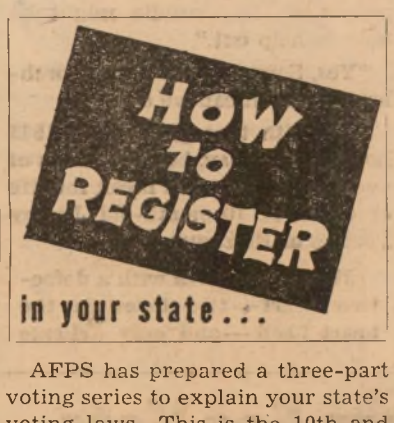
Congratulations from Fire Chief Geller go to Lark Lillge, Troop 73, and Thomas Lee Sparks, Troop 777, following presentation of a display banner marking Fire Prevention Week at the Presidio. Mrs. James Eameier, Scout Chairman, looks on.

Fire Prevention Week Readied; Presidio Officials Plan Special Projects To Inform Everyone

Fire took the lives of 11,000 Americans last year and destroyed nearly a billion dollars' worth of property.

Fire Prevention Week for 1956, which starts Sunday, has the mission of pointing up this needless waste and explaining safety measures to the public.

Here on Post the Presidio Fire Department will take part in the observance in the following ways: Fire prevention talks, informative movies on fire safety, exhibitions of fire hazards, displays of fire equipment and fire truck rides for kids, announced Colonel James R. Rundell, Post Fire Marshal.



"Visit your fire stations during Fire Prevention Week," invites Fire Chief George Geller. For the week's observance the fire stations at the Presidio, Fort Cronkhite and Angel Island will be open for public inspection.

High point of the week will be reached Saturday, 13 October, when the children of the Presidio area will be invited down to the fire stations for a full slate of activities. Riding on the big red fire trucks will probably give the kids their biggest thrills. They will also see free movies on fire safety, eat free candy, and receive free souvenir fireman's helmets and fireman's badges.

Participate in the observance, urges Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, who explains that "Increasing fire consciousness and prevention of fires is a year round responsibility for everyone on this post."

"Fire's don't just happen," says the Post Fire Marshal. "They are caused. This cause is carelessness. Eliminate your acts of carelessness and careless conditions and most fires will be prevented. It is not enough to be fire conscious only during Fire Prevention Week. All of us should make EVERY week in the year one for the elimination of fire hazards and carelessness."

AFPS has prepared a three-part voting series to explain your state's voting laws. This is the 10th and last in a series on registering to vote by absentee process.

ARKANSAS AND TEXAS

There is no registration in these states.

NORTH DAKOTA

Servicemen are exempted from all registration requirements.

Certain municipalities may require registration for elections held within the municipality. If this is the case, the County Auditor will notify affected persons after receipt of ballot application.

ALASKA

Registration is necessary only for those municipal elections in which the city council or other governing authority of the municipality has directed that registration is a prerequisite to voting. Such registration must be accomplished annually in person—usually at voting time—at the seat of the municipal government.

There is no requirement for pre-registration in the accepted sense of the term for territorial elections. Registration for these elections is accomplished on election day.

GUAM

Registration is permanent unless a voter failed to vote in the last general election.

All qualified absent persons are registered automatically when the affidavit on the ballot envelope has been properly executed and accepted by the election officials. Therefore, registration in advance is not required.

For further information, see your voting officer. (AFPS)

"Jump Light" Set!

Atomic Problems Will Test Airborne

Operation "Jump Light" slated to begin next month and run until March, will provide the "all new" 101st Airborne Division with its first series of difficult tests.

Termed "simulated atomic warfare exercises," the tests will create situations that will enable commanders to compare the new outfit and its doctrinal concepts with that of current airborne divisions.

Tests will be conducted in four phases, named after the first four letters of the Army's new phonetic alphabet: Alpha, Bravo, Charlie and Delta.

Twin Contributions to the Women's Army Corps, make for twin contributions to the Bay Area Crusade at the Presidio this week. Shown, left to right, with Lieutenant Dorothy Crook, commanding officer of the 6002nd SU, Company D, are Carole M. and Carolyn R. Greene, identical twins from Kittery, Maine. Military Payday Sends Crusade Cash Higher

Monday's parade to military pay tables at the Presidio swelled the present total in the Bay Area Fund Crusade to its present size of $22,695.65 in cash and pledges.

Actual money turned in to fund drive headquarters in the Presidio's Post Custodian Office amounts to $15,483.66.

In order to accomplish the financial goal set for military and civilian donors at the Presidio it will be necessary to collect further money to the extent of $7,211.99. In view of the over-all generosity and the promptness shown by Presidio contributors, is it expected by the local Bay Area Fund Crusaders that the uncompleted part of the stipulated sum will be turned in during the present month and at the October pay table when the second half of the money given over a two-month pay interval is given and the incidental pledges made will be honored.

First over the top in the Bay Area Fund Crusade at the Presidio is the Sixth Army's Chaplain Section with its 110 per cent already achieved in donations to the drive. The Post Chaplain's Section had already contributed 100 per cent before the first week of the drive was finished.

Following the Post Chaplain Section is the Judge Advocate Section, The Inspector General Section, Officers Open Mess (cash and pledges), 163rd Military Police Company (formerly the 505th MP Company), and Sixth Army Flight Detachment 3, each in cash and pledges.

The 6002nd Service Unit's Company A, with actual money and pending unfulfilled pledges now stands at a solid 93 per cent, while Company C of the same unit boasts a present total of 96 per cent, including yet uncompleted pledges.

The Seventh Base Post Office has already contributed 90 per cent of its quota.

Both the pledges for given amounts and on the spot cash payments are to be covered during the present month and on the coming pay day, 31 October.

Puzzle Answer

Barracks Bag Soldier!

Irish Sergeant Has Sharp Eye For Brighter Troop Quarters

Master Sergeant Andrew McKay is the Presidio's answer to the present Department of Army policy advocating the utilization of personal skills among the military toward overall maintenance of Army property.

A veteran of 25 years soldiering across the Nation and beyond it to Europe and the Canal Zone, the apple-faced McKay has trained hundreds of servicemen the arts of a many-faceted trade which is generally known as Carpentry.

Assigned to the 6002nd SU, C Company, McKay was educated in Ireland, Scotland and the United States. He carries a touch of all three countries in his makeup. From Scotland he brought the love of thrift, from Ireland the art of doing the best possible job with whatever limited material is at hand, and from America—the "do-it-yourself" know-how and the drive to get the job accomplished quickly and thoroughly.

"I'm what is commonly known as a barracks bag soldier," he tells you, in an accent as full of burrs as the wood he works with, "and I have always wanted my outfit to be the best and the most up-to-date on any Post."

The Company to which McKay is now assigned is his greatest press agent.

"That guy can do anything well," they tell you, "and our Company area is proof of it. There isn't a sagging beam or a nail out of place in any of our buildings, nor anywhere that McKay sets foot or turns his critical eye on the place with a view to improving it."

Sergeant McKay is the lead military non-com in a Presidio team of building maintenance men whose days are dedicated to keeping any or all buildings in good shape. The job does not entail making a new building blossom where only an old one stood before; rather, to concentrate on renovation and maintenance of an old building so that despite its age, it is still in good working order.

Across the years since he first came into the United States Army during the great Depression, the sergeant's talents have not gone unrecognized nor misspent. He has held building and repair, masonry and woodwork classes for young soldiers practically on every Post to which he has been assigned.

Fort Corozel, Canal Zone, and Fort Amador in the same area; Forts Totten, Jay, Dix, Benning and Ord, Forts Bragg and Bliss, and the Air Force in Camp Beale; the old sarge has his own particular and very permanent corner in each. Some part of the landscape there was once beautified under his hand and his enterprising eye; some building restored and still in good order, some piece of military machinery renovated rather than scrapped.

M/Sgt. Andy McKay

At the Presidio, whenever there's a problem regarding maintenance or repair, the ready answer is "Let's get McKay to take it in hand."

Local Troops Win High AER Praise

Those at the Presidio who participated in the Army Emergency relief program received a "thank you" recently in a letter from the program's director, Major General Edward F. Witsell, Ret., written to Lt. General Robert N. Young, Commanding General Sixth Army.

For the "highly successful" campaign which collected $7,623.44 Presidio personnel were lauded for ". . . their interest and hard work, which combined to make such outstanding results possible."

General Young points out that the achievement could be attained "only through willing cooperation and teamwork."

"My own sincere thanks," are added by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, "for your many individual contributions which make it possible for the Army to keep on 'caring for its own'."

Soldiers Donate Blood

Francisco and pointed out that so far only a couple of perfectly matching donors were available and that he had been scurrying around trying to line up more. "Wouldn't it be swell," he asked the colonel, "if the Army could help out?"

Well, the Army could help out, and the Army would help out, the colonel assured him, and the Presidio soldiers began to help out.

First step was to get a memo over to the Post Adjutant for the Daily Bulletin, telling the story of Jimmy Peebles and his needs and asking vounteers with Type A positive, to call any of three post extensions for information on how they could help and where they could go to volunteer.

While the memo was still in the typewriter the first sergeants of the larger units were called.

"Look, sergeant, here's the situation; there's this baby over in the East Bay, yeah, a baby, 10 months old, with a bad heart. Gotta have heart surgery and they need 16 pints of type A, RH positive. Can you make an announcement at the morning formation and ask for volunteers with that type? You can. Swell. Look, just ask them to come up here in the morning and we'll give them all the details and set up transportation to the blood bank. Thanks a lot."

At 0730 on Tuesday the first dozen volunteers, all men with the right basic type, showed up at the office. Names and phone numbers were taken, the needs of Jimmy were explained and they were told they'd be contacted as soon as the appointment could be set up for the extra-careful typing that would be required.

That afternoon an Army bus pulled up in front of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank and ten soldiers piled out, men from the Presidio, the first group to be typed. They went through the routine and two were turned down. Hay fever. Jimmy couldn't have blood of men for the immediate transfusion if they had hay fever.

So one man said, "I'll tell you what, I'll give a pint right now and you can credit it to Jimmy." The other said he'd go over to Letterman Army Hospital at the Presidio "so I won't tie up everybody else here" and donate a pint there for Jimmy.

That was the first group. Privates first class, specialists and sergeants. Other groups will be checking in at the blood bank until Jimmy has the 16 honors he needs, and maybe a few more "just in case."

At 0700 on the morning of 16 October the donors will report to the blood bank. There they will give their blood, it will be put into plastic bags and rushed to the hospital for the surgery.

Mrs. Peebles didn't quite know what to say. Everybody had been so wonderful. But she did say that the doctors had told her that the operation would be successful and that two weeks after the surgery Jimmy would be home, a healthy, normal boy.

Best on Post! Are the men of Headquarters Company (6002) when it comes to marching. For the outstanding drill performance in Friday's retirement parade Commander of Troops Lt. Col. Verne E. Pro Meets Pro —In the field of culinary persuasion, restaurant owner George Mardikian is without peer. Here he meets Sfc. Elmo D. Northcutt, 740th AAA Br., another food expert, but in a slightly different field. Col. Dallas Haynes, 30th AAA Commander, handles the introduction.

'Omar Khayyam' Briefs Locals On Better Food Preparation

Mr. George Mardikian, owner of the world famous Omar Khayyam's restaurant in San Francisco, longtime Food Advisor to the Quartermaster General, member of the Hoover Commission and author of the best seller, "Song of America," visited Mess Halls of the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group, recently.

Accompanied by Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, 30th AAA Group Commander, and Major Dellie W. Tomaw, 30th AAA Group Supply Officer, Mr. Mardikian visited Battery "C," 740th AAA Missile Bn., near Sharp Park, and Battery "D," 752nd AAA Bn., San Francisco.

He was served a fried ham steak dinner by SFC Connie Precechtel, D Battery Mess Steward, who has been the recipient of several Army awards for consistently providing top-notch chow for his men.

After dinner, Mr. Mardikian addressed a gathering of all the Mess Stewards of the San Francisco AA Defense at Headquarters Battery of the 740th AAA Missile Bn. at Fort Scott.

He gave them tips on how to prepare a better variety of foods, and how to fix the meals so that they would be more attractive. He said, "A meal must please the eye before the palate." "Half the confidence of the men is gained," he said, "when the meal is appealing to the eye."

Mr. Mardikian told his attentive audience that "love of work" and "realization of the importance of the work you are doing" are requisites for preparing good food. He said the Army has realized in recent years the significant part the cooks play in the mission of the Army.

In closing, Mr. Mardikian invited the Mess Stewards to stop by Omar Khayyam's sometime and try out his famous "Shish Kebab."

DA Talent Pro Will Seek New TV Acts Here

A Department of the Army talent scout is slated to visit the Presidio from 17 to 19 October for the purpose of auditioning men and women soldiers interested in joining the cast of the new Army TV show, "Get Set, Go."

Mr. Cyril Heiman, the theatrical scout, will hold auditions at the Presidio Service Club, 2030 hours on the evenings of the 17th to the 19th, inclusive.

Concurrent with Mr. Heiman's arrival at the Presidio will be a review of the road show, "Rolling Along," now touring military installations in the Western area.

Local men and women soldiers who qualify at the auditions for the coming show, "Get Set, Go," will be placed on TDY to New York for filming of the TV project.

Conducted as a Special Services show, the audition permits entry by civilians and dependents only if they form an integral part of a military group act.

Invitations to the Explorer Scout "Citizens Now" conference are checked by Explorer Dan Buttolph, son of Colonel L. D. Buttolph, general chairman, and Chester R. MacPhee, United States Collector of Customs, chairman of the advisory committee. The conference will be held October 11 to 13 aboard the aircraft carrier USS Yorktown.

Presidio Scout Will Chair 'Citizens Now' Conference

Dan Buttolph, son of Colonel L. D. Buttolph, is general chairman of an Explorer Scout "Citizens Now" conference aboard the aircraft carrier USS Yorktown, 11 to 13 October.

The conference will be devoted to discussion groups on problems the teen ager faces in his home and community and a program of social and sport activities.

Dan, 17, lives with his parents at 536-B Simonds Loop. His father is the senior army advisor for the United States Army Reserves, California Military District, stationed at the Presidio.

He is a senior at Lowell High School where he is commanding the First Regiment of the San Francisco ROTC Brigade. He is a member of Scroll and Shield, Student Council, Rifle Society, Science Club, Slide Rule Club, Drill Team, Rifle Team, Saber Club and president of the Lowell chapter of the National Rifle Association.

Named the outstanding Eagle Scout in the city in 1956, Dan was a candidate in the competition to present the annual report of the Boy Scouts to the President of the United States.

The Explorer conference, which young Buttolph is heading, is the first meeting of its kind to be held in San Francisco. It is sponsored by the San Francisco Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Explorers will go aboard the Yorktown the evening of 11 October and sail across the bay the next morning to the Alameda Naval Air Station. They will eat, sleep and have meetings on the ship.

The teen agers (aged 14 to 17) will tour the ship and air station, have an intramural sports program and hear addresses by civic leaders on the conference theme. There will be a dance climaxing the conclave Saturday, 13 October.

The discussion groups will be conducted and led by the Explorers themselves, with subjects falling within the topics, "Citizens Now in the Home" and "Citizens Now in the Community."

Ideas will be exchanged on such questions as teenager-parent relationships, use of the family car, dating, personal appearance, changing fads, respect for the law, religious freedom and education.

The San Francisco Council, Boy Scouts of America, as a member agency of the Community Chest, is supported by the United Bay Area Crusade.

Best Barracks —Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, Commander, 30th Engineer Group (Topo Survey), congratulates Lt. Richard J. Rappaport, 537th Engineer Company (Survey Base), Company Commander, for winning the "Best Barracks" of the month award for the second consecutive month. Looking on with pride are Major Luther Payne, Commander 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topo) and M/Sgt. James T. Heard, 1st Sergeant, 537 Engineer Company.

Engineers Set Style In Barracks Tests

Recently, after the nationally- popular Do-It-Yourself idea was inducted to military service, a new page was written into the Army manuals.

So many servicemen with latent ability in the arts of repair, had rallied to the challenge of Do-It-Yourself, that paint jobs, electrical wiring, and general maintenance of buildings and areas were begun and completed on very short notice.

This week, Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, commanding the 30th Engineer Group (Topical Survey) has set in motion a Do-It-Yourself campaign which bids fair to becoming the pilot by which all other units will be guided in future and mutual Army - Soldier housekeeping of similar nature.

As a means of stimulating his Company's repair fervor, Colonel St. John launched a Best-Barracks-Of - The - Month award, through which a plaque goes to the unit which presents the best appearance as to repair and over-all appearance.

Competition for the maintenance plaque is now running high among seven competing companies under Colonel St. John's jurisdiction. Since the award's inception, the 537th Engineer Company, under the leadership of Lieutenant J. Rappaport, has risen to the occasion by walking away with the plaque twice in a row.

The answer to this is fairly obvious! The 537th Engineer Company lives under the most primitive of field conditions most of their working days. They are conditioned by circumstance, therefore, to appreciate the conveniences of barracks life.

But even without the hope of an honor plaque to spur them on they seem to appreciate doubly the joy that is born of clean, comfortable living quarters. Their rather transient way of life on a permanent post becomes a sort of home removed from home. The award is just so much more icing on the cake.

The 537th has in in effect flung a challenge to other companies located in Fort Scott. They have already promised their commanding officer that they are willing and eager to face all comers in the battle for the plaque. Their imprimis is "In The First Place." And to it they have added unofficially, "Good Things Bear Repeating."

Awards won by the Presidio Rifle and Pistol marksmen of the Presidio during the 1956 shooting season will be on display at the Presidio Post Exchange every day during next week.

A School of Musketry was organized at the Presidio of Monterey on 1 April, 1907.

Competent Service as officer in charge of the Presidio's Transfer Point won a Certificate of Achievement for 1st Lt. Cecil M. Hunt, last week. Col. Carl E. Lundquist presents the award.

Army Doctor Traveled Tough Road!

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon

Star Presidian Feature Editor

From pre-Medical School in Riga, Latvia, to enforced military service in the Russian Army at the age of 19; back to the University of Latvia's Medical School, then to further military service with Germany's Latvian Legion in combat against Russia, and from there is West Germany's Heidelberg University School of Medicine for a doctor's degree. Such in part is the colorful history of Captain CIPRIJANS GARANCS, now a United States Army medical officer in charge of the Sixth Army's Med-Lab Tissue Section.

Captain Garancs entered the Army under the Doctor Draft Law in 1955, during which year he was connected with Western Reserve University Hospital in Cleveland. His brother is a construction engineer in Cleveland.

After completing pre-Medical training at the University of Latvia, the young student was inducted into service in the Russian Army during 1941. In the turmoil of war between Russia and Germany, Captain Garancs escaped from the Russian front and returned to complete two years of Medical study at the University of Latvia.

In 1943, the then-victorious German Army organized the Latvian Legion. He was inducted, to fight again, this time against the Russians, until 1945.

Prior to the Armistice, the captain managed to reach the British-occupied zone of Germany. He entered Heidelberg University and was graduated with an MD from its medical school in 1949. At that time he established himself as a general practitioner at a displaced persons' camp in Wildflecken, Germany.

Captain Garancs

Arriving in the United States in 1950, Captain Garancs took a one-year internship at Saint Joseph's Hospital, Patterson, New Jersey, which event is highlighted for him because it was there he learned to speak English.

From Saint Joseph's, the young doctor went to Cleveland, where he undertook a four-year Residency in Pathology at Saint Luke's Hospital and Western Reserve Hospital.

During the summer of 1955, the newly minted pathologist was inducted under the Doctor Draft Law as a Medical Corps officer in the United States Army with the grade of Captain. He completed the prescribed orientation course for MC officers at Brooke Medical Field Service School, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, after which he was assigned to the Fort Lewis, Washington branch of the Sixth Army Medical Laboratory until September of the present year when he was reassigned to the Sixth Army Medical Laboratory at Fort Baker, as its Tissue Pathologist.

Captain Garancs is a sports enthusiast. He played on the Tacoma Volleyball Team in the UIS National championships early this year.

Top Pros Ready For Western Open Here

By Sp3 Walt Heil

Star Presidian Sports Editor

A field of 165 of the Nation's greatest golfers tee-off Wednesday in the 53rd annual Western Open Golf Tournament on the rugged, testing Presidio of San Francisco course.

Assured of the presence of all but a few of the top golfers gracing America's links today, the tournament committee looks forward to an eminently successful event. And well they should.

Already, defending champion Dr. Cary Middlecoff, Ed Furgol, Lloyd Mangrum, Gene Littler, Jack Fleck, Bo Winninger, Art Bell, Harvie Ward, Ken Venturi and a host of others have signified they will participate in the four-day, 72-hole event.

Just prior to entry deadline, a number of other top professionals notified the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, tournament sponsors, they will play.

Included among these were Tommy (Thunder) Bolt, the strong tempered links ace, who breaks his clubs after a bad round, and Dutch Harrison, the droll, whimsical shotmaker, who captured the Tam O'Shanter All-American tournament in August, this year.

Besides Bolt and Harrison, the tournament committee also announced Bob Toski, 1954's top money winner, Mike Krak, Dick Mayer, Bill Nary, Paul O'Leary and Leo Biagetti will enter in pursuit of fame and the $5,000 first place prize money.

To give fans an added extra attraction the Junior Chamber has arranged an exhibition match headlined by Hollywood's Bob Hope and Bing Crosby.

The cinema favorites will vie in a best-ball foursome match Wednesday, along with Middlecoff, Venturi and Ward and three other pros as yet unnamed.

The exhibition won't be a travesty on the ancient game of golf, either.

Crosby and Hope themselves are better than average amateurs and the crooner is famous for his annual Monterey Peninsula tournament each winter.

The links stars will play on a tournament toughened and lengthened by course officials.

So as to provide the pros with a test of their links skills, the normally 6,402-yard course has been lengthened to 6,552 yards.

The wide, spacious fairways have been narrowed and the rough bordering the edges has been allowed to grow luxuriously. At last report it was almost three inches high, enough to provide trouble for any golfer unfortunate enough to land there.

Workers have been dumping sand into the traps for days. Altogether 144 tons of the stuff has been packed in, while the trap sides have been built up to prevent ease in putting out.

Advance season tickets are still available at a considerable saving. They may be obtained by calling the Junior Chamber, at pro shops at almost all Bay Area courses, sporting goods stores and Sherman Clay box office.

A qualifying round, if needed, will be played on Tuesday.

Canada Geese

There has been a big increase in the number of Canada geese using the Honey Lake Waterfowl Management Area this fall, and the waterfowl hatch in northern California has been very successful, the Department of Fish and Game reports.

Traffic Regs Set For Open

Presidio military and civilian personnel were reminded today that parking on the main parade ground will be restricted to visitors to the Western Open Golf tournament from 0700 hours to 1730 hours, 10 October through 14 October.

The reminder came from Presidio Provost Marshal Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, who advised local personnel to park their autos in other areas as on parade days.

The PM also recommended that both military and civilian personnel form car-pools during the four-day run of the tournament.

In addition to the parking ban, the Provost Marshal's Office has also organized other traffic controls and restrictions. They include:

The following roads will be restricted to vehicles of residents and their guests only—Washington Blvd. south of Kobbe Ave.; Park Blvd. south of Kobbe Ave.; Infantry Terrace south of Moraga and Arguello Blvd. south of Moraga.

Golf players and officials only will be permitted to use Arguello Blvd. south of Washington Blvd.; West Pacific Ave. west of Presidio Blvd.

Post Cagers Continue Search For Talent

Still searching high and low for additional basketball talent hidden away in nooks and crannies, Coach Hal Fischer's Presidio Toreros eye their opening contest—mere weeks distant—with something less than glee.

The Toreros open against San Francisco's powerful Olympic Club quint late this month and if present personnel are not augmented by added starters, they can be sure to lose.

Though the first string team is definitely of topnotch caliber, lack of reserves still plagues Fischer. The beefy Presidio headman feels there are a number of capable cagers stationed here, but that they haven't responded to his plea.

At last report, the Toreros boast a starting five capable of playing against the best—and winning. But a weak bench will certainly handicap the team against the top-flight opposition clubs already on the schedule.

For instance, after their opener against the Olympic Club, the local hoop enthusiasts face San Francisco State, a pesky foe, and then embark on the northern California Army-Air Force League schedule late in November.

Following the opener, the Toreros expect to make a swing through southern California where they'll play topnotch service, college and amateur teams.

For this tough schedule, Fischer will certainly need more talent, though the likes of Carroll Williams, Ron Reynoir, Norm Ellenberger and John Blackwell will make the first team outstanding.

The Toreros continued drilling in the Letterman Army Hospital gym, the premises ringing with flying feet and bounding balls as Fischer put them through tough workouts.

Post Pistol, Rifle Club Sets Meeting

The Presidio Rifle and Pistol Club, an authorized post organization, will hold a membership and activities meeting at the Fort Scott Rod and Gun Club Range Monday, 8 October, it was announced this week.

The group plans to organize activities for its winter and spring schedule, elect officers and recruit new members.

Old members, as well as male, female, military and civilian personnel interested in .22 rifle and pistol shooting were urged to attend the meeting, and become members. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p. m.

Four Straight For Champs

Baltimore Wins Ack-Ack Title

Baltimore's 35th AAA Brigade Headquarters pushed across a run in the last of the tenth inning to beat the 531st AAA Battalion of Rapid City, S. D., 2-1 and win the softball championship of the Army Antiaircraft Command at Fort Baker.

Centerfielder Ken Crouch, hitless in the tourney's first three games, slapped a double into right center field with one man out to send William Brandt home with the winning run.

Crouch, from Pena, Ill., scored the tying run for the 35th in the third after reaching base on a single.

The triumph gave the Baltimore team the first national championship of the command.

Dale Jackson got the decision with a sparkling three-hit pitching job. He struck out 10 and held the 531st to one hit after the first inning, when the Dakota team scored on two singles and an error.

Ken Wiseman, Grove City, Ohio, took the defeat with a six-hitter. He struck out two.

The defeat spoiled Rapid City's bid to become the Cinderella team of the double-elimination meet. Defeated 19-2 in the opening round, the 531st had bounced back to win a pair of 2-1 decisions—one in 11 innings—to gain the finals.

Jackson allowed only eight hits in the four games played by the 35th, taking 2-0, 19-2, 3-1 and 2-1 triumphs.

Trophies for the winning and runner-up teams and electric clocks for individual members of both squads were presented at a night awards banquet by Lieutenant General Stanley R. Mickelsen, commanding general of the Army Antiaircraft Command. Gen. Nickelsen was introduced by Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant, commanding the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command, which was host for the tournament.

Other teams will join the 35th as athletic champions of the nation-wide command as four more tournaments are held each year.

Nine Soldiers Prepare For Pentathlon

Fort Sam Houston, Tex.—The Modern Pentathlon, an all-military Olymic event, is a sport for "supermen," according to Nicholas Toth, coach of the U. S. Olympic Pentathlon Team here.

Calling for a mastery in five events, it has attracted nine approved Army athletes, who are now training under Toth for the Olympic trials which will be held here 10-15 October and which will determine the team to represent this country in Australia next month.

Also training under Toth are five other military athletes representing the Navy, Air Force, Marines and Coast Guard.

The Modern Pentathlon consists of the 500-meter cross-country riding event, the 400-meter cross-country run, 300-meter free style swim, 25-meter timed fire pistol shooting, and epee fencing.

This grueling test of skill, speed and strength was first included in the Olympic program at Stockholm in 1912. One member of the U. S. team that year was the late General George S. Patton, Jr., then a second lieutenant of cavalry.

The participant competes in the five events on consecutive days. First he draws a strange horse furnished by the host nation and is allowed only 15 minutes to warm up before he rides over a three-mile course of obstacles and difficult terrain.

The next day he duels each entrant in the epee competition, which requires about ten hours of intermittent bouts.

On the third day the athlete fires 200 shots with the pistol at bobbing targets. The free-style swim and cross-country run follow on the two final days.

The Army places considerable stress on the Pentathlon as it tests a man's judgment and controlled fighting spirit as well as his all-around athletic prowess.

In the riding event, for instance, the competitor must have the courage and judgment to get the most out of a strange horse, without over-riding him to exhaustion on one of the last jumps.

Army Olympian In Weight Toss Win

Pelham Manor, N. Y.—Second Lt. Al Hall of the Boston Army Base, a member of the Olympic track and field team, has won the second annual Amateur Athletic Union weight-throwing championship.

The former Cornell athlete was first in the 12-lb. hammer throw and the 35-lb. weight throw, second in the 16-lb. hammer throw and 56-lb. weight throw, third in the 16-lb. shot put and fourth in the discus throw.

His total point score for the eight-event competition was 9,191½.

4 Clubs Tied For Grid Lead

Four teams stand atop the Presidio intramural football league standings today, and if performances during the past week mean anything, they'll be the clubs to beat for the championship.

Top clubs in the Western League at Fort Scott are the 542nd and 99th Engineer Companies with 2-0 records, while the 163rd MP's and 6000 SU teams dominate the Presidio Eastern loop with two wins, no losses.

The 542nd tripped Headquarters 660th Engineers, 9-0, while the 99th walloped Headquarters, 30th Group, 20-12. In other Western League games, the 549th downed Hq., 30th, 7-6; Company A, 6002 SU crushed the 537th Engineers, 27-0, in games during the past week.

The MP team drubbed Headquarters Company, 6002 SU, 25-6, Headquarters, 6000 SU pasted D Btry., 752nd AAA Missile Battalion, 26-0.

In the thriller of the week, EOD eased past the Teen Agers, 18-15, with a score in the final seconds of the game. Headquarters, 752nd AAA Missile Battalion handed the Teen Agers their second loss, 19-0.

Third Army Battlers Capture Ring Title; KO's Top Final Card

Fort Myer (Va.)—Light heavyweight Jimmy Boyd, 1955 all-Army and Inter-service champion, dropped Tommy Nelson, Fifth Army, for an eight count in the second round and then went on to decision his foe and enable his Third Army squad to capture the all-Army title befor 3,000 enthusiastic fans.

Boyd's victory broke a 17-17 tie with USAREUR in team scoring. Third Army accounted for another victory in the final bout of the evening during a sensational battle between heavyweights Johnny Jackson, USAREUR, and Tom Rademacher, Third Army.

The latter, leading during the two rounds, was hit with a terriffic left hook to the groin and collapsed to the canvas in pain. Referee Eddie Lafond awarded the fight to Rademacher on a foul as he lay there.

In the flyweight opener, Pacific Army's Francis Okuda easily outpointed Third Army's Lin Poindexter. In the next bout, Pacific's Lionel Rivera scored his third thraight tournament knockout victory by blasting Third Army's Jerry Armstrong to the canvas in 2:59 of the second round.

Just prior to putting Armstrong on ice, Rivera flattened him for an eight count.

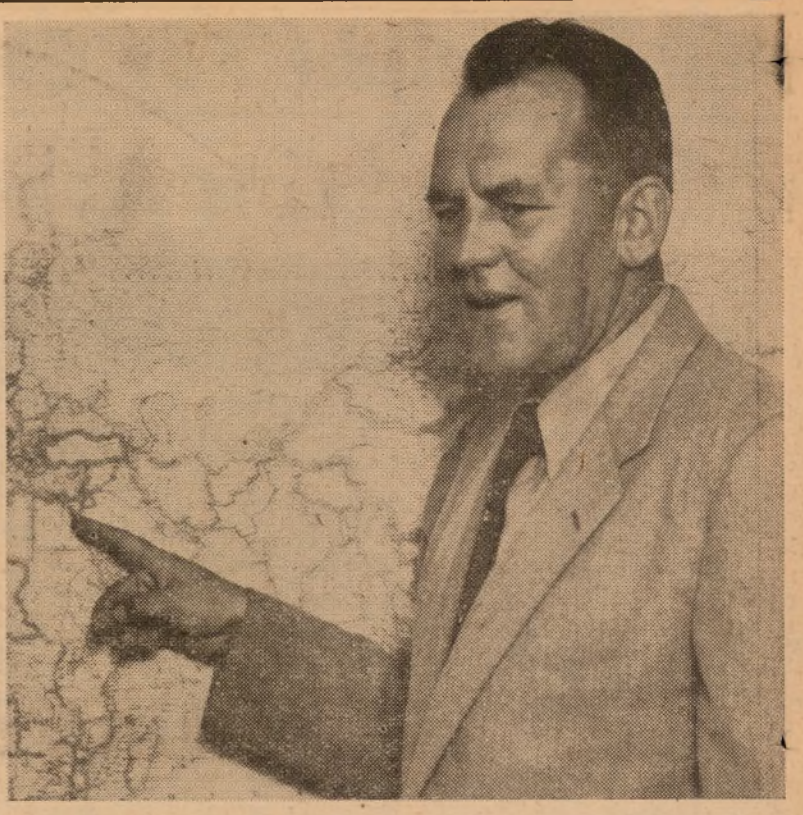
In a real toe-to-toe battle in the featherweight class, Third Army's Ed Cole earned a hard victory over Pacific's Bob Atherton. Sammy Rollins, Second Army, knocked Europe's Vern Lee down twice in the first round of their lighweight battle and then KO'd his foe in 2:25 with a crashing right uppercut to the jaw.

In the light welterweight division, Bill Eldridge, AFFE, scored a close victory over Second Army's Freddie Taylor by outlasting him in the final round.

Fourth Army's Pearce Lane staggered Jim Wakefield, USAREUR, twice in the 3rd round with smashing blows to the head. Lane went on to win the fight via decision.

Jose Torres, Second Army KO artist, scored his third straight tourney win with a TKO over Dillard Jackson, Fourth Army, in 2:36 of the second.

Torres stalked his opponent until an opening presented itself and then sent Jackson reeling. The referee called a halt to proceedings as Jackson staggered to his feet at the count of nine.



Air Mappers —Lt. Colonel Keith N. Flory, Deputy Group Commander, 30th Engineer Group briefs helicopter pilots before take-off on flight over the Clear Lake Project Area. The flight was to show officers in on the planning and those assigned the mission the terrain in which they will have to operate. Left to right: Major Lloyd D. Stromgren, Captain William C. Gonyo, Captain John E. Fleming, 1st Lt. Kenneth Jones, Lt. Colonel Flory, Captain Frank Wilson, and Major Ranald E. Steiner.

AAA Group Slated For New Housing Under Lease Plan

The housing situation is looking up for units of the 30th AAA Group at Fort Barry. The Department of the Army has granted permission for the Group to lease 95 civilian houses in addition to the 34 they already have.

For the whole of the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command the Army is allowing the leasing of 235 additional homes. The new homes will be leased in the Seattle and Los Angeles areas as well as here.

Because of the requirement that personnel at the various Nike and AAA sites, must reside no further than ten minutes from their job, all housing will be leased as close to the defense installations as possible.

Suez Bound Peter O. Uhren, who has been serving as a ships master with the Post Transportation's Harbor Craft unit at Ft. Baker, points out the location of his new assignment in one of the world's hottest trouble spots, the Suez Canal.

Local Survey Unit Will Map Clear Lake Area

Members of the 30th Engineer Group's 660th Engineer Bn. leave in a few days for a two-month stay in California's Clear Lake resort area.

But it will be work and not play for these men, who are there to provide the latest know-how in mapping the Area.

Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, Commander of the 30th Group, has authorized the use of the Army's soldier surveyors by the United States Geological Survey units who are making new maps of the 2470 square mile area.

The 660th will establish a field camp in the area. When possible they will use trucks and jeeps to accomplish their mission. If necessary, they will call for assistance from the air, using the 30th Group's helicopters.

Many of the men going to Clear Lake have but recently returned from the 30th Group's Alaskan Survey Operations. There, from 1950 to 1955, they worked with both the USGS, the United States Coast Guard and the Geodetic Survey.

The new maps will be produced by utilizing the most modern aerial photographic, surveying and photogrametric equipment and techniques.

It's Official

Military personnel in uniform need not show their identification cards in order to make purchases at post exchanges.

This policy, which has been in effect at Presidio exchanges, was recently made official Defense Department policy.

Effective immediately the policy refers only to those military personnel who are in "complete regulation uniform."

Congress At Work

"The Man on the Hill," a new Defense Department film, that "describes the activities of the average congressman in pursuit of his duties" will be shown twice, 0800 and 1300 hours respectively, on 6, 10 Oct., at the Post Theater by the Post TI&E Section.

Unit commanders are urged to have their personnel attend one of the showings.

Baker Skipper Will Pilot Suez Shipping

A new chapter in the story-book career of a forty-year-old Harbor Craft ship master began this week when he elected to become one of the first American pilots to join the international group now serving the Egyptian Government in the Suez Canal

Peter O. Uhren, who for the past year and a half has skippered an Army vessel between Ft. Baker and Angel Island, left Tuesday night for Egypt. He expects to begin a five weeks' training course, aimed at teaching new pilots the devious ways of the murky Suez, on Monday.

In an exclusive interview, Uhren told the Star Presidian that it wasn't for the money alone, his new job offers a possible increase of some $8,600 in annual salary, that he decided to accept the Egyptian offer.

"I sincerely believe that the individual American can prove a valuable asset in these areas of crisis. Besides that, it (the job) offers a real challenge to the individual."

Uhren, who holds a masters' license, unlimited, has "gone down to the sea" for over twenty years. During World War II he served with the Merchant Marine in the South Pacific, Mediterranean and the North Atlantic. During service aboard the Joseph Pulitzer, his vessel won the "gallant ship" citation for participation in the Sicilian invasion.

Married to Doctor Mae Hutton, an Anglo-Burmese, who served as a medical captain with the British in Calcutta during World War II and is now with the Port Surgeon's office at Ft. Mason, the Urens have three children, Mary, 5½, Christina, 4½, and Marta, just turned three.

Uhren's contract calls for two years' service on his new job.

A Gullish Tribute To Army Blasters

By Sp3 R. A. Lewis

Exploders are a seagull's best friend!

At least this is true of the exploders in the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) who have been supplying the San Francisco Bay seagull population with free breakfasts of concussion-killed fish for the past three weeks.

Seagull feeding is strictly an aside for the engineers, who are blasting old iron pilings from the bay floor in front of Letterman Hospital. The pilings and the rotten pier date from the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, which heralded the opening of the Panama Canal in 1915 .

The engineers have been using aproximately 18 pounds of explosive (Tetrytol, M-2 chain blocks) on each of the 96 pilings. All these explosions do bad things to the neighboring fish—to the delight of the seagulls.

The engineers are actually not too keen on their fine-feathered friends, which hover over the area by the hundreds. As one of them points out: "There are greedy birds, and noisy birds, and 'doity boids'." And no air raid warnings!

The dead fish, mostly small shiners, attract larger fish as well as the birds. So occasionally "whoppers," including two 35-pound bass, are blown to the surface. Of course, the men aren't to take any of the dead fish home. That net? Oh, that's just to keep the area policed up.

The actual blasting operation, which takes about 20 minutes per piling, involves these main operations: First, a man on a raft cuts the top bracing with a torch. Then a chain is hooked around the piling.

Now the diver, in a shallow water suit, enters the act. He jumps into the water, is handed the explosive and swims over to the metal post. He then submerges and connects the explosive at the bay floor.

The diver is pulled out of the water . . . everybody steps back a few feet . . . the electric detonator is attached . . . the handle is turned . . . KA-BOOM!

Ker-splash! Goes the diver for the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) as he leaps in the water prior to swimming over to the iron piles to place an explosive charge. The engineers are presently clearing the beach area in front of Letterman Hospital of old pre-World War I dock pilings. Center man on dock holds charge which he will hand to the swimming diver. Seagulls on piles are but part of the thousands of hungry birds who wait for fish to be blown to the surface after each blast.

Army NCOs Score Pay, Bad Housing

By Sp3 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Staff Writer

A "no holds barred" report outlining the Army-wide Senior NCO Symposium held at Fort Belvoir in August to uncover reenlistment factors has been released to the Star Presidian from Sixth Army G-1 section.

One by one the report takes each of the 17 topics of discussion stating the problem, the assumptions and the facts. It follows with the discussion, the conclusion and the recommendations which ranged from the reduction of the Korean tour from 16 to 12 months to removal of the demotion clause from Article 15.

The topics were discussed in subcommittee groups of three or four where a report was written to be submitted to the entire symposium for final additions and subtractions.

Symposiums similar to the Army's were called by each major service. All results were furnished to the Cordiner Pay committee

Service NCOs Agree On Most Key Points

By M/Sgt. Herb Scott, USA
(AFPS Washington Correspondent)

Washington—Top Army and Air Force noncoms and Navy senior petty officers practically see "eye-to-eye" in their recommendations for ways to enhance "career incentive" in the services.

Meeting in recent months in separate groups at the instigation of the Cordiner Committee, enlisted men selected for their mature judgment and experience were invited to discuss the problems of a career in the ranks and air their views for improvements.

The Cordiner Committee, formed by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson to recommend compensation or policy changes to keep men with professional or technical skills in uniform, held its third full meeting at the Pentagon 28 September.

Higher pay highlights the three conference reports. Army top-three-graders say base pay is inadequate in all ranks and suggest across-the-board hikes with the greater ratio for the upper four grades. Air Force NCOs feel officer and enlisted pay for subsistence, per diem, flying, etc., should be equalized.

Both the soldier and airmen conferees went down the line taking military life apart in varying degrees with the idea of making things better rather than

Absentee Service Ballots Get Governors' Attention

Washington—Thirty state governors have issued proclamations or statements setting aside a week before the national elections, 6 Nov., as "Servicemen's Absentee Voting Week."

Through cooperation among the Defense Department, Federal Voting Assistance officials, the Post Office Department and the General Services Administration, the gubernatorial declarations, representative of both major political parties, will be posted in all federal buildings in the 30 states.

Governor Averell Harriman, in urging the absentee voting for 325,000 New York members of the Armed Forces, said:

"The foundation of our democracy is the right—and equally the duty—of every eligible voter to make (his) voice heard in public affairs in every election . . ."

Governor Christian A. Herter, encouraging Massachusetts' citizens to cooperate in bringing 125,000 servicemen of his state to take part in the election, declared:

"It is the responsibility of all of us to make certain that . . . servicemen and relatives are informed of their right to vote and of the procedure they should follow in obtaining and voting a military ballot."

According to Navy Capt. Marcus L. Whitford, assistant coordinator of the DOD voting program, there are some three million potential voters in the services who can qualify to cast absentee ballots this fall. (AFPS)

Area Chief

General Ennis Heads Reserves

In a move designed to strengthen supervision and support of the National Guard, Army Reserve and Reserve Officers' Training Corps units in this Army area, Major General Riley F. Ennis, Deputy Commanding General Sixth Army has been designated Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, Sixth Army.

The move was explained as part of present Army policy to emphasize the importance of training programs for Guard and Reserve units so that they may better fit into the strategic defense picture by being in a complete state of readiness in event of emergency.

Following the same policy, Lieutenant General Ridgely Gaither was recently appointed Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces of the Continental Army Command.

Hard Cash Will Be Paid Top Soldier Suggestions

If you've got an idea, soldier, suggest it! It's worth money.

A monthly Military Suggestion Contest, effective 1 October, will be paying three prizes not to exceed $25, $15 and $10 for ideas that increase production, improve morale, reduce costs, increase safety or better utilize manpower.

The contest is open to all military personnel at the Presidio and sub posts (except Letterman Hospital). To be eligible for the cash award the suggestion must be adopted.

Suggestions should be addressed to the Secretary, Local Incentive Awards Committee, Post Headquarters and sent through message center. Posters explaining the contest with suggestion blanks attached have been distributed on Post. However, the suggestion may be submitted on a blank sheet of paper if a form is not available.

At the end of each month the Local Incentive Awards Committee will select the three outstanding suggestions adopted that month for the prize money. It is emphasized that the suggestion must be adopted to be eligible for the money.

Suggestions might go on to the Sixth Army level where they would be eligible for prizes again, it has been pointed out.

Service Policies To Pay Dividends

The first dividend in 25 years will be paid in 1957 to policyholders of 5-year term U. S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI), which originated in World War I, the Veterans Administration announced this week.

Also announced was a $25 million increase in the regular annual 1957 dividend for some five million policyholders of National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) which originated in World War II.

The dividend for the USGLI term insurance will amount to an average of 20 per cent of the premiums the policyholders are paying at present.

The only GI insurance policyholders who will not share in the 1957 dividends are those who have the non-participating post-Korea NSLI term and permanent plans. The law under which these policies are issued prohibits the payment of dividends.

NCO Committee Report

which makes its final report to the Defense Department on 30 November. This committee's recommendations are expected to be the major factor determining which career legislation the administration endorses next year.

A summation of some of the more important comments and recommendations by the enlisted man symposium follows:

By and large medical care and education facilities were lauded as two of the Army's finest advantages. The few medical complaints referred to dependent care. It was thought that the Army—from a public relations standpoint—could better advertise its educational opportunities.

Pay was a subject of primary importance. The group saw the need of a general pay increase after comparing the lower grade EM pay to the civilian $1 an hour minimum. Even more glaring was the gap between top non-com pay and that of civilians holding comparably responsible jobs.

To help the EM balance his budget it was recommended that the Army pay twice a month like the other services. Incentive pay for special jobs of responsibility such as First Sergeant or Sergeant Major was requested. And it was suggested that the criteria for determining hazardous duty pay be reconsidered.

Clothing allowance was thought adequate for normal replacement, but not for the purchase of new uniforms.

The subject of training occupied the largest subcommittee report. The topic was divided into four parts: Basic training, basic and intermediate education, specialist training and unit training.

The importance of basic training "which sets the tone and pattern for military life" was recognized. It was suggested that there would be fewer complaints if the reasons behind certain phases of training were explained to the recruits.

"Unnecessary duties that accomplish nothing, such as GI parties in rapid succession," were condemned. Rather unit commanders should try a positive approach emphasizing incentive awards for individual and group achievement. In order to show personal interest and improve public relations, a standard procedure of sending progress reports to parents was recommended.

Mandatory school quotas often result in the sending of unwilling men off for training. The company commander has a tendency "to keep the good men and send the 'eight balls.'" Rather than force men to attend school, the advantages should be publicized and assistance should be given to enable willing men to attain the necessary prerequisites.

To help men reach minimum education levels, the Army should establish basic education schools at training centers, the committee said. Men should not be allowed out of basic training until they have reached a fourth grade level. They should not be assigned to a unit until they have reached an eighth grade educational equivalent, felt the group.

The non-coms had strong views on unit training. Some felt character guidance was an insult and "should be pointed to a need basis." TI&E was a good program when initiated, the report stated, but it has served its purpose and should be discontinued.

Inspection notice should be cut to a minimum, the symposium concluded, in order to eliminate "crash programs" which result in "dress-up situations" far beyond normal.

The report from the promotions subcommittee pointed out that "there presently exists an appreciable percentage of sub-standard individuals in grades E-5 through E-7 whose performance of duty is below the caliber expected. . . ." It called for "an immediate, energetic program to re-evaluate capabilities of personnel" in the top three grades.

Time-in-grade was not considered an adequate prerequisite for promotion by the committee. It emphasized a definite need for a competitive selection which considers other factors as well as seniority.

On the other hand, if a man has proven his capabilities he should be eligible for a permanent rank, said the committee, which suggested that a cut off day for temporary promotions be established.

The duty assignment subcommittee, which was chairmanned by M/Sgt. Patrick L. O'Hagan, Sixth Army non-com representative, recommended that the personnel records of all surplus MOS holders be given a thorough screening to determine which personnel should be retained.

Career management and assignment of a branch of service for the top two pay grades should be initiated, said this subcommittee, with control of duty assignments by the chief of the branch.

Sergeant O'Hagan's committee also recommended that the career field program—where men take tests to get promoted—be initiated.

The power to reduce a man one grade by an Article 15 was sometimes abused by unit commanders for personal or expedient reasons, the committee felt. It recommended that this punishment be replaced with a fining system which could take a maximum of one-half a man's base pay for one month.

The recreation subcommittee favored a de-emphasis of post level athletics in favor of company level activities. And it thought that all personnel should be required to pull normal duties.

To "raise the Esprit de Corps" of the lower grade non-coms, it was recommended that enlisted men's clubs, similar to those provided overseas, be established. Such a plan, it was thought, would keep the men on post and out of involvement with local authorities.

One of the strongest points coming from the overseas tours subcommittee concerned the reduction of overseas tours in Korea and Alaska and the stabilization of other more desirable tours. It was believed that all EM overseas should be allowed to extend their tours with the approval of their commander.

One difficulty could be eased, the housing subcommittee pointed out, if the Army would consider mobile homes as standard housing under the terms of the home loan act. Wherry housing should be placed under the Army's operational control and the committee recommended that separation of NCOs and lower ranking EM should be more thoroughly carried out.

The NCO-Specialist program has not been in existence long enough to make a thorough evaluation, the committee concluded. However, it was certain that Specialists above E-4 should be given the same rights and advantages as the NCOs.

Not only were the members of the Symposium in favor of the new green Army uniform, but they recommended that it be issued as soon as possible. Men of grade E-7 should be issued a distinctive uniform, the committee thought, and distinctive chevrons for sergeants major were recommended. It was suggested that the blue uniform be issued only to RA men.

The group recognized the serious hardship caused by the long separation between men and their families where concurrent travel was not possible on transfer or where a housing shortage existed. But it concluded that government transportation of families and household goods for lower ranking EM was not desirable because it would lower first three grader prestige and it would remove incentive to achieve those higher grades.

Army retirement was lauded as being better than industry's, but it was pointed out that this benefit has little effect on the first tour man. It was suggested that the advantages of the Army retirement program be more extensively publicized.

First tour men should not be excluded from the Gyroscope programs, the committee felt. Rather they should be allowed to sign for the program at any time during their tour, if they are assigned to a unit. This benefit, too, should receive better publicity, the committee noted.

These non-commissioned recommendations cover a field as broad as the Army itself, a Sixth Army, G-1, spokesman commented this week. While some action might be taken at a local level other problems could only be solved by Congressional legislation, he said. A few of the suggestions are already fact in this area, he pointed out.

No official action on the whole subject of non-com recommendations has been received from DA, the spokesman revealed, adding that it is more likely that the Army will consider each suggestion on its individual merit. The complete report is in the hands of the Cordiner commission which will deliver the last of its findings to the Defense Department on 30 November.

NCOs Agree

to criticize and came mighty close to forming the same basic conclusions.

The two committees said hazard pay should be expanded and the soldier group supported the idea of incentive pay in some assignments but they differed a bit in opinions on reenlistment bonuses.

Airmen said higher reenlistment bonuses paid early in a man's career came at the wrong time and added that reup inducements could be eliminated if pay were raised sufficiently. The Army men merely said lump sum bonuses were preferred.

Conclusions on retirement went hand-in-hand. Young men think little of this advantage during their first hitches, both reports said and agreed that retirement is the greatest single factor making servicemen remain after 8 to 10 years. Army NCOs think the pension plan should get more publicity.

The reports of the Navy Career Conferences of some 220 senior petty officers representing all 61 ratings, held on the East and West Coast, were voluminous.

One statement by the Navy panel struck at the heart of the present situation. It said: "In discussing compensation, it is only fair to mention that we have many 24-karat shipmates throughout the Navy who consider it an honor to be an American Bluejacket. . . .

"If every officer and enlisted man felt this way, the American people would have no problem . . . they would have a first-rate Navy crammed full of dedicated men at very little cost.

"It is unfortunate, perhaps, that this feeling is not universal. It is unfortunate perhaps that patriotism wears thin. . . . It is unfortunate that Navy families have the desire to maintain standards of living comparable to that of their civilian contemporaries.

". . . the nation is enjoying a prolonged period of prosperity . . . job opportunities are excellent . . . wage scales are at an all-time high . . . fringe benefits are approaching, and in many cases surpassing, the traditional benefits enjoyed by Navy families."

Housing programs are "excellent" but inadequate in the Army, the soldiers said. Airmen claimed most quarters "deficient," but both believe off-base allowances should be pegged to cost rather than fixed, since high rents forced lower standards of living in most areas. Neither likes to be housed on-post with the lower grades.

On the subject of prestige, they agree non-commissioned officers should have the responsibilities and consideration befitting their rank and abilities.

Air Force NCOs want "distinctive unit insignia, separate housing, an NCO Academy, a stabilized uniform, (and) separate NCO messes." The Army group put in a bid for a "distinctive" uniform for E-7 personnel.

Together they decried menial tasks for the upper grades.

Recommendations on in-service education were not quite the same, but each committee recognized the importance of these opportunities.

The Air Force group declared the government actually is "paying" servicemen, through the GI Bill, to leave the Armed Forces and wants the same benefits extended to those on active duty.

The soldiers went on record for continuing the present education program but urged giving it wider publicity on the "home front" to reduce outside pressure on some men "to get out and finish your education."

Family separations could be reduced by more housing in overseas commands, where shortages preclude concurrent travel, each report said.

The NCOs formed a solid front in suggesting eliminating the man not qualified to hold his grade. The Air Force committee went further in asking for measures to drop non-coms "obviously unfit and incapable," recommending schooling and a central academy to which "superior top three-graders would be sent."

There is a general feeling that the warrant officer program should be abolished, the airmen said, because NCOs preferred the master sergeant rating.

They also said that civilian employees should not supervise enlisted men or make out their efficiency reports.

Art Classes Scheduled For Interested Ladies

Now that children are back in school and the winter schedule is getting under way the Presidio Craft Shop is featuring special art classes for the women of the post. There will be painting classes on Tuesdays, both morning and afternoon, and a mosaic and craft workshop on Thursday afternoons.

As long as the good weather continues the painting classes will work outdoors in either oil or water color. Bad days will allow for inside work on the technical side of painting, with work in either still life or portrait. A model will be hired when wanted.

At present the classes center at the Presidio Service Club but in November, when Bldg. 122 has been redecorated and re-equipped, they will meet there. The classes at present will be limited to a maximum of 15 members. William Zacha, the Post Crafts Director, invited all prospective artists to the service club on Tuesday, 16 October, to discuss plans and equipment.

If it is going to be inconvenient to come by on Tuesday, there will be the weekly craft demonstration in the main lounge of the service club from 1900 to 2200. Coffee will be served. The night's demonstration will be a completely new art form; a combination of stained glass, mosaic, painting, and general design. Anyone interested in learning new or old techniques is invited to these demonstrations.

If there are requests for any special process or craft, a word to Zacha will get them on the schedule at once. On Monday night he'll be happy to answer inquiries about the painting classes for the Women's Club members.

New Chief Librarian

Bock Named To Head All Libraries

The Presidio has a new Post librarian.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, who has been in charge of the Sixth Army Library and Library Depot, has now taken on the Post librarian job in addition to her other duties.

The change has resulted from a decreasing personnel authorization for the libraries. Miss Mary Jane Bustruck, former Post librarian, remains as assistant librarian.

Mrs. Bock, who assumed her new position the first of October, has some tentative plans in mind for increasing the Presidio library program. Work is near completion on the Fort Cronkhite library. It is hoped that a mobile library can be established for the AAA units, she says. On Post she hopes to establish a reading program.

Mrs. Bock has a rich background in library work. She received a degree in library science from Louisiana State University and then worked at the St. Louis public library. In San Francisco she worked in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's special library before coming to the Sixth Army library in 1944.

2,300 Positions In Foreign Services Open to Citizens

Washington—Career appointments to 2,300 new positions in the Foreign Service of the State Department have been opened to qualified U. S. citizens over 21 years old.

Under legislation passed by the 84th Congress, starting salaries now range between $4,750 and $5,350 a year.

Young men and women for stateside and overseas assignments in the expanding Foreign Service Corps will be selected through annual competitive examinations to be given this year on 8 December in 63 cities and U. S. possessions.

Candidates must request application forms from the Foreign Service Board of Examiners, Washington, D. C., prior to 26 October in order to take the three-part tests at Civil Service Examination Centers.

According to the State Department, 250 junior officers will be named each year for a wide variety of consular and diplomatic posts offering exceptional promotion possibilities.

"New Opportunities in the U. S. Foreign Service," a State Department pamphlet giving additional information on the program, is available in all major commands to servicemen being separated from the armed forces. (AFPS)

Tower Builders Tie Training Project To Service Program

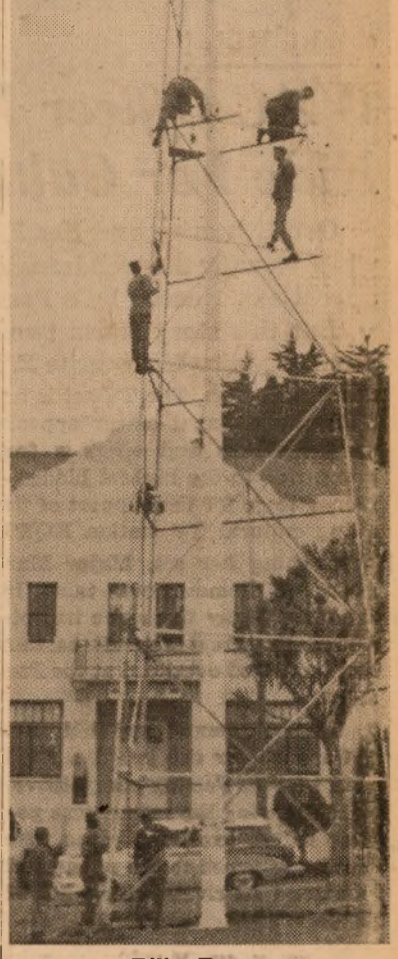
Sidewalk superintendents were out in force last week as something new was added to the panoramic view at Fort Scott.

The new addition was nothing less than a do-it-yourself Bilby tower going up around the flag pole. The project was ordered by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, commander of the 30th Engineer Group (Topo Survey), in keeping with the Post's program of doing one's own maintenance.

The tower served two purposes: First it enabled the Engineers to repaint the flagpole, thereby saving the Post money, and secondly it provided a practical training project for the 537th Engineer Company.

Bilby towers vary from 90 to 106 feet in height, and weigh approximately 6600 pounds. They are used in connection with triangulation; a system of measurement to obtain distances on the earth's surface.

The imposing structure usually contains two independent towers, one inside the other. In this way the precise instrument setting on the inner one is in no way affected by the operator's movements as he walks about the outer tower.



The actual procedure for construction involves intricate maneuvering of equipment and men in a confined space at dizzying heights. As each new section goes up, the men balance themselves delicately in order to fasten the next set of posts. It has been said that trapeze artist training, though not a prerequisite for the job, helps.

Lt. Richard J. Rappaport, commander of the 537th, turned the job over to his best Bilby builder, M/Sgt. Jeremiah (Mahogany) Mahoney, who's been building such towers the world over for years.

Mahoney modestly recalls the time a 20-foot python once entwined itself into the braces of his tower and departed only after the most vigorous prodding. Another time in the Philippines he had a tower to build and no material. Out came the axes, down went the coconut trees, and up went the tower.

But perhaps Mahoney's tallest, tensest tower tale concerns the time in the Philippines his crew returned to a partially constructed tower and found it surrounded by the local constabulary, fully armed and ready for battle. It took more than a little explanation by the sergeant to explain that, no, this was not a Huk—Communist guerrilla—command post.

In the Fort Scott project, Mahoney was assisted by a novice team including Sp2 Thomas Benoit, Sp2 Amos Tillman and Pfc. William Nelson, all of the 537th.

Bilby Tower

Those sidewalk superintendents are still gaping at the daring and ingenuity of the erection team, but to Mahoney and company, it was all in a day's work. Anyone for tower building?

Mail Early!

Overseas Gifts Deadline Set

Washington — With Christmas just around the corner, the Army says that parcels for its overseas personnel should be mailed between 15 October and 15 November.

Emphasis is being placed on secure packing. Also gifts must be packed in wood, metal or double faced corrugated fiberboard cartons. Fragile articles must have at least two inches of tightly packed cushioning material such as shredded paper or excelsior.

Size of parcels for oversea shipment is limited to 100 inches in total length and girth. The weight limitations are 50 pounds to Army Post Offices in Great Britain and 70 pounds to all other points.

The Army urges mailers to check with their local post offices for complete oversea mailing information as items such as cigarettes, tobacco, and coffee cannot be sent to some areas. Postal law prohibits sending matches, lighter fluid or any other inflammable items through the mail. (ANS)

Ed Emphasis Strong

The Federal government is adding even greater emphasis to college talent recruiting drive this fall following the unprecedented success of last year's Federal-Service Entrance Examination, the Civil Service Commission has announced.

Crusade Drive Lagging; Civilians Fail Quotas

Pretty girls recruited from among military and civilian personnel at the Presidio joined in a musical plea from the Sixth Army Pipe Band this week to stimulate lagging interest in the Bay Area Fund Crusade by touching the hearts of those who had not yet contributed and those who have not yet honored the pledges made earlier during the fund drive.

Although military personnel at the Presidio have given nearly 85 per cent of their quota, and this despite overwhelming support for the recently concluded Army Emergency Relief Drive, civilian personnel have failed, so far, to meet the fair share quota—a day's pay!

Midway in the Bay Area financial drive at the Presidio the percentage now stands at a wavering 73.5 of the hoped-for 100 per cent to which the military reservation had been committed at the project's inception.

Cash turn-in to the Post Fund Custodian this week amounts to the sum of $21,156.48, while uncollected pledges have reached the figure of $5,344.85. If the yet unpaid pledges are honored this week the completed figure for the fund to date will be $26,501.33.

To date, Sixth Army headquarters staff sections have accomplished 54.8 per cent of their potential goal. Units have eased up to the half-way mark of 49.2 with, in all cases, an unaccountable lag in collections from civilian personnel at the Presidio.

Highlighting the week's Crusade contribution at the Presidio was the payment of a pledge made by Pfc. Maxine Sliva of the Wac Detachment who donated the equivalent of a lieutenant's pay to the fund. Matching her generosity was a civilian lady assigned to the Post Finance Office who anonymously added a windfall of $25.00 to the sum of $20.00 she had already given.

Despite the present slowdown in fund contributions to the Bay Area Crusade drive, it is hoped that between now and until after the coming October pay day, the Presidio will rally, as it usually does, to the cause of this great local charity.

Plans are currently under way to stage another big musical rally on next Wednesday. Purpose will be to gain as many complete days pay pledges as possible. The caravan will visit each section and assist unit committees in completing their quotas.

Local Soldiers Adopt New Infant For Blood Assist

Two infants, both less than a year old and both suffering from critical heart ailments requiring immediate surgery, will be the recipients of rare-type blood from soldiers of the Presidio within the next week.

Last week 40 Presidio soldiers and civilians responded to an urgent call from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank for Type A, RA positive blood, for 10-month-old Jimmy Peebles. After extensive tests three soldiers whose blood matched perfectly were chosen.

Wednesday another call came to the Presidio with information that 5-month-old Michael Ratel was scheduled for a heart operation today. He, too, requires the rare type A, RH positive, blood—eight pints. It was explained that some of the earlier volunteers whose blood did not match Jimmy Peebles' perfectly did match the Ratel infant's blood. Would they give?

It took just 90 minutes to line up five volunteers for today's operation. They are M/Sgt. Randolph Young, 740th AAA Bn.; Sp3 Allen C. Houston, 561st Engineer Co.; Sfc. George P. Leake, Sixth Army Medical Lab; Pvt. Ian D. Blair, Hq. Co. (6000), and Pvt. Leopold H. Rivers, Hq. Co. (6002).

Volunteers finally selected for the Jimmy Peebles operation are 1st Lt. Charles Sallade, 87th Ord Det.; Sp3 Jarrett P. Turner, 561st Engineer Co.; and Sp3 Paul V. Clymo, Sixth Army Honor Guard.

Second Oldest Regiment

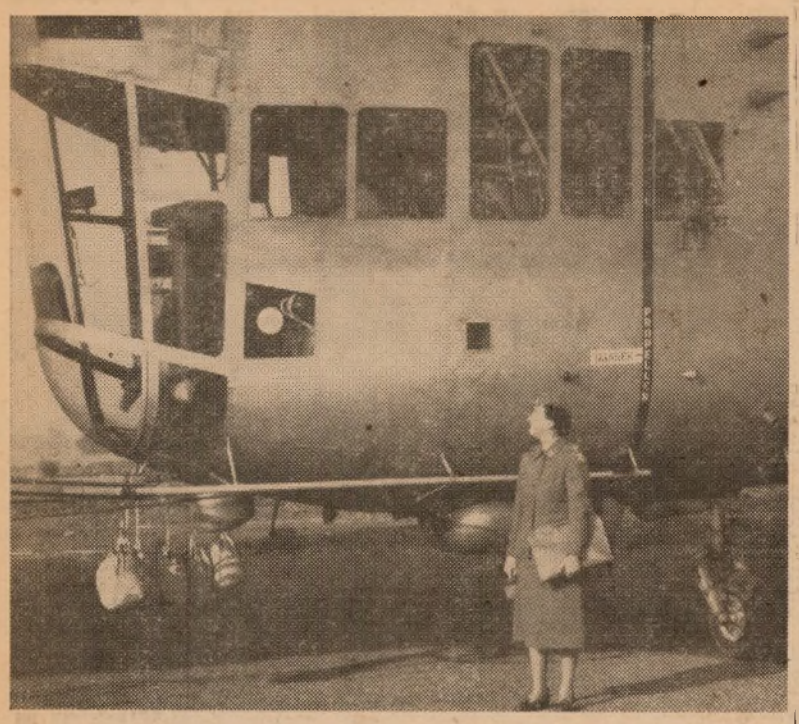
The first Infantry Regiment constituted as Second Infantry Regiment was established on 3 March 1791, and is the second oldest regiment in the Army.

Last Take Off —This 80 cubic-foot balloon made the last official take-off from Roosevelt Field, L. I., recently. The site of the field will become a major shopping center. Brig. Gen. Charles A. Lindbergh made his non-stop flight to Paris from the field which has been closed down since 1951.

Recruiting Team Enlists Entire Reserve Company

Official activation of a new Army reserve unit with an expected enlistment of more than 50 men will take place tomorrow, 1400 hours, at the high school football stadium, Newman, Calif.

Maj. Gen. C. Lyn Fox, commanding general of the 91st Infantry Division, will preside over ceremonies that will involve the swearing in of men from the communities of Gustine, Newman and Patterson.



Credit for the success of the recruiting program that has been in effect for less than one month is due largely to the "fine cooperation given by civic leaders in these communities which comprise the western side of the San Joaquin Valley," states Captain Aldo Berttelli, project officer in charge of recruiting.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, will also participate in the activation of the new unit, Company L, 363rd Infantry Regiment, 91st Infantry Division.

Most of the new recruits are fulfilling their military obligation under the provision of the new Reserve Forces Act of 1955 which enables them to serve six months of active duty training and then return to their homes where they will participate in the active reserve.

Key Law Covers Most

Federal civilian employees, on 30 June 1955, were only one per cent from perfect coverage by the Incentive Awards Law. The Annual and Sick Leave law covered 97 per cent of all federal employees in the continental U. S. and 92 per cent of the worldwide total.

High Bidder in a recent drive for funds to support KQED, the Bay Area's cultural station was Maj. Marguerite Pomeroy of the Sixth Army IG Section. Her prize was an eight-hour ride aboard the Navy blimp, shown above.

Cushy Ride!

WAC Officer Wins Blimp Ride For Cultural Donation

Gently floating over San Francisco in a glass-bottomed ship while viewing the wondrous sights on the air floor below was a treat experienced by a Presidio WAC officer recently.

But this story starts two months ago in the cozy living room of Major Marguerite E. Pomeroy, Sixth Army Inspector General Section. The TV set is on. Suddenly a Naval officer appears on the screen and offers a free blimp ride to the highest bidder—money to go for the support of the ailing cultural TV station KQED.

Watching her set, Major Marguerite E. Pomeroy was taken by the offer. Many times she had observed the great aircraft as they had lumbered overhead at the Presidio.

So she phoned and bid $50. Minutes later she heard a rival bid of $60. Feeling competitive, and knowing the money was going to an excellent cause, the major returned to the phone and smashed all rivals with a bid of $100.

So early on Monday morning Major Pomeroy found herself sitting in a K-type Airship at the Oakland Naval Air Station. Suddenly the skipper jerked his thumb up, the ground crew released the lines, and the blimp—like a trout after flies—leaped into the air. In seconds the altimeter read: 1,000 feet.

The experience of blimping can most closely be compared to yachting. The craft chugs lazily along at 45 knots. Windows are open, the air is warm; there is a gentle rolling sensation. Only the fishing pole is lacking.

While over San Francisco Bay, Major Pomeroy took a turn at steering the great ship, whose controls are similar to that of an airplane. She also observed the crew members cooking a delicious dinner of steak, beans and tomatoes over a compact electric stove.

The car attached to the huge bag is 43 feet long, the size of fancy motor yacht. At intervals along the aisle there are soft, lounge-type chairs. No safety belts. In the nose below the pilot's cabin is the front observation point. Here one sits on a pillow with space above, below and in front—quite a thrill at 1,000 feet.

The blimp which carried Major Pomeroy is the only military airship on the West Coast presently. Its primary mission is training Naval reserve units. It is 265 feet long, 81 feet high and 68 feet in width. Empty it weighs 25,300 pounds; the helium volume is 527,000 cubic feet. The ship is designed to stay aloft for 30 hours.

DA Award to Jane Blair

Jane Blair received a Department of the Army Suggestion Award Certificate and $15.00 from Colonel Lawton Butler, Sixth Army Adjutant General, at an informal ceremony at the Presidio of San Francisco, last week.

A Supervisory Clerk with the AG Section for the past three years, Mrs. Blair suggested a method of filing Army special orders and letter orders, thus eliminating the necessity of duplicate files.

Order Draft For NG, Res. Duty Failures

Washington — Under a new Presidential Executive Order and Selective Service directive, draft-deferred personnel who fail to carry out their National Guard or other Reserve obligations must be drafted within 30 days by their Selective Service boards.

According to this new order and directive a man who is certified by his unit commander to have failed to perform satisfactorily, will be drafted within 30 days irrespective of the size of the board's draft quota or the individual's dependency, job, or other factors.

This procedure applies to individuals who joined before reaching age 18½, and personnel who acquired a service obligation along with their RFA enlistment in the Guard or Reserve.

This order plugs a previous loophole which allowed personnel to be delinquent in their Reserve obligations without penalty. Many were discharged from the Guard, reverted automatically to the Reserve, then failed to attend drills and field training because the Reserve did not want them.

These certified personnel will be drafted into the service corresponding to the civilian component they were serving. For example, if they were in the Army, Guard or USAR, they will be drafted into the active Army. If they were serving in the Air National Guard, they will be drafted into the active USAF. (ANS)

On 24 January, 1923, the American Flag was lowered from Fortress Ehrenbreitstein at Coblentz, thus ending U. S. occupation of Germany after World War I.

Slate Annual Physicals For All Local Officers

The annual physical examination for officers and warrant officers, serving under the Sixth Army's medical facilities, are scheduled to begin at the Presidio Post Dispensary Tuesday, 23 October, continuing through Friday, 7 December, on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 1330 to 1500, by appointment.

In cases where physical examination has been undergone during the fiscal year for the following purposes, the coming medical evaluation is not required:

Appointment to the Regular Army, application for or recall to active duty, medical board action during hospitalization in calendar year, 1956, promotion in the Regular Army, application for aviation or airborne training or any other final-type physical examination.

Exempt also is any officer whose term of active service is expected to end during the calendar year 1957 by reason of eligibility under existing separation criteria or statutory requirements.

Officers and warrant officers, without regard to age, who are not on flying status and/or holding a currently effective aeronautical designation or rating need not report for the present-scheduled medical examination since they will undergo a complete annual-type physical examination for flying, to be conducted at Letterman Army Hospital at a later date.

Thursday, 1 November; Friday, 16 November, and Friday, 30 November, have been reserved for General Officers and Colonels slated to undergo the annual physical examinations.

Influenza innoculations for officers will be administered immediately after their physical examination has been completed.

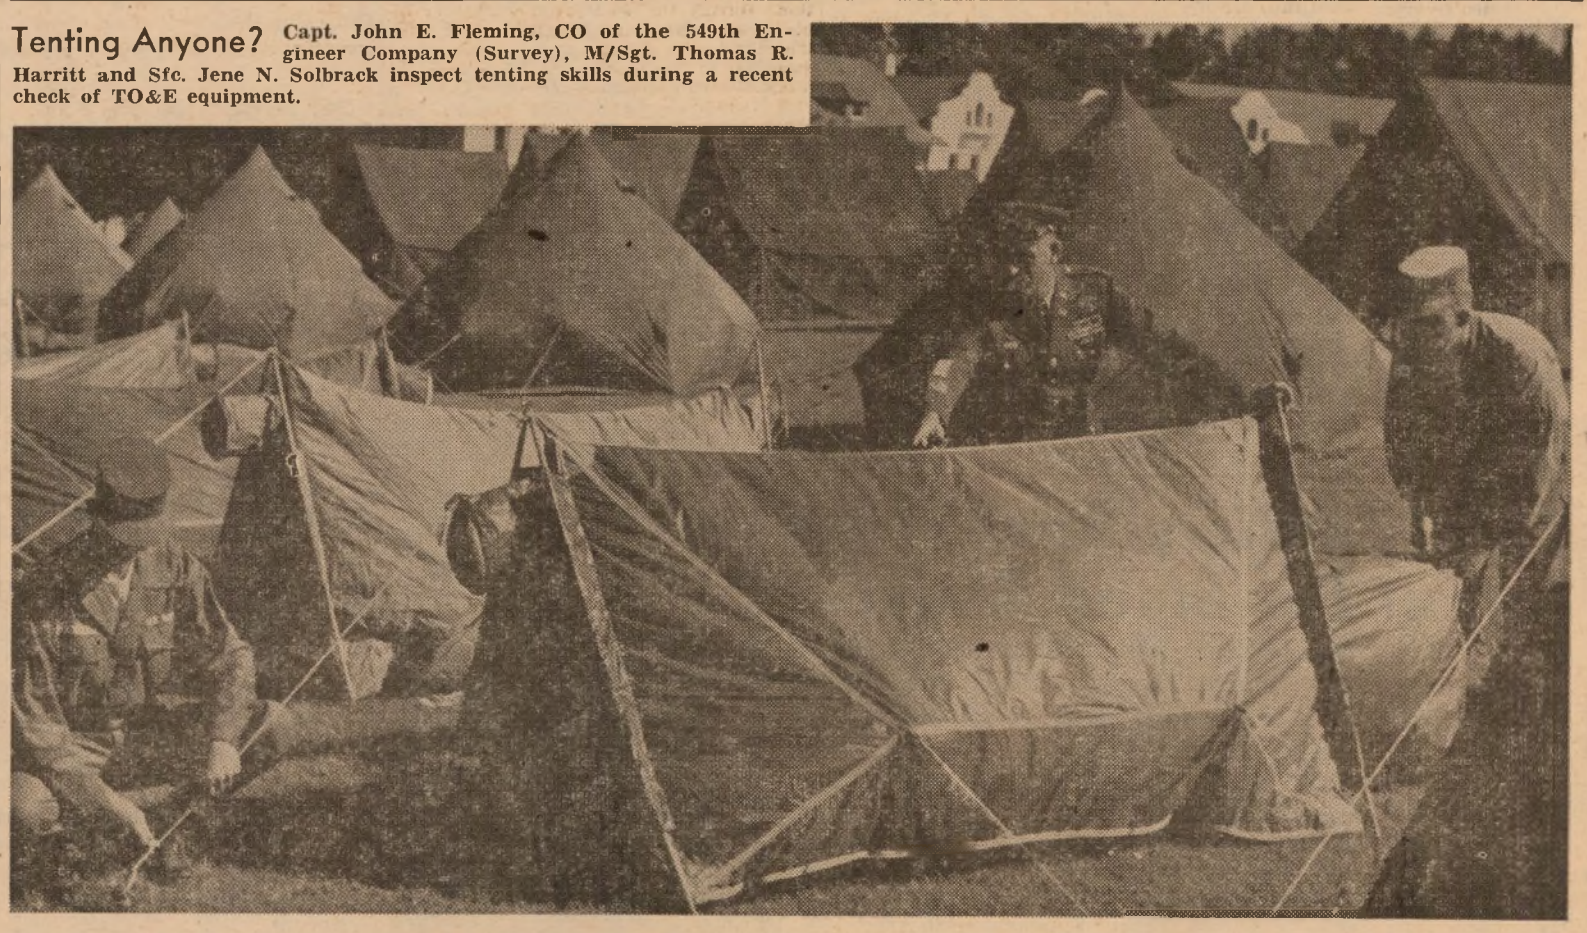
Women officers will be called upon to take their annual physical examinations at Letterman Army Hospital on dates appointed through the Post Surgeon's Office.

All officers undergoing annual physicals will be notified by the Post Dispensary 24 hours in advance of the appointed time.

Local Special Services Staff Attends Meet

The Sixth Army Special Services officer and staff members have recently returned from participation in the American Recreation Society conference and the International Recreation Association conference held in Philadelphia from 28 September through 5 October.

The group from the Presidio was part of a panel of 200 men and women chiefs of Special Services from Department of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Department of Defense attending the conference on an Army-wide basis.



Future plans for military recreational projects were discussed at the conference.

Local Special Services personnel attending the Philadelphia conference were Colonel Arthur W. Gustafson, Sixth Army Special Services Officer, the Misses Hazel Donner, Miriam Evans, Patricia Malone, Mrs. Geraldine Hampton (Fort Lewis), Mr. C. T. Sena, and Captain F. R. Huycke (Fort Lawton).

549th Engineer Survey Unit Tests Tenting Skills

The Fort Scott parade ground took on the look of a '49er mining camp as the 549th Engineer Company (Survey Base) of the 30th Engineer Group made preparations for a command maintenance and supply inspection of all their TO&E equipment prior to an anticipated move into the field.

The varied array of tents, ranging in size from the roomy squad tents to the small one-piece mountain tents, sprang up almost overnight.

The unique idea of erecting the tents serves many purposes. It permits easy inspection under field conditions and provides ample space for the layout of other TO&E equipment.

It also gave Captain John E. Fleming, Commander, 549th Engineer Company an opportunity to inspect the serviceability of the tents and to check the skill of his men in erecting the tents.

No sooner had the tent space been provided than trucks began to move equipment from the company warehouse to the parade ground for display. Thousands of dollars worth of precise surveying instruments and accessories, vital equipment in the operations of a base survey company such as the 549th, filled many of the large squad tents.

After all the equipment was displayed the entire layout was inspected by Major Luther Payne, Commander, 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topo), his staff and inspectors from the various technical services.

Lady Soldier From MRU Wins Best WAC Award

First winner in the recently launched contest by the Presidio Women's NCO Council, honoring the Company's most outstanding Wac, is Pfc. Katherine Hopfe, assigned to duty with the 56th MRU.

A native of Hawaii, Katherine is a clerk typist in the Presidio Machine Records Unit. She was chosen through nomination by the barracks' sergeants upon completion of a 30-day observation period covering efficiency, personality, courtesy, grooming, personal and social habits and disposition.

Katherine is rounding out her second year of duty at the Presidio. Her reward for being an outstanding enlisted woman include the following privileges accorded her by Lieutenant Dorothy Crook, her commanding officer, and Major Robert D. Jones, chief of her duty section: a three-day pass for shopping and social life in San Francisco; no Company details for a whole month; no Reveille or Retreat for a week, nor any stand-by inspection during the coming four weeks.

The award for Wac Of The Month has been established on a permanent basis through approval of the commanding officer and the cooperation of the Non-Com Women's Council.

WAC of the Month

At the present time, some 10 other enlisted women have been recommended by their barracks' sergeants and are now being observed on and off duty with a view to picking a winning Wac Of The Month for October.

Llord's Puppet Show Set For Local Presentation

Something new in entertainment at the Presidio, a puppet show fresh from presentations in Canada, Mexico and Europe, plays a four-night stand at the local Army Service Clubs during the coming week.

Beginning its series of performances here, the Daniel Llord's puppet production opens at Fort Cronkhite, Tuesday, 16 October, at 2030 hours.

Either a matinee or an evening puppet show is being presented at Letterman Army Hospital, exact time to be announced later.

On the 19th of October, Llord's puppets will appear at the Fort Baker Service Club at 2030 hours.

The Presidio Service Club patrons will have an opportunity to enjoy the puppet show one week from this evening, 19 October at 2030 hours.

Llord's puppets have been likened to theatrical attractions usually appearing in Radio City or the Follies Bergere. Their "father," Daniel Llords, is a singer, actor, playwright, choreographer, designer and director. Though only in his middle twenties he has had 20 years professional experience in the theater. He has been featured in motion pictures with Bing Crosby, William Boyd, Shirley Temple, Charles Boyer, Fred Astaire, Eddie Cantor, Alec Templeton and Nelson Eddy.

The puppets, of which he uses over 100 in each performance, are constructed by Mr. Llord in his Hollywood workshop. They are costumed in mink and ermine, or in expensive silks and brocades.

The young impressario works from a narrow platform behind the stage and in constant view of the audience. Sometimes his hands manipulate more than 102 strings at a time.

DOCTOR AT SEA presents a background that is nautical as well as medical. It describes how a young doctor escapes a too-ardent young lady by signing on as a ship's doctor on a cargo steamer. Here he is caught up in a series of bewildering adventures and hilarious situations.

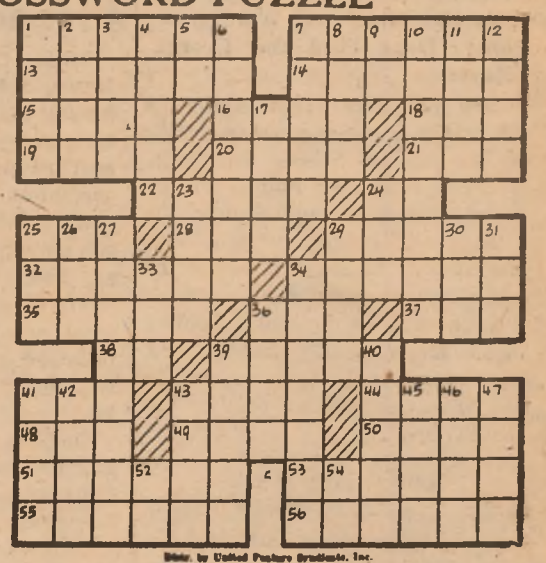
STAGECOACH TO FURY is the account of a stagecoach held up by Mexican bandits, who learn from the passengers that the gold shipment they expected to find aboard was to have been picked up later at the relay station. During the wait for the transfer coach, tensions mount, fears arise and true characters emerge; facing death as witnesses to the holdup, the passengers attempt several escapes but only Forrest Tucker, a Cavalry captain, succeeds, helping the coach crew to fight off the bandits and save the shipment.

THE OPPOSITE SEX is a hilarious behind-the-scenes comedy, with no holds barred, about women as men seldom see them. June Allyson is the wife who allows malicious gossip and interfering friends to break up her happy marriage. Securing her divorce, she soon learns she has been deceived by her two-timing girl friend, who fails to prevent June from winning back her ex-husband.

WHITE SQUAW introduces a pioneer who refuses to relinquish the land he has carved out of the wilderness; he goes berserk when the government, claiming he holds no legal title, establishes the land as an Indian reservation. With his three sons, he poisons the Indians' drinking water, stampedes a herd of cattle the Indians have purchased, and roughs up one of the few white men who is sympathetic to the Indians' cause. Justice is finally served when Brian the pioneer and his three sons are killed in gun play.

ATTACK is a starkly realistic war drama which concerns a soldier Company trapped by the Germans during the Battle of the Bulge in World War II. The lead character is seen as an abject, psychopathic coward who has a record of exposing his Company to danger, and in fact has been responsible for the death of some of his men. Jack Pallance is the man dedicated to seeing that Eddie Albert, as the Company commander, kills no more men through cowardice.

THE CRUEL TOWER is a picture concerning tramp steeplejacks and their dangerous work on water towers. Frayed ropes, swaying, unpredictable scaffoldings, bitter brawls over whiskey and women turn their hazardous lives into a brutal pattern of violence. Pinpointing every moment of their lives is the unceasing, nerve-shattering fear of the sudden fall that will bring death and oblivion.



THE THIRD MAN (a re-issue) introduces Joseph Cotton as a quiet-spoken young American writer who comes to Vienna to secure a job promised him by an old friend. He arrives in time to attend the friend's funeral. Suspecting foul play, he launches an investigation and unravels an intriguing and baffling mystery.

Middlecoff Defending Western Title

Tourney Here Swings Into 2nd Round

Dr. Cary Middlecoff, the former Memphis dentist who discarded his drills and needles in favor of putter and driver when the latter proved more lucrative, was busy defending his 1955 championship as the Western Open Golf Tournament swung into its second day.

Middlecoff, who found strolling among pastoral scenes more enjoyable than peering at troublesome molars, was to tee-off from Presidio of San Francisco's first hole shortly before 11 a.m. today accompanied by old pro Lloyd Mangrum and national amateur champion Harvie Ward.

A winner at Portland last year, Middlecoff had his hands full as the 174 top links stars moved into the second day of the four-day, 72 hole tournament.

The golf showman, who now plays out of Kiamesha Lake, N. Y., and who has spent 10 years in professional ranks, hopes to retain his standing as the number two money winner on the pro circuit with a convincing triumph here.

His aim is to snare the $5,000 first place prize of the $22,500 pot put up by a host of San Francisco firms and sponsors. He'll settle, of course, for the $2,500 second place money or the $2,000 third place cut, but first place is his goal.

Middlecoff closed with a par-shattering burst to win the event in the Rose City last year. He scored a 63 during the final round to overtake Mike Souchak. Dr. Cary finished with a 72-hole total of 272, while Souchak mustered a 274.

But the champ is finding it difficult to repeat that 63 tally on the Presidio's scenic layout.

Rare is the golfer who breaks 68 on the par 72 course. And, of course, it has been toughened for the tourney, with traps built up, rough permitted to grow and tees set back at various holes.

The amiable, lanky star who arrived here Monday, participated in an exhibition with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, two of Hollywood's better golfers and certainly its top laugh getters.

Presidio's fairways were soggy from an early morning rain Wednesday as the entertainers heckled and wise cracked with players and gallery onlookers who braved the drizzle and fog. All the while, they turned in creditable golf against competition like Middlecoff, Ward, Souchak, Doug Ford and George Bayer.

The field will be cut to the low 50 and ties among professionals at the end of today's 36th hole. The two remaining rounds will be played tomorrow and Sunday.

Amateurs hoping to remain in the running must score within the pro range or face the showers.

Sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, the tournament is the second oldest in the Nation, superseded only by the USGA Open.

2 Sailors Nab Canoe Berths

Bear Mountain, N. Y.—Two Navymen — John Pagkos and Russell Dermond — will represent the United States in the 1,000-meter kayak pairs event at the 1956 Olympic Games.

Seaman Pagkos, a recent graduate of the Electronics School at Great Lakes NTC, Ill., and Dermond, a Naval Air Cadet from Pensacola NAS, Fla., earned the trip to Australia by winning the kayak pairs in 4:05.7. Both have been on temporary duty at the Naval Reserve Center at Yonkers, N. Y.

Earlier in the Olympic canoeing trials, held on Lake Sebago, the Navy duo was surprisingly upset in the 10,000-meter kayak pairs by Kenneth Wilson and Edward Houston of New York.

General Dean Attends Open

Major General William F. Dean, retired Congressional Medal of Honor winner and former deputy commanding general Sixth Army, was among spectators attending the Hope-Crosby exhibition match prior to the opening round of the Western Open Wednesday.

The General, clad in green wool sweater and brown slacks, followed both foursomes and chatted informally with Dr. Cary Middlecoff, defending champion.

General Dean said he would like to attend all four rounds of the tournament, but was "afraid I can't stay to see it everyday."

He arrived shortly after noon the day of the exhibition, parked his green sedan on the parade ground after following Military Police instructions as to a space and boarded the Municipal Railway shuttle bus for the Presidio course.

Enlisted personnel interested in attending the event, second oldest golf tournament in the nation, over the week end, should contact Lieutenant Ronald Reynoir in the special services office.

For tomorrow's round, personnel may apply for tickets from 1530 hours to 1630 hours today.

For Sunday's final round—and the one when competition will be keenest—tickets will be dispensed early tomorrow morning.

Officers and civilian personnel who wish to attend must pay the standard tariff at the gate.

Game Swarms Into Valleys

Ducks and geese are swarming into the central valleys of California in numbers, 59 per cent higher than at the same time last year, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

A total of 1,150,000 waterfowl were counted Sept. 18 and 19 in the annual fall census conducted by the Department and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

This compares to 724,000 last year at the same date, and only 541,000 in 1954.

The big increase is attributed to two successive good nesting years in the north, and the fact that fewer waterfowl were taken here last year because of the floods which virtually washed out all hunting.

Heavy concentrations were noted in the Butte Sink, Colusa Refuge, Colusa-Sacramento Refuge area, Grizzly Island, all in the Sacramento Valley; and in the Grasslands, Mendota, and Tulare Lake areas of the San Joaquin Valley.

Units Form Cage Teams For Season

The Presidio Special Services Sports Office this week issued a reminder to units and sections to begin formulating plans for the Intramural basketball season.

Units were urged to form teams and limber up in time for the season opener in mid-November.

Olympics Trip Won By Soldier

Yonkers, N. Y. — Private First Class Dean Thackwray of the Boston Army Base won a place on the U.S. Olympic team by finishing second in the National Amateur Athletic Union marathon championship.

Thackwray's time for the rugged 26 mile 385-yard course was 2 hours, 31 minutes, 14 seconds.

Private Tommy Ryan, also from the Boston Army Base placed ninth in 2:43:36; Airman John Jarrett, Patuxent River, Md., was 15th in 3:05:36 and Seaman Joe Tyler, San Diego, NTC Calif., 20th in 3:16:58.

Winner of the marathon title was John J. Kelley of the Boston Athletic Assn. Kelley, an Army competitor in last year's Pan-American Games, was clocked at the record time of 2:24:52.2.

Third place honors went to Nick Costes of the Finnish American Athletic Club with the time of 2:31.52.

The national AAU marathon was the final Olympic tryout for the event. The first of the Olympic tryouts was the Boston marathon, held last April.

On a low-point scoring basis of both marathons, Kelley, Thackwray and Costes were selected for the Olympics.

Kelley was second at Boston and first among the American competitors; Costes was fourth and second; Thackwray fifth and third.

15 Soldiers Battle For Olympic Ring Bids In Cow Palace

By Sp3 Walt Heil
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Amateur boxers by the gross—15 Army champions among them—flock to San Francisco's cavernous Cow Palace next week for the long-heralded, long-awaited Olympic Games' tryouts.

All told, 110 of the nation's top amateur fisticuffers will compete in ten weight divisions over a three-day period to earn a shot at representing the United States in the Olympics at Melbourne, Australia, next month.

From college, AAU and Armed Services ranks, the boxers will open fire in the opening round Wednesday, 17 October, and continue bombardments through Thursday and Friday nights.

Once the slugging has ceased, ten boxers will be crowned champions and given plane tickets to carry them, along with trainers and coaches, to the Land Down Under.

Under the auspices of a San Francisco newspaper, the tryouts will benefit the over-all U.S. Olympic Games Fund. Tickets for the event are scaled from $4.00 down to $1.00.

Already boasting the Armed Forces Interservice championship, Army boxers are confident they will win their share of titles ere the end of the tryouts.

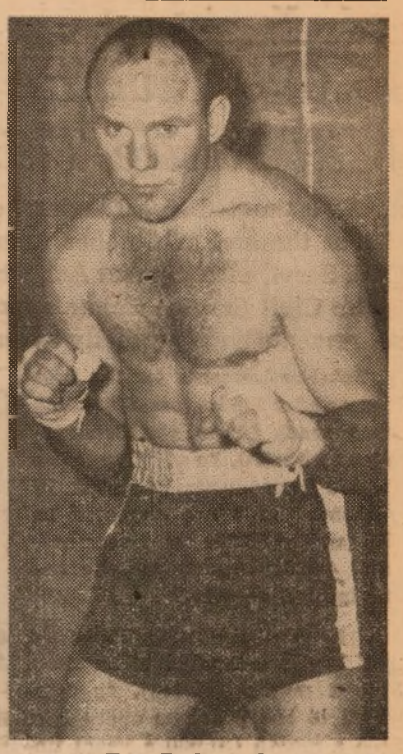
The Army won the Interservice crown last week at Camp Lejeune, N. C., as four soldiers scored triumphs in six bouts, racking up 20 team points to the Marine Corps' 18. Winners included heavyweight Tom Rademacher, light heavyweight Jim Boyd, light middleweight Jose Torres and bantamweight Lionel Rivera, who all were crowned Army champions at Fort Myer, Va., the week previous.

Of the four, Torres, Boyd and Rademacher are accorded the best chance of making the trip, although the other 12 boxers, including those who fought in the Kansas City regional bouts last week, rate a chance to succeed, also.

Rademacher, though he won the all-Army heavyweight crown on his back after being fouled, is considered a top amateur puncher.

Two soldiers who lost bouts in the Interservice meet, Francis Okuda and Pearce Lane, are still rated strong enough to capture a championship.

Torres appears to be the Army's knockout champ. He clobbered his foe in 2:36 of the second round in the all-Army finals, knocked out a 1954 all-Army champ in the semi-windup and put away Sixth Army's Curtis Jameson in the opener.



The Army boxers are training for the tryouts at Oakland Army Terminal.

The Army men can expect plenty of competition from their Navy, Marines and Air Force counterparts, not to mentibn the outstanding AAU and college boxers seeking that vital plane seat.

Boxing fans from all areas of northern California will attend the tournament, most of them hoping to see the likes of another Floyd Patterson emerge. Patterson, No. 1 heavyweight pro, slated to duel Archie Moore for Rocky Marciano's vacated throne, represented the U.S. in the 1952 Games at Helsinki.

The USDB Lompoc Military Police unit pistol team is the winner of the second annual MP Association world wide pistol match today.

The unit, armed with regulation Army .45 calibre pistols, won the pistol match with an aggregate score of 3388, which is an average of 333 per man. Ten men participated in the match.

Teenagers Crush Grid Foe, End 2 Game Losing Streak

Sparked by Tom Lupo, the Teenagers scored their first victory in the Presidio Intramural Football League this week.

With Lupo tallying three touchdowns, the youngsters, dependents of Presidio military personnel, racked D Battery, 752nd AAA Missile Battalion, 33-0, in an Eastern League clash on the Post Exchange Field.

Evidently the Teenagers' recent coaching help did some good. Prior to Tom Anthony and Norm Ellenberger's taking over the leadership, the Teenagers lost two straight.

The Explosion Ordnance Demolition team grabbed its second consecutive win by a narrow margin, 14-13, this time over the hardluck D Battery club. Earlier EOD edged the Teenagers, 18-15.

Headquarters 6000 SU won its third straight by clipping Headquarters 6002 SU, 26-13.

The Sixth Army team faces the 163rd MP Company gridders, also unbeaten, in a showdown battle next week.

In other Western League action the 549th took its second in a row, 21-13, over the 21st Engineers.

Company A, 6002 SU walloped winless Headquarters 30th Engineer Group, 27-0, while the 537th broke into the win column by administering the third straight loss to 660th Engineers, 25-6.

Reservations For Shooting Needed

Applications for advance reservations on public waterfowl shooting areas are available at license agents and offices of the Department of Fish and Game.

Shooting dates are available on Saturdays, Sundays, Wednesdays and holidays, and opening and closing days of the season. Opening day is October 20, and the season closes January 7 in most parts of the state. Shooting days on Finney-Ramer area are every day of the season except general election day, Christmas and New Year's Day.

Applications must be received at the Department, 722 Capitol Avenue, Sacramento, at least 14 days before the earliest date chosen. Drawings will be held and successful applicants notified 10 days before the shooting date.

Fee for public shooting is $2 per hunter per day. Hunters may obtain a $5 seasonal permit for Honey Lake and Madeline areas only.

Fisher Gloomy Over Post Cage Prospects

His earlier optimism dampened by the failure of additional players to report, Presidio basketball coach Hal Fischer wears a furrowed, troubled brow today.

Still only leading a six-man team—hardly enough in this day of race horse basketball—Fischer gloomed about the lack of personnel on his squad.

Though the material on hand is topnotch, players simply aren't turning out for the squad in the numbers anticipated by the Torero headman.

In addition, he's mighty displeased with the daily workouts in Letterman Army Hospital gym.

He reports practice drills are not coming up to expectancy and the team as a whole is not shaping up as it should, partly because of the lack of numbers.

There is quality on the club, what with the likes of Carroll Williams, San Jose State's all-time high scorer, Loyola's Ronnie Reynoir and Bradley's Norm Ellenberger.

Trouble is, though, they have no adequate replacements, nor some one to supply added competition for berths.

Such as it is, the Torero cage team embarks on its 1956-57 season in two weeks against San Francisco's Olympic Club. After that, in rapid order, come San Francisco State, the Athens Club of Oakland and the San Leandro AAU Club.

In addition, the local cagers also will scrimmage with San Jose State and City College of San Francisco before opening the northern California Army-Air Force league season, 16 November.

And the opening date is barely a month distant. High time for additional players to come out, Fischer thinks.

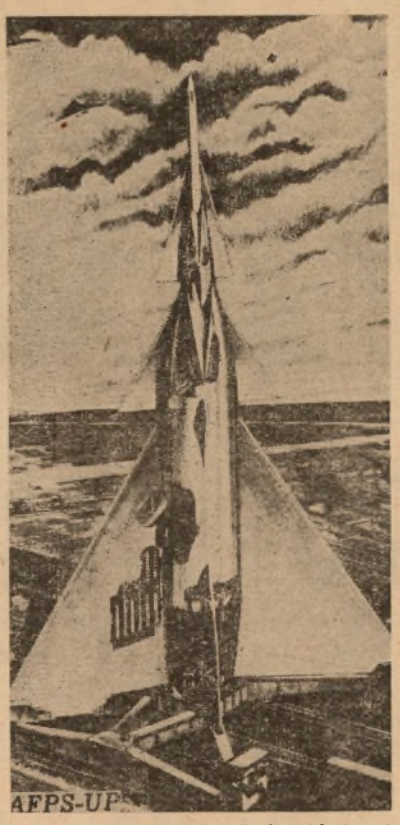
Under New Act

15,000 Civilian Employees Will Retire This Month

An estimated 15,000 Federal employees are expected to retire at the end of October under the new provisions of the Civil Service Retirement Act, which will go into effect October 1, the Civil Service Commission has announced. Up to now, retirements have normally averaged about 3,000 a month.

Total retirements for the first year under the increased benefits may reach 62,000, the Commission estimated. In addition to the 15,000 retirements expected in October, 5,000 are expected in November, 6,000 in December, and 4,000 a month for the remaining 9 months.

The average annuity under the new law is estimated to be about $170 a month ($2,040), as compared to the previous average of $135 a month ($1,620 a year) under the old law.



Retirements have been almost at a standstill since the Retirement Act was liberalized because it has been to the advantage of most potential retirees to postpone retirement until after October 1, the Commission said.

Postponement of mandatory retirements for age was made possible by order of the President for Presidential appointees and by order of the Civil Service Commission for other Federal employees. These postponements account primarily for the extremely large number of retirements expected on October 31.

Because of accelerated retirements, the number of retired employees on the retirement rolls is expected to reach almost 300,000 by next October.

Allowing for the normal number of people dropped from the rolls because of deaths, this would be an increase of about 50,000 over the July, 1956, figure of 250,000.

The July count also showed about 80,000 survivor annuitants; the new law is not expected to affect the normal growth of this figure.

RFA Program Shows Increase

Washington—The Department of the Army has announced that enlistments under the provisions of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955 are now averaging over 2,000 a week in the Army Reserve.

This rate is almost ten times that of the first week following the law's enactment in August, 1955. The week ending 14 September, 1956, was tops with 2,604 men volunteering for active duty under the RFA program.

Enlistments in the Army Reserve now total 67,635 under all programs of the new law. Preliminary figures for the week ending 21 September show 2,133 enlistees. (ANS)

DOD Med. Chief On New Care Act

The complexities of the Dependents' Medical Care Act were explained to key officers and NCOs Wednesday, by Dr. Frank B. Berry, assistant secretary of defense (Health and Medical) and Capt. John V. Noel, USN, who is chairman of a committee working to implement instructions for the act.

The main address was given by Captain Noel. It was followed by a question and answer period with members of the audience participating.

Attending the discussion were unit commanders, first sergeants, TI&E officers and non-coms, unit personnel officers and other personnel who are in a position to pass this informtaion on to the troops.

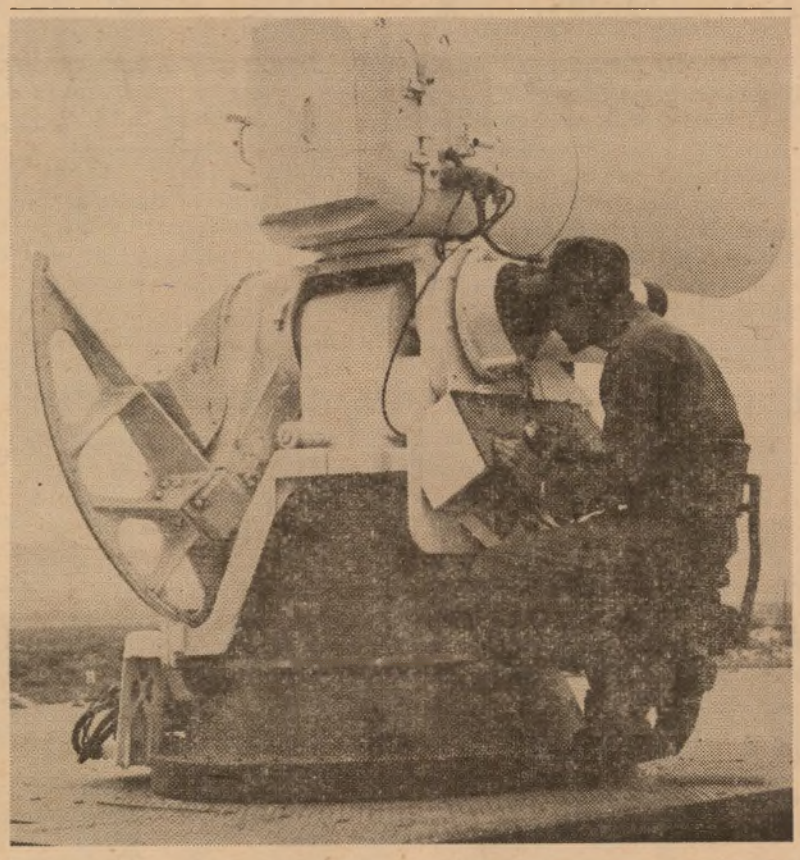
New Program Will Seek Key Civilian

With an eye toward the development of future administrators for the government service, the Civil Service Commission has instructed all Federal agencies to consider their employees, grades GS-7 through GS-12, as potential trainees in the 1957 Management Internship program.



The 5-month program will include lectures, progressive work assignments, group discussions and work at universities in the Washington, D. C., area.

Deadline for nomination of field employees by the agencies is 5 November 1956, and for departmental employees 26 November 1956. The agencies will have until 9 January 1957 to make final selections among candidates passing a written examination given by the Commission.

It is suggested that agencies give particular consideration to applicants who are likely to remain in Federal service and who have already shown a bent for high-level administrative responsibilities. Candidates must have had one year's Federal service or more.

VIP Drivers Find Unique Job Assignment Interesting

Do generals, congressmen and heads of state intrigue you? Do exotic foods delight you? Are you pat on your protocol?

Yes? Then most likely you would be enthusiastic over the job done by the 22 enlisted men in the VIP Section of Sixth Army Secretary General Staff. These men provide driving, guiding and general "Man Friday" services for all the important people who visit the Presidio.

"The job is interesting and exciting," says M/Sgt. John H. Cook, VIP section chief, "But it also involves hard work and long hours." If a dignitary visits for a week, his driver works for a week—night and day.

Letters of appreciation, given to the men for their fine service, is one of the most rewarding parts of the job, says Sergeant Cook. All the men in the section possess such letters from such men as Kenneth C. Royall, secretary of the Army, to Maj. Gen. L. L. Williams, comptroller general.

The fun comes when the drivers go to dinner with foreign visitors. It takes a little imagination and a lot of observation to keep from committing social blunders. And if a man can't eat with chop sticks, he learns or starves.

Often the men are presented with presents from the grateful passengers. The gifts range from china vases to cigarette lighters to Chinese fans. Sometimes the men receive signed pictures.

During the last year and a half the VIP section's busy schedule has called for men to drive 135 brigadier generals, 270 major generals, 105 lieutenant generals, 26 generals, 34 assistant secretaries of the Army, 10 senators, 21 congressmen, 2 ministers and an ambassador.

Both draftees and career men are in the section, Sergeant Cook points out, explaining that they are picked for their character and intelligence. Proud of his men, Sergeant Cook also mentions that they have given 34 pints of blood since January and are 100 per cent in the United Crusade.

Local Troops Hit With Flu Needles

Medical "needlemen" and women of the Post Dispensary have administered thousands of influenza vaccine innoculations to military personnel in the Presidio and substations during the past two weeks.

The influenza innoculations are still under way at outlying units but it is anticipated by the Post Surgeon's staff that this year's vaccine drive will be completed in the Presidio area within the next week.

Excepting in relatively few cases where a positive reaction was indicated after the vaccine was administered, there have been no unfavorable reactions noted during the area-wide innoculation as a safeguard against influenza.

Here's A New Number For Your Record Machine!

Your Social Security Card has suddenly become important!

If you have ever been issued a card—and the Army estimates that half a million people presently in the Service have—you must present it to the personnel officer to have your Social Security number entered in military records.

By DA Circular 608-14, the Army has directed that you make every effort to have your card in your possession at the earliest possible date—not later than 1 November. Entries in military files will not be made on the basis of your personal records or memory. The number must be obtained from the card prepared by the Social Security Administration.

The care being taken in this procedure is to insure that you receive full credit under the Social Security Program recently authorized the Army by the Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act.

The "Survivor Benefits Act" has been hailed as one of the most significant pieces of legislation to be enacted by Congress in many years. By providing for adequate family protection, it makes an Army career even more attractive than ever before.

In addition to authorizing Army personnel the benefits of the Social Security Program, the Act revises the six months death gratuity to range from $800 to $3,000. It permits, too, a dependency and indemnity compensation payable by the Veterans Administration to dependents in cases where soldiers die as a result of service.

Also, the new law makes several changes in the rights of those who already hold or may apply for some type of government life insurance. These benefits are in addition to others granted by the many items of legislation included in the current career incentive program.

If you have never had a Social Security Card, or have lost it, see your personnel officer for instructions. When you see him, check to see that you have complied with all regulations—that you have taken all necessary action to ensure your eligibility for all benefits under the Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act.

Experts Tell Key Factors

By M/Sgt. Merrill Harrison
Sixth Army Information

Major provisions of the long-anticipated new plan for medical care of service personnel dependents were outlined by two of the Defense Department's top-ranking medical men and one of the plan's working committee at a jammed session in the Presidio Theater last week.

Dr. Frank B. Berry, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical), the Army's Medical Corps Major General Paul I. Robinson, first head of "medicare." and Captain John V. Noel, chairman of the Interservice Committee on the Dependent Care Bill, discussed the background of the new bill, explained its future workings, and answered a multitude of questions from the audience of keenly interested personnel of all the Armed Services attending.

Basically, the new bill, which applies to all uniformed personnel and their dependents, including the Army, Navy, Air Force; Marine Corps, Coast Guard, commissioned corps of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and commissioned Corps of the Public Health Service, authorizes the dependents of these personnel to obtain certain medical care from civilian physicians and hospitals after 7 December, 1956.

Vol. 5, No. 21 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 19 October, 1956

Crusade Shows Some Upswing; Still Short

A plodding, uphill course is being followed by the Bay Area Crusade at the Presidio, according to late reports from the Post Funds Custodian office.

To date, the sum of $23,849.98 has been contributed to the drive while unrealized pledges amounting to $4,851.85 are still in process of being advanced from promises to hard cash.

Actually, the fund drive here now stands within 20.4 per cent of its goal, which at the kick-off was set at $36,015.00 in contributions from civilian and military personnel at the Presidio. An approximate 79.6 per cent of the given amount has been collected.

Two public appeals directed toward the hearts and the pocketbooks of civilian workers this week were conducted in the form of rallies introducing some of the Post's most enticing Wacs and civilian girls. Their feminine wiles in the ways of separating a man from his money were instrumental in bringing Department of Army employes' contribution totals out of the red and on the road to satisfactory culmination of the Bay Area Crusade drive at the Presidio.

Early 100 per cent winners in the Crusade "sweepstakes" were the Sixth Army and Post Chaplain's Sections, but they were outpaced later by larger units such as Company D of the 6002nd SU, whose members, including the Wacs, broke the tape at 105 per cent last week.

Sixth Army Headquarters staffs also reached the 100 per cent potential early in the fund drive campaign, as did the Sixth Army Flight Detachment 3, the 16th Base Post Office, and Company C of the 6002nd; the 163rd Military Police Company, and the Post Judge Advocate Section.

Post staff sections now hold an over-all score of 48.9 toward completion of the 100 per cent goal to be reached between now and the coming pay days.

Flight Info Service Established

No longer will Army aviators have to depend on other government agencies for their global flight information. A special service designed to meet the needs of Army aviators is being established by the Army Aviation Flight Information Division (AAF ID) under the Chief Signal Officer.

The system for furnishing flight information to Army flyers was developed by Captain Donald P. Dickinson, a former Army Air Corps bomber pilot and now a rated Army aviator.

Field detachments are planned for Heidelberg, Germany; Tokyo, Japan; Fort Amador, Canal Zone; and Fort Richardson, Alaska. This will insure Army aviators high quality flight information in critical world areas.

The Jeppesen Airway Manual, official document of Army Flight Information, is distributed directly to over 3,500 Army, National Guard and Army Reserve aviators.

Flight information includes navigation aids, radio facilities, airway routing, radio procedures, radar information, danger area data, instrument let-down and approach procedures.

Doctors Draft Due To End In June

Doctors over 35 will be safe from draft with the expiration of the Korean war emergency Doctors' Draft Law, which runs out 30 June as scheduled, the Defense Department has announced.

From now on the armed services will get doctors through the regular processes of the Selective Service system. Since most doctors have been deferred for school, they are eligible for draft until the age of 35.

The doctors' draft law, passed by Congress in mid-1950, divided doctors into several categories accoring to age and military service. Under the law more than 30,000 physicians, dentists and veterinarians were procured.

New Policy Will Allow EMs To Seek Reserve, ROTC Jobs

A change in Army policy aimed at procuring the best EM for the strategic jobs with ROTC units and Reserve components now allows the man himself to apply for the job.

Previously major commanders would screen records to determine the men most suited for these openings. The disadvantage was that the commanders did not really know the man, but only his record. Now men who actually want such positions can speak up for themselves.

This new policy appears as Changes 3 to AR 611-50.

All EM applications will be forwarded, unless applicants are found unsuitable by intermediate commanders, to the major command in which assignment is asked.

Before his applicant will be forwarded each man must be rated by his commander as having "character, conduct, appearance, and personal habits . . . such as to qualify him to represent the Army in close contact with students, faculty members and leading citizens of the community."

Both Reserve component and ROTC unit assignments are stabilized for at least 18 months. And this is considered a minimum tour, and men are not to be transferred out unless actually needed elsewhere, according to the stabilization regulation, AR 614-5.

To be eligible for assignment to Reserve component and ROTC duty EM must be in grade E-3 or higher for jobs as clerical and administrative assistants and as maintenance personnel, must hold grade E-5 and above for jobs as assistant advisers or assistant ROTC instructors. They must have sufficient time remaining in their current enlistment to serve out the normal duty tour.

Army Tests New Flame Thrower

Latest product of the Army's search for lighter, more potent infantry weapons is a 26½-pound one-shot flame thrower now in final stages of development by the Army Chemical Corps.

Need for such a weapon was shown in the close-range combat situations encountered during World War II and Korea. The weapon will be particularly useful for reduction of bunkers and other emplaced positions where high explosives are not effective.

The new flame thrower can be "jumped" with the paratroopers as part of their equipment. In defensive situations it can be equipped with a remote firing device for guarding flanks.

The new flame thrower, which weighs just over one-third as much as the 72-pound multiple-shot model, can use either thickened or unthickened fuel. It has a capacity of two gallons as compared to four and a half for the multiple-shot type.

Compact and comfortable to carry, the weapon may be fired from any position with ease. It is rugged, waterproof and safe to use.

Small Business Assist

Ninety-four per cent of the total in a 3-month cash expenditure by the Bay Area Terminal Center for contract services and supplies went to small business firms, this year. Procurement of services and supplies totaled $3,077,261, of which $2,893,903 went to the indicated concerns.

Slip Was Showing!

In the Army there is education and there is education.

There is the highly specialized field of technical education as administered under the G-3 Service Schools Program and generally identified as training.

Then there is the "civilian type" education program which has long been an intregal part of the Troop Information and Education Program. A program aimed at making the individual a better soldier and citizen by raising his educational standards. By providing the tools of subsidy and counseling that will encourage him to continue, or reinstate, definite educational goals.

In reporting the findings of the Senior NCO Symposium, The Star Presidian may have mislead those who rely solely on headlines for capsule opinion. The faulty headline—TRAINING, EDUCATION, INFORMATION HIT HARD.

What we intended to imply was that training, i.e., basic, and education, i.e., the service schools program, had come in for some critical comment at the symposium.

On the other hand, NCOs lauded the education program as developed by TI&E and even felt that a good deal more emphasis along this line would be one of the key incentives in retaining and recruiting outstanding personnel.

In fact, the NCOs' only criticism, if it may be deemed as such, was that sufficient publicity and recognition had not been given to the program's caliber, availability and accomplishments.

Last year in the Sixth Army Area alone, through contracts with 40 colleges and universities in the eight Western States, tuition and counseling enabled 20 soldiers to win college degrees. Five hundred ninety two others completed their first year of college. Another 3,569 won high school diplomas and 1,024 were enabled to complete the eighth grade.

During the quarter just past, the Army Education Center at the Presidio has administered 614 tests, 715 initial interviews, 824 follow-up interviews and had a total of 1,057 that participated in some form of educational improvement.

Multiply the above statistics by the areas, camps, posts and stations throughout the world, considering that most have much higher personnel strength, and you have a pretty fair picture of the tremendous job the Army is doing in making better soldiers and citizens through education.

Plexiglass Mask To Protect Face In Cold Weather

The inconsistency of protecting one's body and leaving one's face unprotected in freezing weather may be erased by a new face mask developed by Kenneth L. Treiber of the Corps of Engineers' Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir.

The idea came to Treiber as a result of his suffering a frozen cheek while serving at Fort Churchill, Canada, in 1947. "This made me think how stupid it was to have the rest of the body well protected from the cold and yet leave one's face virtually unprotected," he explains.

The new Plexiglass mask remains free from cloudiness and incorporates an improved, readily adjustable mounting which permits upward rotation.

According to Captain Noel, the following medical care by civilian physicians and civilian hospitals is authorized for dependents, who must be the lawful wife or the dependent, lawful husband (spouses) and children who are dependents of members of the uniformed services:

- Hospitalization in semiprivate accommodations up to 365 days for each admission, including all necessary services and supplies furnished by the hospital during inpatient confinement.
- Medical and surgical care during a period of hospitalization.
- Complete obstetrical and maternity service, including prenatal and postnatal care.
- Required services of a physician or surgeon before and after hospitalization for a bodily injury or for a surgical operation.
- Diagnostic tests and procedures, including laboratory and X-ray examinations, accomplished or recommended by a physician during hospitalization.

Medical care in civilian medical facilities is not authorized for the following:

- Chronic diseases.
- Nervous and mental diseases.
- Elective medical and surgical
- Domiciliary care.
- Treatments or procedures normally considered to be outpatient care.
- Ambulance service.

In general, Captain Noel pointed out, no outpatient treatment is authorized from civilian sources.

Both Doctor Berry and Captain Noel explained that by 7 December all hospitals and all military medical personnel will be informed of this new program and most civilian physicians will be familiar with the plan. Both speakers emphasized that civilian doctors and hospitals are behind the plan almost 100 per cent.

It is anticipated, it was stated at the meeting, that civilian physicians will have agreed to treat dependents according to established local fee schedules. So that dependents may obtain required civilian medical care at government expense, dependents selecting civilians are advised to be certain that the physician has agreed to, and will abide by, the fee schedules for that area.

All three speakers explained that in practically every state either Blue Shield, Blue Cross or some few other similar type organizations recognized and approved by local medical societies, will handle fees and costs of physicians, surgeons and hospitals.

Dependents are expected to use military or public health medical facilities when available because the new program is primarily designed to cover those who do not have access to such facilities, however, the program will permit the dependent to choose between military and civilian medical facilities.

Returning to the matter of outpatient care, dependents of military personnel, both active and retired, will continue eligible for outpatient treatment at service hospitals.

After 7 December dental care for dependents is not authorized except in the following:

- Emergency dental care to relieve pain and suffering, but not to include any permanent restorative
- Dental care as a necessary ad-
- Outside the continental United States, and in remote areas within the continental United States as designated by the Secretary of a uniformed service and approved by the Secretary of Defense where adequate civilian dental facilities are not available.

Dependents consulting civilian physicians should be prepared to pay the civilian physician for normal outpatient care which is not provided at government expense. The government can assume an obligation to pay the civilian physician only while the dependent is hospitalized.

Dependents obtaining medical care under this new program will pay the hospital the first $25 of the hospital bill or $1.75 per day of hospitalization, whichever is the greater. Other normal expenses will be borne by the government, including physician's fees, when hospitalization occurs.

Until the new "Dependents' Authorization for Medical Care" cards are issued, dependents will be required to provide a civilian physician and the civilian hospital with positive proof of dependency status, such as the current dependents identification card. Prior to issue of the new cards, the dependent should obtain or be provided with identification which will establish proof that the dependent is in fact a wife or child of a man on active duty.

Four Win Performance Awards For Top Service

On the eve of her departure for government employment in Japan, Miss Phyllis J. Boldra, secretary in the office of the Deputy Post Commander, Monday received a certificate for sustained superior performance and a check for $200, less taxes.

Miss Boldra has also worked for the government in Europe.

Two ladies, whose performance of duties in the Billeting Office, 5 Jan. to 21 July, 1956, was rated as superior, were awarded $100, less taxes, Monday. They will split the award.

M/Sgt. John D. Vekich, who has been serving as chief clerk and Provost Sergeant at the Post Provost Marshal Section, Monday received from the DPC a Certificate of Achievement. "His ability and knowledge of the Protective Services Program, law enforcement and security matters . . ." were cited as factors that had contributed to the success of the PM Section.

Library Closed

The Presidio's Post Library, Bldg. 135, will be closed on Sunday until further notice. The current schedule is as follows: Monday thru Friday, 1200 to 2100; Saturday, 1200 to 1600 hours.

Spit-an'-Polish!

Soldiers Vie In Weekly Test

If the polishing rags fly and the shoe brushes whizz on Friday nights at Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group, it's because those men are striving for Soldier of the Week.

And for good reason. The man who's the sharpest in terms of personal appearance and military neatness is dubbed Soldier of the Week, which means time off the following Saturday; no inspection!

Winners of the honor have their pictures posted on the dayroom wall for all to see and admire. To date the illustrious include: Sp3 William T. Leatherman (a two-time winner), Sp3 Edmund Lewis and Pfc. Henry F. Williams, Jr.

Sustained Performance of superior nature brings Miss Phyllis J. Boldra an award of $200, less taxes. Congratulations on her good fortune come from Col. Charles G. Rau, Post Executive Officer.

Seek New Bids For Construction Of Post Library

Revised plans for a new Post library to be built on the lot adjoining the Post Exchange are expected to be open for bid next week, according to the Post Engineers office.

Original bids for the structure were considered in March, but none were accepted as the lowest bid was $60,000 over the planned cost of $140,000.

Floor space in the revised plans has been reduced from 6,000 to 5,000 feet. "But the building will be basically the same," says William E. Utiss of the Post Engineers office, explaining that most of the cost cutting has involved "frills."

The proposed fireplace has been eliminated. And a special military science room has been removed from the plans. However, another room has been designated as a Military Science Study Room.

The new library will still have the main reading room, four music listening booths, and a children's room in addition to the Military Science room. There will also be several auxiliary rooms.

Time needed for opening, reviewing and accepting the bidding will push the construction date for the library into early next year, says Utiss.

New Booklet Will Answer Question On Insurance

Servicemen's insurance questions will be answered by a new booklet, "Buying Life Insurance," put out by the Institute of Life Insurance.

The pamphlet's foreword is written by Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Personnel and Reserve). It will be available to members of the Armed Forces through unit insurance counselors.

Mr. Burgess says: "The fact that the Department of Defense permits you to utilize the allotment plan to pay your life insurance premiums, or allows life insurance companies to present their policies to you at your post, base or station should in no way influence your selection of a company or policy.

"This is your decision. Make it seriously and carefully," he cautions.

Dedication Must Be Salted With Some Physical Fitness

Officers whose feeling of responsibility toward their job has prevented them from taking the necessary time off for physical training have been assured by Post Training Memorandum 13 that it is a responsibility of equal importance to sustain top physical condition.

Each officer is expected to take one morning or afternoon off each week for suitable physical exercise. On the other days of the week officers are expected to partake of at least one half-hour of exercise.

Enlisted personnel of all units at the Presidio will exercise at daily drill call. "Individual soldiers required to be on other duties during the period 0730-0750 will be handled by organizational commanders as individual cases . . ."

"Persons who are obviously overweight," warned Memorandum 13, "may be directed to reduce the amount of food they eat." However, the Commanders are not to prescribe the individual's diet. He will be directed to medical facilities for appropriate instructions.

Those who do not comply with instructions after reporting to the Post Surgeon are subject to military discipline, the memorandum stated. Personnel were also reminded that "each individual's efficiency report requires comment on his physical condition."

Check List

Driver's license requirements for service personnel in California have been recently clarified as follows: Non-residents (includes military) over 21 years of age may drive in California with their out-of-state license for one year. After one year they must obtain a California license which will remain valid as long as the individual remains in the service and for 30 days thereafter.

Insurance Overseas

DD Lists Most Approved Plans

The Defense Department has given a green light to 23 life insurance companies for solicitation at military installations overseas. This does not mean the policies of the firms are approved, but only that they pass the minimum requirements, it was explained.

The fact that many nationally known firms are not on the list does not imply rejection, but only that they have not applied for overseas solicitation, officials reported.

In the field of auto insurance, the Navy and Marine Corps have warned personnel not to do business with the National Automobile Insurance Assn. of Dallas, Tex.

At a public hearing on 6 Aug. this association was found to be insolvent by the Texas Board of Insurance Commissioners. The company was ordered into receivership for liquidation.

Thrift Shop Seeks Items For Sale

Newly-arrived families to the Presidio or those leaving for other Posts are reminded to avail themselves of household facilities at the Thrift Shop on the reservation, which permits turn-in for cash on such expendables as furniture, refrigerators, stoves, rugs, baby strollers, lamps, and even officers' dress uniforms.

The Thrift Shop does not actually buy such items. The volunteer ladies who operate the shop will take them with a view to selling them to thrifty patrons who know that a good bargain in household materials is almost a certainty at the Thrift Shop.

Business there is run on the principle that what one housekeeper doesn't need, may readily be purchased by one who does need it.

Puzzle Answer

The person who owns the particular item simply brings it to the Thrift Shop, establishes a price for its sale, and returns to collect the money after the salesladies notify her that purchase of the article has been made.

Swim Time Tonight

Tonight is junior swim time at Letterman Pool from 1900 to 2100. The Teenage Club opens for the usual activities at 2100 hours.

Saturday night offers the weekend fare of pool, ping pong, shuffle board, checkers, and dancing to the juke box records collection.

New Library Policy Would Stimulate Wider Interests

Libraries at the Presidio and sub-posts are presently featuring displays on auto repair and sport cars in conjunction with the recent opening of the Presidio Auto Craft Shop.

"Our aim is to stimulate interest in other activities through books and displays in the libraries," explains Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, new Post Librarian.

In addition to the display, the Presidio library has all the books on automobiles available on a special table. The books may be checked out for one week.

A list of all the books on the subject of autocraft—39 at the Presidio—has been mimeographed and is being distributed at the libraries and the Auto Craft Shop. The books range from Motor's Auto Repair Manual to Sports Cars of the World.

Taking part in the auto display program are the Post Library, Bldg. 35, Fort Baker Branch Library, Bldg. 693, and Fort Scott Branch Library, Bldg. 1212.

Chow Hounds Get Break In Dual Mess

If a Best Mess is good, a consolidation of Best Messes is better, according to reports from the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey), where this situation exists.

The consolidation involved the 99th Engineer Company (Best Mess for July) and Headquarters and Headquarters Company (Best Mess for August) which combined with the 99th Engineer Company. The consolidadation move was ordered by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, commander of the 30th Engineer Group, after many mess personnel were called to staff units on overseas projects.

The result is a mess hall of mess halls captained by Sfc. Cam B. Blevins, mess steward of the 99th. The mess stewards of Headquarters Company and the 21st, Sp2 Lawrence A. Simoneau and Sp2 Floyd D. Howell, are still responsible for the cleanliness of their mess halls, but they spend most of the day assisting Sfc. Blevins.

Honor Guard CO Named New Aide For Gen. Roberts

Captain Eugene J. Gasior, commanding officer of the Headquarters Company 6002 Service Unit (Honor Guard), leaves the Presidio early next week to assume his new duties as senior aide de camp to Major General Frank N. Roberts, CMD commander, at Fort MacArthur, San Pedro.

Replacing Captain Gasior as commander of the Honor Guard is Lieutenant Joseph N. Jaggers, the unit's present executive officer.

Captain Gasior, a West Point graduate, took command of the Presidio Honor Guard Company in 1954. Since then, he has led his men in over 40 special parades honoring visiting dignitaries, military and civilian, from across the American nation, Europe, South and Central America, the Middle East, Near East and the Far East. During his tour of duty at the Presidio he served under Lieutenant General Williard G. Wyman and the present Sixth Army commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

In leaving the Presidio, Captain Gasior asked the Star Presidian to convey his appreciation to the Post Commander and his staff for their services to him, and to the enlisted men of the Honor Guard, for their wholehearted support in military assignments to which the unit was committed under his leadership.

Volunteer Group Serves Presidians On Many Entertainment Problems

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

On an evening late last Spring, a group of San Francisco women set out for the Presidio. One was a native-born American; one was British, one German, and yet another Alaskan by birth. They brought here the nucleus of an idea that has since proven of inestimable value to enlisted servicemen and women of the Presidio.

The women were members of a national organization known as the United Voluntary Services, UVS for short. The necessarily abbreviated title of their undertaking hardly gives a single clue to its scope or its merit.

Its volunteer members are housewives, secretaries, receptionists, law firm employes, clerk typists and sales girls who dedicate their free time to social programs for soldiers, hospitalized veterans, and for their particular communities.

With Command approval and a program worked out by the Presidio Service Clubs' directors, the San Francisco women began their project here, using only a small desk and a telephone in the main Service club. Since then, they have come to the club on a rotating basis, nearly every day or evening, on a schedule which does not conflict with their regular working hours.

A non-profit, tax-free undertaking, UVS is figuratively a bridge of devoted service built between communities and military installations. Through it, men and women of all ages and from many far-flung places work under the great common denominator, Service.

Since UVS voluntary workers have established their program at the Presidio they have arranged for approximately 4,000 enlisted men and women to attend over 300 performances of theatrical productions, ranging from opera to local or foreign-made films or night club revues, without cost.

The main idea in launching a UVS program at the Presidio was to get newly-arrived soldiers acquainted with what the city of San Francisco has to offer in the line of wholesome entertainment.

Its men and women volunteer workers contact managers of community social projects, of city theaters, of art centers and USO clubs, to whom they make an appeal for blocks of free tickets to theater performances in the municipal area.

The continuing generosity and the courtesies extended by the managers to the Presidio soldiers since UVS began here bring their own message of goodwill.

Meanwhile the UVS volunteers extend their services by providing advance information to enlisted men and women planning tours or arranging week-end schedules for visiting families and friends. They are there to help in any social project or emergency!

Every Monday evening, volunteer workers from the UVS Marin Chapter travel to share their social services with enlisted patrons of the Service clubs at Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite.

Since August, when a reduction in non-appropriated funds created a shortage of night-duty assistants at the Service club, UVS women workers help out by taking telephone calls, checking games equipment, supplying routine club information for enlisted patrons.

In tribute to all UVS workers and to those who serve men and women of the Presidio, the Star Presidian salutes the five women volunteers who maintain their Information desk at the Service Club. They are Miss Martha Cox, Miss Johanna Calwer, Miss Bertha Hoff, Miss Cornelia Long, and Mrs. Helen Boyer.

ROA Ladies To Meet

The monthly luncheon and card party of the San Francisco ROA Ladies' Club takes place at the Presidio Officers Club 24 October at 1230 hours.

Junior Firemen, their eyes sparking with excitement, their voices screaming approval, arrived at the Presidio Fire Department Saturday, 1400 strong, to take part in Kids' Day, the culmination of Fire Prevention Week on Post. The children, proudly donning their free firemen's helmets and badges, loved every minute. They gathered up the free fire prevention books, blinked at the free movies and never stopped munching the free candy. The other Presidio Fire Department activities of Fire Prevention Week included giving 19 fire prevention training programs of fire safety talks, fire demonstrations and safety movies to more than 2200 persons.

Presidio Clubs Offer Chuck Wagon Fiesta

A giant chuck wagon dinner and dance, sponsored by the three Presidio Service Clubs, is being presented for soldiers and their fair ladies at the main club, Saturday, 27 October.

Strictly Western in spirit and in theme, the dinner is slated to begin at 1800 hours, followed by entertainment and dancing from 1900 to 2200.

Presidio soldiers, their dates and dependents, are cordially invited to attend the Western Chuck Wagon dinner-dance which is without cost.

Transportation for servicemen and their girl friends from Forts Baker and Cronkhite will leave the given area service clubs for the Presidio at 1730 hours.

The ladies are advised to wear their cotton dresses and low-heeled slippers, and for the men, levis and overalls with straw hats are suggested as the uniforms of the day.

A group of young hostesses will be in attendance at the chuck wagon dinner for the square-dancing pleasure of soldier guests who are coming to the Presidio Service Club without their girl friends.

The club directors are presenting prizes for the most typical farmer and farmerette couple chosen by the judges during the event.

for your pleasure!

Woman's Club To Fete 37th Anniversary

The 37th anniversary of the Presidio Woman's Club will be marked with a birthday party by members, taking place at the Presidio Officers Open Mess 1 November at 1400 hours.

Cost of the refreshments at the anniversary party will be 50¢. Reservations may be secured by calling Mrs. W. B. Cronin at telephone extension 5219, with a deadline set for noon on Monday, 29 October.

The Presidio Woman's Club was established strictly as a social enterprise in 1919. Membership during that year was 88 and the dues were 25¢ monthly.

A club constitution was written in 1920 and a welfare program was launched. Club projects at that time consisted of a Milk Fund for needy families, a lending library to which all books were donated, and a trading post where clothing, toys, china and linen were sold on consignment.

Over the years the Woman's Club projects have grown to include hospital welfare, Post nursery, Youth activities, and benefit drives in aid of the destitute at home and overseas.

Talent Pays Off for Pfc. David Nall, presented a trophy and a check for $25 by Capt. John P. Hoover, Post Special Services officer. Pfc. Nall won third place for a comedy routine at an all-service talent contest at the Solano, Calif., County Fair. Active in San Francisco drama circles, Pfc. Nall is currently playing Al in the Abbott Abrams production of "Tea and Sympathy" at the Theater Arts Workshop.

Young Man Seeks Goat; Is Only Soldier Actor!

If you run into a tall, thin young man on Post who looks at you with a sincere expression and asks in a soft apologetic voice if you know where he can find a goat, don't be upset.

Most likely you have just met Pfc. Dave Nall, Hq. Tng. Unit (6700), a most talented and active soldier. The goat hunting expedition relates to his latest assignment as property manager for a Theater Arts production of "Mr. Roberts."

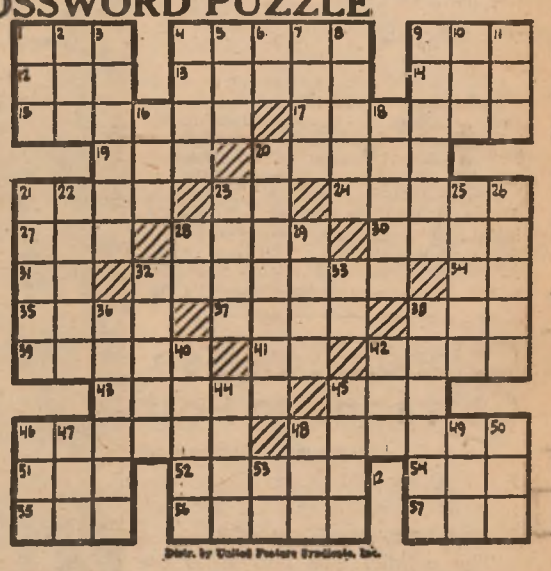
Currently, Pfc. Nall is playing Al in "Tea and Sympathy," the Abbott Abrams production playing at the Theater Arts Workshop. He is also rehearsing for a small part in the Mr. Roberts production.

Much of Pfc. Nall's talent has been brought out in connection with his Army activities. He sang lead in "The Casuals," which won the Post and Sixth Army southern division quartet competition in the All-Army Talent contest. Recently he has served as MC for the talent group that has been soliciting United Crusade pledges from Post and Sixth Army Headquarters.

The result of an all-service competition Pfc. Nall entered at the Solano California County Fair recently, brought him a third prize and a check for $25 for his comedy routine.

Pfc. Nall, who is seriously considering professional theater work after he leaves the Army next summer, has been brought up with the influence of the stage. His mother, who taught high school drama while he was in school, is presently playing in off-Broadway productions in New York.

The late James Dean and Pfc. Nall were classmates in high school and played in several stage productions together. In fact, it was Mrs. Nall who gave James Dean his first drama training. Later Dean urged Mrs. Nall to return to the New York theater.



A speech English major at Wabash College, Pfc. Nall won the college Actor's Award for his portrayal of Animal in "Stalag 17."

SF Opera Casts Locals In Aida

Six enlisted men assigned to the 56th Machine Records Unit at the Presidio were honored with walk-on performances in the San Francisco Opera Company's production of "Aida" this week.

A hurry call to Post Special Services Section and an efficient casting job by the entertainment staff covered the operatic emergency. Chosen for the coveted assignment were Pfcs. Ernie Wilson, Bill Sewell, Vincent Mazzella, Charles Spingler, Ed Fritzen and Jerome Pierzinski, all of MRU.

Weary Fetchick Home After Western Golf Tournament Victory

Mike Fetchick—a dour, methodical links craftsman—is back at his Yonkers, N. Y., home today richer by $5,000 for his handsome victory in the 53rd Western Open Golf Tournament at the Presidio of San Francisco course.

The unemotional son of Austrian immigrants fired a sizzling 66 to capture the first place prize money from Jay Hebert, Doug Ford and Don January, who were also sighting in on the jackpot during the 18-hole playoff round Monday.

To the Victor, the Spoils

All four completed the 72 holes with identical scores of 284, forcing a precedent shattering playoff to determine the winner.

Though the tournament lead changed hands with every day of regular play, there was little doubt that Fetchick would be the winner in the playoff, which pulled a gallery of 3,000 out of offices and homes to tramp the Presidio fairways under a balmy sun.

Fetchick's 66 was the tournament's third and was one stroke away from the course record established a couple of years ago by Dick Yost when he performed in the Sixth Army tourney.

The elated champion declared the round the "toughest and hardest I've ever played."

He claimed it was the greatest round of golf he ever shot, though he did better—a 63 in a minor tournament—previously.

The new champ complimented San Francisco on its weather—"the best golfing climate I've ever experienced"—and declared he was heading back to Yonkers and catch up on much needed rest.

Major General Riley F. Ennis, representing Sixth Army Commander Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, was present at the post-tournament ceremonies, along with Colonels C. C. W. Allan and John N. Beck, who formed part of the military committee among tournament officials.

San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce officials, the sponsoring group, praised the Army for its cooperation during the event.

Fetchick, who later admitted being nervous as the pressure was applied, turned in rounds of 32-34 to rack up his six under par tally.

Hebert came in second with a 1-under-par 71, while Ford finished with a par 72. January, whose golf during the first nine holes caused him to look sheepish when questioned, finished strong to card a 75.

All three were guaranteed $2,000.

Billy Maxwell and Dow Finsterwald finished the 72-hole regular tournament play with 285 and earned $1,125 each. Mike Souchak, Porky Oliver and Bud Holscher, who shot 286, picked up checks for $700, while Bill Casper, Dr. Cary Middlecoff and Ernie Vosler won $420 for their 287 cards.

For Middlecoff, defending champion, the tournament did little to enhance his prestige.

The former dentist, while shooting 70-73-73-71, was in trouble throughout the play. He landed in trees, missed putts and in general did not play the type of golf he's known for.

In the amateur bracket, Alameda's John McMullin beat Ed Castagnetto on the 20th hole in a sudden death affair.

San Francisco's top amateurs, Ken Venturi and Harvie Ward, also had their difficulties. Venturi finished with a 295, while Ward, two time national amateur champ, wrapped up play with a 297.

US Cagers Slate Two Coast Tilts

The United States Olympic Games basketball team, preparing for its competition in Melbourne, Australia, will play two exhibition games on the Pacific Coast next month.

The cagers, who assembled at Bunker Hill Air Force Base earlier this month, will include games at Oakland and Long Beach on their itinerary of preliminary training contests throughout the Nation.

The team will meet a squad of Pacific Coast All Stars in Oakland, November 7, and in Long Beach, November 9. Both games will complete the schedule of contests.

Head Coach Gerald Tucker said the tour will open tomorrow against the Phillips Oilers in Indianapolis, Ind. Six servicemen are on the squad. The schedule:

Oct. 20—Phillips Oilers at Indianapolis, Ind.; 22—College All-Stars at Dayton, Ohio; 24—Southern Conference All-Stars at Washington, D. C.; 27—Peoria Cats at Peoria, Ill.; 29—Denver-Chicago Truckers at Denver, Colo.

Nov. 1—Wichita Vickers at Wichita, Kan.; 4—Phillips Oilers at Austin, Minn.; 5—Southwest Conference All-Stars at Dallas, Tex.; 7—Pacific Coast All-Stars at Oakland, Calif.; 9—Pacific Coast All-Stars at Long Beach, Calif.

Colonel Brownlee Gets Fencing Post

Colonel Laurance Brownlee, Sixth Army G-4, is the new chairman military liaison on fencing, it was announced recently.

The colonel was named to the post by the Board of Governors, Amateur Fencers League of America, in a meeting at New York.

LAH Hosts Foils Meet Tomorrow

Fencing stars from all corners of the world assemble on the Presidio tomorrow and Sunday for the Letterman Army Hospital invitational fencing tournament.

Coming from Holland, the Tradewinds islands, Boston and Napa, the fencers—160 or more strong—will compete for individual medals and honors in the meet.

They will cross blades in the foil, epee, and saber classes starting at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow and again on Sunday at the same time.

The Letterman Sports Office has issued invitations to almost every big fencing name in the nation, with an anticipated group of 160 scheduled to shout "en garde."

Invitations have been accepted by the Los Angeles and Hollywood Fencing Clubs, Stanford University and the University of California, San Francisco State College, Napa Junior College, and the Halberstadt and Funke Academies of San Francisco.

Those are some of the Bay Area groups participating. But U. S. Military, Naval and Air Force academies have also been invited as well as other Army and Air Force installations where fencing is practiced.

Big names among fencers scheduled to compete are Leal Kanstein, Pacific Coast epee champ; Salvatore Giambra, 1948 U. S. Olympic Games competitor, and Dures De Jung, onetime Dutch fencing master.

Local personnel who will participate include Colonel Laurance Brownlee and daughter Shaun, Jose Tafoya, Shirley Cantor and Severo Pasol.

Hopes are high that the U. S. Olympic fencers, now in L. A., may also show for the tournament.

Practice Makes Perfect Ed Sage (left) and Tom Day of the 549th Engineer Company leap for control of a pass in the unit's intramural football league practice. Pass defense has been instrumental in keeping the 549th unbeaten in the Western League with a 4-0 record and atop the standings.

Compton's Aerials Pace 549th Win

The 549th Engineer Company, powerhouse of the Western Intramural Football League, maintained its unbeaten status this week, while the Teenagers highlighted play in the Eastern Conference with a narrow, last second victory.

The 549th, paced by the rapier-like passing of Jim Compton, showed no mercy in walloping the still-to-win Headquarters Detachment, 660th Engineers, 20-0.

Compton passed for two touchdowns to his favorite target, Ed Sage, as the 549th rolled to its fourth straight victory and took a firm grip on the league lead.

Compton fired a six yarder to Sage for the first TD and then wrapped up his pitching with a 20-yard effort late in the game. Sandwiched between the two aerials, was Roy Sharrock's 50-yard gallop around end to pay dirt.

Headquarters Company, Sixth Army also maintained its unbeaten status in the Eastern League.

The 6000 SU gridders, sparked by the pass catching abilities of Bob Kircher, romped past Headquarters Battery, 752nd AAA Missile Battalion, 20-7, for their fourth straight win.

Kircher tallied twice on passes to spur the loop leaders. He took a 40-yard aerial from Carl Stabile for his first visit to the end zone and a 20-yarder from Gordon Peaks for his second.

The Teenagers, once the Eastern League doormats, showed they would be tough in the stretch as they eked out a 23-20 win in a thriller on the Presidio PX field.

Once again, Tom Lupo was the big gun. The youngster who tallied three times in the Teenager's initial win, ran into the promised land twice, leading his club to the triumph over Headquarters Company, 6002 SU.

The youngsters racked up nine points in the final four minutes to ice the contest. And it was Lupo's TD jaunt in the waning seconds of the clash that brought the victory.

The Deuce gridders, however, came back strong in their second game this week, crunching past hapless D Battery, 752nd AAA Missile Battalion, 27-6.

In other Western League games, the 21st Engineers clipped the 99th Engineers, 26-0, and Headquarters Company, 30th Group, scored its first win, 20-0, over the 537th Engineers.

Army Ring Survivors Battle For Olympics Trip Tickets

By Sp3 Walt Heil
Star Presidian Sports Editor

The survivors of a 15-man U.S. Army boxing squad seeking trip tickets to Melbourne, Australia, go to the post tonight in the final round of action in the Olympic Games ring tryouts in San Francisco's huge Cow Palace.

The Army boxers, along with Golden Gloversi, collegians, AAU fisticuffers and other Armed Forces battlers, await the opening gong at 8 p.m. to do combat in twenty bouts.

The survivors, from among 105 who started festivities Wednesday night, seek the all-important 10 berths which will guarantee them a place on the plane bound for the Land Down Under next month. And if determination alone can spark them to peak performances, the Cow Palace ring will be a busy place.

Only three of seven soldiers survived the rugged opening round tests Wednesday, including heavyweight John Johnson from Europe; George Davis, Second Army, and Francis Okuda, a 112-pound gamester, who packs a terrific punch for such a tiny fellow.

Okuda, stationed at Fort Shafter, Territory of Hawaii, was easily the most impressive trooper of those battling in the opening round fights.

He scored a technical knockout over Perfecto Segura in 57 seconds of the second round, employing speed and paralyzing punching power to gain the triumph.

Though Segura succeeded in opening a cut over Okuda's eye, the Hawaiian slammed home punch after punch to his foe's head and body. Segura was still on his feet when Referee Jack Downey called a halt. But Segura was obviously outclassed and due for a beating had the fight continued.

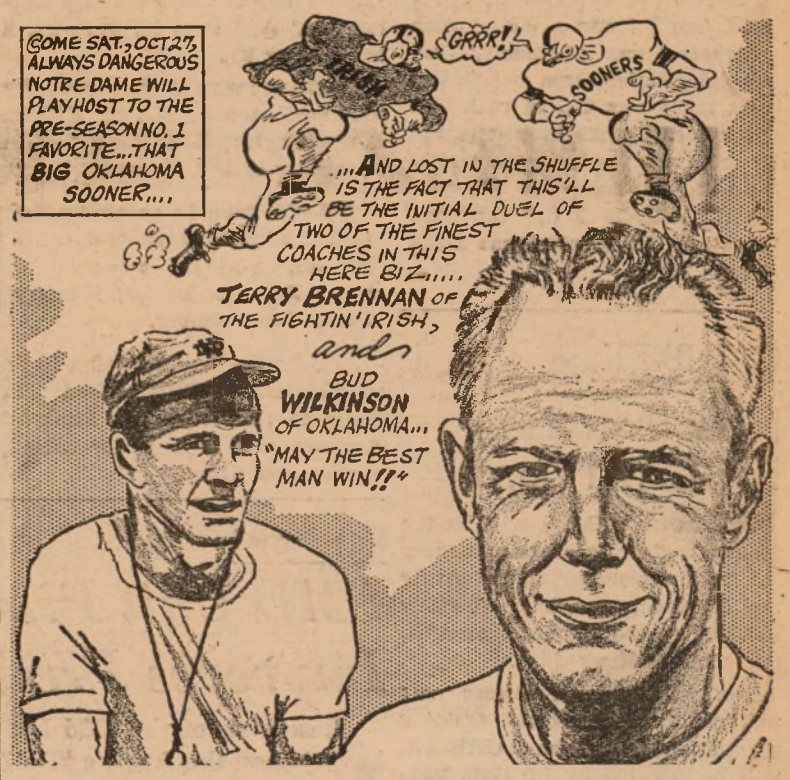
Nevertheless, Segura was moved to protest Downey's call, figuring since he had inflicted the first cut on Okuda in his career, he still had a fighting chance. His protest, however, was ignored.

Johnson got the Army into the win column after Leon Shuford, Vernon Lee and Sammy Rollins had gone down to defeat in early action. After Johnson's and Okuda's victories, Davis added a third until the skein was broken by Lionel Rivera's defeat to collegian Dave Abeyta.

Johnson scored a unanimous decision over Ozzie Groom in a battle of heavyweights. The soldier was cut over the left eye midway in the bout, but rallied with a solid attack to the head for the nod.

Davis, from Fort Meade, came up with the Army's third straight win of the night as he eked out a split decision over Ward Yee of the Air Force.

Yee was the aggressor through the first and second heats, Davis being content to counter occasionally. In the third Davis managed to cut Yee over the eye and flicked away at the heavily bleeding wound until blood virtually covered the Airman's face.



That apparently impressed the judges sufficiently to give Davis the triumph.

The Army fighters lost their first three bouts, including knockout defeats to Lee and Rollins.

Airman Willie Thomas belted Lee down once and then fired a right and a left hook to put him down for good in 1:04 of the first.

Rollins was decked twice by Fred Jackson, another Airman, in the third before he landed on the canvas a third time, this one for keeps.

Jesse Herrera scored a decision over Shuford in the second bout of the evening.

Two Torero Cagers Suffering Injuries

Already suffering a dearth of capable players, Presidio of San Francisco basketballers suffered additional blows this week.

Starting practice sessions with six players on the roster, the Toreros, one of northern California's top Armed Forces teams last year, are down to three able bodied cagers today.

Coach Hal Fischer released one player from the squad and reported two others are complaining of aches and pains which hinder their movements.

John Daniels, onetime Carnegie Tech undergraduate, came up with a sprained ankle that has him limping.

Ronnie Reynoir, a former Loyola of New Orleans whiz, is careful of movement which might cause his bothersome back to act up.

That leaves the Toreros only with Norm Ellenberger, team captain, Carroll Williams and John Blackwell in top physical shape. And this with the season opening scrimmage scheduled for next Tuesday.

The Presidio tests its abilities against the Niesi All Stars, who are about to leave for the Far East on a Government sponsored tour. The Toreros will face the fast little scooters in the Chinese YMCA Gym ere they depart for Formosa, Hong Kong, Singapore and way points.

Fischer, still casting around for additional help, is hopeful of landing Bob Kemp, Beloit College of Wisconsin, on his club.

Kemp is newly arrived on the Presidio and is assigned to a unit at Fort Baker. The Presidio headman is keeping his fingers crossed in hopes of landing the Midwesterner, whom he feels would lend considerable aid.

After their scrum against the Nisei quint, the Toreros will take on San Francisco's Olympic Club, S. F. State, Athens Club of Oakland and a San Leandro AAU outfit.

M-Sgt's Son Finds Honesty A Highly Profitable Virtue

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

"I was on my newspaper route down by Steiner Street when I looked down and saw the thing. So I looked in it and saw a $10 bill and some other money. So I threw it in my paper bag and hurried and finished my route.

"Then I called my mother and told her I found a wallet with a lot of money in it, and she told me to give it to my dad so he could give it to the Provost Marshal. But I decided to go there myself.

"Some guy at the PM office asked me if I was lost, but I said, 'no, I found a wallet with a whole bunch of money.' And Captain Butler came and looked and there was $65 in cash and over $200 dollars in checks. He found some cards in the wallet and called numbers. On the fourth call he found the man who said he would come right over.

"Then the civilian arrived and identified the wallet which contained all the days' earnings from his egg business. He looked at me and said: 'Thanks a lot for finding the wallet; you're a really honest boy.' And then he gave me a brand new $20 bill."

That's the way 10-year-old Billy Matcaroff, son of M/Sgt. William Matcaroff, 16th BPO, described his adventure of last Tuesday.

"You'd have to go pretty far to find a little kid who'd do what he did," was the comment of Capt. John L. Butler, Military Police Duty officer.

Asked what he was going to do with his reward, Billy replied: "I'm going to put it in the Bank of America and save it for school, clothes and things."

CARIB-EX

New Exercise For Canal Zone

The Panama Canal will be the focus of a gigantic attack maneuver in April involving 10,000 Army and Marine troops, approximately 135 Marine and Air Force aircraft, and some 24 Navy ships.

The joint Armed Forces amphibious and airborne training plan, dubbed Exercise CARIB-EX, will be directed by Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, commander-in-chief, Caribbean Command.

The five-day, two-phase exercise will encircle both sides of the Canal Zone and a portion of the Panama Republic, and will include training with simulated atomic weapons.

The first phase will consist of Navy and Marine amphibious assault followed by offensive air and ground operations against an "aggressor" army entrenched in the jungle.

The second phase will take place in the Rio Hato training area on the Pacific side and will be an Army airborne assault followed by the air-landing of Army troops and an air-ground offensive against an "enemy" force there.

CMD Unit Proves Versatile; Improves Presidio Quarters

Reservists of the 353d Loudspeaker and Leaflet Company have joined the Army's "Do It Yourself" program and beautified Buildings T-904 and T-908 assigned for their Reserve activities in the California Military District area at the Presidio.

The men undertook the program four months ago under the leadership of their commanding officer, 1st Lieutenant Charles C. Miller. Utilizing their personal skills, they first learned the functions and operations of the new equipment secured for their use. This consisted of a complete photographic darkroom, complex radio equipment, an offset printing press, varityper and other technical and specialized equipment.

The men then constructed cabinets and shelves specifically designed for the new radio equipment. Drawing tables with the proper slant were built for the draftsmen in the unit. There was a need for a complicated light table to opaque camera film and a large table to house the photographic paper. The 353rd built these items.

Shipping crates from the new equipment were used to construct pallets and shelving. Other material was obtained from the Engineer salvage yard.

In addition, the eight-room interior of Building T-904 was painted, thus preserving the walls and woodwork and enhancing the cleanliness and beauty of the building.

Looking Over some of the numerous medals and trophies won in recent competition by marksmen from the Presidio and the Oakland Army Base is Donna Arndt of the Post Exchange, where the collection is currently displayed. Originally slated to be removed this week, the display will continue through next Wednesday.

Major Returns To Studies After 61-Year Absence

By M/Sgt. Walter Dugdale
Post Information NCO

Have you been postponing your education while you are serving in the Army? Take the case of Major Richard E. Vincent as recently reported in the New York Times. A retired Army officer, Major Vincent had postponed his college studies for 61 years.

The last time the major tackled a textbook was back in 1895, when he finished McGuffey's third-grade reader at a Cleveland elementary school.

The interim between McGuffey's reader and Columbia University, where Major Vincent is now enrolled, was crammed with storybook adventures and misadventures. A shipwreck off Peru, a fall into a volcano, "mushing it" by dogsled in the Yukon, and battling savages in the Philippines kept him from his studies. But, after this life of high adventure, plus a few tame decades in the business world, Major Vincent is determined to earn a Bachelor of Science degree in history at Columbia.

He is now enrolled in the School of General Studies' special "validation" program. This is designed for students who have never been graduated from high school.

Before he can qualify as a degree candidate, he will have to prove during the present academic year that he can handle his scholastic assignments.

Physically, the major won't have any trouble. "Right now," he says, "I could jump into the Hudson River and swim to the Jersey shore —not too fast, mind you—but I'd get there."

His ancient history course is proving a breeze so far, Vincent says. "I've been to all those places they mention," he noted, but admits mathematics may prove a stumbling block.

The case of Major Vincent's postponed education is unfortunately true. He had a legitimate excuse for putting off his studies, however. He retired from the Army just 23 years before the establishment of USAFI and Army Education centers.

The United States Armed Forces Institute (USAFI), a school for servicemen and servicewomen, provides educational materials and services, including correspondence and self-teaching courses, group-study course materials, tests, and reporting of test results for military and civilian accreditation purposes.

USAFI gives you the opportunity to continue your education with the best materials available while you are serving your country. This service costs you far less than similar education would cost a civilian. For a two-dollar fee you may enroll in your first USAFI course, and you may continue to take other courses without additional cost if your progress is satisfactory.

Almost 250 elementary, high school, technical-vocational, and college courses may be taken directly from USAFI. In addition, there are approximately 2,500 course offerings available through USAFI from extension divisions of leading colleges and universities under Government contract.

If Major Vincent were on active duty today, he could be taking advantage of USAFI's services while "mushing it" or recovering from his Peruvian misadventure.

During the lull in savage-fighting if stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco, the adventurous major could participate in an on-post college degree program.

The Presidio Army Education Center, Bldg. 232, offers three 8-week on-post college courses five times each year. All courses carry three units, full residence credit, and are transferable to any college.

All courses are credited toward a baccalaureate degree at San Francisco State College. Classes meet twice a week, 1830 to 2030 hours. Students pay only for registration and texts.

There is a civilian educational adviser at the Presidio Army Education Center who will assist service personnel in planning a college program for a degree.

Call the Presidio Army Education Center, Extension 3189 or 2974, for information.

Don't wait 61 years before you start!

Gavin Named To Push Army Missile Plans

Washington—The Army has assigned its Research and Development Chief, Lieutenant General James M. Gavin, the mission of research and development on a priority basis to attain increased Army missile capabilities.

In a newly released policy paper, it has been announced that short, medium, and long-range surface-to-surface missiles as well as surface-to-air missiles are required in order to fulfill the Army's assigned roles and missions.

The Army explained that in the surface-to-surface classification, short-range assault or demolition guided missiles are needed for use against armor and fortifications. Medium-range missiles are essential to supplement and extend the range or firepower of artillery cannon, to provide close fire support for ground combat troops, and to compensate for the expanding battle area.

Long-range surface-to-surface missiles capable of supporting deep penetrations or airheads from widely dispersed rear areas and capable of delivering accurate fire on distant targets are also part of the Army's combat mission.

Local Needs Are Often Overlooked!

If there is a single trait that Americans are most noted for—it's their generosity!

A visiting statesman recently commented "the American's generosity overwhelms you!" He further qualified his statement "it's a genuine and sincere need to share, not, as we abroad tend to think, just the mere overflow of a gigantic material largesse, but the willingness, the desire to give their very best just for the pleasure of giving."

We agree with that statement. Our generosity to needy nations, backward economies and displaced segments of the world's homeless is without a parallel in the history of mankind.

Yet we sometimes fail to see the forest for the trees. We sometimes overlook completely the basic tenet of charitable giving—charity should begin at home. "If there are needy among you, set aside of the first fruits for these—for the widow, the orphan and the sick of mind and body."

In the next few days you will be asked to bring your donation up to "fair share" (a day's pay) par in the annual United Bay Area Crusade Drive here at the Presidio. "Give where you work" is the theme of this year's drive and though, through error or duplication, you may be solicited both at home and at work, your only obligation is the donation you make on the job.

The money you give may be earmarked for any of your very special charities, since all share in this one big give. You can be assured that it will be utilized in the very community in which you live, since this drive combines that of all the Bay Area counties.

This year, then, take a good look at the forest. View the wants and needs of the community around you. Give of the first fruits to the widow, the orphan, the sick and the unfortunate in your own backyard. Give generously—at least a day's pay.

You will be adding to the grand tradition of American generosity, but better still, you will be serving yourself by serving those less fortunate in your own community.

E-5 Quotas Still Short

For the second month running Post received one E-7 and one E-6 allocation as part of its promotion quota. No slots came in for E-5.

In September the first E-7 rating in 14 months went to Master Specialist Alfred G. Drumright (MOS 413.60), 46th Ordnance Group. Sfc. Jesse W. Thompson (MOS 281.60), detachment 3 (6300), at Davis, Calif., was the only man in the Post promotion area to make E-6.

Striving for absolute fairness in awarding these rare top two grade promotions, Post AG section has requested that each unit submit the names of eligible personnel. Records of these persons are to be screened by Post and passed on to a promotion board for final decision.

The over-all promotion picture at Post and Sixth Army Headquarters is slightly brighter this month than last. In addition to its single E-6 and E-7 allocation, Post received slots for 84 E-4's. Again in October all E-2's with 10 months service may be promoted to Pfc. without regard to quota.

Retirement Parade Is Today

CG To Visit Ord's Packet Replacements

The largest single group of men to leave Fort Ord for overseas replacements — some 3,500 soldiers — will be honored in a ceremony Tuesday that will be attended by Commanding General Sixth Army Lt. General Robert N. Young.

These "packet" trainees are examples of a comparatively new concept which offers many advantages over the individual replacement system. The men train together from the beginning of basic and stay in the same group through unit training and assignment overseas.

The soldiers are slated to start leaving Fort Ord in November and will join the 10th Infantry Division in Germany. While the majority have been trained for the infantry, there are also artillerymen, military police, signal corpsmen, engineers, truckers, ordnance specialists and antiaircraft artillerymen.

The public has been invited to attend the ceremony.

Wilson Signs Medicare; In Effect 7 December

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson has signed a joint directive which will put into effect on 7 December the benefits provided by the Dependents Medical Care Act (Public Law 569).

Applying equally in all services, including the Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic survey and Public Health Service, the instructions regulate procedures for obtaining the medical and dental attention which dependents will be entitled to under law.

Earlier in approving the DOD directive, President Eisenhower said he believes the new program will remove one of the "greatest sources of worry" in service families and improve morale in the Armed Forces.

The primary means of identifying those eligible for medical treatment will be a "dependents authorization for medical care card," which will be valid for two years.

Parents or parents-in-law, although they have established dependency, will not be eligible for civilian medical care.

Normally, one card will be issued to each family and will list de-

Army Will Seek 22 Amendments To Reserve Bill

The Army—after a year of trying the Reserve Officer Personnel Act of 1954—will ask Congress to pass a bill covering 22 amendments to the Act.

The bill will be included in the Defense Department's Congressional legislative program next year.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson's 1957 program seeking new service legislative measures will be presented to the 86th Congress convening in January.

Four Sked Final Salute

Four soldiers will culminate their active Army career today with a retirement parade on the main parade ground starting at 1600 hours.

Retiring from active duty are Col. John H. Derrick, staff Judge Advocate, Sixth Army; CWO George W. Arndt, CWO Robert L. Hinrichsen and M/Sgt. Robert W. Coombs.

Colonel Derrick, whose active and reserve service totals 38 years, began his military service at the age of 16 when he enlisted in the Minesota National Guard.

The Colonel, who holds a law degree from the University of Minnesota, served with the first contingent of troops to serve in Europe during World War II. Later he participated with the 34th Division, which saw action in Tunisia and Italy.

In 1950 Colonel Derrick went to Germany to serve for three years as Deputy Judge Advocate of Headquarters, European Command at Heidelberg. He returned to the United States in October, 1953, and

DA Pamphlet Lists 60 Army Ed Courses

An Army tour of duty or a service career is a time of unusual educational opportunity, according to a new DA Troop Topic Pamphlet, "The Army Enlisted School System."

There are, says the pamphlet, approximately 60 school courses available in such fields as radar, baking, chemicals, welding, electronics, police work, rockets, guided missiles, and atomic energy. These courses offer excellent opportunities to soldiers with ambition and a desire to learn and get ahead in the service.

"The mere existence of opportunity, however," warns Troop Topics, "is only half of the story, the other half consists of doing something about it. The school won't choose you. You must choose the school."

"The Enlisted School System," DA Pamphlet 355-7, contains basic information as to courses available, eligibility for attendance, and procedures for applying for admission.

With few exceptions, personnel will fall into one of four major groups:

Group 1: Personnel with government life insurance in effect under waiver of payment of premiums. This includes both term and permanent plans of insurance.

With one exception, it is mandatory that such personnel accomplish VA Form 9-5782 (Request for Information/Action on Section 622 Waiver) in duplicate, as soon as possible, and forward to the Personnel Officer maintaining their records for forwarding to the Veterans Administration.

The exception applies to personnel with term insurance. They may make application for conversion of their term policy to a permanent plan in lieu of completion of the above mentioned form.

Group 2. Personnel with USGLI or NSLI in effect which is not under waiver of payment of premiums. This applies to policy holders of both term and permanent plans.

No action is required.

Group 3: Members who entered the service for the first time after 25 April, 1951, and those persons in the service on that date who had no government insurance in effect.

No action required.

However, those in this category who are separated from the service on or before 31 Dec., 1956, are eligible to apply for Post Term Insurance. Application may not be submitted prior to separation and must be made before 1 Jan., 1957. Other personnel in this category, except for disabled, are not eligible for any type of government life insurance.

Group 4: Personnel who surrendered their permanent plans of USGLI and NSLI for cash subsequent to 25 April, 1951.

No action required.

The privilege to reinstate the old policy or to take out a new policy of the same type plan surrendered continues in effect until 120 days after separation from the service. However, such personnel will have no government life insurance coverage effective 1 Jan., 1957, if they do not make application for reinstatement or a new policy prior to that date.

The sections of the new Survivors Benefits Act pertaining to Social Security and six months gratuity pay will apply to all personnel in the service on 1 Jan., 1957, regardless of what action they may take concerning their government life insurance.

Scouting Anyone?

Qualified enlisted men at the Presidio are asked to contact Lieutenant Colonel Willet Ware, Jr., the Post Inspector General, regarding a vacancy now existing for a scoutmaster to take charge of the Presidio troop.

Scoutmaster applicants must have a motor vehicle operator's license or be qualified to apply for it, and be a high school graduate or its equivalent.

Grade or MOS is of no consideration and, although not essential, a scouting background is desirable.

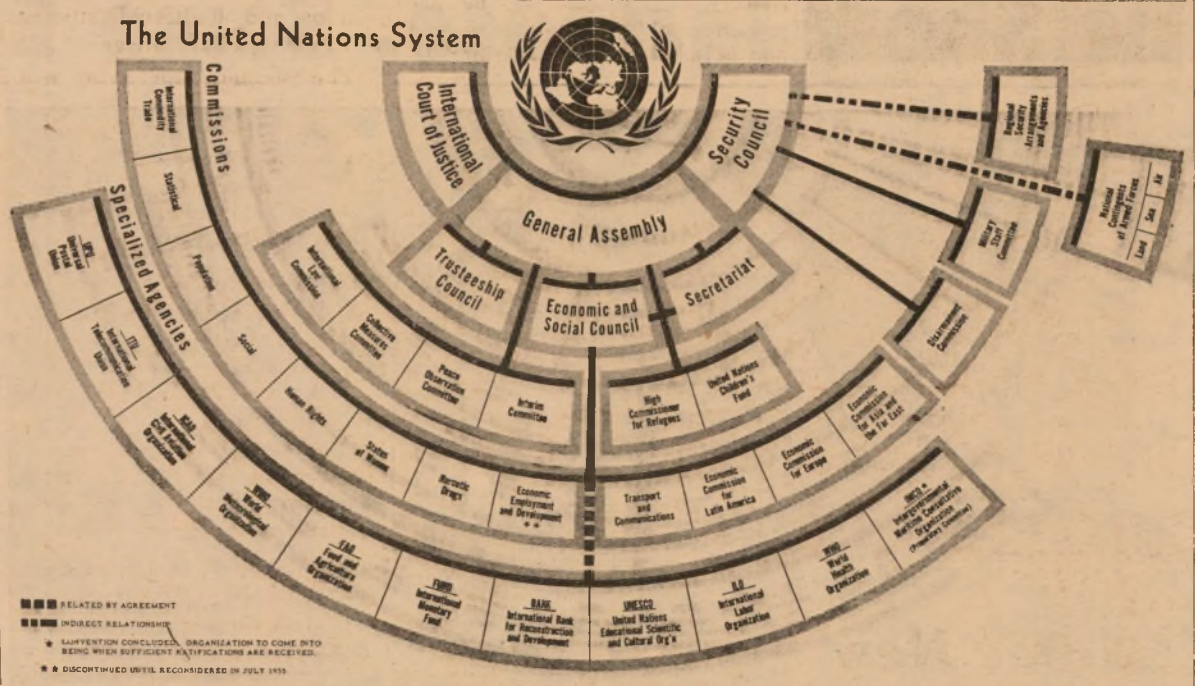
Colonel Ware, Institutional representative of the Boy Scouts of America, may be reached at extension 2252 or 4345.

New System Cuts Delivery On Eucom Household Goods

Door-to-door deliveries of household goods between the U.S. and Germany soon will be cut to four or five weeks for military families.

Through Department of Defense contracts with the American Express Co. and the Mayflower Transit Co., the personal possessions of Armed Forces families moving in either direction will be handled in a continuous chain of service.

Under the contracts, the overseas organization of the American Express Co. will represent the 625 Mayflower agents with nationwide fleets of vans in the States.



While the original arrangement is primarily to meet the needs of the services in Germany, there are provisions to extend it to England, France, Turkey and Italy.

The key to faster shipments is the use of a large sealed steel container, called the "CONEX" box, into which the entire household goods of the serviceman will be packed at the port of embarkation, and shipped overseas as a unit.

American Express will take care of all packing, warehousing and hauling in Germany. Mayflower agents will handle shipments in the same manner at the stateside end.

In the U.S., furnishings will be carried to the nearest of three ports —New Orleans, La., Hampton Roads, Va., or Brooklyn, N. Y.—for packing in "CONEX" boxes and shipment to Bremerhaven, Germany, aboard MSTS vessels.

When the military family moves in the other direction, the procedure is reversed.

UN Celebrates 11th Anniversary

As the United Nations celebrated its eleventh anniversary Wednesday, Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold was attempting to coax Egypt, England, and France into resuming further negotiation of the critical Suez Canal conflict.

At the same time UN armistice commissioners were investigating recent military flurries along the inflamed Israeli-Jordan border.

Eleven years since the original 52 nations met in San Francisco's Opera House to sign the United Nations Charter, the UN continues to play an important role in world politics.

This week's Troop Information topic will observe the world organization's eleventh birthday by discussing the United Nations—Organization and Purpose.

Since 24 October, 1945, the United Nations has advanced closer to universality with a present membership of 76 nations. Some of its newest member states, like Laos and Cambodia, have only recently emerged from colonial status. Additional nations, like Japan and Outer Mongolia, are awaiting action on their applications for admission.

The information topic will consider the development of the United Nations over the past eleven years and the role it has assumed as an instrument for world peace within the existing framework of international relations.

The topic will touch on the United Nations as a world forum and as an instrument for exerting moral pressure in the settlement of international disputes. It will consider the UN's role in the postwar development of international law, as well as the economic, social and cultural functions of the world organization.

Hatch Act Limits Employee Political Activities

(Editor's Note: Because of the current political campaigns, many questions are raised with respect to specific provisions of the Hatch Act, which restricts political activities on the part of Federal employees and certain State and local government employees. The Civil Services Commission, which is responsible for Hatch Act enforcement, has prepared answers to questions most often asked concerning political-activity restrictions.)

Q. What groups of employees are prohibited from active participation in politics by the Hatch Act?

A. In general, employees of the executive branch of the Federal Government and the Government of the District of Columbia, including temporary and part-time employees. Also restricted is the political activity of certain employees of State, county, and municipal agencies that are Federally financed.

Q. What is the penalty for violation of the Hatch Act?

A. The most severe penalty for violation is removal. The minimum penalty is suspension without pay for 90 days.

Q. Are any executive-branch employees exempt from the restrictions of the Hatch Act?

A. Yes, there are a few specific exemptions listed in the act. Among them are the heads and assistant heads of agencies, members of the White House staff, and officials who determine national policy and are appointed by the President subject to Senate confirmation. There is also a partial exemption as to local elections only for Federal employees who live in communities in which a large number of registered voters are employed by the Federal Government.

Q. What is the partial exemption for the residents of communities with large numbers of Federal employees?

A. Subject to certain restrictions, they may participate actively in local political management and local political campaigns in the communities in which they live. Permission for this activity is given to communities on an individual basis by the Civil Service Commission. Most of these communities are in the vicinity of Washington, D. C. Any employee who is in doubt as to whether his community is on the exempt list can get the information from the Commission.

Q. What agency enforces the Hatch Act?

A. The Civil Service Commission enforces it for the competitive civil service.

Q. Does this mean that employees holding excepted positions (outside the competitive civil service) are not subject to the act?

A. No. Excepted employees are subject to the act, but in these cases the employing agency is responsible for enforcing it.

Q. I am an employee affected by the Hatch Act. Will you please explain my responsibilities and rights under the act.

A. You have the right to vote and to express your political opinions, but you are forbidden to taken an active part in partisan political management or partisan political campaigns. In connection with your right to vote, the Civil Service Commission emphasizes that political-activity restrictions do not relieve you of your obligation as a citizen to inform yourself of the issues and to register and vote. Your agency will give you up to one day off without charge to leave in order to register and to vote in States where absentee balloting is not permitted.

Specifically, you may not run for office or campaign for a party candidate. You can attend political rallies and join political clubs, but you cannot take an active part in the conduct of a rally or operation of a club, and you may not be an officer or committee member in the club. Other things you are prohibited from doing are using your automobile for the purpose of getting voters—other than members of your immediate family—to the polls, distributing campaign material, marching in a political parade, and selling tickets or otherwise actively promoting such activities as political dinners.

Q. I am a part-time employee and have no regular tour of duty. Does the Hatch Act apply to me?

A. Yes, it applies to you on any day you perform work for the Government, and this includes the entire 24-hour period of any day worked.

Q. I am a State employee. Does the Hatch Act apply to me?

A. Yes, if you perform duties in connection with an activity financed in whole or in part by Federal loans or grants. If this is not true, you are not subject to the act.

Q. I want to write a letter to the editor of our local newspaper expressing my opinion on a partisan political issue. Am I allowed to do this?

A. Yes, but you must not solicit votes for or against any political party or candidate. If you solicit votes, it is a Hatch Act violation.

Q. May I make campaign contributions to my party?

A. Yes, but you cannot be required to do so. The contribution cannot be made in a Federal building or to some other employee who is prohibited by Federal law from accepting contributions. Of course, as a Federal employee you cannot solicit political contributions.

Q. I have been asked to run for public office. Is this permissible under the Hatch Act?

A. No. Federal employees cannot be candidates for any National, State, county, or municipal office filled in PARTISAN elections. You may run for local office on a nonpartisan basis if names appear on the ballot without party designation and if the election and the preceding campaign are conducted in a completely nonpartisan manner.

Q. May I serve as an election official?

A. That depends upon the law of the State in which the election is held. If your State law permits Federal employees to serve as election officials, you may do so provided you go about your duties in an impartial manner. Under no circumstances can you serve at the polls as a checker, challenger, distributor, or watcher representing a political party, candidate, or faction.

Q. I would like to wear a campaign button in the interests of one of my favorite candidate. Is this permissible?

A. Yes, but not while on duty conducting the public business. You may also display a political sticker on your private automobile, assuming that automobile stickers are permitted by your local authorities, provided that you do not use your automobile for Government business.

Q. I am a Government employee but my wife isn't. She wants to help a friend campaign for political office. Is that all right?

A. Yes. The act does not restrict the activities of an employee's wife or of other members of his family in any way unless they are engaging in politics on his behalf. For example, your wife has the right to campaign for her friend, but if she is really doing it for you because you can't do it personally, the act is violated and you will be held accountable for her actions.

Q. I am a Federal employee and have been a justice of the peace for two month. I have just been told that I am violating the Hatch Act. Is this correct?

A. No, providing you were appointed to the position, or elected to it in a nonpartisan election. Other positions which Federal employees are permitted to hold by appointment are positions on boards of education, school committees, and boards of public libraries and religious or charitable institutions. Service as a notary public is permissible, as well as unpaid service in a fire department. Permission to hold these offices must, however, be granted by the employing agency.

Q. I have been offered a part-time job as instructor in our local university, but I don't want to give up my Federal job to take it. Would this be necessary?

A. No. The Hatch Act does not apply to teaching positions. The holding of part-time State jobs is usually forbidden, but not State teaching positions.

Q. What should I do if I don't know whether a certain action violates the Hatch Act?

A. Since ignorance of provisions of the law will not excuse you from penalties for violation, you should present the matter in writing to the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C.

New Engineer Chief Visits Presidio Units

New Chief of the Army Engineers Maj. General Emerson C. Itschner swept into the Presidio area last Thursday for a brief visit to local engineer units. It was one of a series of inspection tours the General is making all over the country to familiarize himself with his command.

While on Post, General Itschner met the engineer officers assigned to Sixth Army Headquarters, the Post Engineer Section and the 561st Engineer Co., in addition to those of the 30th Group. The visiting party made a detailed inspection of the Post Engineer activities.

Arriving at Fort Scott, General Itschner and his party were met by 30th Group Commander Col. Lawrence R. St. John. After a short briefing covering Group activities in the States and overseas, the General was taken on a tour of the 21st Engineer Co. (Base Photomapping) plant and the 99th Engineer Co. (Base Reproduction) plant.

Col. Francis H. Falkner, Sixth Army Engineer, and Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, accompanied General Itschner on the tour. After lunch at the 549th Engineer Co. (Survey Base) the inspection party departed from Crissy Field for Fort Ord.

At one time, General Itschner commanded a survey company in the 29th Engineer Topographic Bn. stationed at Portland, Ore. The 30th Group was formed with men selected from this unit so homecoming was in the air when the General made his visit.

General Itschner heads both a combat army and a technical branch with a present peacetime strength of 10,000 officers, 100,000 enlisted men and 50,000 civilians.

Military and civil works construction calling for expenditures of more than $2 billion a year are only part of the Corps of Engineer activities that include training, schooling, map-making, management, maintenance, research and development programs.

New AAA Unit Now Assigned To Presidio

Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 752d AAA Battalion, whose motto is "The Keepers of the Gate," will move this week to their new home at the Presidio.

The battalion, which has four tactical 90-mm Gun Batteries in the Bay Area, stationed in Richmond, Alameda, San Francisco, and Marin County, is making the move from Grizzly Peak in Berkeley to building 682 here at the Presidio. In keeping with the battalion motto, "The Keepers of the Gate,' the move will bring the Headquarters and Headquarters Battery of the 752d to the approaches of their namesake and motto, the Golden Gate Bridge.

The distinctive unit insignia for the 752d AAA Battalion consists of a shield and motto. It includes two chevron flashes inverted toward each other against a red background with the battalion motto inscribed in gold. The two flashes represent the battle honors awarded the organization for campaigns in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater during World War II. An artillery projectile against the traditional red background of the artillery symbolizes the battalion function.

The battalion was activated in March of 1941 and served in the Hawaiian Islands, Saipan, and Iwo Jima. It served with credit, receiving recognition for participation in the Air Offensive against Japan, General Order 29, Department of the Army 1948, and for service in the Western Pacific, General Order 12, War Department 1946.

The battalion is commanded by Lt. Colonel Charles A. Jenkins and the battery by 1st Lt. Earl K. Lloyd. The move is expected to be completed by the first of the week.

Flogging Gets Gate

On 5 August, 1861, the Congress of the United States abolished flogging in the Army.

Board Will Pick Officers To Attend Senior Colleges

Washington (AFPS)—Officers attending senior service colleges in the future will be selected by a board now being formed, the Army has announced.

The Senior Service College Selection Board, composed of graduates of the National War College, the Industrial College of the Armed Forces or the Army War College, will be appointed annually.

Made up of two panels, the board normally will meet each November to make selections for the following year. One panel will name 38 principal and 15 alternate nominees to the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

The second group will select 34 principals and 12 alternates for the National War College, and 179 principal and 50 alternate students for the Army War College.

The second panel also will make selections, on the basis of invitational quotas for the Air War College, the Navy War College, British Imperial Defense College and the Canadian National Defense College.

To assure each arm and service war college representation, 25 per cent of the annual senior service college assignments — 69 student spaces—are reserved as minimum branch quotas.

Technical service branch nominations will be supplied to the board by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics.

Combat arms and administrative service lists will be furnished by the Career Management Division.

Nominations by these officials will be made in order of merit, and, additionally, will include the names of all officers not recommended who have OEI's as high or higher than the lowest officer nominated. An explanation also will be given as to why those with higher efficiency reports were not included in the nominations.

After arranging its nominees in order of merit, the second panel will decide the college the individual will attend, based on the needs of the service and previous schooling.

My Vote—Freedom's Privilege

"(Freedom) . . . is a cherished investment . . . it must ever accrue interest or wither and die."

—M/Sgt. James L. Morris, Jr., Third Place Award Winner
Marine Corps Air Station
Miami, Fla.

Master Sgt. Morris points out, in his letter for the 1955 Freedoms Foundation awards program, that freedom is something that must be lived every day. Otherwise it will grow stale with disuse.

This day-to-day freedom includes the right to vote. This year's theme, "My Vote—Freedom's Privilege," is something that no one can afford to ignore.

The top cash award for the best letter is $1,000. Armed Forces personnel, Reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty are eligible. The top winners in each of the five services, with commanding officers' approval, will be guests in Washington, D. C., for the inauguration of the President this January.

There are two second place awards of $500. Third place prizes include eighty $100 awards. Cash winners will receive the George Washington Honor Medal. Honor Medals also will be given separately.

Send your letter of no more than 500 words to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. All letters must be received by Nov. 11, 1956. (AFPS) pendents (wives, children or dependent spouses) entitled to treatment at both military and civilian facilities. Until cards are issued, present methods of identification will be used.

In this connection, the directive says:

- Dependents eligible for civilian medical care who are not living with their sponsors shall have free choice between service or local hospitals.
- Outpatient treatment at government expense will not be authorized at civilian medical facilities.
- The separate service secretaries may prescribe areas, where military facilities are considered adequate, requiring all dependents living with their sponsors to seek medical attention at Armed Forces installations.
- Any restrictions on freedom of choice will be lifted in a bona fide emergency such as a serious accident or sudden critical illness.

Dependents of active, retired or deceased members of the Armed Forces will be entitled to "available" or emergency treatment such as diagnosis, care for contagious diseases, or acute medical and surgical conditions, immunizations, or maternity and infant care, at any dispensary or hospital of the Army, Navy, Air Force or Public Health Service.

In most cases, however, they will not be hospitalized at these installations for chronic diseases, nervous or mental disorders, "elective" medical or surgical treatment or convalescent care.

Only emergency dental treatment may be obtained except in specified "remote" areas of the U. S. and outside the Z. I., where complete dental care is authorized.

Service families will continue to pay $1.75 a day in military hospitals, as in the past.

Where dependents are confined to civilian medical institutions in "semi-private" accommodations, servicemen will be charged $25, or $1.75 a day times the number of days hospitalized, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of 365 days.

When a wife or child needs hospitalization beyond one year, continued care in a civilian hospital may be authorized at government expense under the directive, or the patient may be moved to a military institution.

For outpatient treatment or services rendered at a local hospital in an accident or injury, the dependent patient will pay the first $15 of the total charges (AFPS)

Big, Little Boats Both products of soldier industry at the month-old Fort Cronkhite Crafts shop are shown above. The big boat, hull up in the background, is being built by Sfc. Jerry D. Exum, Hq. & Hq. Co., 30th Eng. Group. The finished product, 16 feet long, will carry six, have two bunks, a flying bridge and a plastic bottom. The small boat under examination is a plastic model tug built by Sp3 Clifford E. Taylor, A Battery, 441st AAA Missile Bn. Before he is through, Sp3 Taylor will have made his model completely radio controlled.

All Teleostomes, Selachians Beware! This Soldier Serious

By Sp3 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

There's a modern Noah building an ark over at the Fort Cronkhite Crafts Shop, but it's fishing, not flooding, that spurs him on.

Sfc. Jerry D. Exum, Hq. & Hq. Co., 30th Engineer Group, whose first, last and in between hobby is fishing . . . fishing . . . FISHING! . . . has half way completed a 16-foot do-it-yourself cabin cruiser that when finished will boast a flying bridge, two bunks, a plastic bottom and six passenger capacity.

So far the sergeant, with the assistance of M/Sgt. Don Batalla, Hq. & Hq. Co., 30th, has put in two 8-hour weekend days on the project. He figures two more days' work and he'll be fishing from a finished boat.

His friends, "the bums" in Hq. & Hq. Co., 30th, who have lent moral support to the project, are also eagerly awaiting the launching. Sergeant Exum plans to take out two different parties of friends and backers the first weekend he is afloat.

But he vetoes the idea of a formal christening ceremony. "Heck with that noise . . . christen 'er with water . . . we'll drink the champagne!"

Sergeant Exum, who likes every type of fishing, plans to take his yet unnamed boat to lakes, rivers, the bay and even the ocean (when the weather is calm). With its plastic bottom, he figures his boat will take most anything.

"Anyone with a little woodworking savvy can put one of these kits together," says the sergeant. "Or you could do it without any carpentry experience, but it would take a lot longer," he adds.

The initial boat kit costs $375 and contains all the wooden pieces (mostly mahogany veneer) cut to shape. Other expenses include fiberglass for the bottom, $60; steering mechanism, $39; windshields, $32; paint and varnish, $15; extra plastic wood and glue, $6.

Most likely a trailer will be needed at $119, and the boat should be powered by two 12-horse motors, $287 each; or one 25-horse motor, $489.

Add it all up and it still looks pretty reasonable next to the $1,055 that it costs to have the boat put together by the company. And this price doesn't include the plastic bottom or the steering gear.

While Sergeant Exum's project may be the biggest, it is only one of dozens of projects being tackled at the month-old Fort Cronkhite Craft Shop under the direction of Jim O'Brien.

Another project, also a boat, is a tug model now in final stages of completion. Built by Sp3 Clifford E. Taylor, A Battery, 441st AAA Missile Bn., this plastic ship measures something over two feet and will be completely radio controlled before it is finished.

Enthusiasm and appreciation for the new craft shop is voiced by Sp3 Taylor, who explains: "After pay day the guys go out and spend their money on craft materials, then at the end of the month, when they're broke, they have something to do."

92 Million Paid During 2 Years Of New Plan

Federal employees and their survivors covered under the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance program are now receiving benefits averaging more than $3,800,000 a month, the Civil Service Commission reports.

For the 2-year period between 29 August, 1954, when the program was put into effect, and 31 August, 1956, claims averaged about $4,800 each and totaled about 800 a month.

Total benefits paid to Federal employees and their families since the start of the program have almost reached $92,000,000 distributed among slightly more than 19,000 claims, the Commission said.

Of this amount, $85,104,000 was paid for life insurance claims and $6,850,000 for accidental death and dismemberment claims.

For the first 22 months of the program, California led the states with 1,801 claims for which $8,803,190 was paid out. New York was second with benefits totaling $7,221,812. One other state, Pennsylvania, also exceeded $5,000,000 in benefits paid.

The program, one of the largest in the world, is financed by withholdings from the salaries of 2,050,000 Federal employee participants and by contributions from employing agencies.

Services Set Holiday Leave; Same Policy As Last Year

The services this year will follow their previous general policy of granting either Christmas or New Year's leaves.

Commanders, however, will establish local policies to insure that holiday leaves will not interfere with necessary military operations.

The Navy has fixed 22 Dec. through 6 Jan, 1957, as the holiday period for training activities. Recruit sailors who have been in "boot camp" four weeks will be given up to 14 days' leave in lieu of leave on completion of training.

Fleet and Marine Corps units will follow the general policy where missions permit.

Army service schools and replacement centers will suspend training between 21 Dec. and 7 Jan. Trainees who have not completed basic and advanced training will be given leave normally granted at the end of the eight-week basic course.

Under this policy, recruits who began training before 30 Aug. will train 16 weeks and get leave during the Christmas holidays.

Those who began training after 30 Aug. will train until 21 Dec., be granted leave and return to complete the remaining portion of the 16-week cycle.

The same policy will apply to granting "administrative absence" to Reserve Forces Act trainees, the Army said. (AFPS)

Promotions

Only promotions above E-3 at Sixth Army Headquarters were 6 E-4 increases.

October grade increases for the whole Sixth Army include 8 E-7, 21 E-6, 3 E-5 and 890 E-4 allocations.

A total of 38,738 enlisted promotions in the top four grades were authorized Army-wide this month. A breakdown of this total by grades is: E-7, 192; E-6, 618; E-5, 2,860; E-4, 25,068.

The Army said October appointments to pay grades E-7, E-6 and E-5 may not be made in any of the following MOS's: 073, 542, 631, 715, 763, 765, 767, 942, 943, 951.

In addition, no promotions will be made in the following grades and MOS's: to pay grade E-7, 524, 553, 635, 716, 717, 764, 768; to pay grade E-6, 321, 518, 553, 635, 714, 716, 764, 912; to pay grade E-5, 321, 518, 524, 643, 714, 768.

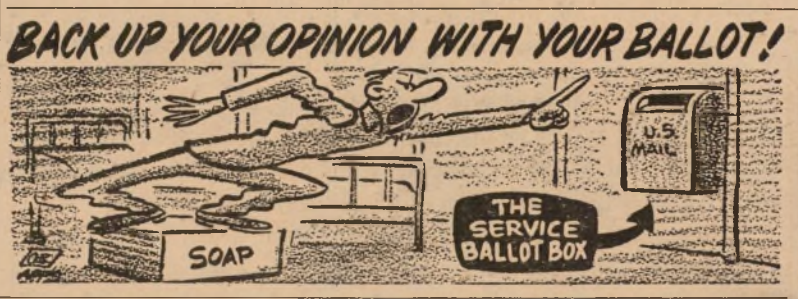
Brucker Hits Any Let Down Of Defenses

Washington — In a recent speech before high-ranking officers and dignitaries, Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker, hit hard at the constant communist threat and warned against letting our defenses down.

The Secretary said, "In evaluating the world situation today, how could any reasonable person conclude that the seriousness of the communist threat has abated, despite the new emphasis Soviet leaders choose to place upon 'parliamentary procedures' to attain their ends? The communists have ample reason to know that the Free World will not be intimidated by force.



"They apparently have come to the realization that their military threats and overt aggression have served only to cement the free nations into the most powerful structure of collective defense ever erected. Accordingly, they have elected to change their strategy for the moment, and have put on a mantle of pseudo-benevolence. We must not allow ourselves to be deceived.

Mr. Brucker continued, "Whatever devious course the communists may choose to follow, we can be sure their goal remains unchanged — the complete subjugation of the whole world to the communist tyranny. How could America afford to let down her guard in any particular?

"In addition to the military aspects, the communists use every weapon of subversion, propaganda and duplicity as a tool of conquest. They attack on every flank. We must not forget that our ability to build and maintain the military power which will see us safely through this age of peril is founded upon America's spiritual strength, our economic integrity, and the soundness of our government." Army Develops Smallest Radar

Smoke, darkness or fog won't prevent the future Army from knowing what's happening on future battlefields, thanks to the world's smallest known radar set recently developed by the Sperry Gyroscope Company.

The new, extremely lightweight, portable unit has a range of 6,000 yards. Self-contained in a drum-shaped metal case, the set measures 14 inches high and 14 inches long. Power is supplied by a lightweight motor generator that is easily transportable on foot by one member of a two-man observation team.

Lightness and ruggedness are attained by eliminating a cathode ray tube and substituting audible signals. The set produces sounds of distinctive character when contact is made with a vehicle or soldier, permitting the operator to detect enemy movement.

The set, which weighs about 85 pounds, has already been field-tested. It was originally developed and produced by Sperry working with the Signal Corps engineering laboratories, Fort Monmouth, N. J,. and the Army Electronics Proving Ground, Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Later production models will be parachuted with other special equipment during jump flight exercises of the reactivated 101st Airborne Division.

Of Ghosts, Ghouls and Witches!

'Trick or Treat' Time!

Ghosts and ghouls, werewolves and witches, and all the strange, unmentioned creatures who fly in the night will soon invade the world of the mortal. For Halloween, the evening of 31 Oct., is almost upon us.

Halloween is also the time of ringing doorbells, practical pranks and the age-old custom of "trick or treat."

On beggars' holidays some 400 years ago, according to the National Geographic Society, needy persons called on their more fortunate neighbors chanting:

"A soul cake, a soul cake, have mercy on all Christian souls for a soul cake." Prayers were offered in return for gifts.

As time passed, the promise of prayers was dropped and the beggars gave way to children eager for apples, nuts or other goodies. But householders were still roused with the old song:

"Soul, soul, an apple or two,
"If you haven't an apple a pear will do.
"One for Peter, two for Paul,
"Three for the Man who made us all."

Halloween parties for Bay Area servicemen and women patrons of the San Francisco USO clubs include a Halloween Hi Jinks costume party at the NCCS-USO, 70 Oak Street, Wednesday evening, 31 October, at 2030 hours.

Following the Wednesday night party at the NCCS-USO will be a Sunday night Come As You Like Spooks Dance at the Embarcadero YMCA-USO, 166 Embarcadero from 2000 to 2300 hours. A Halloween Scavenger hunt takes place at the same club Tuesday, 30 October at 1900.

At the YWCA-USO, 966 Embarcadero on Friday, 26 October, at 2100 hours, there will be a Graveyard Bounce Halloween costume dance. Monday night, 29 October, there will be a Pumpkin carving contest beginning at 1930, and a Halloween Hoedown party on the following Wednesday evening at 1930 hours.

Presidio servicemen and enlisted women are cordially invited to attend all Halloween social events planned in their honor by the Bay Area USO Clubs.

Children of military personnel at the Presidio and outlying areas are being hosted by Post Special Services with two giant Halloween parties, one at the main Post theater, another at the Fort Barry Theater, on the afternoon of 27 October at 1400 hours.

Boys and girls in the age groups from 1 to 12 are invited to attend the parties which will cater to those from Letterman Army Hospital, Presidio, Fort Baker, Fort Barry, West Portal, and Fort Cronkhite.

A contest will be held at each theater for the most appropriate, most original and most horrible costume, with prizes awarded in each case.

Part of the program, which includes favors and candy for the children, will be devoted to the showing of movie cartoons.

Transportation to and from the Halloween parties is being provided by parents and friends of the children.

. . . and coffee too!

A show, home-made cakes and coffee are being presented at the Presidio Service Club Sunday night, 28 October, for servicemen attending the club.

Sponsored by the B'nai B'rith, San Francisco Chapter 1, the show carries such popular stars as Walter Hinton, baritone; Lee Hampl, pianist; Lindsey Oullette, dancer; the Apostolis Brothers; Terry and Penny Worth; Elsi Narwood; the Parodi Sisters, and the Masonettes, a fine dance line which opens and closes the performance.

Enroll Now For Educational Classes

Offering courses in General Science and American History-Government, the second quarter of on-post evening high school classes will begin 13 and 14 November.

The semester for four classes leading to a high school diploma is taught in eight-week sessions of two classes each. Courses in English and Mathematics which ended recently will be presented again in January, followed eight weeks later by a repeat in General Science and American History-Government.

Taught by San Francisco public school teachers, each class meets from 1800 to 2100 hours two nights a week in Building 563.

By completing the four courses and passing the General Educational Development (GED) tests, military personnel and veterans can earn diplomas either from the San Francisco public school system or from their home towns.

Minimum Department of Army goals require all NCO's and specialists to obtain a high school diploma or its Army equivalent.

The eight-week classes are open to the public at large as well as to military personnel. Civilians, however, must coordinate their registration with the San Francisco adult education system.

Further information may be obtained by calling Presidio Army Education Center, Bldg. 232, Ext. 4449 or 2974.

movie previews

In REPRISAL, Guy Madison is seen as a stranger in a town that hates strangers. He is a man who rages against injustice where no man ever before raised his voice. Even though he wants to live his own life, quietly and unassumingly, he finds he must run with the pack, or be destroyed. The road he chooses leads neither to conformity nor to destruction, but only because of two women who join in the fight to save him.

D-DAY, THE SIXTH OF JUNE presents Robert Taylor in a bittersweet romance with a beautiful English girl whom he meets on the eve of the invasion of France. Interwoven also are the rejected hero-lover and the bombastic Army superior whose doubts conquer him in the minus hours.

TENSION AT TABLE ROCK gives a story of the early 1870s, when the scars of the Civil War have just begun to heal and the post-war restlessness hangs heavy over the country. Small bands of Robin Hood bandits ride the barren plains, spawning the lawlessness and fear that gives birth to the adventure in the story. It is a unique picture told with insight and understanding of man's character.

DEATH OF A SCOUNDREL shows George Sanders as a ruthless financial genius who accomplishes daring manipulations in the world of Finance, and uses people as long as they can help him make his fortune. After several financial escapades, he decides, at long last, to return the money to those from whom he stole it. In a later struggle he is mortally wounded and pleads for forgiveness but dies without it.

Servicewomen Feted

DAR Group Holds O Club Luncheon

A group of women who, in wartime, have worn their country's uniform on active service in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, and who are also members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, met for luncheon on Saturday, 20th October, in the Anza room of the Presidio Officers Club.

A centerpiece of small white chrysanthemums and blue delphinium carried out the colors of the D. A. R., and at each place was a small nosegay of white daisies and blue bachelor buttons, tied with narrow red, white and blue ribbon.

A special guest was Lt. Colonel Ruth S. Reece of the WAC Recruiting Service who brought the former service women up to date on women's activities in the peacetime Army.

Among those attending the luncheon were Mrs. Anne Smart and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Harlan, Jr., of Sausalito, Ensign Nancy Slayton, USNR, Mrs. Avis Y. Brownlee, Mrs. Anna Blake Mezquida, Mrs. Faith Tabor Brann of Sacramento, and Mrs. John W. Winkley of Walnut Creek. (AYB)

Teeners To Vote

A busy electiion night jamboree is anticipated at the Teenage Club this evening when members are asked to cast their votes for club President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Board of Governors. The customary small chatter and dancing to the juke box recordings prevails after the last vote is in.

Ping pong, pool, checkers and numerous cash prizes are on the club agenda tomorrow evening when the club opens at 2030 hours.

Military Nite!

2800 Oakleys To Local Servicemen

Free passes to the Grand National Livestock Exposition in San Francisco are available to military personnel of the Presidio through the Post Special Services officer or the local USO clubs.

Opening night, 2 November, has been declared Military Personnel Night and the USO has been given 2800 tickets to the performance through courtesy of the Grand National manager.

The passes (cost $2.50) are free to servicemen and women wearing uniform. Such guests of the exposition may bring their wives, family, or guests, by obtaining extra passes and paying 50 cents for each additional admittance.

Tickets to the livestock exposition will be available at the Bay Area USO clubs on a first come, first served basis.

USO clubs are located at 166 Embarcadero, 966 Market Street, 70 Oak Street, and 3200 California Street.

Need Pipers!

Musicians are needed by the Sixth Army Pipe Band as replacements for those leaving the military service during the coming months. Preference is given to men having experience in pipe music and it is necessary for applicants to be able to read music.

The Pipe Band also has a few vacancies for clarinetists. Further openings are expected to occur in the band during January, February and March of the coming year.

Prospective Pipe Band members are asked to call CWO Louis Ferraro, extension 3482.

Army Symphony Seeks Musicians

Attention musicians! The Seventh Army Symphony Orchestra in Europe has "urgent and continuing requirements for qualified musicians," according to Sixth Army Circular number 9-27.

They want you—without regard to present primary MOS—if you are POR qualified and have civilian training, professional experience and outstanding instrumental proficiency.

The civilian training must have been at an accredited conservatory or college of music. Professional experience would mean service with any publicly recognized symphony orchestra, radio station orchestra or theater orchestra.

Commanders are requested by circular 9-27 to screen their command for enlisted men qualified in accordance to the above standards. Individuals are to be screened by a Warrant Officer bandleader assigned to a TOE Army Band or a Warrant Officer serving as an Area Band Supervisor.

"Enlisted men meeting qualifications . . . will be reported immediately subsequent to the auditioning and test procedures . . . on a non periodic basis," the circular stated. The report will be forwarded to Sixth Army Headquarters, ATN: AMAGP-1V (Exempt report para. 17i, AR 335-15) and will contain name, grade, SN, PMOS, ETS, present organization and instrumental specialty.

4 Army Champions WinOlympicBerths In SF Ring Tryouts

By Sp3 Walt Heil

Star Presidian Sports Editor

In a blaze of fistic glory, two Army junior officers and a pair of enlisted men won berths on the United States Olympic Games boxing team last week before an enthusiastic crowd of 10,000 ring fans in San Francisco's Cow Palace.

Currently preparing at Oakland Army Terminal for the trip to Melbourne, Australia, next month are Lieutenants Tom Rademacher and Pearce Lane, Sp2 Jim Boyd and Pfc. Jose Torres, who fought their way into the Olympics with flashing fists and skillful ring tactics.

With four men on the squad, the Army thus dominates the ten-man team, which also includes one Airman, one Marine and four other boxers from college and AAU ranks.

In addition, four soldiers were also named as alternates to what has been termed the greatest U.S. team in Olympic history. The alternates include Francis Okuda, Lionel Rivera, Edward Crook and Dick Lee.

Thus, eight of the 15 Army team members who entered the three-day tryouts succeeded, or almost succeeded, in achieving their goal.

ALTERNATES STAY BEHIND

The alternates, however, are not assured of trip tickets to the Land Down Under. They will train with those who are making plans for the trip, but will stay behind unless a team member is injured or becomes ill.

The alternates are keeping their fingers crossed. They know that often a cut or injury will bar a fighter from entering the ring. And they are also aware that some team members had trouble making the weight for their respective divisions.

Boyd's bid to gain a Games berth was most sensational among the four soldier triumphs in the finals.

Decked for eight counts in the first and second rounds, the Third Army's hard hitting lightheavy came up with a rousing flurry late in the second stanza to earn a TKO triumph over University of Wisconsin's Orville Pitts.

Boyd, determined to see Australia, scored heavily to Pitts' head and followed up with a withering blow to his foe's midsection. But it was a smashing left to Pitts' eye that won Boyd the trip.

He opened a huge gash over the collegian's left eye and, with that as a target, hammered away. During the one-minute intermission, the examining physician ruled that further combat would possibly worsen the cut and prohibited Pitts from coming out for the third round.

Torres, Lane and Rademacher, playing cautious since they felt themselves virtually assured of making the team, scored unanimous decisions over their opponents.

Lane, battling Syracuse University's Robert Rigolosi in the 148 pound division, plodded to victory in a slow bout. Scoring occasionally, Lane bloodied the collegian's nose in the second and flicked lefts at his head to pile up a winning margin.

Torres found fellow Army team member Crook a difficult proposition. Crook, who walloped his semifinal foe to the canvas and sent him to the hospital with a slight brain concussion, rode his bicycle throughout the bout.

Boring in, Torres, on occasion, was able to hit the elusive Crook, but for the most part shuffled around the ring trying to corner him. Torres never succeeded.

WAITS TILL THIRD

Rademacher waited until the third round before he opened his attack against Idaho State's Harold Epsy in a battle of heavyweights.

The collegian accidentally butted Rademacher. Seemingly angered, the balding Fort Benning stationed lieutenant began scoring heavily. His flurry was enough to convince the judges he was the better man.

A sixth Army boxer, Dick Lee, from USAREUR, lost to Roger Rouse in 1:34 via a TKO in the first round of their 165 pound battle. Lee was severely clobbered and never even hit his man before having his Olympic dream shattered.

In the semifinals, all six of the Army's finalists scored wins, with four putting their opponents away prior to the scheduled three-round end.

Lane scored a KO over Gilliam McLane in 1:13 of the second and Torres backed William Rooks into a corner and toppled him in 1:53 of the first.

Crook made short work of Vince Ferguson in 1:10 of the second. Ferguson, working on a 51 victory skein, was caught by a powerful blow and, like a tree, dropped to the canvas. His head hit outside the ropes with a brutal thump, and, as anxious officials hovered over his inert form, he was revived and taken to the hospital to recover from the concussion he suffered.

Lee earned a decision over Paul Wright. Boyd, who grunts loudly when firing away, stunned Ronald Freeman with a hook to the stomach and went on to TKO him in the third heat.

Rademacher won a characteristically slow victory over Joe Hemphill.

Ring Glory

There was action aplenty in the Cow Palace as the Olympic Games boxing committee staged its three-day ring tryouts last week. Four Army boxers (shown below) earned Melbourne trip tickets. But some fell by the wayside. In picture above, Jose Torres shoots a left at fellow soldier Edward Crook in their middleweight bout. Torres, as picture shows, never caught elusive Crook, who rode bicycle throughout bout, but earned decision.

Hq. Sixth Army, 549th Near Presidio Intra Grid Crowns

Headquarters Company Sixth Army and the 549th Engineer Company continued their sizzling Intramural Football League pace this week—apparently headed for a showdown battle for the Presidio championship.

Fired up by the pin-point passing of Jim Compton, the 549th rolled to its fifth straight victory, 18-0, over the 537th Engineers to remain the lone unbeaten team in the Western League at Fort Scott.

Compton, whose aerial thrusts have paced the Engineers all season, fired two more against the 537th and added a pass interception for good measure.

He passed to Roy Sharrock for one TD in a play that covered ten yards and then to Ed Sage for another score late in the contest. Compton's toss to Sage was a 20-yard effort.

Early in the going, Compton started his team off to the victory when he intercepted an enemy pass and returned it 70 yards into the end zone.

The 549th has two games to play before it can call the title its own. The team tangles with the 99th Engineers Tuesday and completes the season against the always dangerous Honor Guard, currently tied for second place with the 542nd Engineers, 2 November.

Headquarters Company Sixth Army, meanwhile, scored its fifth straight win in the Western League by administering a 26-0 beating to the 163rd Military Police Company, previously unbeaten.

Scoring three TDs in the final period, Headquarters spread its touchdown parade evenly among four gridders.

On the receiving of Carl Stabile and Gordon Peaks aerials were Keith Weesner, Bob Kircher, Gary Ruiter and Jerry Wilson. Commended for his rugged line play was John Young.

The Headquarters gridders wrapped up their season against the Teenagers, ever hustling dependents of Presidio military personnel, Wednesday.

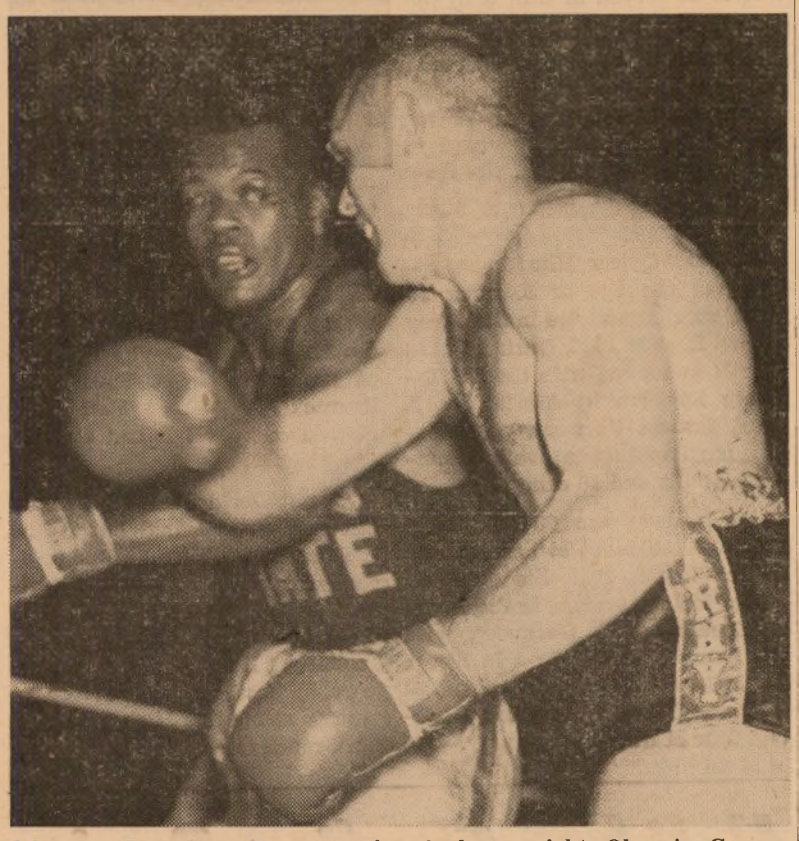
The Headquarters squad rolled to its sixth straight and virtually clinched the title Wednesday by crushing the Teenagers, 34-14. Known for their potent passing attack, the Headquarters gridders stuck mainly to the ground since the Teenagers were prepared for the air game.

Again, the touchdowns were well divided. Stabile took the only pass for a TD and also ran 15 yards for a second. Peaks tallied twice on runs of 25 and 15 yards.

Young returned an intercepted pass 50 yards into the end zone.

The MPs came up with their third victory of the campaign at the expense of the Teenagers, 21-20. Don Baike unleashed a three-touchdown binge, firing twice to Ray Hoylman and once to Joe Sullivan for scores.

Presidio Headquarters Company continued on its comeback victory trail by walloping Explosion Ordnance Demolition, 21-3, in the week's other Eastern League game.



In other Western League contests, the Honor Guard grabbed its third straight by downing the 21st Engineers, 21-7; the 542nd clipped the 99th Engineers, 20-12, and the 21st edged Headquarters Company 30th Group, 13-12.

Baseball Boss Named

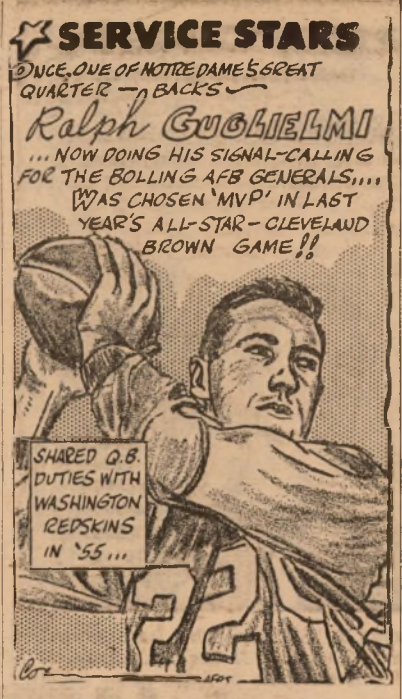
By Armed Forces Press Service

Air Force Sgt. Walt Koziatek of Johnson AB, Japan, has been named by the Far East Command as manager-coach of the U.S. Armed Forces baseball team which will play an Australian amateur squad at the 1956 Olympics at Melbourne. Koziatek, called the Casey Stengel of the Far East, piloted the 1953-54 Johnson teams to the FEAF championship. . . . In its first three games the Air Force Academy's football team racked up 147 points to the opposition's 27. . . . The National Hockey League is now in its 40th season. . . . A recent survey indicates that 65 per cent of major league ball players follow boxing.

In the 1954 meeting between Penn State and Holy Cross, Rip Engle opened the "gates of mercy" and cleaned his bench in an effort to keep the score down—but his Nittany Lions downed the Crusaders, 39-7. After the game the following conversation took place at midfield between Engle and Crusader coach, Dr. Eddie Anderson. Dr. Anderson: "Thanks, Rip!" Engle: "We didn't need that last TD, Eddie, but I couldn't stop those kids." Dr. Anderson: "That's all right, Rip, you see, my kids insisted on you having it!" Wonder what the two coaches had to say after Penn State's 43-0 victory this season?

Former University of Southern California place-kicking expert, Sam Tsagalakis, has joined the Bluejacket eleven at San Diego NTC, Calif. Between 1951 and 1954 Sam's "educated toe" accounted for 75 points — 54 conversions and seven field goals. Sam's 5'7", 152-lb. frame keeps him out of daily scrimmages. His sessions consist of kicking, kicking and more kicking. . . . Pvt. Robert Callahan, formerly the youngest city councilman in Norwalk (Conn.) history at 25, is now coaching football at Ft. Dix, N. J.

First Lt. Willard Ikola of McClellan AFB, Calif., the outstanding ice hockey goalie in the 1956 Winter Olympics, is now in Boston trying out for the U.S. team which will play in the International Hockey Tournament in February 1957 . . . Football fans at Pensacola NAS, Fla., are excited about the Goshawks' new halfback, Corky Tharp. The first time the former University of Alabama halfback got his hands on the ball he romped 40 yards for a TD against Ft. Benning, Ga. . . . Vito DeVito is Yale's new freshman basketball coach, and Joe Vancisin is the Elis' new varsity cage coach. During WWII, DeVito played for the Ft. Devens, Mass., five, which was coached by Vancisin at the time. Isn't it a small world?



Don Albert, 1956 All-Marine and Inter-Service golf champion, recently dethroned defending champion Al Greer for the Paradise Point links title at Camp LeJeune, N. C. Albert downed his teammate, 3 and 2. . . . Marine Corps shooters walked off with 71 out of 73 trophies and medals at the first annual U.S. Fleet Activities Invitational Rifle and Pistol Meet at Yokosuka, Japan. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine marksmen toed the firing line in the three-day event. . . . The Ft. Polk, La., pistol team won 31 medals in the recent Louisiana state pistol matches.

Sp3 Robert K. Miller scored 4923 points in the five events of the modern pentathlon to best Navy Lieutenant (j.g.) William Andre and George Lambert, New York Athletic Club.

Andre finished second with 4853 points, while Lambert closed out the competition with 4610.

Army Second Lieutenant Jack T. Daniels was named alternate when Marine Master Sergeant William Knuppel failed to score enough points in the riding event to capture fourth place. Knuppel fell 172 points short of Daniels' 4421 total.

Miller tallied 1000 points in fencing with a first place finish; 1000 in swimming; 973 in running; 900 in shooting and 1050 in riding.

The team will remain at Fort Sam Houston for training until Wednesday and then depart for Los Angeles before leaving for Melbourne, Australia and the games.

Post Cage Action On Upswing

Action on the Presidio basketball front—relatively quiet for a month—opened with a bang this week.

Seventeen teams got the season under way by starting play in the post pre-season intramural tournament in the Letterman Army Hospital gym.

The two-week season, something new originated by the sports office, opened Wednesday with D Battery, 752nd AAA Battalion, going against Headquarters Company, 30th Group, and B Battery, 752nd, meeting the 163rd MP Company.

Headquarters 30th Group and the 163rd MPs advanced to the second round by virtue of opening round wins.

The Engineers whipped D Battery, 44-26, while the MPs downed B Battery, 16-9, in a game called during the third quarter when the AAA unit was called from the floor because of an alert.

The tournament has been organized to encourage units to form teams and to get players in physical condition for actual league play which gets under way in mid-November.

Favorites in the tournament include the 30th Group club, the MP team and the 21st Engineers.

The outcome of the tournament will have no bearing on league play, Hal Fischer, Presidio sports director, said.

The WAC basketballers got their season under way yesterday by meeting the Parks Air Force Base WAFS in Letterman gym in a practice encounter.

On the varsity basketball front, meanwhile, activities, too, are perking up.

The Toreros, defending champions in the Army-Air Force League, tangle with the Oakland All-Stars in a scrimmage affair Monday in the LAH gym at 7:30 p. m. The All-Stars are a collection of former East Bay college, junior college and high school hoopsters.

Fischer apparently has settled on his first string, with Carroll Williams, Ron Reynoir, Norm Ellenberger, John Blackwell and John Daniels slated to assume the brunt of battle in most games.

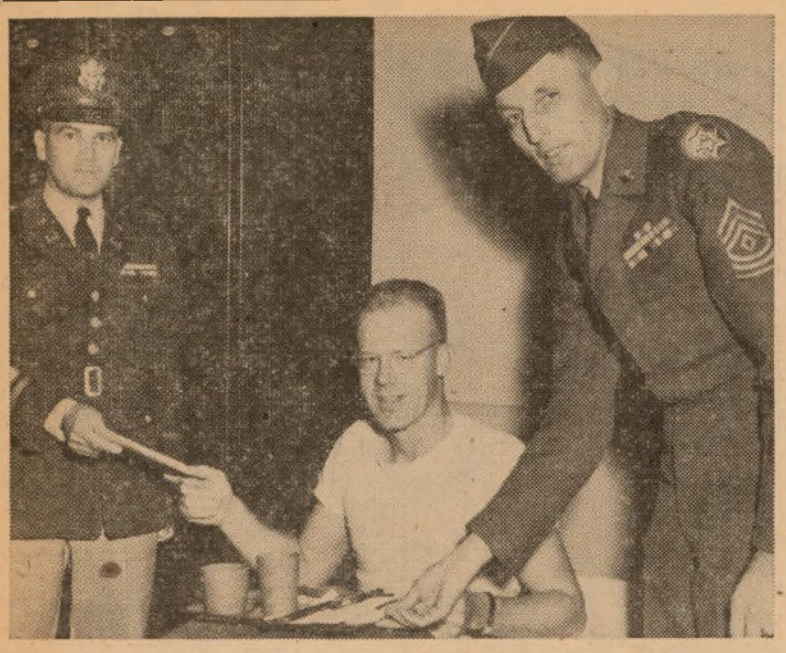
The Presidio headman feels this squad to be more balanced and effective than the team he led last year, which revolves around stars Don Lofgran and Mike O'Neil.

150 Fencers Duel In LAH

Fencers from all points of the Pacific Coast gathered at Letterman Army Hospital's Sports Center last week to compete for gold, silver and bronze medals in the art of fencing.

The "Fencing Medics" of Letterman Army Hospital played host to the first annual Letterman Invitational Fencing Meet. More than 150 fencing enthusiasts registered for competition in foil, sabre, and epee.

The epee event, with 46 entrants, started off the meet at 10 a.m. Saturday. John MacDougal of Stanford University emerged the victor and was presented a gold medal by William O'Brien, in charge of the fencing program at Letterman Army Hospital.



Al Lambert, Berkeley Fencing Club, took the second place medal and Dures De Jung, Los Angeles Athletic Club, finished third.

Forty-eight men and 26 women were entered in the foil events. Jerry Biagini of the Olympic Club gained the advantage over the field of foilmen. Al Lambert again finished second and Jack Baker, Olympic Club, was third with Jose Tafoya, Letterman, fourth.

In the women's foil events, the two top-ranked women fencers on the Pacific Coast finished in a tie for the gold medal.

Tommie Angell, number one, defeated Shirley Cantor of Letterman, ranked number two, in a fence-off to take first place. Mary Huddleson of Halberstadt Fencing Academy won the third place medal.

Sunday's sabre competition also ended in a tie. Fred Duncan of Faulkeners of Hollywood and Jack Baker of the Olympic Club both won an equal number of bouts in regular competition. Duncan won the fence-off.

Contented Donor is Sp3 Thomas L. Manley, who here munches breakfast in bed at Hq. & Hq. Company, 30th Engineer Group. Sp3 Manley attained this enviable position after topping all donors to the Bay Area Crusade with a gift of three days' pay. On the left his Company Commander, Capt. A. L. Alonzo, hands him an additional bonus of a three-day pass. First Sergeant James C. Coleman serves the breakfast. Announcement of this unusual incentive award spurred company contributions to a 50 per cent increase, says the CO, who anticipates a possibility of exceeding the 100 per cent mark.

Presidio's UBAC Drive Enters Home Stretch; Strong Finish Needed!

A stepped-up program to stimulate the final phase of Presidio contributions to the Bay Area Fund Crusade forced the mercury through the gauge this week to point at 84.8 per cent of the established goal. The encouraging five-point gain was achieved through a motor cavalcade appeal made on civilian paydays by enlisted women and civilian employes of the headquarters.

Practically all Army units here, either through outright completed contribution or pledges made to be collected over the last and the coming payday, have come close to writing a highly satisfactory finish to their part of the fund drive goal.

In the hands of the Post Funds custodian this week, therefore, was the sum of $25,593.87 and pledges to the amount of $4,555.44. Total in both cash and incompleted pledges adds up to $30,149.31.

Lauding the fine work by unit committeemen, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, called for an outstanding effort during the final phase of the campaign. "Most of you are doing a fine job, but there seems to be a reluctance on the part of a few of our committeemen to keep trying the weak spots. To keep after the 'fair share' minimum of a day's pay. Set a 'day's pay for everyone' as your goal and give every member of your unit another chance to donate a 'fair share.' Do this and the success of our campaign is assured."

Only 16 points lacking in the $36,015.00 kick-off potential set at the fund drive's inception here, the Presidio appeal for money and payment of pay-as-you-go pledges will end on the coming payday, 31 October.

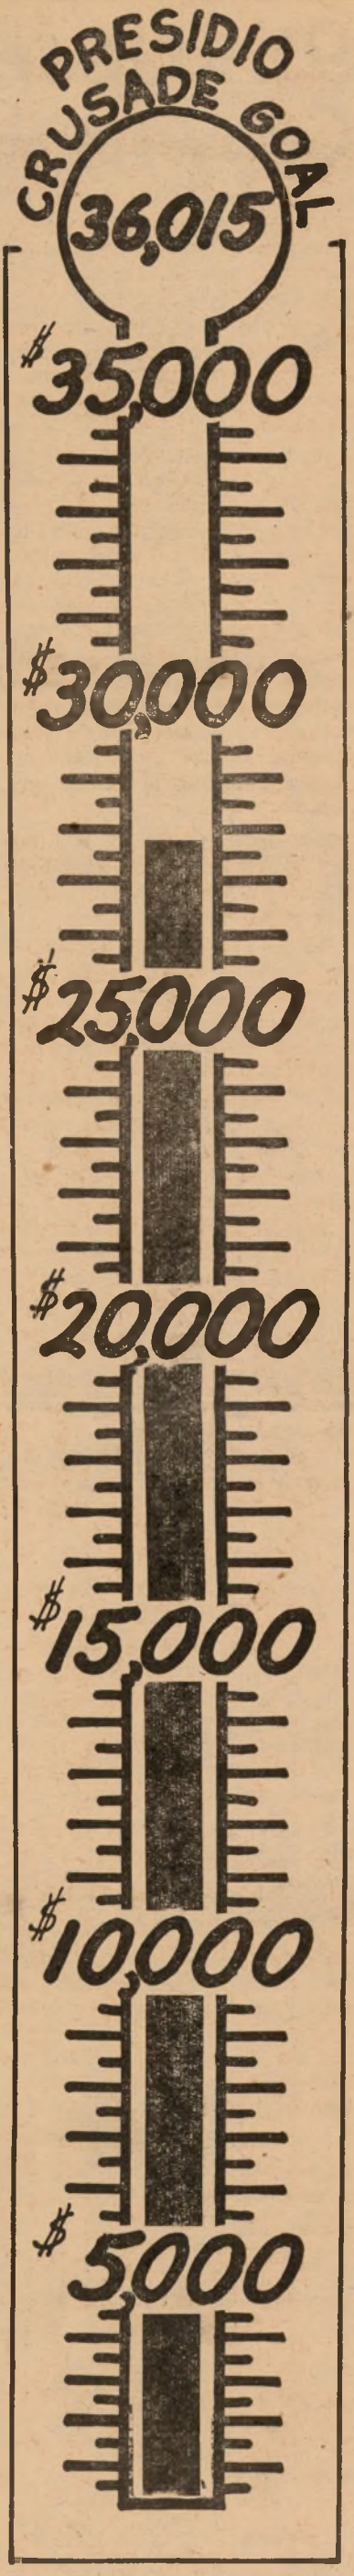
Midpoint tally in the Bay Area Crusade shows the Army leading other major services in percentage of quota filled. The record shows: Army, 74.9; Navy, 64.5, and Air Force 60.0 per cent of quota filled.

However, the Coast Guard has surpassed all other services with a phenomenal "give" of 104.4 per cent of quota.

Total donation to date for the Army comes to $69,625. The Navy has given $205,817, and the Air Force, $31,371. The Coast Guard's donation to date is $5,378. The Marines have donated $4,930 which is 39 per cent of their quota.

The Armed Forces Division as a whole has filled 65.7 per cent of its quota with donations totalling $316,581. This percentage puts the Military ahead of all other divisions in the Bay Area.

How About This!



Many pundits have voiced opinions on the Army's seeming inability to place round pegs in round holes. However, the Army has just picked two officers for jobs that should end once and for all these critics faultfinding.

Major Walter E. Deaux (pronounced "dough") of the Office, Chief of Finance, has been named Army Savings Bond Promotion Officer. Assigned as his counterpart within The Adjutant General's Corps is Major Carl V. Cash. (ANS)

Wins $200 Award

For her sustained superior performance of duty, Mrs. Esther I. Henderson, statistical division, Comptroller Office, was recently presented a check for $200 and a DA Performance Award Certificate by Lt. Col. Frank E. Garden, Assistant Comptroller, Headquarters Sixth Army.

Incentive awards, granted through the local Army Incentive Awards committee, are based upon employe contributions which may result in monetary savings or other less tangible benefits to the government.

Crusade fever was on the rise this week as military personnel neared the 100 per cent mark in the annual campaign, however, civilian pledges were still lagging. A concerted drive is under way to bring all contributions up to the "fair share" quota, which has been set as a day's pay for each contributor.

was assigned to the Office of the Judge Advocate General in Washington for two years prior to reporting to the Presidio in July, 1955, for duty as Staff Judge Advocate of Sixth Army.

CWO Arndt began a 26-year Army career when in December, 1920, he enlisted in the Army in North Dakota. Prior to World War II, he served at various posts in the United States and in Panama until 1937. After a five year break in service, he re-entered the Army as a Warrant Officer. During World War II he served in Iran with the Services of Supply.

Since the war, he has served in the United States, Guam and Germany. He was assigned to Sixth Army Headquarters for duty with the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, in May, 1955.

Warrant Officer Hinrichsen, retiring at the age of 35 after 20 years' service, enlisted in the Army at Fort Bliss in 1936. During World War II he served with the 3rd Infantry Division in Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Germany and Austria, participating in five amphibious assaults and 10 campaigns.

Assigned to the 60th Military Police Detachment at the Presidio in September, 1955, his post-war duties include service in the Army of Occupation in Germany, with the Army of Occupation in Korea in 1947-48, at various posts in Western United States and a second tour of duty in Germany.

Col. John H. Derrick

Sergeant Coombs joined the Army in 1933 and has 22 years' service to his credit. Prior to World War II, he served with the 30th Infantry Regiment here at the Presidio, at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., at Fort McDowell on Angel Island and in the Philippines.

During World War II, he saw action on Guadalcanal Island and on New Georgia Island in the Solomons with the 43rd Infantry Division. Since then he has served in the Western United States and in Germany. During the past two years, he has been an R.O.T.C. instructor at Mission High School in San Francisco.

Holiday Goodies Begin Long Trip Overseas

The Bay Area Army Terminal Center wraps up its Christmas package for Army and Air Force personnel overseas in the Pacific Ocean Area this week with the shipment of 300,000 pounds of turkey for Korea, Okinawa, and Southern Japan.

Hundreds of crates of the succulent fowl, traditional pièce de résistance of Thanksgiving and Christmas feasts wherever Americans gather, went aboard the Pacific Far East Lines' SURPRISE at the Terminal Center's Army Reefer Dock (ARDOK) at Alameda.

With the stowage of the carefully selected birds in the refrigerated holds of the C-2 reefer ship, the west coast terminals of Pacific Transportation Terminal Command completed their phase of the gigantic logistics problem of placing the holiday meal mother used to make on the mess tables of defense bases in Japan, Korea, Okinawa, the Philippines and other Pacific areas.

In all, the PTTC terminals shipped approximately 1,200,000 pounds of holiday turkeys requisitioned by the oversea commands through the Army Oversea Supply Agency at Fort Mason.

In shipments that began in August for non-perishable items and in mid-September for those needing refrigeration, the Army terminals sent out additional thousands of pounds of shrimp, candy, nuts, fruitcake, pumpkin, mincemeat, olives, cranberry sauce and other holiday foodstuffs.

The shipment of candy alone totaled over 300,000 pounds and of fruitcake nearly 100,000 pounds. Pumpkin went in cans to the tune of 50,000 and mincemeat in cans and jars totaling 20,000, all king-size.

Oversea Supply Agency started work on the Thanksgiving-Christmas feasts last spring by assembling and distributing the overseas orders. Army Quartermaster Marketing Centers, such as the one at Alameda, next took over to purchase and to assemble the supplies. Then schedules were set up for deliveries to the Army Transportation Corps' western tidewater terminals where they were stowed aboard cargo and reefer ships for the movement overseas.

The Thanksgiving and Christmas menus are standard throughout the Army and servicemen will sit down to the same holiday meal whether stationed in Berlin, Tokyo, Thule, Inchon or San Francisco.

Engineer Unit Departs For Middle East Duties

Destination Mideast! Members of 30th Engineer Group get seated in an Air Force transport for a flight to Libya. This advance party will prepare the way for engineers who will spend next two or three years mapping the country's desert areas under terms of an agreement with the Libyan Government. Main party—traveling by transport and aircraft carrier—is scheduled to leave this month. Map at right shows Libya's proximity to current Mideast situation.

Map Project Sends Locals To Hot Spot

An advance party from the 30th Engineer Group has left here on a mapping mission to Libya, a North African desert country located between Egypt and Tunisia. The main engineer force is scheduled to leave Fort Scott sometime this month to take part in the two- or three-year project.

This movement, the result of an agreement with the Libyan government to perform geodetic surveying for mapping control, has no connection with the current situation in the Middle East.

A major portion of the work will consist of a geodetic tieup between Egypt and Tunisia which means that the troops will spend most of the time in the northern section of Libya. Approximately 50,000 miles of high order triangulation is expected to be done before completion of this phase of the project.

Units of the 30th Group, commanded by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, making the trip are the 329th Engineer Detachment (Geodetic Survey), 542nd Engineer Furlough Rates Extended; Plan Holiday Trips Early!

Army personnel traveling in uniform by coach may still take advantage of special reduced rail rates providing they show their furlough papers when they purchase their tickets.

Soldiers benefit from this special fare plan, which will remain in effect until 31 January, 1957, in two ways. First they pay a reduced rate and, secondly, they do not have to pay the federal tax. Tickets purchased in this manner are good for 90 days.

This Furlough Coach Excursion Fare is not applicable from San Francisco to the West Coast cities of Los Angeles, Seattle, Spokane or Portland, because service personnel have access to even cheaper rates with the Special Coach 18 Day Return Trip Fare. Under this plan, for instance, the normal $23.45 round trip fare to Los Angeles would cost only $15.30.

"If you're anticipating a trip come in and see us," invites Mrs. Lyn Rubenstein, chief of the Post Transportation passenger branch, "We'll give you all the figures and place the reservations for you."

Best time to visit Post Transportation for help with rail or air reservations is in the morning on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, says Mrs. Rubenstein.

These fare reductions apply to not only every uniformed member of the Armed Forces but also to the several thousand foreign military students now on duty in the United States. The reduced fares also include regular stopover and baggage privileges.

Eye and Ear combine forces against the enemy with a new radar device developed by the Sperry Gyroscope Co. Formerly, the Army used a radarscope or screen to indicate movement of enemy troops picked up via radar. With the Sperry device, an all-weather radar "eye" spots the enemy and relays the information by sound into headphones worn by one man of a two-man observation team. The radarscope has been eliminated in the new unit which weighs 25 pounds and is 14 inches high and 14 inches long. The unit's motor-generator can be carried by one person.

VA Says:

Vets May Earn Any $$ Amount

Veterans attending school under the Korean GI Bill may earn any amount of money outside of class without jeopardizing their monthly GI allowances, according to Mr. J. Glenn Corbitt, Manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office at San Francisco.

Outside earnings need not be reported to the VA.

Korea veterans taking on-the-job training are confronted with an income ceiling when training wages, plus GI allowance, exceed $310 a month. In such cases VA will adjust the allowance to bring the total within the $310 limit.

New AAA Commander

New Commander Named To Head 30th AAA Group

By M/Sgt. John I. Beck
30th Group PIO NCO

Fort Barry—Colonel Daniel A. Ranney has been assigned as commanding officer of the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group at Fort Barry, Calif., succeeding Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, who has received orders for duty in the Office of the Secretary of Defense in Washington, D. C.

Colonel Ranney was born in Nome, Alaska, in 1908, but considers Seattle, Washington, as his home town, for he graduated from the West Seattle High School.

His military career began with graduation from the University of Washington, in 1930, when he was awarded a Bachelor of Science Degree, and commissioned a second lieutenant in the United States Army.

The young lieutenant assumed his first command, a Civilian Conservation Corps unit in Fort Lewis, Washington, where he served as company commander.

DA Defers Some Reserves From NG, AR Activation

A majority of additional reserve component units have been temporarily deferred from their scheduled activation into National Guard and Army Reserve units, the Department of the Army announced this week.

The temporary hold action is in anticipation of internal unit reorganizations designed to provide Army combat forces with a structure and organization better suited for future wars.

The deferment does not include air defense units, certain other priority units required for early mobilization, and units close to activation. The deferment will apply to all units authorized, but not yet activated under the reserve structure.

DA stressed that this action will not affect the status of units in being. In fact it will assist to bring these units up to strength, Army officials noted. It was also emphasized that this action will not affect continued enlistment efforts under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

As active Army organizational and structural changes are adopted, these changes will be applied to the reserve components and the deferment, as appropriate, will be lifted.

After 16 Years

Recruiting Moves To New Home

After 16 years at Van Ness and Market streets, the main Army and Air Force recruiting and induction station will be moved to 1515 Clay Street, Oakland.

While in its former location the Armed Forces inducted more than 200,000 men.

The change of location is an economy move, since it means leaving a leased space and moving into a government-owned building, according to Colonel John J. Loughran, commander of the Army station.

Commanders Will Attend Top Pentagon Confab

Washington — General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, will hold the semi-annual meeting with ZI and major overseas commanders at the Pentagon 3 to 5 December.

Scheduled to attend are: Commanding General, Continental Army Command; the commanders of the six Armies in the U.S.; commander of the Military District of Washington; Commander-in-Chief, U.S. Army, Europe; and commanding generals of U.S. Army Forces, Far East, U.S. Armies Alaska, Pacific and Caribbean and the Army Antiaircraft Command. (AFPS)

Deputy Director of the Women's Army Corps, Lt. Col. Emily Gorman, was a Presidio visitor this week. Colonel Gorman is on an annual staff visit to this area and will tour Ord, Monterey and Presidio WAC units.

Vice Chief Believes New Policy Is Best

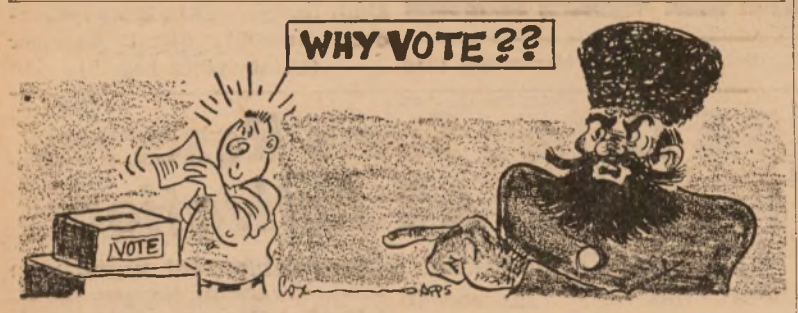
Cameron Station, Va. (ANS)—The Army is divorcing Information from Education! "I&E" is on the way out!

In an article, A Fresh Start for Troop Information, which appears in the November issue of "The Army Information Digest," Vice Chief of Staff, General Williston B. Palmer, writes that many senior Army officers have concluded that the TI&E Program was an artificial combination of two things, both of which would work better if they were separated.

Education has entirely different aims from the Troop Information program and requires an entirely different type of staff assistance to the commander, the General explained. "Accordingly," he said, "it was with heartfelt pleasure that I recently received a recommendation to separate troop information from educational aspects of the old TI&E Program once and for all."

The recommendation was to group the Troop Information Section of a staff with the Public Information Section under a Chief of Information—or Information Officer—who would report directly to the commander or Chief of Staff. The educational activities of the old program were to be placed under the Personal Branch (G-1) of the staff.

"This proposal was so sensible," declared General Palmer, "and so in accord with experience over the past ten years, that it was gladly accepted, and is in process of implementation throughout the Army."



Reserve Vacancies Here

Vacancies for Reserve Component duty within the Sixth Army area were announced by Post Classification and Assignment Branch this week. Potential applicants must possess either MOS 716 or 717, otherwise they do not qualify for the Reserve openings at this time.

Complete information regarding present or future vacancies for Reserve Component duty may be secured by telephoning the Post Classification and Assignment Branch, extension 3412.

The vote means many things to an American citizen. In this era of world competition with the menacing forces of communism, the vote becomes a challenge.

The Reds have twisted the use of the ballot as they have demeaned many other democratic institutions. They claim to be in favor of voting, and point to the millions of votes cast in countries under their rule.

Yet their idea of voting is the opposite of free choice. They offer only one choice—the "approved" slate of candidates. Anyone who fails to mark his ballot properly risks reprisals.

A free and secret vote is the cornerstone of democratic government. There is no substitute for it. By its very nature, it must be cast voluntarily, not demanded by threats.

The Government makes it easy for each citizen to vote—even those far from home who must use absentee ballots. That's as far as the officials can carry the ball. Now it's up to the ordinary citizens to make Nov. 6 a demonstration to the world that we know how to use our most precious heritage—the vote. (AFPS)

Council Report!

Key Industrialists Rate Program High

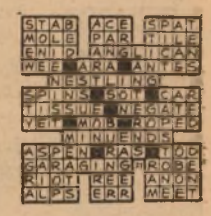
More than three-fourths of the nation's leading industrial and business employers rate the high school general educational development (GED) test on a par with high school graduation, reports the American Council on Education.

Not only in private industry but also in the hiring policies of many state and city civil service commissions, the GED test has gained increased recognition.

These facts are among the findings recently published by the American Council on Education in its pamphlet, "Conclusions and Recommendations of a Study of the General Educational Development Testing Program."

Although the GED tests alone should not be interpreted as a substitute for formal high school education, the ACE fact-finding committee points out, they do provide an increasingly effective means of entering the worlds of business, higher education, industry, and government.

The GED exams do not measure all the qualities considered essential for vocational or scholastic success, but employers are finding them valuable guides in selecting personnel for employment, the Council reports.



In education, the Council found, all but three states grant diplomas or high school equivalency certificates on the basis of successfully completed GED tests.

The Education Council report testified to the Armed Services' success in using the GED tests as a basis for fitting personnel to job requirements.

Despite the increasing advantages of participation in the GED testing program, the recently issued report of the Continental Army Command for fiscal 1956 on Consolidated Troop Education shows 1,898 NCOs in the Sixth Army area who have not yet completed the eighth grade.

On the other side of the educational ledger, however, 3,569 persons in the Sixth Army area completed high school GED exams in 1956 while another 592 passed the college level tests.

officers recently assigned

Colonel ALBERT M. BUTLER is newly assigned chief of USAR Branch of the Sixth Army's G-3 Section. He came to the Presidio from duty as Senior Army Advisor to USAR in the Washington Military District (Seattle).

Colonel Butler entered Federal service 15 years ago during which time his career has been devoted almost exclusively to Army G-3. During World War II he was Battalion Commander and Regimental Commander for the 35th Infantry Division in Europe. In the Far East he completed a tour as Eighth Army G-3 Plans officer, and was later assigned as a staff member to the Armistice Delegation, United Nations Command, in Munsan, Korea.

Between wars, Colonel Butler served at Fort Riley, Kansas, as commanding officer of the 87th Infantry Regiment and G-3 chief for the Tenth Infantry Division. His military schools include the Command General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and the Advanced Officers Course at Fort Benning, Georgia.

Colonel Butler was awarded the Air Medal, Purple Heart, Silver Star, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Croix de Guerre with Palm. His battle stars include five for service with the 35th Division in Europe and eight for duty in Korea.

Colonel and Mrs. Butler are parents of two sons and a daughter, who is the wife of Captain Ivan Storer, assigned to the Fifth Division's Air Section at Fort Ord.

The Butler family has established residence in San Francisco.

Major EVERETT G. SALYER is now on duty as assistant Post Transportation officer and chief of the Administrative Services Branch. His prior assignment was as staff officer with the NATO Plans Branch, Transportation Division for Headquarters, USAEUR.

Major Salyer served with the 821st Engineer Aviation Battalion in the South Pacific during World War II. He attended the Basic and Advanced classes in transportation at Fort Eustis, Virginia, and he held an assignment in the Water Division and the Management Division at Fort Mason from 1947 to 1950.

Parents of two daughters, Major and Mrs. Salyer and their children make their home in San Rafael.

Lieutenant BOBBY D. SIMMONS began his new assignment to the Sixth Army Signal Operations Branch this week. He entered military service after his graduation from Presbyterian College, Clinton, South Carolina, in 1956, with a degree in Economics.

A native of Laurens, South Carolina, Lieutenant Simmons attended the Signal Officers' Basic Course and the Communications Center Operations Course at Fort Myer, Virginia. His wife and infant son are to rejoin him here this week when the family will establish residence in San Francisco.

Major VERNON K. EASTIN is newly assigned to the Presidio as assistant Post Ordnance officer. His last foreign assignment was as assistant Ordnance officer for the Second Armored Division in Germany, rounding out three European tours, one of which was in combat duty with the 13th Armored Division during World War II.

Far East assignments for Major Eastin includes tours in the Philippines, Japan, and later with the First Cavalry Division in Korea. He is a veteran of 16 and a half years' military service and he was at one time stationed at Fort Ord.

Major and Mrs. Eastin have four children, one of whom was born in Tokyo and one in Japan. The family is in residence at Wherry Housing on the Presidio.

WAC's Still Lifes Offer Unique Study

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

One of the most unique assignments held by a service woman is that of Wac Sergeant Evelyn Durow, on duty as a medical photographer at the Sixth Army's Medical Laboratory at Fort Baker.

Recently returned from assignment in Yokohama, Japan, Sergeant Durow, a soft-spoken brunette in her early thirties, has, in the past seven years, photographed a greater array of human eyes, ears, hands, noses and throats than one might encounter in a month of Sundays.

Although her work at the Fort Baker Med-Lab is confined mostly to doing micrographs of slides and cultures under pathological study by the medical officers there, her training and ability can be drawn upon at a moment's notice for any of the more highly specialized photographic details connected with major or minor surgery or research.

The network of the human body is as familiar to Sergeant Durow as is the palm of her hand. She has photographed the insidious, creeping cancer that once lurked behind the facade of a man's face; the tumor that was once only a blister; the burn, the innocuous-looking wart that planted its monstrous roots in the larynx. But they hold no terror for her.

She takes quiet pride in the fact that her contribution, even though proportionately small, can be of tremendous help to the military doctor and the pathologist.

She has turned her camera on autopsies, burn cases so severe that only tissue-thin fragments of skin were left, plastic eyes, ears, noses and throats.

"My own small contribution," she declares candidly, "is more rewarding and more interesting than any job I can think of."

Photography was a childhood hobby with Sergeant Durow. After entering military service she was sent to study at the Army Signal School in New Jersey. From that course she channeled her training into the pathology field at Brooke Army Medical Center in Fort Sam Houston, where she was given a chance to prove her merit. She began by copying 35 millimeter film for the surgeons' research and for lectures, eventually going on to cover gunshot wounds, accident cases, operations, and plastic surgery in color slides—through the full gamut of medical camera study in the established fields.

Holds Rewarding Job

In Yokohama she held a dual assignment as news photographer for the garrison paper, and as a medical photographer at Yokohama Army Dispensary.

Now she is assigned to the Sixth Army Med-Lab, under supervision of its commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel Harry S. Sproate, and the laboratory pathologists. She is as yet the only Wac on duty there.

Working behind her microphotography cameras and a wealth of other photographic equipment, she lives close to the causes and the possible cures of many human ills.

She learns much and she fears nothing—nothing but the smell of burned flesh she once experienced during one of her medical photographic assignments. "It left me, not as much afraid of fire," Sergeant Durow says, "as with a lasting respect for the danger of it!"

Iranian Visitors and their 30th Engineer Group host pause before their recent tour of the group's mapping agencies and topographic units. From left are Colonel Hossein Ghodssi, Chief Photogrammetric Section; General Mostafa Notash, Chief Geographic Division of the Iranian Army; Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, Commander of the 30th Engineer Group; and Lt. Colonel Mohamad Mahdavy, Chief Geodetic Section.

Iranian Map Chief Visits 30th Engineers

Brigadier General Mostafa Notash, Chief Geographic Division of the Iranian Army, visited the 30th Engineer Group last Saturday. The visit was included in a tour of U.S. mapping agencies and U.S. Army topographic units.

General Hossein Ghodssi, Chief Photogrammetric Section; Lt. Colonel Mohamad Mahdavy, Chief Geodetic Section; and Major Walter V. Hyzinski, Tour Director and Escort Officer of Army Map Service, accompanied General Notash.

The purpose of the tour is to learn organization, management, control, and methods of map and chart production used by the units.

The visitors toured the 171st Engineer Detachment Relief Map Plant; 99th Engineer Company Base Reproduction Plant; 21st Engineer Company Base Photomapping Plant; and inspected Headquarters and Headquarters Company barracks. The 521st Engineer Company hosted the group on a helicopter tour of the area. Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, Commander of the 30th Engineer Group, welcomed the dignitaries.

General Notash and his party have also visited Army Map Service, Geological Survey, U. S. Navy Hydrographic Office, U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey and Aeronautical Chart and Information Center.

The meeting of the American and Iranian geographic experts is not unprecedented as a survey detachment of the 30th Engineer Group is currently serving in Iran.

College Courses Will Start Soon

Whether your interests lie south of the border, upward to the heavens, or backward to the dawn of mankind, the newly scheduled group study classes offered by Post TI&E under the auspices of San Francisco State are for you.

Starting 14 November are the following courses: Introduction to Astronomy (Phy. Sci. 17), Modern and Contemporary Latin America (Hist. 163), and Primitive Society (Anthro. 125).

The astronomy course offers a general introduction to the study of celestial bodies which includes inspection of the entire solar system.

An analysis of the major political, social, economic, military and religious factors in 19th and 20th Century Latin America will be emphasized in Modern and Contemporary Latin America. Dynamic developments in Mexico under Cardenas, Brazil under Vargas and Argentina under Peron will be singled out for special investigation.

The development of human society with emphasis on the growth of modern institutions out of primitive kinship, social and territorial units will be studied in Primitive Society. Primitive law, economics, invention and religion will be surveyed for their contributions to social development.

Young – but Vigorous!

The Army Aviation Center and the Army Aviation School celebrated its second anniversary at Fort Rucker, Ala., last month. The Center was previously located at Fort Sill, Okla.

During the past year more than 2,000 aviation pilots and maintenance personnel completed the courses offered at the center.

Politics Anyone?

An "Election Vigil" replaces the regular Post dance at the Fort Baker Service Club on the evening of 6 November. This special event is planned in the interests of servicemen who desire to keep in touch with the national political picture through the medium of their club facilities. The Fort Baker club will remain open until midnight.

Refreshments will be served during the evening from 1800 to midnight.

Company (Survey Base) and 572nd Aviation Platoon.

As has been done in many previous 30th Group operations, both helicopters and fixed wing aircraft will be used to carry men and equipment to save time and energy needed to accomplish the mission.

There is an element of danger connected with the project resulting from the presence of World War II minefields in the area. Both the German Army under General Rommel and the Allied Forces, commanded by General Montgomery, crossed Libya.

As a precautionary measure the 542nd is training its men in the technique of mine detection, removal, and demolition. A less important problem confronting the group is the lack of surface water in Libya, which means that all water will have to be obtained from wells.

Neither terrain nor climate are expected to trouble the engineers during their stay in Libya. The land is gently rolling and trees, which generally cause trouble in survey work, are almost non-existent. Temperature in the wintertime ranges from 5 degrees F. to 85 degrees F., while summer temperatures frequently rise above 100 degrees.

Men of the 542nd are already familiar with desert climate, having spent several months this past spring at Yuma Test Station in Arizona.

Inventors Council Seeks Variety Of New Ideas

The National Inventors Council has issued its annual plea for ideas on such things as slowing down cannon shells, jamming radar-jamming devices, and taking wind readings 75 miles up.

The Council, a branch of the Commerce Department, acts for the services in screening ideas, inventions and suggestions for Defense equipment. Service-connected inventors are reminded to look into the services' rules on inventions before mailing their ideas.

Other ideas being sought concern developing bendable radar; separating aircraft on radar, when they are flying in close formation; and producing balloons which are able to reach 125,000 to 150,000 feet carrying 1,700-gram payloads.

In addition, the council is seeking an alkaline-zinc-mercuric oxide battery system that will operate at low temperatures; a means of speeding up photo film; a vibration meter for helicopters; a material for coating skis or ski type landing gear; and a non-destructive tester for dry batteries.

The National Inventors Council's address is U. S. Department of Commerce, Washington 25, D. C. Those submitting suggestions should retain a copy.

Goering, Goering, Gone!

The Army put three German Mercedes Benz convertibles up for bid this week — two that were owned by the late Reich Marshal Hermann Goering and one a former Nazi staff car.

Sealed bids were submitted to the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., for these leather-lined, luxury automobiles.

Both the Goering cars are eight-cylinder, 12-volt, supercharged jobs, built around 1940. One is a very heavy seven-passenger sedan and the other a roadster. The Nazi staff car is a five-passenger, six-cylinder model.

New AAA Commander

In 1940, the Colonel was sent to Fort Monroe, Va., to attend the Battery Commander's Course, and on the successful completion of the school, in 1941, was sent to Fort Crockett, at Galveston, Texas, to assist in the organization of the 54th Coast Artillery. Later, in 1942, as Battalion Commander, he moved that organization to Fort Cronkhite, Calif.

His next assignment came the same year as Executive Officer for the 257th Harbor Defense Battalion in Alaska. While in Alaska, he was transferred to the 25th Coast Artillery Regiment as commanding officer of the Second Battalion.

Colonel Ranney was returned to the United States in 1944 and assigned to Fort Sill, Okla., and later to Fort Bragg, N. C., where he spent the remainder of World War II as commanding Officer of the 784th Field Artillery Battalion.

Colonel Ranney was then sent to Europe where he worked with the Graves Registration Command as Operations Officer during the repatriation program.

On his return to the United States in 1949, he was named to attend the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. After completing that course in 1950, the colonel was assigned to command the 36th Antiaircraft Gun Battalion at Fort Bliss, Texas. Shortly after assuming command, his unit was ordered to join Operation METRO, defending metropolitan Washington, D. C., where he remained until September, 1951. Then he left Washington to join the Western Army Antiaircraft Command, which is now the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command, at Fort Baker, Calif.

Colonel Ranney's last move prior to his assignment as commanding officer of the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group was in November, 1953, when he was sent to Ecuador as Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group and Chief of the U.S. Army Mission.

My Vote—Freedom's Privilege

"The years I spent in the service are but a small token payment for 'my stake in the American way.'"

Sgt. Kenneth E. Belk, Third Place Award Winner Kemper Military School, Boonville, Mo.

That attitude, expressed in a letter in the 1955 Freedoms Foundation awards program, notes an awareness of the debt owed to those who built this country.

One of the ways of returning payment is living up to the obligations of citizenship—one of which is voting. "My Vote—Freedom's Privilege" is the subject of the 1956 Freedoms Foundation letter awards program. The top cash award for the best letter is $1,000.

All letters must be received by Nov. 11, 1956. Send your letter of no more than 500 words to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa.

Armed Forces personnel, Reservists and National Guardsmen on active duty are eligible. Top winners in each of the five services, with commanding officers' approval, will be guests in Washington, D. C., for the inauguration of the President this January.

There are two second place awards of $500. Third place prizes include eighty $100 awards. All cash winners will receive the George Washington Honor Medal. Honor Medals also will be given separately. (AFPS)

"Mail Means Morale!" Is Motto Of 16th Base Post Office Unit

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

Mail means morale. For this reason the 16th Base Post Office at the Presidio stands ready to "move out" on a moment's notice to serve any emergency troop concentration.

The 16th BPO, actually a reserve unit on active duty, is the only strategic reserve TOE postal unit in the Army today.

Experiences of World War II and Korea showed that valuable time was lost while key reserve units went through the activation procedure. To prevent recurrence of this situation, the 16th BPO has been activated prior to any emergency so it can move out immediately.

This group of four officers and 42 enlisted men are prepared to move into any designated area, set up shop, and start providing mail to as many as 30,000 troops. Probably they would set up at a port or a major air base where the largest concentration of surface mail would be arriving.

The 16th BPO's primary mission today is training, so that in time of emergency it will be "capable of providing for receipt, separation, distribution, routing and dispatch of mail to and from troops in a designated area or command."

Most likely the unit would be assigned to a communications zone headquarters, theater of operations headquarters or major subordinate command headquarters.

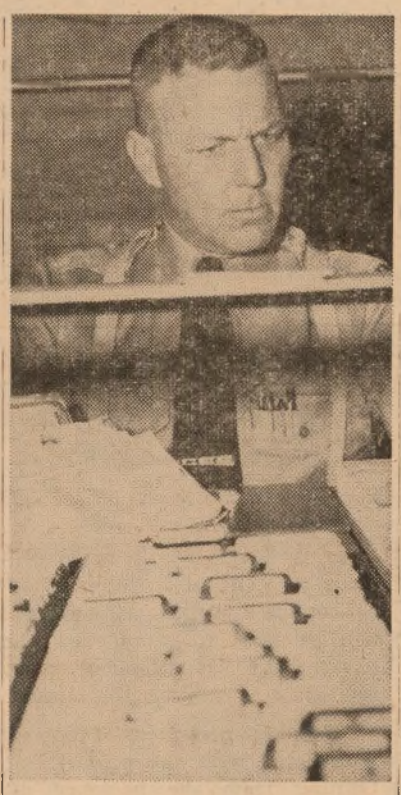
"Choice duty" is the term used to describe assignment to this Presidio postal unit during times of peace. "But it's just plain hard work during emergency," explains Company Commander Capt. Jack W. Gaillard, who before this assignment served as executive officer of the 2nd BPO in Korea.

"There, we were set up to service a million troops," he comments, adding that the men in this unit worked around the clock in two 12-hour shifts. This group of around 380 men handled their first Christmas shipload of mail, 48,000 pieces, in 60 hours.

Certain hazards of the trade are experienced by these Army postal clerks who handle other people's packages, says the First Sergeant for the 16th BPO, M/Sgt. William Matcaroff. Assorted fire arms and even hand grenades have been discovered in packages for home.

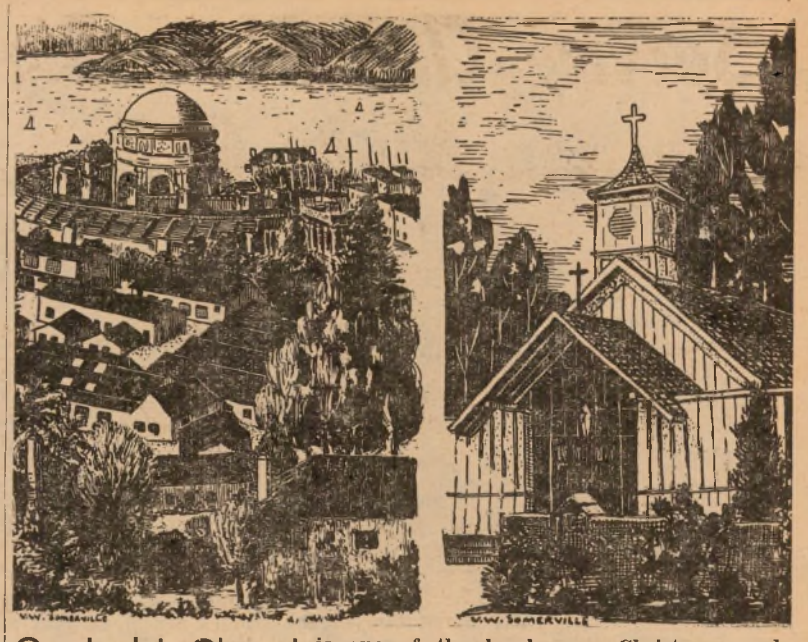
Broken packages of spoiled fruit or cheeze do bad things to the atmosphere of the mail room, the sergeant revealed. "People never seem to learn that they can't send things like bananas and grapes across the ocean without a mess . . . why one person even sent a box of avocados," said Sergeant Matcaroff.

The 16th BPO was first activated at Guadacanal in 1943, and, during World War II, served at various locations in the South and Western Pacific area. Transferred to Japan from the Mariana Islands in August, 1951, the unit was inactivated three months later.



CWO Chester J. McCarty of the 16th BPO who has served as Post Postal Officer and unit executive officer, also served with the postal unit when it was on Guam, 1949-51. CWO McCarty leaves the Presidio today for duty with the 7th BPO, Yokohama, Japan.

In September, 1952, the 16th BPO was activated here at the Presidio. Although reorganized several times, it has remained at this location.



Asked if it were true that the Army postman's preferential treatment for boxes marked fragile consisted of throwing them a little farther than ordinary, Captain Gaillard made a wry smile and said he believes Army mail handlers were considerably more careful than civilians.

Ninety per cent of the personnel of BPO's are school trained, said Captain Gaillard. And the men are drilled with the importance of their mission as a vital morale factor.

At the Presidio, in addition to its continual training activities, the 16th BPO furnishes the personnel for the Postal Directory section, is responsible for delivering the Daily Bulletin to the Wherry Housing area and supplies the Post Postal Officer.

Among new books on hand at the Sixth Army Library depot are the following which may be borrowed on two-week loan or consulted at the library:

West Point: The Life Of A Cadet, by Jack Engeman, presents picture stories of what goes on in the life of a cadet, from admission to graduation.

Annapolis, by the same author, gives a similar story of the Naval academy.

New Lives For Old, by Margaret Mead, is a record and analysis of the long journey from the Stone Age into the Air Age, made by the Manus is so short a time, the biggest single factor of this transformation being the impact of the American fighting men during World War II.

In Search Of Adam, by Herbert Wendt, is the story of man's quest for the truth about his earliest ancestors. Translated from the German language, it is an informative and lively record of paleontology, with special emphasis on the discoveries and significance of the long-buried remains of ancient men.

Learn To Read Music, by Howard Shanet, is a system devised to instruct the individual in the fundamentals of reading musical notation in order to follow printed musical scores, requiring only pencil, paper, string and the occasional use of a piano.

Manjiro, The Man Who Discovered America, by Hisakazu Kaneko, is an account of a Japanese fisher boy who was brought back to America by a Yankee whaler, and who later, upon his return to Japan, helped pave the way for Commodore Perry's visit.

Service Club Plans Big Election Night Rally

An election night watcher's party—complete with charts, experts, 27-inch TV and refreshments—is planned at the Presidio Service Club for Tuesday, Miss Isabelle Walker announced today.

"Everyone is invited, servicemen, girl friends, husbands, wives," she emphasized, pointing out that the only requirement is an interest in politics and the election outcome.

The party, which starts at 1900 hours, is scheduled to run until midnight, or later, depending on when the returns seem final.

Sp3 Herb Jacobs, TI&E NCO for Hq. Co. (6002), who has a master's degree in political science from Yale University, will be running the show. He reports that there will be bulb thermometer charts available to keep track of the House and Senate races and to show when a majority has been reached. An overhead projector will keep track of the campaign at a state level.

Sp3 Jacobs and other Presidio soldiers have divided up the states for special study. Each soldier "analyst" on election night will be able to report on the trends and items of special interest in the states they have studied. The "analysts" include Pfc. Phillip C. Greenwald, 6th Army, AARC; Sp3 Richard Lewis and Pvt. Art Fox, Hq. Co. (6002) and Sp3 George Zaninovich, Hq. Co. (6000).

Tally sheets will be distributed to individuals attending the party for their own record.

An additional feature will be a "Senate Race Contest." Sheets, which may be picked up Monday at the Service Club, will be distributed with the key Senate races listed. Contestants will select their choices for victory and return the sheet to the Service Club by 1000 hours Tuesday. The most astute political prognosticator will receive a prize.

Free Tickets

Free tickets to the Turnabout Theater may be obtained by Presidio servicemen and women from the San Francisco USO clubs.

The passes are good for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night performances, and service personnel may request one extra ticket if they wish to take a guest.

Touchdown Getters The reason for Headquarters Company Sixth Army success in the Presidio Eastern Intramural Football League is shown here as the club's offensive unit lines up for the camera. Linemen are Keith Weesner, Gene Bakke, Tom Lamborn, Gene Wilmoth and Bob Kircher. Backs are Carl Stabile, Gordon Peaks and Jay Gould. The offensive team ran up six straight wins in the league.

Stout Defenders Keeping the opposition from crossing Headquarters Company Sixth Army's goal line was the responsibility of the team's defensive unit, shown here in traditional stances. Forwards are Bernard Schward, Clayton Halsey and Carry Ruiter. Secondary men are John Young, Don Horanzia and Terry Wilson. The defenders contributed immeasurably to the team's unbeaten season.

2nd Belled Coyote Shot By Trapper

The second of eight coyotes belled and released by the Department of Fish and Game in Trinity and Lassen Counties in an experimental study has been recovered.

The animal was shot this month near Big Bar, Trinity County, about three miles from the point of release last April. Except for gathering information on coyotes which are non-belled the experiment has been terminated.

The state trapper in that area reported the coyote was in good physical condition. State game management specialists said this fact would disprove the misconception that belling automatically condemns a coyote to death by starvation.

In a previous study of a similar nature conducted by fish and game personnel, a belled coyote was retrapped after a considerable time and found to be in good physical condition. In the latest study, which began last February, sheep bells were attached to eight coyotes to determine their movements in relation to the deer herd in that area.

Reports were circulated after the first belled coyote was recovered last July that it was in poor physical condition and some persons assumed the animal had starved, unable to stalk its prey because of the bell.

However, department experts pointed out, the first coyote could have died from a variety of causes and there are no facts known to prove that such belling has resulted in starvation or other detrimental effects on these sagacious animals.

The coyote, according to a detailed study of its food habits by fish and game biologists, eats almost anything, depending on what items are available. Carrion is a major item in the coyote's diet. Because of the animal's easy adaptability, there appears little likelihood that a coyote would starve, since much of his diet normally consists of items which he does not have to stalk.

The department explained that bells were used in the coyote migration study rather than other types of tags because, at a distance, it is difficult to determine whether an individual animal is bearing a tag.

Experience has shown that ear tags, for instance, do not provide satisfactory answers for such purposes because the number of visual reports of the animals is too limited.

Teenage Gridders Unrated at season's start, the Teenagers, dependents of Presidio military personnel, came on strong as play progressed. Here Bob Curley, Jan Carnahan, Bill Curley, Othello Carr, Lamar Mahon, Tom Lupo, Art Bondshu, Terry Phillips and Al Miller get set to work a play.

Tackling your service assignment has a lot in common with tackling a football dummy. Doing the job right can give you a lot of satisfaction, and prepare you for bigger things in the future. Goofing off seems easy at the time, but it doesn't pay.

You can run up to the stuffed bag ferociously, making a great display of eagerness—then glance off it with a minimum of effort. In the same way, you can run through the daily routine of a job, filling the requirements only in a sketchy manner.

A good coach knows the men who strain to the utmost on every play, building themselves up mentally and physically. These are the men who form the backbone of his club, the ones who can call forth that vital "something extra" when the going gets rough.

Officers rate their men the same way. They appreciate those who make a special effort to attain excellence when others settle for ordinary prformance. They know that habits of thoroughness and hard work can't be learned in a day.

The man who takes every job seriously will be ready if the time comes again when the Armed Forces must hold the line against those who would destroy America. (AFPS)

Strike It Rich

Cagers Land 3 Top Former College Stars

By Sp3 Walt Heil
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Presidio of San Francisco's basketballing Toreros, seeking wealth in way of player talent, finally struck it rich this week.

The Toreros, long on talent but short on numbers, came up with three outstanding former college stars and hope to land a fourth, Coach Hal Fischer, beginning to panic as the season opener drew near, said happily.

Slated to don Presidio spangles following assignment here from Fort Lewis are Tony Psaltis, former University of Southern California shotmaker, and Tor Hansen, onetime San Jose State ace.

In addition to this pair, Fischer also announced Glen Scott, a 6'2" cager from the University of Alabama's Crimson Tide, was now securely on the Torero roster.

Fischer, whose stalwarts officially open their season next Friday against Parks Air Force Base in the preliminary to the Olympic Games team vs. College All-Stars contest in Kezar Pavilion, hopes to land Herb Brown from Niagara College on the squad.

Brown, who spent three years on the Niagara varsity, would round out the star studded Torero club handsomely.

Both Psaltis and Hansen gained fame on the Coast, though they are nationally known cagers. Psaltis, a 6'3" cager, who enrolled at USC after graduation from San Francisco's Mission High, was named to several All-Coast teams during his collegiate heydey.

Hansen is familiar enough to peninsula fans and to followers of the California Intercollegiate Basketball Association as a member of the Spartans. He is 6'4".

With Psaltis, Hansen and Scott on the club, the Toreros are guaranteed the top Armed Forces team in northern California, not to mention the nation.

Already Fischer has a first team capable of beating most any top college squad. His regulars include Ronnie Reynoir from Loyola of the South, Norm Ellenberger from Butler University and Carroll Williams from San Jose State.

Together with Psaltis and Hansen, they'll prove a high scoring outfit.

The Toreros scrimmage the Olympic Club for the second time tonight. Though no record was kept, the Presidio whipped the Winged-O team handily in the previous scrum between the two teams.

The team will be presented to the public officially when it plays Parks at 7 p.m. next Friday. The pavilion is expected to be packed, for the appearance of the Olympic Games cagers marks the return of Bill Russell, K. C. Jones, Bill Walsh and Ron Tomsic—all local cagers of national repute—to their old stomping grounds.

Entered in the northern California Army-Air Force League, the Toreros open season play 30 November against Travis AFB. They'll also take a swing through the Southland, playing, among others, the USC Frosh, Pasadena City College, San Diego Navy and San Diego Marines.

Pheasant Season Tags Available

The Department of Fish and Game announced that the 1956 pheasant tags will be available for purchase from license agents next week. The pheasant season opens November 17.

C. L. O'Leary, Fish and Game licenses chief, warned nimrods planning to participate in the pheasant season to buy their tags in their own home towns before starting their trips.

Last year 219,587 pheasant tags were sold in California.

Hunt Season Delay Set

There will be delayed opening on at least four state operated waterfowl public shooting areas this season, the Department of Fish and Game announced.

The areas normally are not opened to hunting until adjacent crops have been harvested, and danger of crop depredation by ducks is past.

In the Sacramento Valley, Gray Lodge, and Sutter and Colusa Refuges will not open until 3 November.

Merced Refuge will not open to hunting until 17 November.

No decision has been made as yet on Los Banos, Mendota, and San Luis Wasteway in the San Joaquin Valley. An announcement on these areas will be made next week.

Opening the season on the regular curtain lifter of 20 October will be Honey Lake and Madeline in Lassen County, Grizzly Island in Solano County, and Imperial area in Imperial County.

Hunters who had planned to file applications for reservations were warned to file for dates after the delayed openings, or to file for areas which are open to shooting 20 October.

The regular season opened in the Tule Lake-Lower Klamath area on 13 October, on 28 October for a narrow strip along the Colorado River, and 20 October in the rest of the state.

Bag limit is 10 ducks, which must include at least three pintails or three widgeons, or three in the aggregate of these species. Not more than one wood duck or one hooded merganser may be included.

For geese the bag and possession limit is six birds, including three of the dark species and three snow geese.

AA Volleyball Tourney Set

Fort MacArthur — Four of the Army's best volleyball teams will compete for the Sixth Antiaircraft Artillery regional championships here November 24 through 29.

Captain Thomas J. Nash, 47th AAA Brigade special service officer, announced that the teams would come from three Pacific Coast States, each the champion of its particular region.

The teams will all be from Nike guided missile and antiaircraft gun units responsible for the defense of the West Coast from any hostile air attack.

The team which wins the championship will represent the Sixth Region in the All-Army Antiaircraft Command Volleyball tournament at Fort Sheridan, Ill., December 1 through 10. The tournament will draw teams from throughout the country.

U. S. Athletes Set For 'Greatest Ever' GamesCompetition

With tryouts completed and final tuneups nearing completion, the first contingent of United States athletes depart today for Melbourne, Australia, and the greatest Olympic Games ever.

Altogether, more than 70 nations and 6,000 athletes will gather in the Land Down Under for the third post-war renewal of the ancient games and attendant festivities. Reports from Melbourne indicate balmy weather ahead and ideal conditions for the world's greatest amateur athletes.

GEORGE VAN METER
On to Olympic Games.

The Australian population is looking forward eagerly to the games as do millions of stay-at-home Americans who will follow the daily reports with keen interest.

The United States is sending more than 300 competitors to the event and, if their performance in trials and tryouts is indicative, it means Americans will win the majority of first place Gold Medals.

In 1952 at Helsinki, Americans—as usual—dominated the track and field phase by winning 14 of 24 events, broke seven Olympic records, tied two and established a new world record.

Americans also won five of ten boxing titles and six of eight men's swimming events. All told, U.S. athletes won 40 first place medals, 19 second and 17 third place medals.

Then, as now, Armed Forces members took a big share of the limelight. The services were represented in every event in 1952 with the exception of canoeing. And that, too, has been remedied.

This year the Armed Forces number one-third of the U.S. athletes and dominate the field in a number of events, including track and field, boxing, basketball and cycling.
